Holland's health declined during the early 1970s, and he soon stopped playing. He died in Stockholm just two days before his sixty-ninth birthday. He was a gifted trumpet player and singer whose biggest influence was on Louis Armstrong. Holland was among the underrated modernists such as Jabbo Smith, Red Allen, Nat Bates, and Charles Anderson.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Holler, Adolf (b. Schärding am Inn, Austria, June 17, 1929; d. Apr. 2012). Austrian trumpeter. Holler began playing trumpet at the age of ten. He attended a music school in his home town, and three years later the Bruckner Conservatory in Linz. In 1949, he also attended the Vienna Academy of Music where he studied with Franz Dengler.

Holler played in the Vienna Symphony orchestra (1952-56), and recorded Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto with it in 1954. He then joined the Vienna State Opera orchestra in January 1956, and recorded the Haydn Concerto in E-flat with it. He played in the Vienna Philharmonic (1960-94) and was appointed principal trumpet in 1964, a position he held through 1994. He also taught at the Vienna Music School of the Vienna Philharmonic (1980-97). He presented lectures and master classes throughout the world, and was a guest professor in China, Japan, and the United States.

Along with trumpeters Helmut Wobisch, Josef Hell, and Gerald Conrath, Holler recorded a best-selling album titled The Virtuoso Trumpet. Wobisch and Holler recorded a follow-up album, The Virtuoso Trumpet, Vol. 2. Holler received numerous awards, including prizes from the Salzburg Festival (1983) and the Republic of Austria (1990 and 1998).

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Reaban, Derek. "Weiner Philharmoniker Principal Trumpet Players" (www.trumpetherald.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Holt, John H. (b. Dallas, Texas, Jan. 4, 1959). American trumpeter. Holt grew up in Dallas, and began studying the trumpet at age twelve with Richard Giangiulio. He graduated from Lewisville High School in 1977, and studied with Gilbert Johnson at the University of Miami, where he earned a bachelor of music degree in 1981, and a master of music degree in 1983 while serving as a graduate teaching assistant. While in graduate school, he was coprincipal of the Philharmonic Orchestra of Florida in Ft. Lauderdale (1981-83).

At the age of twenty-four, Holt was selected as principal trumpet of the Orchestra del Maggio Musicale Fiorentino in Florence, Italy (1983-86), under the direction of Maestro Zubin Mehta. In 1988, he returned to his native Dallas where he performed and recorded freelance as an extra/substitute trumpeter in the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Dallas Opera Orchestra, Ft. Worth Symphony, and other music organizations in the area. In 1989, he became principal of the Dallas Opera Orchestra, a position he still holds. In addition, he played in a one-year position as second trumpet of the Ft. Worth Symphony (1993-94).

Holt was an adjunct professor at Collin County Community College (1991-2003), Austin College (1996-2003), and Southeastern Oklahoma State University (2000-03). He also taught part-time as a sabbatical replacement at the University of North Texas (UNT) during the fall, 1993 semester. He was hired as a Lecturer in Trumpet at UNT during the academic year (2002-03) and became a fulltime trumpet teacher there in the fall of 2003. He is now Associate Professor of Trumpet at UNT and is an active brass chamber music performer and recitalist.

Holt has released six compact discs on the Crystal Records label. He has commissioned numerous contemporary works, and has recorded repertoire for trumpet by composers such as Jolivet, Planel, Tomasi, Ewazen, Plog, Tull, Latham, and Ellington.

Holt and his wife Priscilla have a daughter named Patricia, a nationally ranked high school golfer. When he has time, John likes to play golf.

Bibl.: www.johnholttrumpet.com; personal interview, Dec. 30, 2009.

Holt, Laroon (b. Barnes, Kansas, Oct. 28, 1939). American trumpeter. Holt's initial trumpet study was under the guidance of his father, a farmer and amateur trumpeter. He attended the conservatory at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and played with the Kansas City Philharmonic. Holt then joined the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, and also recorded with the big bands of Les Brown, Stan Kenton, Tex Beneke, and Nelson Riddle.

Holt moved to Los Angeles in 1973 where he worked as a studio musician, and taught private lessons (one of his students was Roger Ingram.) Holt joined the Lawrence Welk Orchestra in November of 1973, performing hundreds of television shows with Welk through 1982 when he retired. Laroon and wife Claudine live in Pasadena, California, and have two children, Tim and Heidi.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Laroon Holt" (www.welkmusicalfamily.com/welkbio7.html).

Holton, Frank E. (b. Allegan, Michigan, Mar. 10, 1858; d. Elkhorn, Wisconsin, Apr. 17, 1942). American trombonist and instrument maker. Holton's parents, Otis and Hanna Holton, were farmers and residents of Allegan, Michigan. Musically, Frank was mostly self-taught, and played trombone in Hi Henry's Minstrels, the Barnum Circus Band, Ellis Brooks's New York Concert Band, and the Second Regiment Band of Chicago before joining John Philip Sousa's famous band as principal trombone in 1892. While with the Sousa Band, Holton began a partnership with the Smith & York Company that eventually became known as York & Holton (1896). He left the Sousa band and moved to Chicago where he established his own band-instrument-making firm in 1896.

The famed cornet soloist Herbert L. Clarke worked with Holton in 1911 to develop the Holton-Clarke cornet, an instrument that was not patented until 1917 when Clarke was employed as a cornet tester (1917-18). Other famous cornet consultants were Ernest Albert Couturier and Walter F. Smith. By this time, sales of Holton instruments were skyrocketing, so in April of 1918 Holton moved the company to Elkhorn, Wisconsin (Frank Holton & Company), where it occupied a 35,000 square foot building. He also became a wealthy owner of real estate, at times constructing as many as twenty-five houses at once.

Holton retired in 1938 and sold the company to his longtime associate, William Kull, who served as CEO of the firm until his death in 1944. The company was eventually purchased by Elliott Kehl, the company's former sales manager, who developed associations with several leading brass musicians that resulted in new models of instruments. These included the Philip Farkas-model horn, Ethel Merker "Merker-Matic" horn, Harvey Phillips-model tuba, Maynard Ferguson Superbone, and the Don Ellis quarter-tone trumpet. The company was later sold to the G. Leblanc Corporation in 1964. Today, it is a division of the Conn-Selmer Company in Elkhart, Indiana, which was purchased by Steinway in 2004.

Bibl.: Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); "Frank Holton Company" (www.holtonloyalist.com/history.htm); "Frank Holton Company" (www.conn-selmer.com).

Holy, Walter (b. Osnabrück, Germany, Aug. 15, 1921; d. Cologne, Germany, Mar. 7, 2006). German trumpeter. Holy studied with professor Karl Burmeister at the music conservatory in his hometown of Osnabrück (which ended in 1941 when Holy was drafted into the army). His career developed as an orchestral musician, playing with the symphony orchestras of Herford (1945), Bielefeld (1947-50), Frankfurt (1950-51), Hanover Opera (principal trumpet in 1951-56), and the Symphony Orchestra of the West German Radio in Cologne (as third and coprincipal trumpet in 1956-68). In 1968, he accepted a position as trumpet professor at the Staatliche Folkwang Hochschule in Essen (until 1974). He was also first trumpet of the Cologne Baroque Orchestra (Cappella Coloniensis) from 1960 to 1983.

Having studied Baroque music under Hans Hoffmann (in Bielefeld) and Adalbert Schütz (in Bethel), Holy took an interest in performing Baroque music on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet. Otto Steinkopf and Helmut Finke designed and made a replica of the instrument seen in the famous portrait of Gottfried Reiche by Elias Gottlieb Haussman, and asked Holy to learn to play it. Although their instrument is a round Jägertrompete, rather than a typical elongated valveless trumpet used during the Baroque and Classical eras, it did serve as the first commercially successful replica of the modern day. In January 1961, Holy performed the world premiere of Bach's Third Suite in D on the Jägertrompete (by Steinkopf and Finke). However, the Steinkopf-Finke trumpet of 1961, unlike the Reiche version, possessed three vent holes that corrected several of the out-of-tune partials (especially the eleventh and thirteenth). Holy mastered the instrument and became famous for his pioneering performances of the Baroque solo repertoire for trumpet, particularly Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, of which Holy made the first recording on a Baroque trumpet (1964).

Holy toured the United States (twice), Canada, South America, London (1962, at the BBC), Scandinavia, and Poland. He collaborated with Edward Tarr in various performances, and performed Handel's The Messiah numerous times. He recorded playing the cornetto (Schütz: Psalms of David), and recorded with: the Edward Tarr Trumpet Ensemble conducted by Ehmann (Old Wind Music: Fantini, Jelich, Speer); an instrumental ensemble conducted by Wenzinger (Handel: Royal Fireworks Music, Water Music); Concentus Musicus Wien conducted by N. Harnoncourt (Bach: 2nd Brandenburg Concerto, Telemann: Musique de Table, Bach: Mass in B Minor); Chamber Orchestra conducted by Kahlhoefer (Bach: Cantata BWV 207a); and under his own name (L. Mozart: Concerto, Stoelzel: Concerto Grosso for six trumpets, and works by Telemann).

Holy's pioneering work during the 1960s caught the attention of several talented young artists, including Edward Tarr, Michael Laird, Pieter Dolk, Detlef Altenburg, Reinhard Ehritt, and Wolfgang Pohle, and his teachings have been carried on through these and hundreds of subsequent trumpeter-historians. For his landmark influence on modern trumpet performances of Baroque music, the International Trumpet Guild presented Holy with the Johann Ernst Altenburg Award on January 7, 1996 in Bad Säckingen, Germany. Holy retired in 1983, although he taught privately until his death in 2006 at the age of eighty-four. He was survived by his five children.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (Norton & Co.); Cassone, Gabriele (Eng. Trans. by Tom Dambly). The Trumpet Book (Zecchini Editore); Foster, John. The Natural Trumpet (Kookaburra Music); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition, 2009, Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. "Walter Holy" (obituary, News Item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); "Walter Holy" (O.J.'s Trumpet Page: http://abel.hive.no/trumpet/holy).

Holz, Frank (b. Németszentmihály, Hungary, July 25, 1890; d. Las Vegas, Nevada, May 29, 1971). Hungarian-born American trumpeter. Holz emigrated to the United States in 1905 at the age of fifteen. He played in various theater orchestras in Chicago, and was skilled on trumpet and violin. He joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1926 as a trumpeter and second violinist, occupying the third or fourth chairs of the trumpet section until 1950 when he was dismissed without pension. He was also listed as the orchestra's bass trumpet player from 1930 to 1944, and played with the Ravinia Park Orchestra (summer months of the CSO) from 1947 to 1950 as a second violinist.

Holz moved to Las Vegas in 1950 and worked in various show orchestras, probably mostly on violin. He is reputed to have been a lifelong gambler.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Crown, Thomas. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1902-1932." (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011).

Hood, Alan James (b. Rochester, New York, Jan. 25, 1964). American trumpeter. Hood grew up in the small town of Pumpkin Hook, New York. He is the son of James Hood (a data processor and marketer for Rochester Gas & Electric) and Ann Hood (a retail book salesperson). His brothers are David (b. 1957; d. 1997) and Steve (b. 1958), and his sister is Leslie (b. 1967).

Hood began playing the trumpet at age thirteen, and later studied with Don Grosz, Howard Rowe, and Richard Jones of the Rochester Philharmonic. After graduating from Victor Central High School in 1982, he attended the University of Kentucky (1983-89), studying with Vincent DiMartino and earning a bachelor of music degree. He earned a master of music degree studying with Ron Modell at the Northern Illinois University (1989-92), and worked toward a doctorate in music at the University of Texas studying with Raymond Crisara (1992-93). Hood was a replacement for Michael Davidson, a faculty member on sabbatical at the University of Richmond in Virginia during the 1993-94 academic year, and continued doctoral studies at the University of Miami with Gilbert Johnson (1994-97). Hood served as an adjunct faculty member in jazz at the University of Miami (1997-99).

Hood's performance career includes a wide variety of jazz and classical settings. He toured with the Jack Daniels Silver Cornet Band (1990-92), Woody Herman Big Band, Glenn Miller Orchestra, Harry James Orchestra, and the Phil Collins Big Band. He has performed concerts with Doc Severinsen, Ray Charles, Arturo

Sandoval, Clark Terry, Jon Faddis, Wynton Marsalis, Curtis Fuller, Conte Candoli, Natalie Cole, Summit Brass, and The Manhattan Transfer. He is currently a member of the Aries Brass Quintet, The Denver Brass, Ken Walker Jazz Sextet, and the Olstad-Montgomery Big Band. Since 1999, Hood has been professor of trumpet and jazz at the University of Denver.

Hood is a respected researcher and authority on the life of trumpeter Clifford Brown, and was a good friend of Brown's widow, LaRue Brown-Watson (1933-2005). Hood has released a CD titled Just A Little Taste (private label). He hosted the 2004 International Trumpet Guild Conference at the University of Denver, and since 2007, has hosted or cohosted the annual Rafael Méndez Brass Institute at the University of Denver.

Hood and oboist Erin Collins were married in 1993 and had a daughter Kyrie in 1994, but were divorced in 1999. In 2005, he and Jennifer (Jones) Hood were married. His hobbies include photography, jeeping, and stamp collecting.

Bibl.: Alan Hood's official website: www.alhoodtrumpet.com; personal interview, Aug. 3, 2010.

Hood, Boyde ("Red") W. (b. c1950). American trumpeter. Hood grew up in a small town near Dallas, Texas. He began playing the trumpet at age eight. Two years later, he was caught in a fire that burned sixty percent of his body, resulting in the amputation of the fingers of his right hand to the first knuckles, but his early teachers, Alfred Resch and Earl D. Irons, were successful in helping him overcome this handicap. He attended the Eastman School of Music, studying with Sidney Mear, and earning a bachelor of music degree, and soon attended Ball State University where he earned a master of music degree in theory/composition. In addition, he has studied with James Stamp and Adolph Herseth.

Hood's extensive orchestral career includes being a member of the Rochester Philharmonic, Dallas Symphony Orchestra, and Milwaukee Symphony, and principal trumpet of the Marlboro Music Festival Orchestra, Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra (1979-82), Royal Ballet Orchestra, Victoria (British Columbia) Symphony Orchestra, and the American Ballet Theatre Orchestra. He was a member of the Los Angeles Philharmonic's trumpet section from January of 1982 until his retirement in 2010. He has taught at Ball State University and the University of Victoria, and is currently a professor at the University of Southern California. Wayne Bergeron was one of his pupils. Hood is also an active studio player.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Greig, Murray. "The Los Angeles Philharmonic Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2005); "Boyde Hood" (www.usc.edu); "Boyde Hood" (www.laphil.com/philpedia/artist-details.cfm?id=363); "Boyd Hood" (http://trumpetmusician.blogspot.com/2005/09/boyd-hood-trumpeter.html).

Hoornweg, Arto (b. Rotterdam, Netherlands, 1957). Dutch trumpeter. Hoornweg made his solo debut at age nineteen with the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra at the Amsterdam Concertgebouw. He attended the Rotterdam Conservatory, graduating cum laude in 1980. Additionally, he studied with James Stamp in Los Angeles (until Stamp's death in 1985).

Hoornweg played with the Netherlands Wind Ensemble and is a founding member of the Netherlands Brass Quintet. He joined the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra as principal trumpet in 1982, and taught at the Rotterdam Conservatory until 1984 when he assumed teaching duties at the Utrecht School of the Arts. He has also served with Roy Poper on the faculty of the Oberlin Trumpet Institute in Ohio.

Bibl.: "Arto Hoornweg" (http://new.oberlin.edu/conservatory/summer/trumpet-workshop/faculty.dot); "Arto Hoornweg" (www.trompet.nl/interviews/rpho.arto.shtml).

Hooten, Thomas (b. Tampa, Florida, Nov. 18, 1976). American trumpeter. Hooten grew up in Tampa, Florida. He began playing the trumpet at age thirteen, although he did not take trumpet lessons until his senior year of high school when he studied privately with Robert Smith of the Florida Orchestra. Hooten attended Seminole Presbyterian, but spent his senior year of high school at Gaither High School, graduating in 1994. From 1994 to 1998, he attended the University of South Florida, studying with Don Owen, and from 1998 to 2000 earned a master of music degree at Rice University in Houston where he studied with Armando Ghitalla. Additionally, he studied with John Hagstrom, Chris Gekker, Mark Gould, Langston Fitzgerald III, Steven Hendrickson, and Adel Sanchez.

Hooten was a member of the "President's Own" Marine Band in Washington, D.C. from 2000 to 2004, and was often a featured soloist. While living on the East Coast, he also performed on occasion with the National Symphony Orchestra, Washington Symphonic Brass, Arlington Symphony, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, and as second trumpet in the Richmond (Virginia) Symphony Orchestra. After his service years, he became assistant principal trumpet of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra (2004-06), and in 2006 was appointed principal of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. He was a featured soloist at the 2009 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and was named principal trumpet of the Los Angeles Philharmonic in the fall of 2011. He is an active clinician and recording artist who released a solo CD in 2011.

Hooten is married to Jennifer Marotta, a former trumpeter in the Marine Band (2001-05) and formerly on the music faculty at Kennesaw State University in Georgia. His hobbies include running, hiking, and playing the piano.

Bibl.: Thomas Hooten's official website: http://tomhooten.com; personal interview, Feb. 2, 2011.

Horne, Florence Louise (b. Cambridge, Maine, Apr. 19, 1880; d. Kansas City, Kansas, Sept. 6, 1956). American cornetist. The first known solo appearance by Louise Horne was when she was a child of ten. She must have been quite skillful for her age, because the Kennebee Journal reported, The Governor while visiting the Winchester Cottage was highly entertained by a performance on the cornet by a bright little girl of ten, Miss Louise Horne of Cambridge, Maine.

In 1892, she began taking lessons from R.B. Hall, and in the following year, at age thirteen, was a featured soloist with Hall's band. She began studying with Henry C. Brown in 1896, and soon joined the famed Fadettes, a girls' organization in Boston. In 1898, she toured as soloist with the Cecilia Musical Club, and by 1900 was in demand as a soloist throughout the Midwest.

During her twenties, Horne frequently toured as a soloist, often performing for months with various bands. Among the bands she worked with were the US Ladies Band of Providence, the Tuxedo Ladies Band in Cincinnati, Miss Reno Mario's Orchestra, Twelve Navajo Girls, and the Navassar Band. In addition, she gave numerous recitals in the lobby of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City. Her piano accompanist was the wife of the famed cornetist, W. Paris Chambers. She subsequently took a few lessons from Chambers.

In 1910, Horne married Edmund Stilwell, at which time she retired from touring. They lived in Kansas City where she continued to teach until her death forty-five years later.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Horowitz, Anthony ("Tony") (b. Brooklyn, New York, Sept. 16, 1945). American trumpeter. As a child, Horowitz was lucky to get a few lessons from some of the top names in the business—Ziggy Elman, Rafael Méndez, Claude Gordon. In 1957, he won a trophy on the Rocket to Stardom television talent show, and soon began playing with many of the leading big bands in the country led by Gerald Wilson (1963), Stan Kenton (1963), Henry Mancini (1963), Joyce Amy (1964), Louis Bellson (1966), Pearl Bailey (1966), Tony Pastor (1966), Jimmy Wakely, Ray Charles (1973-74), Louis Prima (1974), Raquel Welch (1975), Lou Rawls (1977), Dizzy Gillespie (1978), Lionel Ritchie (1978), Barry White (1979), and Willie Bobo (1978). Horowitz was drafted into the Army from 1968 to 1971, and was assigned to the 72nd Army Band and the Six Army Headquarters Band. He had surgery on his lower lip in 1974, but recovered nicely after studying with Claude Gordon.

Tony's wife Naomi, a dentist, decided to join the US Army in 1989, and was sent to Germany. There, Tony became a trumpet soloist and clinician. In 1993, they were transferred to Texas. Tony continued his music work and taught at Temple Community College. They returned to Germany in 1999. Tony recorded four CDs: This is Tony Horowitz, Triumvirate, Texas Trumpet, and Paz y Amor. He has published a book and video titled Warm-up to Consistency, and in 2001 toured with Tony Horowitz & The Mardi Gras Allstars, and was bandleader for the Non-Stop Jump & Jive Show in Frankfurt. He is a composer who has written many of the works on his recordings.

Tony and Naomi Horowitz retired to Monterey, California, in 2009. Although no longer active as a trumpet player, Tony continues to give private lessons at his home.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tony Horowitz's official website: www.tonyhorowitz.com.

Horton, Ron[ald] (b. Bethesda, Maryland, Feb. 12, 1960). American trumpeter. Horton grew up in Bethesda, Maryland, the son of Richard Horton (a physician and medical researcher) and Clare Horton (a biochemist and medical researcher). Ron's early trumpet teachers were Bill Spano, Rick Ensminger, Andy Leach, and Lou Mucci. When Horton was a teenager, Leach would loan him several trumpet recordings to listen to each week, which engendered in Ron a love for all of the great trumpet players of the world.

After graduating from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School in 1978, Horton attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston where he studied from 1978 to 1980. He left school and began performing in various jazz settings in the Boston area, but in 1982 moved to New York City to develop his career as a trumpeter, composer, and arranger. While there, he studied with Vince Penzarella and Laurie Frink.

Horton has two careers. He works on cars, especially old British sports cars (Jaguars, MGs, Triumphs, Austin Healeys, etc.), and owns two Jaguar XK120 automobiles that he is currently restoring. Of course, he is best known as a leading jazz trumpeter whose style is between hard bop and avant-garde. He has performed and recorded with many great musicians including Jane Ira Bloom (1983-2000), Andrew Hill (1998-2003), Lee Konitz, Will Holshouser, John McKenna, Abigail Riccards, Jon Gordon, Andy Laster, Mario Pavone, Kris Davis, Darcy James Argue, Sam Bardfeld, Mick Rossi, Bill Gerhardt, Bill Mays, Rez Abbasi, Phillip Johnston, Matt Wilson, Peggy Stern, Allan Chase, Tina Marsh, Andy Biskin, Ted Nash, Walter Thompson, Diana Perez, Billy Newman, Maryanne DeProphetis, Landon Knoblock, Maria Guida, Angie Sanchez, The Herbie Nichols Project, Ben Allison, Michael Blake, Frank Kimbrough, and others.

Horton has been a member of New York's Jazz Composers Collective since its inception in 1992. He has received several commissions for new works, including grants from Meet the Composer and the Mary Flagler Cary Charitable Trust. He received Jazzman magazine's CHOC award in 2004 for his CD release, Subtextures, on the Fresh Sound New Talent label. His other albums as leader include Genius Envy (OmniTone), It's a Gadget World (ABEAT), and Everything in a Dream (Fresh Sound). Horton can also be heard on dozens of other recordings. He is married to Reba Ann Adler, a classical vocalist and teacher of dance history.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Ron Horton's official website (www.ronhorton.net); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, May 28, 2010.

Horvey, Amy (b. Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada, Oct. 2, 1980). Canadian trumpeter. Horvey grew up in a musical family that lived on the family farm near Cabri, Saskatchewan. She began playing the trumpet at age six, and eventually earned a spot in the National Youth Orchestra of Canada (trumpets coached by Vincent Cichowicz and Larry Knopp). Her teacher during high school was Miles Newman of the Regina Symphony.

After graduating from Swift Current Comprehensive High School in 1998, Horvey attended the University of Victoria, studying with Louis Ranger (1998-2002). She then studied with Andrew McCandless at the Glenn Gould School in Toronto. From 2002 to 2005, she lived in the Netherlands where she studied with André Heuvelman at the Rotterdam Conservatory. She also took lessons from Marco Blaauw, and won a prize in the "de Link" Competition in the Netherlands. After graduating with highest honors, she returned to Canada to develop her career as a solo artist, composer, improvising musician, and freelance player.

Horvey toured Canada in 2006 with The Perspective of Disappearance, a new music program. She often plays with the National Arts Centre Orchestra, Montreal Symphony, Ensemble Caprice (Baroque trumpet), and Studio de Musique Ancienne de Montreal (Baroque trumpet). Her solo project and composition, The Queen of the Music Boxes (for solo trumpet and music boxes), was featured at the 2009 Stratford Summer Music Festival. She has also commissioned several new works for trumpet.

Horvey has received grants from the Canada Council and the Saskatchewan Arts Board. She was the 2008-09 holder of the NAC of Canada's Richard Li Young Artist Chair, and was a featured artist during the 2010 International Women's Brass Conference in Montreal. She has taught at Lakehead University and McGill University, and is currently teaching at Concordia University in Montreal. She has appeared as soloist with numerous ensembles including the National Arts Centre Orchestra, McGill Wind Symphony, and the Netherlands Blazers Ensemble.

Horvey is married to Isak Goldschneider, a musician and composer. She is pursuing a doctorate in performance at McGill University where she has studied with Edward Carroll and others. Her two solo albums include Interview (Malasartes Musique, 2009) and Catchment (self-released, 2010).

Bibl.: Chipello, Chris. "Award-winning Schulich riffs on trumpet music" (McGill Reporter, Nov. 5, 2008); "Amy Horvey" (www.music.mcgill.ca/dcs/collaborators/A_Horvey.php); Amy Horvey's official website: www.amyhorvey.com; personal interview, Nov. 29, 2010.

Hösslin, Bernd von (b. Peiting, Oberbayern, Germany, June 2, 1964). German trumpeter. Hösslin studied with Wolfgang Guggenberger at the Trossingen University of Music, and Baroque trumpet with Michael Laird in London. From 1996 to 1999, he was principal trumpet of the Chursächsische Philharmonie Bad Elster, and also performed with the Munich Symphony Orchestra, Kurorchester Garmisch-Partenkirchen, and the orchestra of the Freies Landestheater Bayern.

Hösslin is founder of the Re-Mi brass chamber ensemble, and taught at the Garmisch-Partenkirchen Music School and the Bavarian Music Academy in Marktoberdorf. Since September of 2001, he has been on the brass faculty of the Starnberg Music School.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Houghton, William ("Bill") (b. c1948). English trumpeter. Houghton's father gave him his first trumpet at age eight, which he learned to play on his own. He developed the habit of replacing his lower lip with his tongue. (He still uses this unorthodox embouchure today!) Two years later, he received formal lessons from Ernest Hall (not the Ernest Hall, but the father of Malcolm Hall, second trumpet in the LSO). He won a few local music contests and received an Olds Méndez-model trumpet as a prize (1958). He entered the Royal Academy of Music Junior School and took lessons from Edward Spratt. After graduating at age sixteen, Houghton entered the regular Royal School of Music where he studied with William Overton; two of his classmates were Elton John and Andrew Davis.

At age nineteen, Houghton was named sub-principal trumpet of the Royal Opera House Covent Garden Orchestra alongside the legendary Harry Dilley. He held this position for six years, but resigned in order to freelance in London. He became second trumpet (to Michael Laird) of the Academy of St. Martin Orchestra in 1975. They recorded the Vivaldi Concerto for Two Trumpets in C under Neville Marriner (1983). He moved to principal trumpet a few years later. He then became coprincipal with Denis Egan of the English National Opera Orchestra for one year. He returned to freelancing and played in productions such as Bernstein's Jesus Christ Superstar.

Houghton was hired as second trumpet (called coprincipal) of the BBC Symphony Orchestra in 1980. However, it turned out that John Wilbraham (principal) became ill, and was forced to resign, leaving the chair open for Houghton, who remained in this position for the remainder of his career. He also assumed duties as leader of the London Gabrieli Brass Ensemble in 1984. Houghton taught at the London College of Music for many years, where he replaced Denis Egan. He and his wife Sylvia have two daughters and one son.

Bibl.: Hurrell, Martn. "The BBC Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Sept. 1995); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Hovaldt, Gorm (b. Copenhagen, Denmark, Apr. 26, 1956). Danish trumpeter. Hovaldt began playing the trumpet at the age of five, and from age eight through nineteen studied with his father, Knud Hovaldt (Denmark's most famous trumpeter). In 1974, he received the Jacob Gade Legacy Award. In 1976-82, he attended the University and Royal Danish Music Conservatory where he studied with Kurt Pedersen; he also took lessons from Adolph Herseth in Chicago and Ole Andersen in Denmark. In 1977, he studied with Maurice André in France. Hovaldt played with the Symphony Orchestra of South Jutland, Royal Philharmonic (from 1986, principal in 1988), and Royal Philharmonic Brass Ensemble.

Hovaldt studied musicology at the University of Copenhagen in 1982, and while there, also became a state certified music therapist. He performed in the Royal Music Life Guards Corps (1979-86), and was later a member of the Tivoli Symphony Orchestra in Copenhagen (principal trumpet beginning in 1988).

As a soloist, Hovaldt has appeared with all of the Danish orchestras, as well as appearing in other countries. He often presents recitals with organ, and enjoys performing trumpet repertoire with voice. He sometimes performs in concert with his son, Christopher, a singer. His debut recording was released in 2003, and he has since made several recordings, as well as appearing on various television programs in Denmark.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Gorm Hovaldt Concert Bookings website (www.musiker-boersen.dk/klassisk/gorm_hovaldt.html); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Hovaldt, Knud (b. Hjørring, Denmark, Oct. 1, 1926; d. Copenhagen, Feb. 23, 2001). Danish trumpeter. Hovaldt studied with his father who played cornet and trombone in circus bands. He also studied in Ålborg with Mr. Sørenson, and then with Erik Fritzner, Anton Hansen, and Thomas Larson. He also took additional lessons from Hans Albrecht (Vienna), Massini (Florence, Italy), Marinus Komst (Amsterdam), and Samuel Krauss (Philadelphia).

Hovaldt first played in the Danish Army Horse Band (1943) before becoming principal trumpet in the Danish Radio Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra (from 1949 to 1991). He began giving trumpet recitals in 1951, and in 1952 toured the United States. In 1953, he performed the Concertino by Jolivet at the International Society for Contemporary Music Festival. He was a member of the Danish Royal Orchestra and Royal Opera where he was principal trumpet from 1961 until 1991. He was an excellent soloist, and recorded several major works, among them the Glindemann Concerto with the Scandinavia Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by the composer, and Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto with the Denmark Radio Chamber Orchestra conducted by Mogens Wöldike. He premiered Scherzando for Solo Trumpet, Strings & Percussion by Robert Farnon. Hovaldt was a guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein, and also worked with Eugene Ormandy. He took part in the Denver Trumpet Symposium (1971), and once performed the Vivaldi Concerto with Maurice André.

Hovaldt performed as a guest soloist in Austria and Sweden, and participated in the First International Brass Congress in Montreux (1976). He taught at the Royal Conservatory in Copenhagen (from 1961) and in several conservatories and music schools in Scandinavia, and taught Bengt Eklund, Bo Nilsson, and his own son, Gorm, who became a leading performer in Denmark. He encouraged his students to study in foreign countries in order to put to an end Denmark's musical isolation.

Hovaldt was dubbed by Americans as "The Great Dane" because of his tremendous talent, reputation as Denmark's leading trumpeter, and his substantial size. Hovaldt possessed a keen sense of humor and was a well-known artist-clinician for the Getzen Company.

Bibl.: Brøndsholm, Annie. Mestern: et portræt at kongelige kapelmusikus, solotrompetist Kund Hovaldt [The Master: A Portrait of Royal Chamber Music, Solo Trumpeter Knud Hovaldt] (Ballerup); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Howard, Avery ("Kid") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Apr. 22, 1908; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Mar. 28, 1966). American trumpeter and cornetist. In 1924 at the age of sixteen, Howard taught himself to play the drums and played with a band led by Chris Kelly who taught Howard to play the cornet, which he soon switched to. He also studied for five years with "professor" Delmar, and according to Albert Jiles, also studied with Paul E. Chaligny. Howard was under the spell of Louis Armstrong, and led his own Hot Five (1925) group and then a larger band, which Howard took on tour as well, playing throughout Louisiana, Mississippi, and even Chicago (1928 and 1931). Howard then played cornet with Isaiah Morgan and Andrew Morgan (1929), in the Eureka Brass Band, the Tuxedo Brass Band, and a brass band led by Henry Allen Sr. By 1931, Howard led his own brass band that performed dance music and funerals in New Orleans. He contributed to the Pacific Brass Band led by Kid Rena, and from 1934 led his own big band. As early as 1937, Howard began recording under his own name. In addition, he often played in a pit orchestra at the Palace Theater in New Orleans (1941-42).

By the 1940s, Howard had become a leading figure in New Orleans jazz. He subbed for Bunk Johnson in George Lewis's band in 1943. He also led some recording dates in 1946 with the Original Zenith Brass Band, and became a regular member of the Lewis group in 1952, touring the world as a trumpeter and singer.

Alcoholism became a problem for Howard in late 1952. His playing became very erratic, causing Lewis to use him only occasionally between 1953 and 1963. He became seriously ill in 1961, but was able to recover and continue with his career. The last few years of his life were spent performing mostly at Preservation Hall in New Orleans. He died in 1966 at the age of fifty-seven.

Howard's record albums include Kid Howard's Olympia Band (Icon), Kid Howard's New Orleans Band (Icon), and Kid Howard's Band (MONO). More recent CDs include The Complete Blue Note Recordings of George Lewis (5-CD set, Mosaic), The Beverly Caverns Sessions (Good Time Jazz), and Dr. Jazz (Good Times Jazz). He also recorded for other labels including Jazzology, San Jacinto, Nobility, Blue Note, and Japanese Dan.

Bibl.: Harvey, Brian. The Hottest Trumpet (Jazzology Press); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

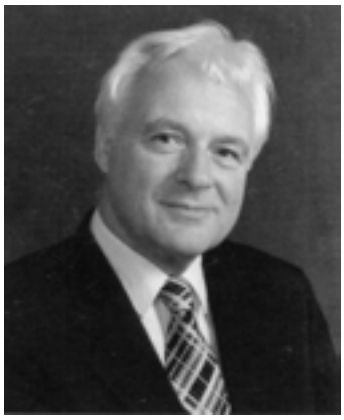
Howarth, Elgar ("Gary") (b. Cannock, Staffordshire, England, Nov. 4, 1935). British trumpeter, conductor, and composer. Howarth's father was a brass band conductor who gave Elgar his first lessons on cornet. By age ten, Elgar was playing in his father's band, and at eighteen was principal cornet. Howarth attended Manchester University, and then majored in music composition at the Royal Manchester College of Music. Along with classmates Peter Maxwell Davies, Harrison Birtwistle, Alexander Goehr, and pianist John Ogdon, he formed the Manchester New Music Group. Davies composed his twelve-tone Sonata for Trumpet and Piano for Howarth in 1955.

After finishing school, Howarth played trumpet in the Royal Opera House Covent Garden from 1958 to 1963, and was principal of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in 1963, and again from 1965 to 1970. From 1963 to 1965, he also freelanced in London. As a trumpeter, Howarth is best known from his years (1965 to 1976) in the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble, in which he was also a key member as composer, arranger, and conductor.



Perhaps his grandest work with PJBE was his transcription of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. Howarth's trumpet can also be heard on the Beatles' album, Magical Mystery Tour.

During the late 1960s, Howarth conducted the London Sinfonietta on a tour of Italy. The success of this tour opened the door for him to receive numerous invitations to guest conduct all over the world. From 1972 to 1976, he was the music director of the famous Grimethorpe Colliery Band, an ensemble showcased in the film, Brassed Off! He was also the conductor of the English Northern Philharmonic (1985-89) and principal guest conductor/music advisor of Opera North (1996-99).

Howarth's compositions include Concerto for Trumpet and Orchestra, Concerto for Trombone and Orchestra, Fireworks, Legends, Concerto for Trumpet and Brass Band, American Dream, and many others. (Many of his works are published under his penname, W. Hogarth Lear.) The Swedish trumpet virtuoso Håkan Hardenberger has premiered and recorded several of Howarth's works.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Elgar Howarth" (www.allaboutmusic.com).

Hruby, Alois ("Louie") (b. Cleveland, Ohio, 1886; d. 1968). American trumpeter. Alois was one of eight children born to Czech-born Frank Hruby IV who immigrated to Cleveland in 1883. Frank was a musician who taught each of his children to play various instruments, and his wife Katrina enforced a rigid practice schedule for each child. In 1916, Frank Hruby V (1883-1974) and Ferdinand ("Fred") Hruby (1891-1978) founded the Hruby Conservatory of Music in Cleveland that in 1956 had over five hundred students enrolled; the conservatory closed in 1968. For three generations, the Hruby family was known as "America's foremost musical family" because all eight of Frank's children taught at the conservatory, and five of them became members of the Cleveland Orchestra.

Alois played cello, cornet, and trumpet, and spent his entire career in the Cleveland Orchestra–thirty-five of them as a trumpeter: 1919-20 as fourth trumpet, 1921-25 as third trumpet, 1927-33 as first trumpet, 1934-47 as second trumpet, 1948-52 as third trumpet, and 1953-54 as fourth trumpet. Alois had three brothers that also played in the Cleveland Orchestra: William (1899-1965), John (1887-1964), and Charles (1893-1976).

Bibl.: Thornton, Mary. "Trumpet Players of the Cleveland Orchestra, 1918-1993)" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1994); "The Encyclopedia of Cleveland History" (http://ech.cwru.edu/ech-cgi/article.pl?id=HF7).

Hruby, William (b. Cleveland, Ohio, 1899; d. 1965). American trumpeter. William was one of eight children born into a famous musical family. [For more information about the family, see "Alois Hruby."] Like several of his siblings, William played in the Cleveland Orchestra–for thirty years as a trumpeter: second trumpet in 1925 and 1927-33, third trumpet from 1934-47, fourth trumpet from 1948-52, and fifth trumpet from 1953-55. He also played percussion.

Bibl.: Thornton, Mary. "Trumpet Players of the Cleveland Orchestra, 1918-1993" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1994); "The Encyclopedia of Cleveland History" (http://ech.cwru.edu/ech-cgi/article.pl?id=HF7).

Hubbard, Frederick ("Freddie") Dewayne (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, Apr. 7, 1938; d. Sherman Oaks, California, Dec. 29, 2008). American trumpeter. Hubbard grew up in a poor family. He learned to play the mellophone, French horn, trombone, and tuba before learning to play the trumpet in high school. He studied privately with James Compton. His early playing experiences were with local groups in Indianapolis and with the Montgomery Brothers band. His earliest recordings were with Wes Montgomery in 1957.

Hubbard was offered a French horn scholarship to Indiana Central College, but turned it down in order to major in trumpet at Butler University, studying with Max Woodbury, but because he was not a classical musician, he quit school and moved to New York to pursue a jazz career. He was influenced by the playing of Clifford Brown and Lee Morgan. Hubbard received advice from Kenny Dorham (c1957), Donald Byrd, Slide Hampton, Dizzy Gillespie, and Booker Little (1958). Beginning in 1958, Hubbard lived in New York.

Hubbard's first big break came when he performed with Philly Joe Jones at Birdland. Miles Davis was in the audience and immediately arranged for Hubbard to be signed with Blue Note Records (1960-65). Many of Hubbard's finest recordings were with Blue Note; he worked with artists such as J.J. Johnson, Quincy Jones, and Sonny Rollins. Hubbard became very popular when he joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1960-64). He also collaborated with jazz musicians such as Eric Dolphy, Ornette Coleman, John Coltrane, Herbie Hancock, Oliver Nelson, Paul Chambers, McCoy Tyner, Bobby Henderson, Andrew Hill, Dexter Gordon, Sam Rivers, Wayne Shorter, Joe Ferrell, and George Cables.

Hubbard formed his own quintet in 1964, and played with Max Roach in 1965 and Sonny Rollins in 1966. Hubbard reached the height of his playing and popularity during the early 1970s when he recorded for the CTI label. In order to be more financially secure, Hubbard signed with Columbia Records in 1974 (until 1979), but was coaxed into making numerous (and dubious) records in a variety of commercial styles such as funk, electric rock, and even disco. From 1977 to 1979, he rejoined Herbie Hancock's group (although intermittently) and returned to more authentic jazz.

The 1980s were troubled times for Hubbard. He seemed to have numerous personal problems and began drinking excessively, contributing to his declining health in the late 1980s. Still, Hubbard played well with Count Basie (1980), Dizzy Gillespie (1980), Clark Terry (1980), Dizzy Gillespie (in Tokyo, 1981), Ashley Alexander (1983), the All Star Jazz Messengers (1984), Woody Shaw (1984-90), at the Messina Jazz Festival (1987, A Love Supreme by John Coltrane), and on the European tour, To Diz with Love, by Slide Hampton (1992, with Jon Faddis, Claudio Roditi, Roy Hargrove, and Red Rodney).

In 1992, Hubbard ruptured his lip while playing, resulting in an infection that required surgery to repair, but after that, his playing steadily declined. From 1996 he could no longer play correctly, but still appeared on stage until 2008.

Hubbard recorded sixty-two albums, as well as recording hundreds of others as a sideman. Among his best recordings are Open Season (Blue Note), Ready for Freddie (Blue Note), Hub-Tones (Blue Note), Breaking Point (Blue Note), Backlash (Koch), Red Post (Enja), Face to Face (Original Jazz Classics), Life Flight (Blue Note), Mosaic (Blue Note), Ugetsu (Original Jazz Classics), and Blues at the Abstract Truth (GRP/Impulse). He recorded for numerous labels including Blue Note, GRP/ Impulse, MPS, CTI, Columbia, Pablo, Real Time, Enja, and Elektra.

Hubbard died of a heart attack at the Sherman Oaks Hospital in Sherman Oaks, California, on December 30, 2008. He was seventy years old. He was awarded the distinction of Jazz Master by the National Endowment of the Arts and received a Grammy Award for his participation in the tune, "Zanzibar," on the Billy Joel album, 52nd Street. He appeared in the film, 'Round Midnight, in 1985 and can also be seen in the videos, Studiolive (1981), Live at the Village Vanguard (2004), All Blues (2005), and Freddie Hubbard: One of a Kind (2009). Along with Clifford Brown and Lee Morgan, Hubbard is among the main models of bop trumpet playing.

Bibl.: Cooper, David. "I Remember Freddie" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2009); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008); Laplace, Michel. Freddie Hubbard, une étoile passe, un modèle reste (Gazette des Cuivres no12, IV-2008).

Huber, Ferdinand Fürchtegott (b. St. Gall, Switzerland, Oct. 31, 1791; d. St. Gall, Switzerland, Jan. 9, 1863). Swiss trumpeter, organist, and composer. Huber was one of the first important teachers and composers in Switzerland. He was the son of a vicar and school rector, but grew up in a foster home in the town of Lippstadt. At a young age, he was sent to study with Johann Georg Nast of the Stuttgart Stadtpfeifer, and played trumpet for many years in the opera (court) orchestra there. In 1815, he returned to his homeland, and in 1817 became a music teacher in Hofwil.

Huber returned to St. Gall in 1824 to become organist at St. Catherine's church. He also conducted the opera there during the 1825-26 season. He moved to Berne, Switzerland in 1829 where he taught at the Realschule, and in 1832 returned to his native city of St. Gall to teach organ, piano, singing, violin, and lead the Antilitz Choral Society. He formed a military band, a band for boys, and several male choirs. He spent his last years teaching private lessons.

Ferdinand Huber is best known today for studying and collecting Swiss folk music, and for the revival of the Alphorn. He composed many works which are now housed at the Canton Library Viadana of St. Gall.

Bibl.: Keim, Freidel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ferdinand Fürchtegott Huber" (www.rism-ch.org/pages/huber).

Hubinon, Paul [Joseph] (b. c1945; d. c1977). American trumpeter. Hubinon was one of the greatest lead trumpeters of all time, yet was highly underrated because of his standoffish personality. He grew up in Charleroi, Pennsylvania, and graduated from Charleroi High School. He attended Duquesne University as a music major where he studied with Eddie Shiner. It was at about this time that he formed his first jazz band, the Paul Hubinon-Ray DeFade Orchestra, which recorded for LaVere Records during the early 1960s. Concerned about his upper register problems, he and Shiner began studying the dental structures of several excellent high note trumpeters, discovering that nearly all had relatively short upper incisors (or a bit of an upside-down "V" notch between them). Hubinon decided to have his dentist, Dr. Lester Gordon of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, file a V-notch between his upper teeth, and the improvement in range was immediate.

After graduating from Duquesne University in 1964, Hubinon became a member of the US Airmen of Note. He was often featured as the lead trumpeter and soloist, and made several recordings with the group. Upon discharge, he played in the bands of Bob Bunton (1967), Bobby Bryant (1968), and Richard Holmes (1968), and played lead trumpet with the Pittsburgh Pops orchestra (recording Holiday for Trumpet and Maria during the late 1960s).

Around 1970 he moved to Los Angeles to become a studio player, and recorded throughout most of the 1970s with such artists as James Brown, Boz Scaggs, Cold Blood, Glen Campbell (recording Rhinestone Cowboy), The Four Tops, Dean Martin, Ella Fitzgerald, Neil Diamond, Seals & Crofts, Peggy Lee, The Righteous Brothers, Cannonball Adderley, The Grateful Dead, Marvin Gaye, and many others. During these years, the hippie culture in Southern California influenced many musicians to dress and act in a certain way, including taking drugs. In order to fit in with various groups, both personally and musically, Hubinon began to drink alcohol and use illegal drugs to excess. He became a loner, and was at times very difficult to get along with. As a result, he had few friends and received less work than he might have otherwise. In spite of his substance abuse, Hubinon can be heard as the solo trumpeter in the movie, Jonathon Livingston Seagull, and in several Hanna-Barbera cartoons such as The Jetsons (along with other trumpeters Chuck Findley, Gary Grant, Dalton Smith, Bill Peterson, and Bud Brisbois.

Hubinon died of a drug overdose around 1977. Reportedly, friend and fellow trumpeter Bill Peterson (who was at the time president of musicians' union Local 47) was the only person to attend Hubinon's funeral. Paul Hubinon died at the approximate age of thirty-two.

Bibl.: Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford Pub.); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Paul Hubinon Stories" (www.TrumpetHerald.com/forum/viewtopic.php?p=1070084); "Dominic's Bronze bell" (www.trumpetmaster.com/vb/f139/dominics-bronze-bell-21360.html).

Huffman, Gerald (b. Lapel, Hamilton County, Indiana, Jan. 3, 1903; d. Fulton, Texas, Dec. 19, 1981). American trumpeter. Huffman studied music at the Dana Institute in Warren, Ohio. His early teachers were Ross Hickernall, Herbert L. Clarke, Edward B. Llewellyn, and Ernest Pechin. He began his career as principal trumpet of the 129th Infantry Band in Mt. Morris, Illinois. He joined the Sousa Band in 1925, and played with the organization until 1930. He then played with the Royal Scotch Highlanders in Canada, and the US Navy Band. During the late 1930s, he was the bandmaster of the Kable Brothers Band, a private ensemble in Illinois. He was a member of the Chicago Civic Orchestra from 1936 to 1938, and joined the trumpet section (third trumpet) of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra during the 1939-40 season. (Elden Benge had left the CSO to go to the WGN staff orchestra, and Renold Schilke moved from third to first trumpet.) During the next eleven years, Huffman played third trumpet, but was principal from 1942 to 1946. From 1946 to 1950, he played second trumpet, and then became third trumpet again in 1950-51.

Huffman gave the first Chicago performance of the Hindemith trumpet sonata at a concert of contemporary music at the University of Chicago on March 23, 1945. He was on the faculty at Elmhurst College and coached the trumpet section of the Civic Orchestra. Thomas Crown, a member of the Civic Orchestra at that time recalls that he was a sober, serious person who taught us orchestra skills, with a strong emphasis on correct rhythm.

Huffman was dismissed from the CSO in 1951, probably without pension or benefits. He retired to Fulton, Texas, where he is said to have owned a variety store and indulged his hobby of raising bantam chickens and pheasants.

Bibl.: Crown, Thomas, with John Hagstrom and Joe Lill. "The Chicago Symphony Trumpet Section 1933-1948." (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2013); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Gerald Huffman" (www.stokowski.org./Principal_Musicians_Chicago _Symphony.htm).

Huffsteter, Steve (b. Monroe, Louisiana, Feb.7, 1936). American trumpeter. Huffsteter began playing his uncle's old cornet when he was eight or nine years old. At age ten, he and his family moved to Phoenix, Arizona. While in high school, he began playing professionally. He attended Arizona State College (now Arizona State University) for a short while, but quit to play fulltime at Koko's (in Phoenix), a club that booked numerous celebrity performers from Las Vegas.

Huffsteter moved to Los Angeles in 1960 and began playing with numerous big bands such as those of Stan Kenton (1960-61), Si Zetner (1962), Ray Charles (1966), Louie Bellson, Toshiko Akiyoshi-Lew Tabackin (mid 1970s to mid 1980s), Tom Talbert, Bob Florence (since mid 1960s), Billy Berry, Shorty Rogers, Bill Holman, Gordon Brisker, and Matt Catingub. He also played in small groups with Shorty Rogers, Willie Bobo, Clare Fischer, Pauline Da Costa, Dave Pell, Supersax, Willie Bob, Poncho Sanchez, Jim Morris, Moacir Santos, and Pete Cristleb. He has recorded with Cecilia Coleman, Bob Florence, Bill Perkins, Natalie Cole, and many others. In 2003, he paid a tribute to Stan Kenton with the Mellophone Band conducted by Lennie Niehaus.

Together with his wife, a pianist, in 1991, Huffsteter formed the Steve Huffsteter Big Band, a group he still leads, which has backed vocalists such as Tony Bennett, Mel Tormé, Nat "King" Cole, Ella Fitzgerald, Jack Jones, Toni Tennille, Diane Schurr, Julie Kelly, Natalie Cole, Vikki Carr, Debbie Reynolds, Dean Martin, Mike Campbell, and many others. Among Huffsteter's albums are Circles (his first album as leader, 1982), The Bill Perkins-Steve Huffsteter Quintet, Live at Café 322 (SH), and Gathered Around (a DVD on AIX). Altogether, Huffsteter has recorded over eighty albums, playing everything from fusion to hard bop.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Steve Huffsteter" (www.ceciliacoleman.com).

Hughes, Mark (b. c1961). American trumpeter. Hughes grew up in Jonesboro, Georgia. He studied with Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University, and received his bachelor of music degree in 1983. He was then accepted into the Civic Orchestra of Chicago where he studied with Adolph Herseth and Arnold Jacobs, and while in Chicago, helped form the Millar Brass Ensemble. After leaving Chicago, he moved to the East Coast where he occasionally performed with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra and the Charleston Symphony. He toured for three years with Richard Morris's "Toccatas and Flourishes," a trumpet and organ duo managed by Columbia Artists Management.

As early as 1979 while in college, Hughes had begun playing as an extra trumpet with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. He moved back to Atlanta, and joined the Atlanta Brass Quintet in 1987, and also performed with the Atlanta Ballet Orchestra and the Atlanta Civic Opera Orchestra. In 1994, he was named associate principal trumpet of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, and acting principal during the 2005-06 season. He also taught as an adjunct faculty member at Kennesaw State University and Emory University.

Around 2007, Hughes was selected as principal trumpet of the Houston Symphony Orchestra. He has taught at the University of Houston's Texas Music Festival, and is an active soloist and clinician. He resides in Bellaire, Texas, with his wife Marilyn, and children Thomas and Caroline.

Bibl.: Royal, Jason W. "The Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2006); "Mark Hughes" (www.tmf.uh.edu).

Humphrey, Percy [Gaston] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Jan. 13, 1905; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, July 22, 1995). American trumpeter. Humphrey came from a musical family. His father Willie Sr. was a clarinet player like his noted brother Willie Jr. His brother Earl was a trombonist, and his cousin Emery Thompson was a legendary trumpeter—himself father of Jamil Sharif—also a trumpet player.

Percy learned to play the drums at an early age, which he played in the Valmar Victor School Band. Then, he took trumpet lessons from his grandfather, "Professor" Jim Humphrey, and permanently switched to the trumpet, playing in brass bands led by Kid Rena and Chris Kelly (1922). In 1925, he led his first dance band and also worked occasionally with the Eureka Brass Band and other local groups. As a member of the Kid Howard's band (1928-1929), he toured Louisiana and Mississippi, and visited Chicago in 1929.

Humphrey mostly played with the Eureka Brass Band (1931-39). He retired from music (1939-46), but then made a comeback in 1946 as a leader of the Eureka Brass Band. The Eureka band made several recordings in 1951, and Humphrey joined George Lewis's band in the same year. Although he played and sang with Lewis for two years, he refused to go on any of the tours because he didn't want to give up his day job. He was a part-time musician for the rest of the 1950s.

In 1961, Humphrey's Crescent City Joymakers recorded for Riverside records. He also recorded with pianist Sweet Emma Barrett. In 1964, Humphrey and his brother Willie joined the Preservation Hall Jazz Band that made many recordings with Humphrey until 1987. His recordings include New Orleans (Columbia), Percy Humphrey's Crescent City Joymakers (Riverside), Living New Orleans Jazz (Smokey), At Manny's Tavern (Center), and New Orleans Parade (Pax). Humphrey died at the age of ninety.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Percy Gaston Humphrey" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Hunger, Helmut ("Willy") (b. Freibergsdorf, Saxony, May 18, 1929; d. before Oct. 11, 2011). German-born Swiss trumpeter. Hunger studied with Carlo Poggi in Bern, and with Albin Herr in Stuttgart. His early career was spent in Germany, performing with the Mainz Orchestra (1951), Duisburg Orchestra (1952), and Munich Philharmonic (1953-56). He returned to Switzerland in 1956, performing until 1994 with the Orchestra della Radiotelevisione della Svizzera Italiana. He was also a teacher in Lugano.

Hunger is well known for his many recordings of Baroque and Classical works for trumpet. His 1967 album, Art of the Trumpet (Orpheus), was reissued in 1992 as Trumpet Concertos (Sony, shared with sides by André Bernard) and Virtuoso Trumpet Concertos (CBS Masterworks). During the 1960s and '70s, he was a popular guest soloist and teacher of master classes at international festivals throughout Europe and Scandinavia.

Bibl.: Keim, Freidel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Sanvi, Mirto. Obituary in Revue Musicle Suisse, dated Oct. 11, 2011 (pub. Dec. 2011) without giving death date.

Hunsicker, J[ohn] David (b. Wayne, Michigan, Sept. 13, 1971). American trumpeter. Hunsicker began playing piano at age four, and the trumpet at age eleven under the instruction of Leo Tallieu. Beginning at the end of tenth grade, he studied with Irving Sarin, and graduated as Valedictorian of Crestwood High School in Dearborn Heights, Michigan, in 1989. He then attended Indiana University where he studied with Bernard Adelstein, and graduated in 1994. After working as a freelance artist in New York City for a short while, he moved back to his home state of Michigan where he won positions with the Flint, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, and Kalamazoo symphonies. He also earned a master of music degree at the University of Michigan, studying with Charles Daval and graduating in 2000.

Hunsicker became associate principal trumpet of the New Mexico Symphony in 2001, but left this position in 2004 to study with Regents' Professor David Hickman at Arizona State University and serve as a graduate teaching assistant. In 2008, he married violinist Angela Grace Cassette. The couple moved to Omaha, Nebraska, when Angela was hired as an administrator of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra. Hunsicker soon began performing with the orchestra, and served as the trumpet instructor at the University of Nebraska at Omaha (January 2009 through May 2010) and the Omaha Conservatory of Music. In 2010, Angela accepted a position as Artistic Operations Director of The Florida Orchestra, and Hunsicker (having left his positions in Omaha) worked with The Florida Orchestra, Sarasota Orchestra, Sarasota Opera, and Florida Grand Opera. He completed his DMA in trumpet at Arizona State University in May of 2012, and accepted a professorship at Wichita State University in the fall of 2012. For several summers, Hunsicker has been principal trumpet of the Des Moines (IA) Metro Opera orchestra and the Lancaster (OH) Festival Orchestra. He has also played with the Santa Fe Opera, Arizona Opera, Detroit Symphony, Detroit Chamber Winds, Michigan Opera Theatre, Phoenix Symphony, Des Moines Symphony, Sonoran Brass Quintet, Great Lakes Brass Quintet, Michigan Chamber Brass, and the Dodworth Saxhorn Band.

Bibl.: Hunsicker, John David. Professional Orchestral Auditions for Trumpet (unpublished DMA dissertation, Arizona State University, 2012); personal interview, Aug. 21, 2012.

Hunt, Clyde Edward (b. Alliance City, Ohio, July 27, 1937). American trumpeter. A very talented trumpeter at an early age, Hunt joined the Alliance City, Ohio, musician's union at age eleven. He attended Alliance High School, playing in the band and orchestra, and singing in the chorus. He was selected for the All Ohio Boys Band that performed at the Ohio State Fair in 1954 and 1955. He received a bachelor of music education and a master of fine arts degree from Kent State University. During his freshman year, he won the fourth chair in the Akron Symphony Orchestra, and was moved up to second trumpet in 1961. Hunt also performed with the Akron Symphony Brass Quintet, Akron Civic Theatre Orchestra, and the Akron Goodyear Theater Orchestra (until 1967).

Hunt moved to Washington, D.C. in 1967 where he became trumpeter and soloist at the Church of the Ascension and at St. Agnes Episcopal Church. In 1983, he joined Brooks Tegler's Hot Jazz swing band, providing numerous compositions and arrangements for the group. He was also a member of the Steve Jordan Trio. He can be heard as a sideman on over thirty CD recordings.

Hunt's career was spent mostly as a teacher. He taught band and music classes at St. Peter Chanel High School in Bedford, Ohio (1962-67), and taught in the Montgomery County public schools in Rockville, Maryland (1967-97). His book, Sail the Seven C's (B-Flat Music Productions), is widely used as a high range method for trumpet.

Although now retired in Colonial Beach, Virginia, Hunt occasionally gives trumpet lessons.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Clyde E. Hunt Biography" (www.bflatmusic.com).

Hunter, Billy Ray Jr. (b. Austin, Texas, c1976). American trumpeter. Hunter studied with Raymond Crisara at the University of Texas in Austin, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1997. He then studied with Raymond Mase and Mark Gould at The Juilliard School where he received a master of music degree. He attended the Tanglewood Music Center, and played in the New World Symphony before becoming a member of the Grant Park Orchestra in Chicago, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, and Spoleto Festival Orchestra. While still in his twenties, he won a position as one of the principal trumpets of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in 2004.

Hunter received the 2010 Distinguished Alumnus Award from the School of Music at UT-Austin. He and his wife, Bulgarian-born pianist Anna Stoytcheva, have one son, Michael.

Bibl.: "Billy Ray Hunter Jr." (www.utexas.edu/know/2010/07/01/extraordinary_exes_hunter_house); "Billy Ray Hunter" (www.texasexes.org/alcaide/feature.asp?p=4975).

Hurley, Clyde [Lanham Jr.] (b. Ft. Worth, Texas, Sept. 3, 1916; d. Ft. Worth, Texas, Aug. 15, 1963). American trumpeter. Hurley studied piano, but taught himself to play trumpet by playing along with Louis Armstrong recordings. He worked with a few jazz and Dixieland groups in Ft. Worth before joining Ben Pollack's band in 1938 with which he became a leading soloist, recording So Unexpectedly to great acclaim.

On a tour with Pollack, Hurley dropped out of the band in Los Angeles in order to become a studio musician. He was soon picked up by Glenn Miller who featured Hurley quite a bit. Hurley's hot trumpet solos can be heard in the recordings of In the Mood, One O'Clock Jump (recorded live at Carnegie Hall), Slip Horn Jive, and Tuxedo Junction. But, after some disagreements over style, Hurley left Miller after one year. Miller's trumpet section during that time was amazing: Mickey McMickle, Clyde Hurley, Billy May, and Bobby Hackett.

In 1940, Hurley joined Tommy Dorsey's orchestra. He then moved to the Artie Shaw orchestra in 1941 but soon returned to Los Angeles to resume his career as a studio player. He was on staff with the MGM orchestra from 1944 to 1949 (alongside Mannie Klein and Rafael Méndez) and the NBC orchestra from 1950 to 1955. He can be heard on the Solo Flight album with the Paul Weston Orchestra, performing Memories of You. Hurley also occasionally played Dixieland music with Matty Matlock's Rampart Street Paraders. In addition, he was often heard on live radio broadcasts from San Francisco's Club Hangover in 1954. Hurley led a few recording dates, recording four tunes for Keynote in 1946 and five Dixieland tunes for Crown in 1950. Some of his LP albums include Dixieland, My Dixieland (Columbia), and Texas! USA (Columbia).

Ill health caused Hurley to stop playing and return to his hometown of Ft. Worth in 1963, where died at the age of forty-six.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Clyde Hurley" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Hurrell, Martin (b. Essex, England, June 22, 1962). British trumpeter. Hurrell began taking singing and piano lessons at the age of five, and began playing the cornet at age eight under the tutelage of his father. At age fourteen, he joined the National Youth Orchestra, and studied with Ted Spratt at the Royal Academy of Music Junior School. Two years later, he attended the regular Royal Academy of Music where he studied cornet with Ray Allen, and conducting with Maurice Miles. However, he was expelled for failing to attend piano lessons. For the next year, he was employed as a construction worker on a Scottish Highland sheep farm. After deciding to take his music studies more seriously, he was allowed back in school and graduated in 1983.

Immediately after graduating from the Royal Academy of Music, Hurrell was selected to play with the European Community Youth Orchestra. After a few months of training, he was hired as principal cornet in the BBC Concert Orchestra (replacing Andrew Hendrie). He met and married Penelope, a viola player in the orchestra. He stayed in the orchestra for four years, but became tired of performing light musicals; so beginning in 1987 he freelanced in London, and performed at various times with all of the orchestras of the city. He also played with the London Brass.

Hurrell became principal cornet of the BBC Symphony Orchestra in 1992. He has conducted numerous brass bands, and is currently director of the Hitchin Band. He has three children—Susanna, Laurence, and Emily. He enjoys fine food and wine.

Bibl.: Hurrell, Martin. "The BBC Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Sept. 1995); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kenyon, Nicholas. The BBC Symphony Orchestra, the First 50 Years (published by the BBC).

Hutchinson, Leslie George ("Jiver") (b. Kingston, Jamaica, Mar. 16, 1906; d. Weeting, England, Nov. 22, 1959). Jamaican trumpeter. Hutchinson began playing with the British West Indies Regimental Band which went to England in 1924 to play at the Empire Exhibition in London. In 1934, he was with Bertie King's Band, but permanently moved to England in 1935, where he worked with Happy Blake at the Cuba Cotton Club and the Cabin Club, toured with a stage show, and briefly played with Leslie and Ken Johnson's Emperors of Jazz (1936-38). He worked with Jack Davies, Al Craig, and Fela Sowande until 1939, when he also played in the movie, Traitor-Spy, and later that year, led his own band at the Florida Club in Mayfair London.

Between 1941 and 1943, Hutchinson played with Sid Philips, Bert Ambrose, and Maurice Burman, and in 1943-44 was a star soloist with the Geraldo Orchestra. After touring the Middle East with the latter orchestra, he began working with Lew Stone. He again formed his own band (1944-50), and toured India, Scandinavia, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Belgium, and other European countries. He rejoined the Geraldo Orchestra in 1950, and worked with the group on and off for the next six years. In addition, he performed with Mary Lou Williams, George Firestone, appeared in the film, Captain's Paradise, and formed new bands in 1955 and 1956.

Hutchinson was tragically killed on November 22, 1959 when his band's bus left the road. He was survived by his daughter Elaine Delmar, a popular singer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jiver Hutchinson" (www.allaboutjazz.com/php/musician.php?id=12518); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Hyde, John (fl. 1780—1821). English trumpeter. Hyde was one of the finest performers in London in his day, and played first trumpet in the leading orchestras. His greatest achievement was the invention, shortly before 1800, of the "slide trumpet," also known as the English slide trumpet. The instrument resembled a natural trumpet in common form, but added a push rod that moved the back bow of the trumpet over the shoulder of the player in a manner similar to the trombone, but in the opposite direction. Two circular clock springs returned the slide to its normal position. These were later replaced by a single elastic band. The original intention of the invention was to improve intonation, but the slide was eventually made to extend up to three half steps, making it nearly fully chromatic. The instrument was used by many of England's finest players until about 1890, long after valves were introduced.

Hyde wrote a method book in 1799, New and Compleat Preceptor for the Trumpet and Bugle Horn (reproduced by The Brass Press). His slide trumpet allowed composers to write pitches for the trumpet that had been previously acquired only by lipping.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W. W. Norton & Co.); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Hyde, Vic (b. Florida, Jan. 16, 1913; d. Gainsville, Florida, Jan. 2006). It is surprising that so little biographical information is known about

Hyde. This mega entertainer was often referred to as a "genial human dynamo and one-man philharmonic." He could play one, two, or three trumpets at the same time, even while bouncing around on a pogo stick. He could also play four linked-together bugles, drums, and piano simultaneously!

Sponsored by King Musical Instruments, Hyde performed at assemblies at thousands of high schools in America. He also toured with many circus shows, including sixteen European tours where he performed for kings, queens, presidents, and various heads of state. In 1954, he toured Sweden with the Kuruvik Ungdorm Cirkus, and after World War II, toured West German USO army bases. His appearance on The Tonight Show left host Johnny Carson laughing on the floor.

Hyde was an avid collector of unusual automobiles including many three-wheeled vehicles. His home in Niles, Michigan, was filled with automotive prototypes, Rolls-Royces, motorcycles, and even airplanes. He was featured in several magazines such as Hemming's and Popular Mechanics. Many of his unusual cars are now exhibited in various auto collections. He retired to Florida in 1980.

Bibl.: Lamm, Michael. "Two's a motorcycle, three's a..., very strange car" (Popular Mechanics, Nov. 1977).

Hynes, Jim (b. Hackensack, New Jersey, Apr. 8, 1956). American trumpeter. Because of his early interest in sports, Hynes did not start playing trumpet until age seventeen. He taught himself to play through listening to and playing along with Herb Alpert albums owned by his mother. He attended Ithaca College where he studied with Herbert Mueller, earning a bachelor of music education degree in 1978. He played with the Ithaca Brass Quintet. After taking a year off from school, he entered the Eastman School of Music, where he studied with Allan Dean and completed a master's degree in Jazz and Contemporary Media under Rayburn Wright in 1981. While in Rochester, he became the fourth trumpet in the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra (1979-85) and Eastman Jazz Ensemble. He also played lead trumpet for Paul Anka (1981-83). He currently tours with Paul Simon.

During the summer of 1985, Hynes moved to New York City and began his freelance career. He worked in several pit orchestras on Broadway, performing such shows as Cats, Jerome Robbins' Broadway, Chess, Les Miserables, Starlight Express, The Will Rogers Follies, Legs Diamond, Sweet Charity, Dreamgirls, A Chorus Line, Dirty Rotten Scoundrels, In the Heights, Memphis, and about twenty others. As a studio recording artist, he can be heard on movie soundtracks such as Hitch, Snake Eyes, Meet Joe Black, The Alamo, Intolerable Cruelty, Malcolm X, Femme Fatale, Anastasia, and others. Television credits include The View, The Price is Right, ABC Monday Night Football, 20/20, ABC World News Tonight, NBC Nightly News, CBS Early Show, Nightline, Fox News and Fox Sports, Montel Williams Show, NBC Today Show, Chris Matthews Show, and others.

Hynes has backed numerous celebrity artists including Lyle Lovett, Burt Bacharach, Christine Aguilera, Quincy Jones, Sting, Jimmy Webb, Natalie Cole, Michael Jackson, Chaka Khan, Ivan Lins, Aerosmith, Bernadette Peters, Tony Bennett, Aretha Franklin, and Sheryl Crow. He has one son named TJ (b. 1971) as well as two grandchildren. His hobbies include golf, tennis, and fishing. He is also a skilled carpenter who built the house he is currently living in.

Bibl.: Roberts, Steven. "Developing the Versatile Trumpeter: Interviews with Three Multi-Talented Musicians" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); Jim Hynes's website (http://jimhynesmusic.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Mar. 25, 2010.

I

Ikebe, Jun (b. Japan). Japanese trumpeter. Ikebe completed his basic music studies in Japan before studying with Jean-Jacques Gaudon and Pierre Thibaud at the Edgar Varèse National School of Music in France. He also studied with Hans Gansch at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria. While in Europe, Ikebe had opportunities to perform with several leading orchestras.

Ikebe has been a member of the Singapore Symphony Orchestra since 2000. He has also served as a guest and acting principal trumpet of the Tokyo Philharmonic Orchestra, and was invited by Maestro Seiji Ozawa to play in the Saito Kinen Orchestra. In 2004, he was the only member of the SSO engaged as an extra player for the Russian National Orchestra during its Asian tour. A highly versatile trumpeter, Ikebe is comfortable in many musical settings, including Latin big band. He is a co-owner of Renaissance Brassworks (a custom mouthpiece company in Japan) and teaches at the Nanyang Academy of Fine Arts.

Bibl.: "Jun Ikebe" (www.sso.org.sg/index.php?option=com_content&view=article&id=116&itemid=52); http://renaissance-brassworks.blogspot.com.

Ikov, Andrei [Andrey] Mikhailovich [Andrej M. Ikow] (b. Moscow, Russia, Apr. 10, 1960). Russian trumpeter. Ikov began playing piano, but switched to trumpet before entering the Gnesin Moscow Special Music School where he graduated in 1978. He then attended the Moscow State Conservatory. His teachers include Georgy Orvid, Lev Volodin, Anatoly Selianin, Timofei Dokshitser, Jury Krivosheyev, A. Bazarov, and V. Shlepakov.

In 1980, Ikov won third prize in the All-Union Contest for Brass Performers, and in 1982 won first prize in the Prague Spring International Competition. He performed in the State Symphony Orchestra of the USSR under Maestro Evgeny Svetlanov in 1980-90 before becoming a member of the Russian National Orchestra under Maestro Mikhail Pletnev from 1990 to 2002. In that year, he was named the principal trumpet of the famous Bolshoi Theater Orchestra in Moscow, a position once occupied by the great Timofei Dokshitser. In 2008, he began teaching at the Moscow Conservatory.

As a soloist, Ikov has performed throughout Russia, and has appeared in Sweden, Finland, France, Germany, Bulgaria, Greece, and Czechoslovakia. He has released four solo CDs plus many recordings as a chamber music performer. He served as a board member of Euro-

ITG, and was an artist-faculty member at one of its conferences. He has taught at the Moscow Special School of Music, College of Music (from 2008), and Ippolitov High School. He is a member of The Russian Consort. In 2009, he was named an Honored Artist of the Russian Federation.

Ikov names the following as his main musical influences: his father Mikhail Ikov (a trombonist in the State Symphony Orchestra of the USSR), Timofei Dokshitser, Maurice André, Louis Armstrong, and Dizzy Gillespie.

Bibl: Frink, Laurie. "ITG Profile: Andrei Ikov" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2002); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Musician: Andrei Ikov" (www.b-and-s.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Hillsdale, NY); Shook, Brian. "Bolshoi Theatre of the Russian Federation Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2012).

Photo in the main Bolshoi Theater and color photo taken by Miriam Hickman.

Ilett, Denny Sr. (b. Reading, Berkshire, England, Oct. 1, 1942). British trumpeter and vocalist. Ilett begin playing cornet at age eight under the guidance of his father, a professional trumpet and viola player with army and London music halls. Specializing in early Louis Armstrong-style playing, Ilett became one of the best in the business, and was described by a jazz critic as a ferociously hot player of the "take no prisoners" school, with stamina quite beyond the reach of most.

Ilett's career began with the Ashmead Brass Band (1954-55), and continued with the Reading Light Orchestra (1955-60), Gems of Swing (1958-62), Merrydown Jump Band (1954-68), Soul Trinity (six years, backing Jimi Hendrix, James Brown, and others), Temperance Seven, Denny Ilett Jr.'s big band, Kenny Ball, Terry Lightfoot, and the Max Collie Band. While playing with Humphrey Lyttelton's band, Lyttelton described him as the best jazz trumpeter in the UK.

Ilett has recorded numerous LPs and CDs, including Aces High, Live in Stuttgart, Salute to Louis, Ariel Perspectives, and The Naughty Boys. His son Denny Jr. is a professional jazz guitarist.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Illman, Richard (b. Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Oct. 11, 1949). American trumpeter. Illman began playing the trumpet at age nine while growing up in Warrensburg, Illinois. During seventh grade, he and his family moved to Lexington, Kentucky, where he immediately joined the high school band. He began trumpet lessons during his junior year of high school, studying with Jerry Grady and Bob Dolwick. He attended the University of Kentucky as a physics major, but soon switched to music. He earned a bachelor of music degree in 1973, studying with Jack Hyatt and Walter Blanton, and served as a graduate teaching assistant to Vincent DiMartino, earning his master of music degree in 1975. Additionally, he studied with Philip Collins of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Illman's long and distinguished teaching career includes serving on the faculties of Asbury College (adjunct, 1974-78), Transylvania University (adjunct, 1975-78), University of Kentucky (one-year appointment, 1977-78), and Eastern Kentucky University (1978-90). In 1990, he accepted his current position as trumpet professor at Michigan State University in East Lansing. He has performed with the Kentuckiana Brass & Percussion Ensemble (founding member), Lexington Brass Quintet, Lexington Symphony Orchestra (principal for seventeen years), Brass Band of Battle Creek, and Detroit Symphony Orchestra, as well as backing celebrity artists such as Ray Charles, Burt Bacharach, Doc Severinsen, Bob Hope, The Spinners, and the Fifth Dimension. He is currently principal trumpet of the Lansing Symphony Orchestra, Millennium Brass Quintet (with Vincent DiMartino), Lansing Symphony Brass Quintet, Lansing Symphony Big Band (lead trumpet), and a member of the Beaumont Brass (MSU faculty brass quintet). Illman has presented lectures at the 1992 and 2006 conferences of the International Trumpet Guild, and has published a book/CD titled Yoga for Trumpet Players.

Illman and Jo Martinie, a certified yoga teacher and massage therapist, were married in 2009. He has a daughter from a previous marriage, Cathy (b. 1979) and two stepchildren, Pam (b. 1967) and Jon (b. 1969). His hobbies include cooking, tennis, fishing, and travel.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008); "Richard Illman" (www.msu.edu/~olsonc/illmancv.html); "Richard Illman" (http://people.music.msu.edu/detail.asp?ContactID=6); "Richard Illman" (www.lansingsymphony.org); personal interview, Mar. 19, 2011.

Immer, Friedemann (b. Duisburg, Germany, Apr. 8, 1948). German trumpeter. Immer's father was a pastor who preached in ruined churches during the aftermath of World War II. With no organs available, services relied on music by brass ensemble in which his father played flugelhorn. Friedemann wanted to learn to play too, so at age seven his father taught him how. He also learned to play the recorder and cello, and developed a keen interest in early music. His first trumpet lessons were with Freiherr Heinrich von Senden, principal trumpet of the Duisburg Symphony Orchestra. After three years of study, von Senden moved to Hannover to accept a new position, giving many of his gigs to Immer.

Blessed with an unusual ability to play in the upper register, Immer soon began performing the most difficult works by Bach such as Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 and Mass in B Minor, and by age twenty-two, had earned a reputation as a piccolo trumpet specialist. His interests included much more than music, however. He enrolled in Bonn University in 1969, and studied physics and math, but by 1977, he decided to make music his career. He attended the Cologne Musikhochschule from 1978 to 1984, studying trumpet externally with Walter Holy (an important Baroque trumpet specialist). While there, Immer was engaged (as a student) to teach early music classes. Although Immer began learning to play the (valveless) Baroque trumpet and cornetto in 1972, it wasn't until 1977 that he gave his first performance of the Brandenburg on a Baroque trumpet in F. In the same year, he made his first of more then ten recordings of this difficult work on natural trumpet (for the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C).

Immer has performed the Brandenburg hundreds of times with such groups as Collegium Aureum, La Petite Bande, Leonhardt Consort, Academy of Ancient Music, Taverner Players, Aston Magna, H.-M. Linde Consort, Concentus Musicus Wien, Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, and the Berlin Academy of Ancient Music. Since 1984, he has taught trumpet at the Musikhochschule in Cologne, and since 1993 has taught Baroque trumpet at the Sweelinck Conservatory of Music in Amsterdam, presenting workshops all over the world. In addition, he is the first person to record the Haydn Concerto in E-flat on keyed trumpet (1987 with Christopher Hogwood on Decca). He established the Friedemann Immer Trumpet Consort in 1988.

Immer was on the artist faculty of the 1987 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Kalamazoo, Michigan, and played with Sommerakademie J.S. Bach under H. Rilling (Stuttgart) and the Los Angeles Baroque Orchestra (Santa Barbara, 1989). He has recorded with Concentus Musicus Wien (under Nikolaus Harnoncourt), Mainz Chamber (under Gunther Kehr), the Capella Clementina, the Haarlem Trumpet Consort (works by Biber, Pezel, Schmelzer, Altenburg, and Speer with Ralph Bryant, Michael Laird, Crispian Steele-Perkins, Klaus Osterloh, Friedrich Held, A. Mudgan, K. Immer, E. Leu, Chr. Gösslin, K.-H. Gottfried, R.A. Lister, Chr. Lehmann: Baroque & Brass), and the Capella Clementina under H. Müller-Brühl (Stradella, Sinfonie, Sonate). He can be seen on videos such as La musique profane de J.S. Bach (1984, Suite in D, under Harnoncourt) and Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto (Freiburg Baroque Ensemble, EuroArts, 2000). Immer was awarded an honorary professorship at the Cologne Musikhochschule in 1997.

Immer and his second wife Claudia have three sons: Sebastian (b. 1982), Maximilian (b. 1990), and Felix (b. 1998). His hobbies include collecting trumpets, Oldtimers (classic cars), and building model cars.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Friedemann Immer" (Brass Bulletin, no. 50, 1985); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Feb. 21, 2010.

Ingram, Roger O'Neal (b. Pasadena, California, Nov. 13, 1957). American trumpeter. Ingram's father Ed was a musician, and his mother Hazel Ruth was a seamstress. Roger began playing the trumpet at age eight. His early teachers were Bobby Shew and Laroon Holt. While attending Eagle Rock High School at age sixteen, Ingram toured with the Louie Bellson Big Band, and played one summer in the Quincy Jones Big Band (1974). He developed an extraordinary upper register and ability to play lead trumpet, and immediately after graduating from school became lead trumpet for Tom Jones (1975-81). He moved to Las Vegas where he performed with dozens of celebrity artists including Connie Stevens, Jack Jones, The Mills Brothers, The Four Tops, Paul Anka, Cher, The Four Freshmen, Ann-Margret, Lena Horne, Frankie Avalon, and Jerry Vale.

Ingram joined the Woody Herman big band in 1985, and remained with it until Herman's death in 1987. He moved back to Los Angeles, and formed a big band with Steve Elliott. He toured with Maynard Ferguson's band (1988, 1992), recording three albums with "The Boss." He also worked with Jay Leno, John Williams, Natalie Cole, Henry Mancini, and Nancy Wilson.

Ingram became lead trumpet with Harry Connick Jr.'s big band in 1990, recording three albums before the band temporarily disbanded in 1993. He moved to New York City where he played for Frank Sinatra (1994), Liza Minnelli, Pearl Bailey, Tex Beneke, Les Brown, Cab Calloway, Doc Cheatham, Dizzy Gillespie, Clark Terry, J.J. Johnson, Jon Faddis, Terry Gibbs, Alvin Ailey Dance Theatre, dozens of others, and twenty Broadway shows. In 1994, he joined Wynton Marsalis's Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra as lead trumpet, but left the group in 1997 to tour with the Ray Charles Orchestra for two years. In late 1998, he returned to his former position with Harry Connick Jr., touring hundreds of cities and recording another sixteen albums with the band until retiring from touring in 2010.

Ingram moved to Chicago in 2007. He has performed with the Chicago Afro Latin Jazz Ensemble, The Chicago Yestet, The Rob Parton Big Band, MC Evers M13, and the Tom Motta Big Band. Since 2005, he has been an artist-in-residence at Roosevelt University. An active clinician, Ingram has presented clinics and master classes all over the world. He has also published two trumpet books, Clinical Notes on Trumpet Playing and Clinical Notes on Surviving the Road, both published through his own company, One Too Tree Publishing.

During his long and successful career, Ingram has also studied with Mannie Klein, Bob Findley, Mel Broiles, Bud Brisbois, Uan Rasey, James Stamp, Dan Jacobs, Roy Stevens, and Carmine Caruso. He has appeared on nearly a hundred albums for such labels as Blue Note, Summit, Concord, Sony, UTV, GRP (including the Grammy Award-winning CD, Danzon, with Arturo Sandoval), Avion, MCA, Milan, Sea Breeze, First Avenue, and others. He and Vicky Ingram were recently married. Their hobby is pet animals, including turtles and a hedgehog.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Mondello, Nick. "Roger Ingram on Surviving and Thriving On and Off the Road." (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2011); "Roger Ingram" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Roger Ingram's official website: www.rogeringram.com.

Inouye, Mark J. (b. Davis, California, May 18, 1971). American trumpeter. Inouye was raised in the San Francisco Bay area. He began playing the trumpet at age thirteen, but had no private lessons until he went to college. After graduating from Davis High School in 1989, he enrolled at the University of California-Davis as a civil engineering major. He transferred to The Juilliard School in New York in 1991. During the next fifteen years, his teachers included Fred Lange, Ed Higgins (1990-91), Raymond Mase (1991-93), Philip Smith (1993-94), and Mark Gould (1994-95). He also had occasional lessons with Wynton Marsalis, William Vacchiano, and Chris Gekker.

A highly versatile player, Inouye performs jazz music as well as all types of symphonic styles. He attended the Tanglewood Music Festival (recording Carnival of Venice and the Hummel Concerto with Maestro Seiji Ozawa and the Tanglewood Wind Ensemble for the video, Marsalis on Music), and toured as the trumpeter of Toccatas & Flourishes (1993-94), a trumpet and organ duo. While at Juilliard, he was a founding member of the Juilliard Jazz Sextet at Lincoln Center, and performed at the Playboy Jazz Festival and with The Who at Carnegie Hall. From 1995 to 1996, he toured as a member of the Empire Brass. His orchestral career began when he became a member of the New World Symphony in Florida (1996-98). In 1998, he won the audition for principal trumpet of the Tenerife Symphony in the Canary Islands of Spain, but turned it down in order to accept a position as principal of the Charleston Symphony Orchestra in South Carolina where he played from 1998 to 1999.

Inouye's tenure with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra began in 1999 after he won the audition for second trumpet; he won the audition for assistant principal in 2001. In 2004, he played principal in the Houston Symphony Orchestra, but two years later returned to the San Francisco Symphony as second trumpet. After an exhausting series of auditions, Inouye was named principal of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra in 2008. He began teaching at the San Francisco Conservatory in the fall of 2010. He has also performed on occasion with the New York Philharmonic and the Israel Philharmonic.

As a jazz performer, Inouye has released an album titled The Trumpet & The Bull. His jazz compositions include Find the Cheese and The Bull Behind the Horns Jazz Suite, which were premiered in the San Francisco Symphony Chamber Music Series. His hobbies include biking, surfing, and running half and full marathons.

Bibl.: Leisring, Steve. "Mark Inouye Does It All in San Francisco" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2010); Mark Inouye's official website: www.inouyejazz.com; personal interview, Oct. 15, 2010.

Ioannidis, Gerassimos ("Gerry") [N.] (b. Athens, Greece, Sept. 27, 1946). Greek trumpeter. Ioannidis began playing the trumpet at age eleven. He attended the Hellenic Conservatory in Athens where he studied with Dimitris Kafiris. He also attended several international trumpet workshops, and played in master classes for James Stamp, Thomas Stevens, Adolph Herseth, David Hickman, Bo Nilsson, Vincent DiMartino, Timofei Dokshitser, Pierre Thibaud, Allen Vizzutti, Dizzy Gillespie, Arturo Sandoval, and Maurice André.

Ioannidis played in the Municipal Band of Athens (1971-85), the Athens Radio Symphony (1975-93), the Athens State Symphony Orchestra (1971-85), and the Athens Opera Orchestra (1985-2007). He was a lecturer and band conductor at the International Course for Brass in Kalavrita, Greece (1999-2007), and is currently a professor at the "Orpheon" Conservatory of Athens (since 1979). For a time, he was director of the conservatory in Kalamata. He has also taught courses in Germany, Turkey, and Australia, and was a featured artist at the 2010 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Sydney, Australia. As a soloist, Ioannidis has performed in Greece, Turkey, Germany, Italy, Poland, Australia, and the United States.

From 1974 to 1981, Ioannidis was married to Anastasia Kalapothaki. His hobbies are fast cars, good food, traveling, keeping in touch with friends around the world, and collecting trumpets.

Bibl.: Jones, Gregory and Nikos Xanthoulis. "The New Greek Trumpet School" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2000); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, July 24, 2010.

Irish, John (b. Phoenix, Arizona, May 24, 1952). American trumpeter. Irish grew up in Ft. Lyon, Colorado, and took up the trumpet at age nine. His first lessons were with his local band directors, followed by one year of private study with Gil Garcia who was the trumpet professor at Southern Colorado State University in Pueblo. He graduated from Las Animas High School in 1970, and enlisted in the US Air Force in 1972. During his twenty-five years in the military, he performed, taught, and managed bands at several posts: US Air Force Academy (1973-75), US Armed Forces Bicentennial Band in Washington, D.C. (1976-77), USAF Band of Europe in Ramstein/Kaiserslautern, Germany (1978-81); USAF Band of the West in San Antonio, Texas (1981-89); USAF Band of Flight in Dayton, Ohio (1989-96); USAF Heartland of America Band in Omaha, Nebraska (1996-99).

Irish attended the University of Texas at San Antonio, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1985, and a master of music degree in 1987. He also completed a doctor of musical arts degree at the Cincinnati Conservatory under Alan Siebert in 1998. Additional study was with John Carroll, Bert Truax, Vincent DiMartino, and Dale Marrs.

Dr. Irish has performed with the San Antonio Symphony (1983-89), Dayton Philharmonic (1989-96), Omaha Symphony Orchestra (1999), and the Southwest German Radio Orchestra (1981). He was an adjunct instructor at St. Mary's University in San Antonio (1985-89) and Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio (1992-96). He accepted a fulltime position at Angelo State University in 1999, and became a full professor in 2011. He is currently playing principal in the San Angelo Symphony Orchestra. Irish also served as chair of the International Trumpet Guild Youth Competition from 2003 to 2009. A versatile performer, he is founder of his own jazz sextet called Jazz Concho.

John is married to Dolly Irish. His hobbies include bicycling, Bible study, gardening, and traveling.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "John Irish" (www.angelo.edu/faculty/jirish); personal interview, May 18, 2011.

Irons, Earl D. (b. Sulphur Springs, Texas, Mar. 10, 1891; d. May 19, 1967). American cornetist. Irons became one of America's foremost educators, cornetists, and bandmasters. He received early training in music from his father, and started playing violin and drums, and then the cornet at age eleven. His talent for music was evident at an early age, as shown by his being elected bandmaster of a community band at the age of fifteen. He was an active cornetist in theaters, bands, and orchestras in the Arlington, Texas area until World War I, when he entered the service and played in the US Army Band.

In 1922 at the age of thirty-one, he was director of the Greenville American Legion Band and head of the violin department at Burleson College in Greenville, Texas. In 1925, he became head of the band and orchestra departments at the University of Texas at Arlington, and North Texas Agricultural College (now the University of North Texas) in Denton. Under his leadership, the bands became well known throughout the southwest United States. He also played with the Herbert L. Clarke Massed Band in 1930, and the Long Beach Municipal Band in 1941-42. He was an active cornet clinician, and was awarded the honorary title of Lieutenant Colonel by Texas governor Allred in 1938. In the same year, Irons founded the school bandmaster's fraternity, Phi Meta Mu, and was made honorary life president of it in 1942. For his outstanding contributions to music education, Irons was awarded an Honorary Doctorate in 1942 from the Zoellner Conservatory of Music in Hollywood, California.

Irons was head of the music department at the University of Texas-Arlington from 1942-56, and at the same time taught at N.T.A.C. in Denton. He was national president of the American Bandmasters Association from 1951-52. In 1965, the Texas Bandmasters Association honored him by naming him Bandmaster of the Year. He retired from teaching in 1958, and was named Professor Emeritus. His cornet and trumpet replacement in Denton was John J. Haynie. His best-known students were Haynie and Keith Amstutz.

Irons composed several cornet solos including The Painted Desert, Song of the Pines, Emerald Isle, and Grand Canyon. His works for band include American Rhapsody, American Grandeur, and Hail to the Fraternity March. However, he is best remembered for his popular 27 Groups of Exercises for the cornet or trumpet, in which he is primarily concerned with lip flexibility and range development.

Irons was known for his quick wit, ever-present cigars, and ability as an excellent amateur golfer. He died in 1967, and was survived by his wife, Lena. Two years before his death, the University of Texas-Arlington had named a rehearsal hall after him. Today, the Earl D.

Irons Recital Hall also bears his name. In 1976, the National Music Council and the Exxon Corporation dedicated a historic landmark plaque in Arlington to him. His teaching materials, manuscripts and memorabilia are housed in the Earl D. Irons Papers Collection at the University of Texas-Arlington.

Bibl.: Barrow, Gary. "Col. Earl D. Irons and the Evolution of Cornet Pedagogy" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1985); Haynie, John J. (Edited by Anne Hardin). Inside John Haynie's Studio (University of North Texas Press); "Earl D. Irons Papers" (www.lib.utexas.edu/taro/utarl/00069/arl-00069.html); "Earl D. Irons" (www.texasbandmasters.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Isham, Mark [Ware] (b. New York, New York, Sept. 7, 1951). American trumpeter and composer. During Isham's early career, he was best known as an innovative trumpeter who, along with Don Ellis, brought electronic synthesizer music to the forefront during the early 1970s. More recently, however, Isham has become famous for his many prize-winning film scores such as Invincible, Crash, Twisted, A River Runs Through It, October Sky, Fly Away Home, The Moderns, Million Dollar Baby, The Net, Lions for Lambs, Of Mice and Men, The Hitcher, Never Cry Wolf, Kiss the Girls, Blade, Rules of Engagement, Little Man Tate, Quiz Show, Nell, The Cooler, Men of Honor, and The Black Dahlia, among others.

Isham's parents, Howard Fuller Isham and Patricia (Hammond) Isham, were both musical. His father was a professor of arts and humanities, and his mother a classical violinist. Mark learned to play the piano and violin as a child, but at age twelve began playing the trumpet, as well as learning to play various saxophones. His early trumpet teachers were Don Reinberg and Joyce Johnson, both former principal trumpeters of the San Francisco Symphony. Joseph Alessi Sr. was also formative. As a high school student, Isham played as an extra with the Oakland Symphony, San Francisco Symphony, and San Francisco Opera Orchestra. His interest turned to jazz after being influenced by the recordings of Miles Davis. He then studied with jazz trumpeter John Capolla.

In 1970, Isham formed a group called Beefy Red. When it disbanded in 1972, he and some of its members established the group Sons of Champlin in 1974. He also gigged with jazz artists Charles Lloyd, Horace Silver, Pharoah Sanders, and Dave Liebman. Isham was heavily influenced by Miles Davis's jazz-rock-fusion albums, and began using electronic instruments and synthesizers. He soon incorporated this style with other groups and musicians such as the Beach Boys, Van Morrison, Joni Mitchell, The Rolling Stones, Bruce Springsteen, Suzanne Vega, Taj Mahal, Was (Not Was), and many others. His Sony album, The Silent Way Project, is a tribute to Davis's fusion period. This and his early film scores brought him into the limelight by the late 1970s.

A highly versatile musician, Isham has recently worked with Willie Nelson, Lyle Lovett, Ziggy Morley, David Sylvain, Hector Zazon, and David Tom. His first solo trumpet album was titled Vapor Drawings (Windham Hill) in 1983. His 1990 album, Mark Isham, received a Grammy Award, his 1996 album, EZ Street, and Emmy Award. Other albums include Afterglow (Columbia), Songs My Children Taught Me (Windham Hill), Tibet (Windham Hill) and Trouble in Mind (Island Visual Arts). He has also recorded two albums with Art Lande's Rubisa Patrol (1976 and 1978, ECM). Two other albums were recorded with his Group 87 (1980 and 1984, CBS). His music has been recorded on numerous children's albums for Rabbit Ears Storybook Classics.

Isham has been nominated for numerous Grammy and Golden Globe awards. He was awarded the Los Angeles Critic's Award for Best Score for the movie, The Moderns, and has also earned Emmy nominations for television soundtracks such as Chicago Hope and Nothing Sacred. He won a Clio for his General Motors television ads. His music has also been commissioned and performed by major symphony orchestras, including Five Stories for Trumpet and Orchestra, commissioned by the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra (Mark Isham, trumpet soloist). In addition, he has received the Henry Mancini Award for Lifetime Achievement (2007). He is a practitioner of Scientology.

Bibl.: Erdman, Thomas. "The Total Artist: An Interview with Mark Isham" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2008); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Mark Isham" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

J

Jackel, Horst Konrad ("Conny") (b. Offenbach am Main, Germany, Aug. 30, 1931; d. Bad Nauheim, Germany, Apr. 28, 2008). German trumpeter and flugelhornist. In 1952, Jackel studied at a local conservatory and performed in US Army clubs in France, Germany, and the Netherlands. In 1955, he joined the Helmut Brandt combo, and in 1959 played with Harald Banter's band in Cologne. From 1961 to 1964, he was a member of Erwin Lehn's group in Stuttgart that shared the stage with celebrities such as Miles Davis, Kurt Edelhagen, Dizzy Gillespie, Chet Baker, and Frank Sinatra. For the next five years, Jackel worked for Albert and Emil Mangelsdorff, Rudi Sehring, Charly Antolini (1966), Horst Jankowski, Gustl Mayers, and Claude Williams (1988), as well as for the Sugar Feet Stompers and the Phoenix Jazz Band. From 1976 to 1980, he performed and recorded with Heinz Schönberger's Main Street Power Band, and between 1967 and 1994 also performed as first trumpet with the dance orchestras of the Hessian Radio under Schönberger, Willy Berking, and Kurt Bong.

Jackel's trumpet playing came to a sudden end in 1999 when his lower jaw had to be removed due to cancer, so he played drums during the last few years of his career. In 1991, the city of Offenburg awarded him its silver citizen's medal. He was made a Knight of the Ronneburg in 2006 for his outstanding contributions to jazz. He died in 2008 after a long illness and subsequent surgery.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Conny Jackel" (http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Conny_Jackel).

Jackson, Bret A. (b. Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 1, 1964). American trumpeter. Jackson began playing the trumpet during the third grade, and soon studied with Jan McDonald. He attended Brigham Young University where he studied with David Blackinton and K. Newell Dayley, and earned bachelor and master of music degrees. He then taught at BYU, but took a two-year leave of absence to earn a doctor of music degree at Arizona State University where he studied with David Hickman and was a graduate trumpet teaching assistant. He returned to teach at BYU, and performed a great deal as a freelance artist in the Provo and Salt Lake City areas, including performing with the Utah Symphony, Ballet West, and Utah Centennial Brass Band. He released a compact disc recording titled Bret Jackson, Trumpet (Summit) that received wide acclaim.

In 1988, Jackson won both the International Trumpet Guild's annual solo competition and the Music Teachers National Association solo competition. He resigned his position at BYU in order to establish a charter music school in Provo, Utah, with his wife, a cello player.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Roads They've Taken: A Look at ITG's Student Contest Winners" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1996); Bret Jackson, Trumpet (CD Booklet Notes, Summit Records).

Jackson, Dewey (b. St. Louis, Missouri, June 21, 1900; d. St. Louis, Missouri, Mar. 1966). American trumpeter. Jackson began to play trumpet with the Odd Fellows' Band (1912-15). He then began playing professionally when he joined Tommy Evans's group in 1916. In 1918, he joined George Reynold's Keystone Band, and in 1919 played on a riverboat with Charlie Creath's band. From 1920-23, he led the Golden Melody Band, and in the following year, played aboard the SS Capitol with Fate Marable's group. Also, in 1925, he formed the St. Louis Peacock Charleston Orchestra. In 1926, he was in New Orleans and renamed his band the New Orleans Cotton Pickers.

Jackson played for a few months in New York with violinist Andrew Preer at the Cotton Club (August-November 1926). He then continued to play in St. Louis with Marable as lead trumpet (1927, 1929), Creath (1927, 1934), his own band (1927-29, 1930-32) and a co-led band by Marable and Creath (1936). At one time, he led a big band in which Clark Terry was a sideman (1937), and later the young Miles Davis played in the band.

Jackson took a day job in a hotel from 1941 to 1950, and played music only part-time. He became more active in music during the 1950s, mostly playing with tuba player Singleton Palmer (1950) and Don Ewell (1951-52). In the late 1950s and early 1960s, Dewey Jackson led several Dixieland groups, but played only occasionally during the 1960s.

Throughout the 1920s and '30s, Jackson was the leading jazz trumpeter in St. Louis, remaining a legend in the St. Louis area. But, Jackson was not well known outside of that city, mainly because he did very little recording. He did manage to record four tunes as leader (1926), two tunes with Creath (1927), two Dixieland tunes with Palmer (1950), and ten titles recorded live at the Barrel in 1952 (issued on Delmark CD 246). Many believe that he could have become famous if only he had toured and recorded more.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Dewey Jackson" (http://music.msn.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jackson, Harold (b. c1913; d. Sept. 1986). British cornetist and trumpeter. Jackson is best known for his many years as principal cornet of the Black Dyke Mills Band, but he also performed a wide variety of musical styles. He was principal trumpet in the Philharmonia Orchestra, and recorded under Wilhelm Furtwängler (Wagner's Tristan) and Edwin Fisher (1953, Bach's 2nd Brandenburg Concerto). He played in various symphony orchestras including the New Philharmonia and the London Symphony Orchestra (as principal cornet), as well as a select orchestra that provided ceremonial music for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth (1953), and with various Baroque orchestras including the London Baroque Ensemble (1953). He was a master of the orchestral works and cantatas of J.S. Bach, performing and recording many of these works during the 1960s on D trumpet. He also recorded for the Ink Spots, and on several albums by The Beatles, including A Day in the Life, Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, and Yesterday.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jacobs, Arnold (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 11, 1915; d. Chicago, Illinois, Oct. 7, 1998). American tubist. Although a professional tubist, Jacobs was one of the leading teachers of brass musicians, including hundreds of trumpeters. After losing the use of one of his lungs due to pneumonia during his early tenure with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Jacobs intensely studied all aspects of human anatomy related to breathing, and became a leading consultant to medical doctors, patients, and students concerned with breathing.

Jacobs was raised in California where his early music studies were with his mother, a keyboard artist. He learned to play the bugle and trombone before beginning to play the tuba. At the age of fifteen, he attended the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, and graduated in 1936. He played two seasons in the Indianapolis Symphony, and from 1939 to 1944 was tubist of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra under Fritz Reiner. In 1941, he toured the United States with Leopold Stokowski as a member of the All-American Youth Orchestra. He joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1944, and played in it until his retirement in 1988.

During Jacobs's forty-four years with the CSO, he made over five hundred orchestral recordings. He was also a participant on the Grammy Award-winning album, The Antiphonal Music of Gabrieli, with the brass sections of the Chicago, Cleveland, and Philadelphia orchestras. He was a founding member of the Chicago Symphony Brass Quintet in 1949, and appeared at the Casals Music Festival in Puerto Rico, the Gunnison Music Camp in Colorado, and dozens of major music conferences. In 2001, Christine Querfeld endowed the CSO's principal tuba chair as the Arnold Jacobs Principal Tuba Chair.

A master teacher, Jacobs taught at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, and presented hundreds of clinics throughout the world. He received the Medal of Honor from the Midwest Band and Orchestra Clinic (1985) and the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Chicago Federation of Musicians (1994). Northwestern University awarded him its Legends of Teaching Award, and Mayor Richard M. Daley proclaimed June 25, 1995 as Arnold Jacobs Day in the City of Chicago. Also, the VanderCook School of Music awarded Jacobs an Honorary Doctor of Music degree in 1986, as did DePaul University in 1995.

Adolph Herseth said of Jacobs, I cannot think of anyone in our exotic world of music, and particularly, of course in the world of brass players, who has made such a contribution to so many facets of our art.

Bibl.: Frederiksen, Brian. Arnold Jacobs: Song and Wind (Windsong Press Ltd.); Stewart, M. Dee. Arnold Jacobs: The Legacy of a Master (Instrumentalist Co.); "Arnold Jacobs Biography" (Windsong Press Ltd.: http://windsongpress.com).

Jacoby, Don[ald] ("Jake") (b. York, Pennsylvania, May 28, 1920; d. Denton, Texas, Dec. 25, 1992). American trumpeter. At the age of six, Jacoby was taught to play trumpet by his uncle, Arthur C. Ansorg. From age nine through sixteen, he was a soloist with the Spring Garden Band. From the age of twelve, already in high school, he was regularly featured on the Horn & Hardart Children's Hour radio program on WCAU in Philadelphia. He also played for the Tasty Treat Youth Pageant on WJZ Radio in New York.

After graduating form high school at the age of sixteen, Jacoby attended the Ernest Williams School of Music for three years, during which time he performed as a soloist in Carnegie Hall, Brooklyn's Town Hall, and in Central Park. He then joined the Milt Britton Band at Loew's Theatre in Times Square. A short while later he became a member of the Les Brown Orchestra, with which he played until entering the Navy (1942-44). While in the service, he recorded an LP disc titled Command Performances and Mail Call for the U.S. troops overseas. He met and later married Doris ("Dori") Robinson.

After World War II, Jacoby played with Sam Donahue (1944-45), before moving to Chicago where he resumed duties with the Les Brown band (1946). He also played for a while with Benny Goodman. He joined the ABC studios as a staff musician, where he played for nine years; later, he worked in a similar capacity for NBC and CBS. Jacoby became a well-known trumpet clinician for the C.G. Conn Company, with which he produced the album Have Conns Will Travel that featured Jacoby in trumpet solos with band accompaniment. (The cover photo is a humorous shot of Jacoby wearing a cowboy outfit and looking like he is about to "draw" trumpets rather than pistols.) His other solo album is Jacoby Brings the House Down (Pompeii).

After touring the United States as a clinician and soloist for over ten years, Jacoby moved to Dallas where he worked as a studio player and jazz club performer. He began teaching privately, and was soon maintaining a large studio of students; he also taught part-time at North Texas State University in Denton (now the University of North Texas). A few of his best-known students are Bobby Shew, Marvin Stamm, Craig Morris, Dan Miller, Alan Hood, Craig Johnson, Dalton Smith, Dominic Spera, Mike Vax, and Clint McLaughlin. Jacoby received the Humanitarian Award from the Institute of American Jazz Educators. His method book, Jake's Method, was published shortly before he died.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); McLaughlin, Clint. "Don 'Jake' Jacoby" (www.bbtrumpet.com/Jake.html); "Don Jacoby" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

James, Harry [Hagg] (b. Albany, Georgia, Mar. 15, 1916; d. Las Vegas, Nevada, July 5, 1983). American trumpeter. James began learning to play the trumpet and drums at age seven from his father Everett, a conductor of traveling circus bands. James also took trumpet lessons from Joseph Oger, and later in his career consulted Maurice Grupp. By age twelve, James was conducting one of the ensembles with the Christy Brothers Circus. In 1931, the James family moved to Beaumont, Texas, where Harry played in a band that traveled through much of Texas from 1931 to 1935 (at one occasion Bunk Johnson, a personal friend of his father, played alongside Harry). James married singer Louise Tobin in 1935, with whom he had two children before their marriage ended in 1943.

At the age of twenty, James was discovered by Ben Pollack, with whom he began his recording debut on tunes such as Jimtown Blues, Peckin' (his own composition), and Zoom Zoom Zoom. He joined the Benny Goodman Orchestra in January of 1937, where he split the lead trumpet book with Ziggy Elman and Chris Griffin. James became one of the most prominent soloists of Goodman's band, and gained much popularity. He stayed with Goodman for nearly two years (including the 1938 Carnegie Hall concert where James was quoted as saying that he "felt like a whore in church"), becoming famous for solos such as Sing Sing Sing and Ridin' High. In 1937, James recorded some good combo sessions with Teddy Wilson and with Lionel Hampton (his solo on Muskrat Ramble is recommended by jazz purists).

In February 1939, James formed his own big band that included a young Frank Sinatra as vocalist. (Sinatra soon left James for a more lucrative deal with Tommy Dorsey.) The James band recorded several popular James solos including Concerto for Trumpet, Flight of the Bumble Bee, Ciribiribin, Carnival of Venice, and Two O'Clock Jump. James became known as a virtuoso trumpet soloist and the most popular swing trumpeter in the world. In order to give his band a unique sound, James decided to add strings in 1941; the band's first hit recording with strings was You Made Me Love You.

James married actress Betty Grable in 1943, just months after divorcing his first wife. Their marriage lasted until 1963 during which time they had two children. Grable was able to include James in numerous movies she starred in or of which she had some influence, including Hollywood Hotel with Benny Goodman (1937), Syncopation (1941), Private Buckaroo (1942, where he plays Concerto for Trumpet), Springtime in the Rockies (1942, featuring You Made Me Love You and Ciribiribin), Best Foot Forward (1943), Bathing Beauty (1944, which was very popular throughout the world, especially in France, performing Hora Staccato), Two Girls and a Sailor (1944), If I'm Lucky (1946), Kitten on the Keys (1946), Carnegie Hall (1947), A Miracle Can Happen (1948), I'll Get By (1950), The Opposite Sex (1956), Riot In Rhythm (1957), Outlaw Queen (1957), and The Ladies Man (1961). In 1949, James recorded the soundtrack for the Kirk Douglas and Doris Day film, Young Man With a Horn.

Because of his commercial success, many of James's jazz fans began to criticize his playing as being too pops-oriented, and as public taste moved away from swing music in the 1950s, James could not break away from the old style. He performed and recorded for a while in the bebop style, but the public's view of James was too deeply rooted in the swing era. He began having trouble paying his band the salaries they once enjoyed, and his orchestra was temporarily disbanded in December of 1946. He borrowed money from Grable in order to reform the band in 1947, but the strings had to be let go in the following year. As his popularity dwindled, several key players in his band left to join other orchestras.

James moved to Las Vegas in the early 1950s, where he led his own band on a part-time basis. He also recorded with Buddy Rich and Rosemary Clooney, and appeared in the movie, The Benny Goodman Story (1955), performing his old warhorse, Sing Sing Sing.

For a few months in 1951, James hosted his own television program, the Harry James Show, that was aired by a Los Angeles station. By the 1960s, his range and popularity were suffering, and he and Grable were divorced in 1963. He and a showgirl named Joan Boyd were married in 1968 and had one child together, but their marriage was dissolved in 1970. The Harry James Orchestra toured Europe in 1957, 1970, and 1971, and Argentina in 1981. James continued playing all his life. His last performance was in Los Angeles just nine days before his death from lymphatic cancer. (Frank Sinatra delivered the eulogy at his Las Vegas funeral.) After his death, the Harry James Band continued to tour under the leadership of trumpeter Art Depew.

James was one of the world's most beloved trumpeters and musicians. His prowess as a classical and jazz soloist is legendary. James was a synthesis of Herbert L. Clarke and Louis Armstrong. William Vacchiano said of him, I thought that he was fantastic. James had followers or imitators everywhere around the world, including Reuben Reeves, Erskine Hawkins, the Cuban Negro Esteban, the Swede Thore Ehrling, the Czech Jiri Jelinek, Germans Macky Kasper and Horst Fischer, and French stars Maurice Mouflard, Aimé Barelli, and Georges Jouvin. James had his own balanced model trumpet by Selmer, but in 1954 switched to King instruments. He used a Parduba double-cup mouthpiece.

James's personal life was not completely glamorous. When his band began having financial troubles, he began to drink in excess and at times became violent during arguments over finances with Grable. He also had a huge love of horseracing, having owned several thoroughbred racehorses. Although his horses won several important sweepstakes, his gambling losses only worsened his financial woes. His womanizing caused many of the difficulties with his marriages.

The music of Harry James can be heard on the soundtrack of the Woody Allen movie, Hannah and Her Sisters and the 1983 movie, The Sting II. James also appears on a 1959 episode of the Lucy-Desi Comedy Hour in a skit called "Lucy Wins a Racehorse." Nearly all of James's recordings have been reissued on compact disc. He has a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Levinson, Peter J. Trumpet Blues (Oxford University Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Harry James" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3, video clip; Oct. 2008).

Jarvis, Jeff (b. Rochester, New York, Nov. 16, 1952). American trumpeter. Jarvis grew up in Geneva, New York, and Buffalo, New York. He studied as a classical trumpeter from age eight, with his first lessons being from his father, John Jarvis, a local band director. He also studied with Frank Collura of the Buffalo Philharmonic, and John Thyssen in the Eastman School of Music Preparatory Program. At age sixteen, he won a scholarship to the Valley Forge Military Academy, and had an opportunity to perform with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Maestro Eugene Ormandy in Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture that combined the Philadelphia Orchestra with the Academy orchestra and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir (Columbia Records).

After spending 1967 to 1971 at the Academy, Jarvis worked in Philadelphia, Nashville, Los Angeles, and Denver as a freelance and studio recording artist, performing and recording over one hundred CDs with celebrity performers including Lou Rawls, the O'Jays, Spanky & Our Gang, Michael Jackson, Melissa Manchester, Crystal Gayle, Dizzy Gillespie, Louie Bellson, Joe Williams, Henry Mancini, John Hendricks, Doc Severinsen, Slide Hampton, Jimmy Heath, Mel Lewis, Eddie Daniels, Johnny Mathis, Bob Hope, John Denver, Jerry Vale, Glenn Campbell, Rich Little, the Four Tops, Don Rickles, the Smothers Brothers, Chuck Mangione, the Gap Mangione Big Band, and Bob Mintzer. His solo CDs include When It Rains (Optimism), Golden Palm (Optimism), Following Footsteps (Amherst), Morning Drive (Amherst), A Better Place (Positive Music), and Contents Under Pressure (Positive Music). As a soloist, he has performed with the Denver Symphony Orchestra, US Air Force Airmen of Note, Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, US Army

Jazz Ambassadors, Jazz Knights of the US Military Academy Band at West Point, US Army Blues, Buffalo Philharmonic, and other leading ensembles.

As a jazz educator, Jarvis is director of jazz studies at California State University-Long Beach (since 2005) and co-owner of Kendor Music, Inc. He has published numerous compositions and arrangements for big band, articles, and is a contributing editor for the music magazines The Instrumentalist and Jazz Educators Journal. He has coauthored The Jazz Educators Handbook and The Chord Voicing Handbook. He is music director emeritus of the Central New York Jazz Orchestra, and has appeared throughout the world as a performer and clinician. He is a past vice president of the International Association for Jazz Education.

Jeff has been married to jazz saxophonist Tomoka Nomura-Jarvis since 2005. He has a daughter from a previous marriage, Jordan Jarvis (b. 1990). His hobby is playing golf.

Bibl.: "Jeff Jarvis" (http://au.yamaha.com/en/artists/brass_woodwinds/jeff_jarvis); Jeff Jarvis's official website: www.jeffjarvis.net); personal interview, Jan. 16, 2012.

Jaudes, Chris[tian] (b. St. Louis, Missouri, Oct. 9, 1956). American trumpeter. Jaudes grew up in St. Louis. His parents were both brass players in The Salvation Army bands, as were his first teachers. While attending Oakville Senior High School (graduating in 1975), he studied with Susan Slaughter and Robert Ceccarini. He then attended Illinois State University (1975-80), earning bachelor and master of music degrees studying with Herbert Koerselman.

Jaudes freelanced in St. Louis from 1976 to 1993, playing with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Municipal Opera, and the Fox Theater Orchestra, as well as with numerous other groups in the area. He also served as an adjunct faculty member at Southern Illinois University.

Jaudes moved to New York City in 1994 and has since become a top freelance player, playing everything from jazz, lead, and orchestra to pop. He has performed with the New York Philharmonic, New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, Carolina Pops Orchestra, and has been first trumpet in numerous Broadway shows, including Gypsy, Annie Get Your Gun, Hair, Pajama Game, Mother Courage and Her Children, Peter Pan, Ragtime, Sunset Boulevard, Steel Pier, On the Town, Cats, How the Grinch Stole Christmas, LoveMusik, Flower Drum Song, Two Gentlemen of Verona, The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber, and South Africa Rejoice. He has played lead trumpet for numerous concerts with performers such as Doc Severinsen, Liza Minelli, Bernadette Peters, Céline Dion, Ray Charles, Al Hirt, and B.B. King Jaudes currently plays lead trumpet with Paul Anka, the Birdland Big Band, and is a member of the Brass Band of Battle Creek. He is also a member of The Pit Stop Players, a group that includes some of the top Broadway musicians in New York City. Jaudes has performed on numerous commercial recordings as well as on his solo CD, Chris Jaudes with The New York Staff Band. In addition, he has been an artist-faculty member at conferences of the International Trumpet Guild and the National Trumpet Competition. He taught at Hofstra University from 1996 to 2001, and has been on the faculty at The Juilliard School since 2005.

Jaudes and actress Carol Dilley Jaudes have been married since 1988 and have a daughter (Jacy), son-in-law (Jon), and granddaughter (Sarah). In addition to being a self-described "trumpet geek," he is an avid golfer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008). "Chris Jaudes" (www.trumpet-world.com); Chris Jaudes's official website: www.chrisjaudes.com; personal interview, Nov. 10, 2010.

Jeandheur, Stephen (b. New York, New York, May 10, 1956). American trumpeter. Jeandheur grew up in Rochester, New York, and became interested in the trumpet when he heard some of his parents' Louis Armstrong recordings. After moving to Cleveland, Ohio, during the late 1960s, he heard a concert by the Cleveland Orchestra and fell in love with orchestral music. He attended the Cleveland Institute of Music where he studied with Bernard Adelstein, principal trumpet of the Cleveland Orchestra at the time. Additionally, he studied with tubist Arnold Jacobs and with Louis Ranger at the Aspen Music Festival in Colorado.

After graduating from CIM, Jeandheur became an associate principal trumpet of the municipal theater orchestra of Kassel (Germany) and then principal trumpet of Das Staatsorchester Rheinische Philharmonie in Koblenz, Germany. In 1984, he was appointed principal trumpet of the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande in Geneva, Switzerland, and with that group conducted by N. Järvi, recorded The Essential Stravinsky, and on the Erato label, the Concerto for 7 Wind Instruments by Frank Martin; he is currently a section member of the Orchestra.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Orchestra de la Suisse Romande Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010).

Jefferson, Thomas ("Little Tom") (b. Chicago, Illinois, June 19, 1921; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 3, 1986). American trumpeter and singer. Jefferson's brother Andrew was a drummer. Thomas began playing French horn and drums, but later switched permanently to trumpet. As a youth, he played in the Jones Home Band and received trumpet lessons from Peter Davis who was Louis Armstrong's early teacher. He also studied with Valmore Victor at the Thomy Lafon School and played with the Lafon Brass Band.

Jefferson's early career began in several local groups in New Orleans including those of Oscar Celestin (1936), Sidney Desvigne, Jump Jackson, John Casimir, and Kid Howard's Silver Leaf Brass Band.

In 1944, he toured with the Six Brown Cats led by pianist Phamous Lambert (Miles Davis later succeeded him). Back in New Orleans, Jefferson played with Octave Crosby at the Dream Room (1948-51) and in a radio broadcast with Kid Howard (September 1950). Then, he played with Freddie Kohlman (1952-53), Johnny St. Cyr (1954), and toured with George Lewis (San Francisco, 1956; Chicago, 1958). Later, Jefferson mostly led his own band on Bourbon Street in New Orleans. He recorded with George Lewis, Santo Pecora, Raymond Burke, and Johnny St. Cyr, and led his own recording sessions of five albums between 1960 and 1974 for the Southland, Maison Bourbon, Storyville, and Nola labels. Two of his albums are Thomas Jefferson from New Orleans (Storyville) and Thomas Jefferson's International New Orleans Band (Storyville). He also appeared in the film, Hard Times (1975), starring Charles Bronson and James Coburn.

Although not an innovator of new musical styles, Jefferson was a highly accomplished jazz and Dixieland performer. His wonderful trumpet solos and vocals made him a successful musician. Louis Armstrong was the biggest influence on him.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jehl, Guillaume André (b. Saint-Louis, France, 1978). French trumpeter. Jehl began playing the trumpet at age eight, and later attended the conservatory in Mulhouse where he studied with Gilbert Petit. He continued his studies with Pierre Dutot, and at the Paris Conservatory with Clément Garrec, graduating with distinction in 1999. In 1995, he was one of the prizewinners of the International Trumpet Competition "Prestige de Cuivres" in Guebwiller. While still a student, he played second trumpet in the Orchestre National Bordeaux Aquitaine (1998-2000). He became principal of the Orchestre National de France in 2001, and moved to Basel, Switzerland, in 2001 as principal of the Basel Symphony Orchestra. He also performed with the Basel Brass Quintet and David Guerrier's Brass Ensemble.

After Jehl became interested in the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, he studied with Jean-François Madeuf at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis (2001-03). He returned to his former position with the Orchestre National de France in 2006, and continued his trumpet study in Salzburg with Hans Gansch at the Mozarteum. Jehl joined the Berlin Philharmonic trumpet section in 2009.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); "Guillaume Juhl" (www.berliner-philharmoniker.de); "Guillaume Jehl" (www.baselbrassquintet.com).

Jenkins, Delbert Clayton ("Clay") (b. Lubbock, Texas, Oct. 4, 1954). American trumpeter. Jenkins's father and brother played trumpet. Clay began playing trumpet at age eleven and later attended North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), studying with John Haynie. After earning a bachelor of music theory degree, Jenkins toured with the Stan Kenton Orchestra, making several important recordings with it from 1977 to 1978.

In 1978, Jenkins moved to Los Angeles and attended the University of Southern California, studying with Boyde Hood, and receiving a master of music in jazz degree. He also took lessons from James Stamp and Uan Rasey. Jenkins toured with the Buddy Rich band (1979), Harry James Orchestra, and the Count Basie organization (1984-85). He taught jazz as an adjunct professor at the University of Southern California, California State University-Northridge, California Institute of the Arts, Colburn School for the Performing Arts, and The Foundation for the Junior Blind. He also played in various studios, and performed as a jazz musician at various clubs and concert venues. In 2000, Jenkins moved to Rochester, New York, to begin duties as a fulltime faculty member of jazz at the Eastman School of Music.

Jenkins has recorded with dozens of leading jazz artists including Milt Jackson, Rich Perry, the Clayton-Hamilton Jazz Orchestra, John La Barbara, Lennie Niehaus, Rufus Reid, Billy Childs, Miki Coltrane, Eric Reed, Gary Hobbs, and Bill Perkins. Jenkins's solo albums are Rings, Give and Gather, Yellow Flowers After, Azure Eyes, and Matters of Time.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Clay Jenkins" (www.ems.rochester.edu).

Jenkins, Frederic Douglass ("Freddie", "Posey") (b. New York, New York, Oct. 10, 1906; d. Tarrant County, Texas, July 1, 1978). American trumpeter. As a boy, Jenkins played with the 369th Regiment Cadet Band and later attended Wilberforce University while playing with Edgar Hayes's Blue Grass Buddies (early 1920s) and Horace Henderson's Collegians (1924-28). He was a left-handed player who was influenced by Louis Armstrong, and studied trumpet with Eugene Mikell Sr.

In 1928, Jenkins joined Duke Ellington's orchestra on trumpet and E-flat cornet. He was often featured as a soloist because his style was very exuberant and fiery, as opposed to the other trumpet soloists such as Bubber Miley, Cootie Williams, and Arthur Whetsol. Jenkins's recordings of tunes such as Tiger Rag and When You're Smiling are indicative of his best playing. He also recorded with Clara Smith (1928), the Musical Stevedores (1929), and Rex Stewart (1937), and led his own recording date of six tunes in 1935. Jenkins appeared with the Duke Ellington Orchestra in Black and Tan in 1929 with Artie Whetsol and Cootie Williams, and in the 1930 Amos and Andy film, Check and Double Check, performing a trumpet solo in Old Man Blues.

A serious lung ailment in 1934 forced twenty-seven year-old Jenkins to stop playing for a time. He made a comeback in 1935, and in the following year was with the Luis Russell Band. In 1937, he returned to the Ellington orchestra but left in 1938 to colead a band with Hayes Alvis. But within a year, Jenkins's lung problems returned and he was hospitalized for several months. He decided to give up the trumpet forever, and became a songwriter, press agent, disc jockey, and real estate and insurance salesman for his remaining thirty-nine years. He eventually moved to Ft. Worth, Texas.

Bibl: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jenkins, [Sidney Francis] Pat (b. Norfolk, Virginia, Dec. 25, 1911; d. South Carolina, Sept. 2, 2006). American trumpeter. Jenkins moved to New York City in 1934 where he was recruited to play with the Chick Webb Orchestra at the Savoy Ballroom. The group later changed its name to the Savoy Sultans with which Jenkins is best known as a member.

Jenkins was drafted into the Army in 1944, after which he joined Tab Smith's band (1947-50). He worked on and off with Buddy Tate's Celebrity Club Orchestra (1951-73), and worked as a freelance musician and studio performer. He also worked for a while with Jimmy Rushing's band.

Jenkins and his wife Thomasine retired to South Carolina in 1981. He was a large man with a gentle disposition. He died at the age of ninety-four. He can be seen in the film, L'Aventure du Jazz by Louis Panassié (1970).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Monaghan, Terry. "Pat Jenkins" (orbituary, The Guardian, Sept. 23, 2006); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jensen, Ingrid [Lynn] (b. Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, Jan. 12, 1966). Canadian trumpeter. Jensen grew up in the town of Nanaimo in Canada and studied at Malaspina College. She attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston from 1986 to 1989. She played with the Mount Benson Philharmonic, and then toured Europe with the Vienna Art Orchestra in a production of Fe and Males. Her early inspirations came mostly from Lee Morgan and Woody Shaw. Her sister plays the saxophone.

Jensen taught for five years at the Port Townsend Centrum Jazz Workshop, and at the age of twenty-five was a professor of jazz trumpet at the Bruckner Conservatory in Austria (1990-92). She has also taught at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, and the Salzburg Jazz Seminar. She is currently on the trumpet faculty as an artist-in-residence at the University of Michigan.

From 1992 to 1994, Jensen toured Europe with Lionel Hampton's band. She returned to the U.S. in 1994 and joined the DIVA big band. She won first prize in the 1995 Carmine Caruso International Jazz Trumpet Competition, and performed a concert during the 1996 International Brassfest in Long Beach, California. She has toured and recorded with the Maria Schneider Orchestra, Metropole Orchestra and Big Band, Gary Bartz, Marc Copland, Steve Wilson, Jeff ("Tain") Watts, Frank Wess, Billy Taylor, Clark Terry, Chris Cooper, Virginia Mayhew, Geoffrey Keezer, Bill Stewart, Lonnie Smith, Bob Berg, Terri Lyne Carrington, George Garzone, Victor Lewis, and others. She also appeared on the television show, Saturday Night Live, with singer Corinne Bailey Rae.

Jensen has received many awards for her recordings, including solo albums for the Enja label: Vernal Fields, Here On Earth, Higher Grounds, Nini Green, No Walls, and At Sea. She has been a featured soloist at conferences of the International Trumpet Guild.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Ingrid Jensen" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Ingrid Jensen's official website (www.ingridjensen.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jess, Larry D. (b. Spokane, Washington, c1950). Jess has lived most of his life in Spokane, Washington. His early teachers were John Harris, Gerald Webster, and George Hill. He attended Eastern Washington University where he earned a bachelor of music degree in 1972. He has maintained a private teaching studio of approximately thirty students for thirty-five years. He also taught at Eastern Washington University for twelve years.

Jess has been principal trumpet of the Spokane Symphony Orchestra since 1975, and is also a member of the Regional Orchestra Players Association (since 1975). He is a founding member of the Spokane Jazz Society, Spokane Brass Works, Bob Curnow Big Band, Falls Brass Band, and Clarion Brass Choir. He and his wife Carolyn (a violinist) are contractors for the Coeur d'Alene Summer Theater in Idaho. He has recorded numerous television commercials, jingles, and other music for Spokane television.

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "ITG Profile: Larry D. Jess" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2005).

Ji, Rueikai (b. Tianjin, northeast China, Apr. 19, 1946). Chinese trumpeter. Rueikai grew up in the city of Tianjin, about two hundred kilometers north of Beijing. He began playing piano at age eight, and studied trumpet with Xia Quiu at the Central Music Gymnasium in Beijing from 1958 to 1964. During the Chinese cultural revolution of the late 1960s, Ji had to earn a living by teaching and playing wherever possible. He was named professor of trumpet at the National Music School of China in Beijing in 1977. In 1980, Ji received a five-year fellowship to study with Adolf Holler at the Vienna Musikhochschule, and received his diploma in 1985. He returned to Beijing and continued to work as a pedagogue in the National Music School and freelance performer.

Ji was named professor of trumpet at the National Music School of China in Beijing in 1997. He has been a guest teacher and clinician in Switzerland, England, Germany, United States, Japan, France, and Italy, and is now the professor of trumpet at Fu Dan University in Shanghai, as well as a guest professor at music schools in Tianjin and Wuhan. Since 1995, Ji has served as General Inspector of the Youth Orchestra of China. He has also played with the Hangzhou Philharmonic.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Joachim, Peter Mico [aka Billy Mo] (b. Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, Feb. 22, 1923; d. Hannover, Germany, July 16, 2004). Naturalized German trumpeter and singer. After his parents died suddenly when he was five, Joachim and his two sisters were raised in an orphanage in Trinidad to which an old French horn was donated; Joachim seized the opportunity to claim it. At age fourteen, he performed in a local police marching band, and in 1943 received a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Music in Oxford, England, playing in an all-black dance band. He continued his studies at the Benson Institute of Music in America in 1949.

Joachim returned to Great Britain in the fall of 1949, and found work in a Scottish mental hospital. He continued working with mental patients for many years, while developing his trumpet playing in the style of his idol, Louis Armstrong. In 1956, he moved to Hamburg, Germany, and eventually gained German citizenship. He worked with numerous jazz groups including the Bert Kaempfert orchestra. His humorous ability to look and play like Armstrong brought him much attention as a soloist, and he even appeared in a few films where he acted as the real Louis Armstrong, or played duets with him, and so soon became known as "The German Satchmo." Also known in England as "Hot Lips Pete," he recorded numerous musical hits between 1957 and 1964, and appeared in films between 1959 and 1981. His pop recordings featured him playing horn, trumpet, and singing.

Joachim (now going by the name Billy Mo) married a woman named Margot, with whom he had two children, Susanne and Geoffrey. As his popularity as a performer grew, his home was always filled with friends and musical colleagues. A Hamburg nightclub owner said of him, Billy is an original. He can't be explained. He must be heard and seen to be believed. He could turn a wake into a ball. Joachim loved beer and animals, and often donated money to humanitarian causes.

Joachim continued playing and singing up to age seventy-nine, when he suffered a stroke and fell into a coma. And while doctors were able to revive him, he was confined to a bed for the rest of his life and died on July 16, 2004 at the age of eighty-one. He was survived by his second wife, Sylvia Hartjenstein Joachim, and his children from his first marriage. His band received the German Order of Merit in 2002.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Billy Mo" (http://wikipedia.qwika.com/de2en/Billy_Mo).

Johansen, Lawrence ("Larry") (b. Inglewood, California, July 7, 1946). American trumpeter. Johansen grew up in Caruthers, California. He began playing trumpet at age twelve; his teacher was Robert Nielsen, principal trumpet of the Fresno Philharmonic Orchestra. After graduating from Caruthers Union High School in 1963, Johansen studied with James Winter at Fresno State University, earning a bachelor of arts degree in 1967. From 1967 to 1970, he served in the West Point Band, studying for one year with William Vacchiano, Robert Nagel, and Raymond Crisara. He then earned a master of music degree studying with James Stamp at the University of Southern California (1970-72), and did coursework towards a DMA (not completed) at the University of Colorado between 1972 and 1992. He received additional coaching from Irving Bush and Edward Tarr.

Johansen began his professional teaching career at the age of twenty-five as an adjunct faculty member at the University of Redlands (1971-75). He was also an adjunct faculty member at College of the Desert in Palm Springs (1972-82) and La Sierra University in Riverside (1972-85). In 1973, he became a fulltime professor at California Baptist University in Riverside, California, and played in the Riverside Philharmonic (1971-98) and the Redlands Symphony (1971 to present). In addition, he was a member of the Fresno Philharmonic (1965-67) and the Mitch Miller Touring Orchestra (fall 1972). Since 2004, he has been teaching part-time at Riverside Community College and California State University-San Bernardino. He has been an active member of the International Trumpet Guild since its inception in 1975.

Johansen was one of the early (1974) American performers of/advocates for Baroque trumpet. In the 1970s and '80s, he was the importer for Meinl & Lauber trumpets and sackbuts, Bruno Tilz historic mouthpieces, and Christopher Monk cornettos. He and Cal-Baptist colleague Dr. Beverly Howard formed the trumpet and organ duo, Ventus Musicus, that has been active since 1980.

Johansen and his wife Judy, staff accompanist at Riverside Community College, have two children: Emil (b. 1973) and Kirsten (b. 1974). His hobbies include tandem bicycling with his wife around various parts of the world, gardening, and woodworking.

Bibl.: personal interview, July 21, 2011. Photo credit: Greg Schneider.

Johanson, August [Vasilyevich] (b. Reval, Estonia, Sept. 15, 1853; d. Petrograd, Russia, September 18, 1916). Estonian cornetist. Johanson graduated from the St. Petersburg Conservatory in 1871, having studied cornet with Gustav Johann Metzdorff and Wilhelm Wurm. He was cornet soloist with the St. Petersburg Opera Orchestra from 1871 to 1902, was a reinforcing member of the Tsar Alexander III's amateur brass band in 1884-85, and from 1885 also conducted the St. Petersburg Cossack Military Band. He taught at the Petrograd Conservatory from 1904 until his death in 1916 (just three days after his sixty-third birthday); he was made a full professor in 1908.

Johanson composed a cornet-trumpet etude book, several cornet solos with piano accompaniment, and Daily Exercises, op. 25 that is still used today. His pedagogy is an important link between the teachings of Wurm and today's methods.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Johansson, Markku Henrik (b. Lahti, Finland, Mar. 22, 1949). Finnish trumpeter, flugelhornist, arranger, and conductor. Johansson comes from a musical family. He started playing piano at an early age, but switched to trumpet at age thirteen. He studied classical music at the Lahti Conservatory and the Sibelius Academy (1970-72), while beginning his career in 1970 and eventually moving to Helsinki where he joined the pop group, Pepe and The Paradise. He worked as a studio musician, developing his skills as an arranger, conductor, and trumpeter. He became interested in jazz, and began playing the flugelhorn during the mid 1970s. In 1976-77, he studied in New York City with Thad Jones, Lew Soloff, and Carmine Caruso.

Johansson returned to Finland, and performed with many of the leading jazz musicians in his home country. He participated in a jazz band that toured Germany, Sweden, England, Belgium, Russia, Hungary, Estonia, Iceland, Denmark, Norway, and Holland, representing the Finnish National Broadcasting Union. He released a string of CDs beginning in 1982, and was one of the founders of the UMO jazz orchestra. He played in this group until 1983, and assumed duties as its conductor from 1992 to 1993. Since 1998, he has been the principal conductor of the Vantaa Pops.

Johansson has received many awards: Georgie Award (1993), Yrjö Award from the Finnish Jazz Federation (1993), Kullervo Linna Foundation Award (1996), Acknowledgement Award from the Finnish Musicians Union (2002).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Markku Johansson" (www.vantaapops.com/eng/johansson.htm).

Johnson, Don (b. Chicago, Illinois, Aug. 7, 1939; d. Jerrabomberra, New South Wales, Australia, May 29, 2000). American trumpeter. As a teen, Johnson toured with the bands of Charlie Spivak, Art Mooney, Ray Eberle, and Judy Garland. At age twenty, he became principal trumpet of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. In 1963 (age twenty-five), he left Atlanta to enroll in the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, but completed his bachelor of music degree (in education) at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro while working as a public school music teacher.

Johnson moved to Perth, Australia, in 1968 to assume duties as principal trumpet of the West Australian Symphony Orchestra. He left that position in 1978 to become a trumpet instructor at the Canberra School of Music (Australia) where he established a jazz studies program, which he directed from 1978 to 1998. He also served as principal trumpet of the Canberra Symphony Orchestra.

In 1998 at the age of fifty-nine, Johnson became the band director at Radford College, and a short time later, instructor at the Australia Capital Territory Department of Education. He was a wonderfully lyric player with beautiful jazz lines and a warm tone. His only solo recording was the Concerto for Trumpet by Alfred Francis Hill (EMI records). He was known as a humble and modest man. He was diagnosed with cancer about six months before his death.

Bibl.: "Don Johnson (1939-2000)" (news item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2000); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Johnson, Francis ("Frank") (b. Martinique, France, 1792; d. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 1884). American keyed bugle player. Francis Johnson was America's first black musician superstar. He was musically active in Philadelphia by 1809, and played in a black military band during the War of 1812. He was a violin and horn player who began playing the keyed bugle around 1819.

Johnson led his own band in Philadelphia that performed in all sorts of parades, drills, celebrations, dances, and concerts. His band became the leading musical group in the Philadelphia area, as evidenced by Johnson's invitation to perform at a grand ball honoring General Lafayette during the general's visit in 1824.

Johnson was a prolific composer and arranger who wrote over three hundred band works, many of which were published, but only in piano format. When the well-known keyed bugle player Richard Willis died in 1830, Johnson composed a song honoring his longtime friend.

Four key players in Johnson's band accompanied him during a concert tour of England and France. Anxious to learn about the new musical styles in Europe, Johnson studied and purchased music performed at light music concerts. Upon his return to America, he introduced this music to Philadelphia with great success. His band concerts often attracted a thousand or more people.

Johnson was the premier keyed bugle soloist of his day. His fame prompted Queen Victoria to request a Command Performance at which she presented him with an elaborate silver keyed bugle.

Shortly before Johnson's death in 1894, William R. Bayley wrote about his last performance: "Old Frank," as he was often called, came in. He had been playing somewhere and had his bugle under his arm. I saw him and, although he was not feeling well, urged him to play a solo. He favored us with "The Last Rose of Summer." Poor fellow, it was the last time he ever played. His illness became serious, and he died a few days afterwards.

At Johnson's funeral, the silver bugle presented to him by Queen Victoria was placed on his coffin and buried with him. He was described as a "good natured, gentlemanly fellow" and enjoyed hosting friends and musicians at dinners in his home. Although racism was strong at that time, he always endured foolish remarks about the color of his skin. He was the first black American to publish music, give formal concerts, and tour widely in America and Europe. He was the first to integrate white and black musicians on stage. Today, a square in Johnson's old Philadelphia neighborhood is named "Johnson Place" in his honor.

Dudgeon, Ralph T. The Keyed Bugle (Second Edition) (Scarecrow Press); Eliason, Robert E. Keyed Bugles in the United States (Smithsonian Institution Press).

Johnson, Francis ("Frank") Walter (b. Melbourne, Australia, May 22, 1927; d. Noosa Heads, Queensland, Australia, Oct. 16, 2000). Australian trumpeter. Johnson learned to play the trumpet while in grade school. He was inspired when he heard a concert by Graeme Bell's jazz band in 1945. He formed his own group, Frank Johnson's Fabulous Dixielanders, that was active from 1947 to early 1956. The group made many recordings, radio broadcasts, and concert appearances until their trombonist was killed in a car accident in late 1955.

Johnson led other traditional jazz groups in Brisbane and Melbourne from 1956 to the late 1970s, although very few recordings were made during this time. He died in a car accident in 2000. Among his best record albums are Frank Johnson's Fabulous Dixielanders 1949-50 and Dixieland Jazz 1954-56 on the Swaggie label. Johnson is today considered one of Australia's most influential traditional jazz performers.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Johnson, Gilbert (b. Turlock, California, Sept. 10, 1927; d. Miami, Florida, Sept. 8, 2002). American trumpeter. Johnson is today considered to be one of the premier orchestral performers of all time. He learned to play the piano at an early age, and began taking trumpet lessons from Louis Perlmutter while in sixth grade (1939 to 1945). He graduated from high school in 1944, and entered the Hartt School of Music at the University of Hartford, where he studied with Sigmund Hering (1946-1948). He then attended the Curtis Institute, where he studied with Samuel Krauss (1949-1950). He won the principal trumpet job in the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and decided to leave school. When he informed the director of Curtis of his decision, the director became upset and told him that he had no future in music!

While playing in Monte Carlo, Johnson was offered the job of principal trumpet of the Buffalo Philharmonic, but before he could start, the Korean War interrupted his career. He spent the next year aboard aircraft carriers, unable to practice his trumpet. After the war, Johnson played for a short while with the Boston Pops Orchestra, and then won the position of principal trumpet with the New Orleans Philharmonic in 1952, where he stayed until 1958. In the fall of 1958, he continued his orchestral career as coprincipal trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy. He shared principal duties with his former teacher Samuel Krauss, until Krauss moved to a section position in 1959.

During Johnson's sixteen years with the Philadelphia Orchestra, he recorded over eight hundred works, including Haydn's Trumpet Concerto (Oct. 1967), Handel's Messiah, Riisager's Concertino, J. Clarke's Prince of Denmark's March, and Telemann's Concerto in D. Altogether, he recorded fourteen solos with the Philadelphia Orchestra and performed solos with it forty times in concert. He also performed with the Philadelphia Brass Ensemble comprised of the brass principals of the orchestra, which recorded several albums for the Columbia label. One of the recordings, Catch the Brass Ring, consisted of well-known orchestral classics arranged in a pops style for brass. When it was released, the Philadelphia Orchestra conductor Eugene Ormandy was appalled, and told the producers at Columbia (with which the orchestra recorded) to immediately scrap the album. Columbia acquiesced, so only a few copies ever made it to the market, making it today a collector's item among brass enthusiasts. Another recording, Glorious Sound of Brass, won a Grammy Award in 1967 for "Best Classical Instrumental Ensemble." This led to another Grammy Award in 1969 for the recording*, The Antiphonal Music of Gabrieli* with the brass sections of the Philadelphia, Chicago, and Cleveland orchestras.

During his years in Philadelphia, Johnson taught at the Curtis Institute of Music (1969 to 1975) and Temple University (1963-70). He usually carried eighteen students whom he sometimes taught at his home on Sundays because of the heavy orchestra schedule. Most of his students considered him to be a giving, enthusiastic, and demanding teacher. However, not all students worked well with him; because Johnson was a very natural player who concentrated solely on musical matters, he was sometimes at a loss as to how to deal with students' mechanical difficulties, and would become frustrated and upset when their improvement was not forthcoming. He occasionally chastised students and would even verbally abuse them. Fortunately, a large majority of his students were physically gifted, and went on to professional careers in music.

Johnson was a much-loved member of the orchestra, both personally and musically. Principal trombonist Henry Charles Smith said of him, He was the greatest trumpet player I ever heard in a symphony orchestra. He played with an incredible warmth and lyricism, and that for me just set him above everybody else. Trumpet section member Roger Blackburn stated, He was my image of what an orchestral trumpeter should sound like. It was more lyrical than most of the other principal trumpeters at the time. He tended to bring more vibrato to his playing, which made it more of a singing style. We've come back to that timbre and his school of playing.

Johnson was a thin and handsome man who was known for his quick wit—his students called him the "King of One-Liners." On one occasion during an orchestra rehearsal, Maestro Ormandy told the orchestra that the Chinese Olympic Ping Pong Team was in town and had been given tickets to a Phillies baseball game, but that the team was going to attend the orchestra concert instead. Johnson stood up and asked, "Maestro, can we have the tickets to the game?"

In the early 1970s, Ormandy asked Johnson to change his sound to match that of another famous American orchestral player. Johnson was playing on a medium-large bore Bach trumpet with a large bore tuning slide, something he also required all of his students to play. He tried larger equipment, but began to have accuracy problems. Soon, the pressure from Ormandy led to alcohol abuse, which affected Johnson's performances. Ormandy demanded that he stop drinking, and arranged for him to have time off from the orchestra. At the same time, one of Johnson's twin daughters and wife each developed cancer, which exacerbated his personal problems. His drinking continued to the point that he was unable to cope with family and professional pressures, so he resigned from the orchestra in the early part of the 1974-75 season.

Within a short time, Johnson accepted a professorship at the University of Miami in Florida (replacing Harry Glantz), and at first also played principal trumpet in the Florida Orchestra. Concurrently, he taught at the New World School of the Arts in Miami. Although Johnson's drinking persisted, it did not seem to affect his ability to teach. Most of his students adored him and defended him whenever concerns were raised about his alcoholism. He taught many excellent players, many of who went on to occupy important orchestra and university positions.

Johnson loved to hunt, shoot targets, fish, and smoke cigars, but his first love was always music. (He also enjoyed sitting at the piano and playing jazz tunes.) He was an intense teacher who demanded that students be on time and prepared. Despite his incredible career, he remained a humble, unassuming man and a devoted father. Johnson died just two days before his seventy-fifth birthday, due to cancer of the kidneys. His wife of forty-one years, Myra, had died the year before. He was survived by twin daughters, two sisters, and six grandchildren.

Bibl.: Champouillon, David. "Gilbert Johnson: Artist and Teacher" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1999); Dobrin, Peter. "Gil Johnson" (Philadelphia Inquirer newspaper, Sept. 11, 2002); Sibaja, José. "Gilbert Johnson: One of a Kind" (The Brass Herald, May 2008); International Trumpet Guild website (www.ITG.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Johnson, Harold ("Money") (b. Tyler, Texas, Feb. 23, 1918; d. New York, New York, Mar. 28,1978). American trumpeter. Johnson began playing the trumpet at age fifteen and took lessons with Leonard Parker. Johnson was soon playing locally with Eddie and Sugar Lou, Red Calhoun in Dallas, and Skinny Thompson in Oklahoma. In 1936, he moved to Oklahoma City and became a member of Nat Towles's territorial band from 1939 to 1942, with which he continued to play for two more years after it was taken over by Horace Henderson. He recorded for Henderson as early as October of 1940 (with Emmett Berry also on trumpet).

Johnson played with Count Basie's band for a while in 1944 before joining Bob Dorsey's band (1944-46). Over the next twenty-three years, he played with various groups including those of Cootie Williams, Lucky Millinder, Louis Jordan, Lucky Thompson, Buddy Johnson, Cozy Cole, Herbie Fields, Panama Francis (which included a 1953 tour of South America), Reuben Phillips (at the Apollo Theater in New York), and Earl Hines (including a 1966 tour of the Soviet Union sponsored by the US State Department). He recorded with Jack McDuff in 1966.

Johnson played for a short time with Duke Ellington (January-February 1967), and was then recognized by replacing Cat Anderson in Duke Ellington's orchestra (1969-74). He was a featured trumpet soloist who often performed humorous vocal solos in the style of Louis Armstrong. He can be seen in a video with Duke Ellington (Copenhagen, 1971: In Tivoli Gardens with Cootie Williams, Johnny Coles, Eddie Preston, and Mercer Ellington on trumpet). After leaving Ellington's band, he freelanced in New York and participated in one of Buck Clayton's recorded jam sessions. He was active until his death from a heart attack at the age of sixty.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Johnson, J[ohn] Keith (b. Center, Texas, Aug. 25, 1942). American trumpeter. Johnson began playing cornet at the age of eleven. His only private teacher before college was William Scarlato, principal trumpet of the Shreveport Symphony and the band director at Jesuit High School. Johnson attended North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), studying with John Haynie and earning a bachelor of music degree in 1963. He continued his studies at the University of Illinois, where he studied with Haskell O. Sexton from 1963 to 1965 and received a master of music degree. Additionally, he studied with Vincent Cichowicz and Arnold Jacobs in Chicago.

Johnson taught at the University of Northern Iowa from 1966 to 1986. He assumed a position as professor of trumpet at the University of North Texas in the fall of 1986, and was named a Regents' Professor in 1995. He has performed with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Ft. Worth Symphony, Cape Town Philharmonic, Orchestra of New Spain, San Francisco Bach Choir & Orchestra (on Baroque trumpet), and the New York Baroque Orchestra. He is a member of the Dallas Opera Orchestra, Dallas Bach Society, and the Ft. Worth Early Music Ensemble, and is a former member of the Texas Brass Ensemble and the Sundance Brass. Since 1964, he has performed each summer at the New Hampshire Music Festival.

From 1981 to 1988, Johnson served as Music Review Editor for the International Trumpet Guild Journal. He has authored methods for the Baroque trumpet, as well as The Art of Trumpet Playing (Gore Publishing) and Brass Performance and Pedagogy (Prentice-Hall). In 2012, he was given the Award of Merit by the International Trumpet Guild for outstanding service to the world of trumpet. A leading teacher, he numbers among his many former students Robert Murray, James Wood, Philip Johnson, Ward Yager, Kathryn Aducci, William Stowman, and Craig Johnson.

Johnson and his wife Cecile LeBlanc Johnson, an elementary music teacher and certified Kodaly Specialist, have two children: Andrea (b. 1976) and Stephen (b. 1978). His hobbies include reading, bicycling, and mountain hiking.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Keith Johnson" (http://music.unt.edu/faculty-and-staff/detail/51); personal interview, July 19, 2011.

Johnson, Otis (b. New York, New York, Jan. 30, 1910; d. 1994). American trumpeter. Johnson began his career as a musician during the late 1920s, playing with the bands of Gene Rodgers, Henri Saparo (1928), Eugene Kennedy (1929), Charlie Skeete, and Luis Russell (1929). He rejoined Kennedy's group during the early 1930s, and became a member of Benny Carter's band in 1934. During the mid 1930s, he played with Charlie Turner, Willie Bryant (1935), Don Redman (1936-37), Louis Armstrong (1938-39), and again with Redman. He recorded with Louis Armstrong, Henry "Red" Allen, King Oliver, Hoagy Carmichael, Ben Webster, Benny Carter, Don Redman, Luis Russell, and several others.

Johnson joined the Army National Guard when the United States entered World War II in 1941. After the war, he remained in the military, and was stationed in Colorado Springs, Colorado. He never returned to music.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Otis Johnson" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Otis_Johnson_(musician)).

Johnson, Walt (b. Los Angeles, California, Jan. 11, 1947). American trumpeter. Johnson began his career in 1966 with the Si Zentner band shortly before he was drafted into military service, playing first trumpet with the 52nd Army Band at Ft. Ord. In 1970 at age twenty-three, he was living in Las Vegas where he played lead trumpet with the Haig Relief Band and toured with the Elvis Presley organization until Presley's death in 1977.

Johnson moved to Los Angeles in 1977, and in addition to playing a great deal of studio work, toured with Bill Chase's group (replacing Chase when he died in 1974), Lionel Hampton, and Tower of Power. During his long and successful career as a studio player, Johnson performed with numerous celebrities including Barbra Streisand, Barry Manilow, Frank Sinatra, Wayne Newton, Mel Tormé, Vic Damone, Andy Williams, Engelbert Humperdinck, Johnny Mathis, Lionel Richie, Bob Hope, Henry Mancini, Dionne Warwick, Burt Bacharach, The Four Tops, Melissa Manchester, The Commodores, Toni Tennille, José Feliciano, Julio Iglesias, The Pointer Sisters, Louie Bellson, and many others. A representative sample of his numerous film credits includes Star Wars, Aladdin, Terms of Endearment, Planes Trains and Automobiles, Star Trek, The River Wild, Rocky, Beverly Hills Cop III, and the Naked Gun series. Television show credits include Magnum PI, McGyver, Family Matters, Full House, and Golden Girls. Johnson often doubles on trombone and bass trombone.

Johnson authored the book, Double High C in Ten Minutes. His two solo albums are Trumpet Scroll and Warmth of the Sun (Walt Johnson Music Products). His company, Walt Johnson Cases, makes trumpet cases and mutes.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Walt Johnson's official website: http://great-music.net/wjohnson.html.

Johnson, William Gary ("Willie" "Bunk") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 27, 1879; d. New Iberia, Louisiana, July 7, 1949). American trumpeter. Johnson's early life is unclear, partly due to the lack of documentation, but also because of his false claims reported in the 1939 book, Jazzmen. Although several scholars claimed that he was born in 1889, and Johnson's draft card indicated 1882, he was born in 1879. He began his career with the Superior Orchestra and the Eagle Band (1906-11). By 1914, he was freelancing throughout the South, Texas, and Kansas City. However, by 1934 the lack of work and severe problems with his teeth forced him to settle in New Iberia, Louisiana, and work as a field laborer and truck driver.

At the suggestion by Louis Armstrong, writers Bill Russell and Fred Ramsey located Johnson to gather information for a book they were writing about early jazz music in New Orleans. In their book, Jazzmen, Johnson made several claims that are today known to be false. One claim was that he was the true pioneer of jazz music and that he had played alongside Buddy Bolden. Another claim was that he was the teacher of Louis Armstrong, something that Satchmo denied. Nonetheless, the book caused a great deal of interest in Johnson, and fans were eager to hear him play once again. Funds were raised for him to be supplied with a complete set of dentures, and a new trumpet was purchased for him.

Having to learn to play all over again, Johnson's return was slow. He made a living as a music teacher in 1940 and began playing professionally again in 1941. His first recording was made in 1942, but did not sound well, so in 1943 he moved to San Francisco and recorded with the Yerba Buena Jazz Band with some success. After returning to Louisiana, he continued to record. In 1945, he worked for a while in New York and Boston, making several more recordings, some of which sounded quite good, but others poor due to his being drunk at the time.

Johnson organized his own band in 1945 and had a successful run at the Stuyvesant Casino in New York. However, the new bebop style of music pioneered by Dizzy Gillespie soon eclipsed the older style of New Orleans jazz, and Johnson became out of work in New York. He traveled to Chicago and made his final recordings in 1947.

Ill health caused Johnson to retire from music and return home to New Iberia. He died soon after on July 7, 1949 at the age of fifty-nine. Although he is considered to be an important musician of the early New Orleans style of jazz music, it has now been determined that his playing style was influenced by Armstrong, and that many of his claims were untrue.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Johnson-Hamilton, Joyce (b. Lincoln, Nebraska, July 7, 1938). American trumpeter and conductor. Johnson-Hamilton grew up in Ralston, Nebraska, near Omaha. She was the third child of four in the family; she has two older sisters and a younger brother, now deceased (d. 2006). She began playing the trumpet at age eight, and joined the local 4-H band. She performed her first solo during her eighth grade graduation ceremony. Throughout high school, she took weekly lessons in Omaha from Fred Elias, author of the Buzz System for Brass. She attended the University of Nebraska's summer music camp in Lincoln, and it was there that she decided to become a professional musician and conductor. Her early influences were Rafael Méndez and Maurice André.

From 1956 to 1960, Johnson-Hamilton studied at the University of Nebraska, where she earned a bachelor of music degree while studying with Dean Killian (freshman year) and Jack Snyder (sophomore through senior years). She completed a master's degree there in 1962, studying with Dennis L. Schneider. She played in the faculty brass quintet, was a section player in the Lincoln Symphony, and spent her summers attending the Aspen Music Festival. After receiving her master's degree, she took a public school music position in a suburb of Omaha, where she taught for three years, and was assistant principal trumpet of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra. She resigned her positions in order to further develop her playing career.

Johnson-Hamilton returned to Aspen during the summer of 1965, where she auditioned for Jacques Singer, conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra (now the Oregon Symphony), and won a position as principal trumpet (1965-69). In the spring of 1968, she was also hired as assistant principal trumpet of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and played with it during the 1968-69 season. Deciding to pursue a doctorate in music, Johnson-Hamilton resigned her orchestral positions, and obtained a graduate fellowship to Stanford University, where she majored in Baroque and Renaissance practices. In addition to playing the Baroque (valveless) trumpet and cornetto, she also continued playing with the San Francisco Symphony as an extra and occasional fourth trumpet. After one year at Stanford, she switched her major to conducting. In 1971, she married Doug Hamilton and took on her double name; until then she had been known as Joyce Johnson.

Without finishing the conducting degree after two years of doctoral work, Johnson-Hamilton left school and became principal trumpet of the Oakland Symphony (1971-76), San Jose Symphony (1976-80), and the Cabrillo Festival Orchestra (several summers). She founded the Sinfonia of Northern California in 1974, an orchestra that specializes in music of the Baroque and Early Classic eras. She performed a recital on Baroque trumpet during the 1978 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Madison, Wisconsin. In 1972, Harold Farberman, conductor of the Oakland Symphony, appointed her as one of his assistant conductors. She gave recitals with organist John Walker, the Esterhazy Quartet, and keyboardist Susan Marchant (1978).

During the late 1970s, Johnson-Hamilton became conductor of the Napa Valley Symphony and the Diablo Symphony. She discontinued fulltime orchestral trumpet playing, although she continues performing as a soloist on occasion. At this same time, she taught trumpet at Stanford University, but resigned to focus more on conducting. She left the Napa Valley Symphony in 1989, and again resumed teaching at Stanford, and studying Baroque instruments. She remained with the Diablo Symphony and is its current conductor.

Johnson-Hamilton has performed with the Pacific Baroque Orchestra of Vancouver, Orchestra of the 17th Century (Washington, D.C.), Northwest Chorale (Seattle), California Bach Society, Women's Antique Vocal Ensemble, Carmel Bach Festival, Philharmonica Baroque and Magnificat, and Whole Noyse. She has also been a featured soloist with the Los Angeles Baroque Orchestra and at the First International Women's Brass Conference (1993). Recently, she has appeared as a guest conductor, soloist, and arranger with the Seoul Philharmonic in South Korea (2009). Johnson-Hamilton and her husband have two sons, James (b. 1972) and Colin (b. 1974). She enjoys gardening, and is an avid member of the Morgan Car Club of Northern California, having served as its newsletter editor for two years.

Bibl.: Card, Robyn. "Joyce Johnson-Hamilton on a Lifetime of Opportunities and Exploration" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2010); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Johnston, Scott A. (b. Madison, Wisconsin, Aug. 13, 1950). American trumpeter. Johnston grew up in Madison, Wisconsin. He began playing the trumpet at age fourteen, studying with Donald Whitaker. After graduating from Madison Central High School in 1968, he attended the University of Wisconsin where he continued his studies with Whitaker until receiving his bachelor of music degree in 1972. While at Wisconsin, he also studied with Vincent Cichowicz of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. He then studied with Richard Burkart at The Ohio State University (1972-74), earning a master of music degree. He also studied with Thomas Stevens at the Academy of the West (summer 1973) and James Stamp (summer 1977).

Johnston began his teaching career as professor of trumpet at the Lawrence Conservatory at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wisconsin (1974-78). He has been teaching at the University of Akron since 1978, and was host of the 1993 International Trumpet Guild Conference. He is principal trumpet of the Akron Symphony Orchestra and the Canton Symphony Orchestra, and performs with the Paragon Brass Quintet (faculty). Previously, he served as a member of the Madison Symphony Orchestra, Columbus Symphony Orchestra, and performed as an extra with the Cleveland Orchestra. He has also played with the Blossom Band at the Blossom Music Center. During the summers of 1986 to 2000, he was principal trumpet and brass coordinator at the American Institute of Musical Studies (AIMS) in Graz, Austria. A noted clinician, he has presented master classes throughout the United States, as well as China and Europe.

Johnston and violinist and software engineer Linda Johnston have been married since 1997. His hobbies include house building, mountain hiking, and computers.

Bibl.: "Scott Johnston" (http://www.uakron.edu/music/faculty/); personal interview, May 3, 2011.

Jokipii, Alex (b. Detroit, Michigan, Oct. 22, 1969). American trumpeter. Jokipii grew up in Escanaba, Michigan. He began (at age twelve) playing a trumpet once owned by his mother; his first teacher was Jean Moorehead. After graduating from Escanaba Area High School in 1988, he studied with Stephen Jones and Scott Thornburg at Western Michigan University (1988-93), receiving a bachelor of music education degree. As part of his undergraduate curriculum, he attended the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki, Finland, for one year (1991-92), where he had the good fortune to study with the great Timofei Dokshitser. He earned a master of music degree and began doctoral studies at The Juilliard School in New York (1993-96), studying with Chris Gekker and Philip Smith.

Jokipii became principal trumpet of the Charleston Symphony Orchestra in 1996, a position he held for two years. He also played in the Spoleto Festival Brass Quintet and Charleston Brass Quintet, and taught as an adjunct faculty member at Charleston Southern University. He appeared as a soloist at the 1992 and 1994 International Trumpet Guild conferences, and has performed with the New York Philharmonic, Helsinki Philharmonic, Rochester Philharmonic, and the Savannah Symphony. He became principal trumpet of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra in 1998, a position he still holds, and has been a guest principal of the Florida Orchestra (spring 1997) and the Dallas Symphony Orchestra (fall 2001). He teaches at the State University of New York in Fredonia (since 1998), and recorded Jerzy Sapieyevski's Mercury Concerto for trumpet and wind ensemble with the SUNY-Fredonia Wind Ensemble.

Jokipii and his wife Shari (Executive Director of the Kenmore Mercy Hospital Foundation) have been married since 2006. His hobbies include golf and traveling.

Bibl.: "Alex Jokipii" (www.bpo.org/meet/orchestra-alex_jokipii.php); "Alex Jokipii Trumpet" (www.fredonia.edu/music/faculty/bios/jokipii.asp); personal interview, Aug. 19, 2012.

Jones, [William] Carmell (b. Kansas City, Kansas, July 19, 1936; d. Kansas City, Kansas, Nov. 7, 1996). American trumpeter. Jones learned to play piano, then cornet at the age of eleven. He attended Sumner High School in Kansas City. From 1956 to 1958, he served in the Air Force and was stationed in Hawaii, and while there, played at nightclubs. After his military service, he returned to Kansas City, and attended the University of Kansas in Lawrence from 1958 to 1960. One of his music professors had moved to Los Angeles, and arranged for Jones to be invited to play with Shelly Manne's orchestra. So in 1960 Jones moved to California to begin his music career.

In Los Angeles, Jones played and recorded with Manne, as well as with the Gerald Wilson Orchestra (1961-63), Harold Land, Bud Shank (1961), Curtis Amy, Herbie Mann, Franck Butler, Red Mitchell, Victor Feldman, and Vi Redd. He released his first solo album for Pacific Jazz titled The Remarkable Carmell Jones. But, after four years he decided to accept an offer to play with Booker Ervin in New York where he also played with Joe Henderson, Charles McPherson, and Horace Silver (1964-65), with whom he recorded the album, Live, for Emerald.

Strongly influenced by the playing of Clifford Brown, Jones developed a sizable reputation as a promising jazz trumpeter of the new generation following Louis Armstrong. He moved to Paris in August of 1965, but was soon offered a job as a trumpeter and staff arranger for the SFB (Radio Free Berlin television) Big Band in Berlin. He appeared with Brew Moore, George Gruntz, and at numerous jazz festivals throughout Europe. As a member of the Berlin Dream Band, he appeared with Stan Kenton during the Jazzstage Concerts at Philharmonic Hall. At one time, the Berlin Dream Band and Jones also worked with Oliver Nelson. He also established his own Lemrac Studios in West Berlin where he recorded demos for various musicians.

Since most of Jones's work in Europe was as a studio musician, he made only one solo album during his fifteen years there. His album, Carmell Jones in Europe (Prestige), did little to boost his reputation in Europe or abroad, and he soon became mostly forgotten in the United States. When he moved back to Kansas City in 1980, he found little work, so he found himself teaching private lessons at several local schools, and gigging at nightclubs. He received a break with he joined the Ray Charles Orchestra and embarked on several world tours. He was often featured as a soloist and managed to record several solo albums as leader during breaks between tours. Some of these albums include Jay Hawk Talk (Prestige) and Carmell Jones Returns (Revelation).

Just when Jones's career was taking off again, serious heart problems caused him to collapse on the bandstand in 1987 and he was rushed to the hospital. His last tour was in 1989 when he went to Paris with Jay McShann's All Star Blues. By 1992, his heart was failing and he played very little during his last four years in Kansas City.

Jones died at the age of sixty. He was married for five years to the Austrian jazz singer Christine Zacher, with whom he had a daughter, Stellisa, who is now a popular hip-hop singer known as Stella Jones.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Carmell Jones" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Conrad ("Connie") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Mar. 22, 1934). American cornetist. Jones has been an active jazz and Dixieland cornetist in the New Orleans area since he first joined the Basin Street Six in 1954, replacing George Girard. He has played and recorded with Jack Teagarden, Santo Pecora (1958-60), Billy Maxted, and the Dukes of Dixieland (replacing Frank Assunto).

Jones has led numerous recording dates with his Crescent City Jazz Band for such labels as Jazzology, Maison Bourbon, Crescent City, and Challenge. More recently, Jones played with Banu Gibson (1992) and recorded with Dick Sudhalter on Stomp Off. He soloed at the Bordeaux Festival with Tim Laughlin (2007) and dueted in New Orleans with pianist Tom McDermott.

Jones has released many albums, among them Sweet, Hot and Blue (Jazzology), Creole Nocturne (Arbors Records), Get Out & Get Under Moon: Live at the Vineyard, and Yellow Dog Blues. The famed clarinetist Pete Fountain said of Jones, he is the greatest cornet player in the country, and I've played with a lot of them.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Herbert ("Herbie") Robert (b. Miami, Florida, Mar. 23 (17?), 1926; d. New York, New York, Mar. 19, 2001). American trumpeter and arranger. Jones began performing and arranging professionally at age fourteen. He attended Florida A&M College (now Florida A&M University) during the late 1940s, but dropped out just before graduating to join Lucky Millinder's band in 1950 in New York City, where he studied composition and arranging with Eddie Barefield, and played with groups led by Andy Kirk, Buddy Johnson, and Cab Calloway (1956-58).

Jones, best known for his trumpet playing and arranging with the Duke Ellington Orchestra from 1963 to 1968, was also Ellington's librarian. Among his best-known arrangements are Cootie's Caravan, The Prowling Cat, The Opener, and El Busto. Jones also arranged for Billy Strayhorn.

Jones left the Ellington organization in order to have a more stable home life with wife Gladys Hield, daughters Jennifer and Priscilla, and son Herbert Jr., but his marriage ended in divorce. He spent much of his career as a volunteer director of the New York City-sponsored school, Arts & Culture, Inc., and as director of the Police Athletic League's bugle corps.

Jones died from complications of diabetes just four days before his seventy-fifth birthday. He was a strong family man and fine photographer. In Duke Ellington's memoir, Music Is My Mistress (Doubleday), Ellington said of Jones, He was neat and clean, neither a smoker nor drinker, and always walked four miles a day...He was a great asset.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Herbie Jones" (www.depanorama.net/dems/011a.htm); "Herbie Jones" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Herbie_Jones).

Jones, Leroy [Joseph Jr.] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 20, 1958). Jones taught himself to play the guitar at age eight, but switched to baritone horn and cornet two years later under the direction of Sister Mary Hillary at St. Leo the Great School (1968-72). Jones played in the St. Leo School Band, then in the St. Augustine High School Band (four years), as well as with the Fairview Baptist Church Marching Band led by Danny Barker (1970-73), which later became the Hurricane Brass Band (1973-75). He studied trumpet with Ernie Cagnolatti and Dalton Rousseau.

Jones attended Loyola University as a music major for six months, but dropped out in order to join the local musicians' union and pursue a career as a jazz performer. He starred at the Superbowl (as "Little Louis Armstrong" in 1972) and worked with the Leroy Batman (on Bourbon Street), Louisiana State Orchestra, Milton Batiste, Doc Paulin, Herman Sherman's Tuxedo Brass Band, Hollis Carmouche (1978), Lady Charlotte with trombonist Lucian Barbarin (1980), and others, before working in Southeast Asia for three years (making a record in 1986). Jones replaced Jabbo Smith in the show, One Mo' Time, and led his own quintet called the New Orleans Finest (1980-83) featuring drummers such as Herlin Riley and Shannon Powell. He also worked with the Louisiana Repertory Jazz Ensemble (1981), Ellis Marsalis (1984), Della Reese, Eddie Vinson (on tour), Lillian Boutté (1988), Wanda Rouzan (European tour, 1989), and the Young Tuxedo Jazz & Brass Band (1987-89).

Jones later took lessons from William Fielder at Rutgers University, and changed his embouchure. Since 1990, he has been a member of Harry Connick Jr.'s big band and combos, which brought him significant recognition, and he soon made several record albums for Sony/Columbia. His albums as leader include Mo' Cream for the Crop, Props for Pops, Soft Shoe, Sweeter than a Summer Breeze, Back to My Roots, City of Sounds, Wonderful Christmas, and Leroy Jones and His Hurricane Marching Brass Band of New Orleans. Jones also played with June Gardner (1994), Tremé Brass Band (25th Anniversary Parade in New Orleans in April 1994 with Gregg Stafford), his own quintet (European tour in 1994; festivals in Ascona, Marciac, and Bordeaux), was a guest soloist with the Bordeaux Big Band (July of 2006 in his own arrangements on Someday, Sleepy Time Down South, etc.), and was a star soloist of the Guillaume Nouaux Quintet (from 2006, with trombonist Jerry Edwards). He played with Charlie Miller, Maryland Jazzband, Paolo Tomelleri Big Band (2007), Red Holloway, John Allred, and the French Tuxedo Big Band (Saint-Lys, France, 2009). He often performs with the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, and has regularly appeared at the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival.

Jones currently lives in New Orleans and leads his jazz quintet that includes his wife, trombonist Katja Toivola.

Jones's style of playing and singing is exciting and highly entertaining, making him one of the most popular artists in the city of New Orleans. A good chorus man, he was influenced by Jack Willis (traditional jazz) and Clifford Brown (hard bop), and has influenced the younger New Orleans generation, including Wynton Marsalis, Terence Blanchard, Nicholas Payton, and Mark Braud.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Leroy Jones" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Philip [Mark] (b. Bath, England, Mar. 12, 1928; d. London, England, Jan. 17, 2000). British trumpeter. Jones was born into a family of trumpeters, the best-known being his uncle Roy Copestake. Jones began learning the trumpet from his father and Copestake, and won a scholarship to the Royal College of Music (1944-48) where he studied with Ernest Hall. His first important position was as principal trumpet of the Royal Opera House Orchestra (1948-51), after which he freelanced for several years. In the opera, he may have been the first trumpeter in the world to perform the entire Ring cycle of Wagner as bass trumpet and as principal trumpet in consecutive years. He was third trumpet of the London Philharmonic Orchestra from 1953 to 1956, and in 1956 (at the age of twenty-eight) he became principal trumpet of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (until 1960). Subsequent appoints were principal of the Philharmonia (1960-64), English Chamber Orchestra (principal, 1960-85), London Philharmonic (principal, 1964-65), New Philharmonia (principal, 1965-67), and BBC Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1968-72).

Jones is best known as the founder and leader of the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble (PJBE). This group started in 1951 as a brass quartet concentrating on modern music, and a quintet focusing on ancient music, but over the years it also grew to ten players when performing at large concert halls. It played its first full-length concert at the Aldeburgh Festival in 1962, and made its first recording in 1970. Managed by Jones and his wife, Ursula Strebi, the PJBE became one of the world's premier, influential brass groups, and helped popularize brass ensembles. It premiered eighty-seven new works for brass, many of which were composed for it. The group performed hundreds of concerts in thirty countries, released fifty albums, and filmed concerts in Japan.

When Jones accidentally drove his car over his trumpet case in 1986, he took that as a sign that he should retire from playing, and devoted all of his time to teaching. He accepted a position at the Royal Northern College of Music in Manchester in 1975-77, the Guildhall School of Music and Drama (London) in 1983-88, and director of Trinity College of Music, where he worked from 1988 until 1994. During his tenure at Trinity, political authorities wanted to close this institution, but thanks to his organizational talents and leadership, it remained open and continues to thrive today. Concurrently, he was Governor of Chetham's School of Music in Manchester. After retiring, he served as chairman of the Musicians Benevolent Fund.

Jones was one of England's most highly regarded musicians: in 1977 he was awarded an Order of the British Empire, and in 1986 was made a Commander of the Order of the British Empire. He received the Composers' Guild Award in 1979, and Cesare Bendinelli Award in 1993, among others.

Bibl.: Philip Jones C.V. given to Edward Tarr on Nov. 15, 1996; "Philip Jones (1928-2000)." (International Trumpet Guild website: www.trumpetguild.org); "Philip Jones (musician)." (Wikipedia: http://en.wikipedia.org); "Philip Jones Brass Ensemble." (Classics Archives: www.classicarchives.com). Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete. (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. Extract on mp3, video clip; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Quincy Delight Jr. (b. Chicago, Illinois, Mar. 14, 1933). American trumpeter, conductor, producer, arranger, and composer. Quincy Jones (known to his friends as "Q") is an American jazz legend who is a giant in the music entertainment industry. He holds the record for the most Grammy nominations (seventy-nine), and has received twenty-nine Grammy Awards, including a Grammy Legend Award in 1991.

Jones is the son of Quincy Delight Jones Sr., a semi-professional baseball player and carpenter, and Sarah Frances (née Wells) Jones, an apartment complex manager and bank executive. When Quincy Jr. was ten, his family moved to Bremerton, Washington, where he attended Seattle's Garfield High School. At age fourteen, he met seventeen-year-old Ray Charles, with whom he would become a lifetime friend and colleague. Jones studied music with Robert Blackwell.

Jones received a scholarship to the Schillinger House (now the Berklee College of Music) in 1951, but left school when he received an invitation to tour as a trumpeter with Lionel Hampton with whom he developed his skills as an arranger. After moving to New York City during the early 1950s, Jones received commissions for arrangements from several leading artists including Sarah Vaughan, Dinah Washington, Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Gene Krupa, and Ray Charles. In 1956, he toured the Middle East and South America (sponsored by the US Information Agency) as a trumpeter with the Dizzy Gillespie Band, after which he worked as leader of his own band that recorded for ABC/Paramount. Jones settled in Paris in 1957 and studied composition and theory with Nadia Boulanger and Oliver Messiaen. He also became the music director for Barclay Disques, the French distributor for Mercury Records. He later toured Europe with several jazz orchestras, and in 1960 formed his own band, The Jones Boys, that was artistically successful but financially unstable. Jones later was quoted as saying, We had the best jazz band in the planet, and yet we were literally starving. That's when I discovered that there was "music," and there was the "music business." If I were to survive, I would have to learn the difference between the two. With a personal loan from Irving Green of Mercury Records, and a new job as musical director of the company's New York division, Jones was able to make a financial recovery. He became vice president of the company in 1964, the first African American to hold an executive position in a white-owned record company. He also became the first black American to write music for major films; he composed the music for The Pawnbroker, The Slender Thread (starring Sidney Poitier), Walk Don't Run, In Cold Blood, In the Heat of the Night, A Dandy in Aspic, Mackenna's Gold, The Italian Job, Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice, The Lost Man, Cactus Flower, The Color Purple, Take the Money and Run, Austin Powers, The Getaway, and twenty other major motion pictures. He has also composed television theme songs for such shows as Ironside, Sanford and Son, and The Bill Cosby Show.

During the 1960s, Jones was responsible for producing hit singles for Lesley Gore (It's My Party, Judy's Turn to Cry, She's a Fool, You Don't Own Me, and Look of Love). A string of successful recordings, film scores, and television shows were produced during the 1970s and '80s, including Michael Jackson's Thriller that sold 110 million copies, and Bad that sold forty-five million copies.

Jones's social activism began during the 1960s when he supported Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He also formed the Institute for Black American Music (IBAM), is one of the founders of the Black Arts Festival in Chicago, established The Quincy Jones Workshops, founded the Quincy Jones Listen Up Foundation, and helped launch the We Are the Future project. He is a supporter of numerous charities including the NAACP, GLAAD, Peach Games, AmfAR, and The Maybach Foundation. He serves on the board of directors of The Jazz Foundation of America, and is cofounder of the Global Down Syndrome Foundation. He also his head of his own record label, Qwest Records, and is chairman and CEO of Qwest Broadcasting, one of the largest minority-owned broadcasting companies in America. He is the recipient of an Emmy Award, seven Oscar nominations, and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award.

Bibl.: "Quincy Jones" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Quincy_Jones); "Quincy Jones" (www.achievement.org/autodoc/page/jon0bio-1).

Jones, Reunald Sr. ("Jonesy", "Tree") (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, Dec. 22, 1910; d. Los Angeles, California, Feb. 26, 1989). American trumpeter. Jones studied at the Michigan Conservatory, and began his career playing in the territory band of Leonard Gay (1928) and Speed Webb (1930). He became a top big band lead trumpeter and played with many of the name bands during the 1930s through the 1960s: Charlie Johnson, the Savoy Bearcats, Fess Williams, Chick Webb (1933-34), Sam Wooding, Claude Hopkins, Willie Bryant, Teddy Hill, Don Redman (1936-38), Erskine Hawkins, Duke Ellington (1946), Jimmie Lunceford (twice), Lucky Millinder, Sy Oliver, Count Basie (1952-57), Quincy Jones (The Jones Boys, 1956-58), Woody Herman (1959), George Shearing (late 1959), Ella Fitzgerald, and the Nat King Cole Orchestra (1961-64). He also worked as a studio player during the 1940s, and although mostly a lead player, was sometimes featured as a soloist.

Jones was a cousin of the famed trumpeter, Roy Eldridge. Jones's son, Reunald Jr., was also a professional trumpet player who was lead trumpet for Sammy Davis Jr., Louie Bellson, Quincy Jones, and James Brown, and can be heard on the television theme tunes for Ironside and Sanford & Son. His grandson, Renny (Reunald C. P. Jones III, b. 1958), is a professional electric bass player.

After the decline of the big band era, Jones Sr. worked mostly in circus bands and as a freelance player. He died at the age of seventy-eight.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Reunald Jones" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Reunald_Jones).

Jones, Robert Elliott ("Jonah") (b. Louisville, Kentucky, Dec. 31, 1909; d. New York, New York, Apr. 30, 2000). American trumpeter. Jones (who got his nickname from his stuttering school band director who had difficulty pronouncing his name) started playing alto horn, but quickly switched to trumpet. As a teenager, Jones played with Artie Jones and Othello Tinsley. He began playing professionally at age nineteen in various territorial bands including one with Horace Henderson (1928-29). He was significantly influenced by the playing of Louis Armstrong.

In 1931, Jones played for a few months with Jimmy Lunceford, and from 1932 to 1934 with swing violinist Stuff Smith.

Jones joined Lil Armstrong's orchestra in 1934, and the following year played with McKinney's Cotton Pickers. In 1936, he rejoined Smith's band and worked at the Onyx Club in New York until 1940. Smith and Jones recorded several popular hits that featured violin and trumpet duets, including After You've Gone and Here Comes the Man with the Jive. The Smith band was raucous, and many members, including Jones, used drugs and alcohol to stimulate themselves. Jones's doctor warned him that he would not live more than a year if he kept up the abuse.

After leaving the Smith band, Jones recorded with Billie Holiday, Teddy Wilson, Lionel Hampton, Adrian Rollins, Georgia White, and Peetie Wheatstraw, as well as playing with the bands of Benny Carter and Fletcher Henderson. Jones became very popular in 1941 when he joined Cab Calloway's band, which featured Jones a great deal; their recording of Jonah Joins the Cab was a hit. He stayed with Calloway for eleven years, but when Calloway disbanded his group in 1952, Jones kept working with Joe Bushkin and Earl Hines (1952-54). He also performed on Broadway in Porgy and Bess and played in various society orchestras in New York. In 1954, he toured Europe as a soloist, during which time he recorded with soprano sax player Sidney Bechet and with Alix Combelle.

As the number of large swing bands diminished in the 1950s, Jones played in a jazz quartet at the Embers in New York City. He began using mutes, and adopted a quiet and smooth style of playing, which led to his great popularity. His recordings on the Groove label, especially a live album from 1956, brought him widespread fame. He signed with Capitol Records in 1957, and his quartet made many top-selling recordings. Tunes such as Baubles, Bangles and Beads and On the Street Where You Live were hits, and the album, I Dig Chicks, won a Grammy Award in 1958. The group toured Europe, the Far East, and Australia; in 1959-60, they played at the Sporting Club in Monaco. The group remained popular through 1963.

Jones left Capitol and signed with Decca and Motown, but his recordings with these labels were less popular than his earlier ones. He became less active during the 1970s and '80s, mainly because his low-key swing style had gone out of vogue. He performed at New York's Rainbow Room in 1975, made his final recording in 1986, and retired at the age of eighty. He died on April 30, 2000 at the age of ninety-one.

Some of Jones's most popular albums include Jazz Legacy: Jonah's Wail (Inner City, 1954), Jonah Jones at the Embers (Groove, 1956), Muted Jazz (Capitol, 1957), I Dig Chicks (Capitol, 1958), The Unsinkable Jonah Jones (Capitol, 1962), Hello Broadway (Decca, 1965), Back on the Street (Chiaroscuro, 1972), Good Time Medleys (Decca, 2002), and I Dig Jonah (collection) (Collector's Choice).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Jonah Jones" (www.encyclopedia.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Sean (b. Warren, Ohio, May 29, 1978). American trumpeter. Jones was raised by his mother in the small town of Warren, Ohio. He began singing gospel music in church at the age of five. In fourth grade, he started to play the drums, but fell in love with the trumpet the following year when a teacher named Jessica Turner loaned him a few Miles Davis recordings. Soon, he was playing gospel music on trumpet in church, but since no printed music was provided, he developed a keen ear and musical sense that formed the basis of his jazz abilities.

Jones began formal classical trumpet lessons in high school, studying with Esotto Pellegrini. He continued to study with Pellegrini at Youngstown State University where he received his bachelor of music degree. He later attended graduate school at Rutgers University, studying with Dr. William Fielder and Scott Whitener. He has also studied with Vincent DiMartino and Charles Schlueter.

Jones began playing professionally at the age of seventeen, and during his career, has worked as a jazz musician with the Chic O'Farrill Orchestra, Gerald Wilson Orchestra, Illinois Jacquet big band, Louis Armstrong Legacy Band, Charles Lovano, Tom Harrell, Jon Faddis, Jimmy Heath, Frank Foster, Brad Leali, Patti LaBelle, Indie Arie, Kem, Ma'Shell Ndegeocello, Stevie Wonder, Paul Ferguson Big Band, and the International Jazz Quintet. He has also led several of his own groups.

As a jazz and trumpet educator, Jones was an instructor for the East Cleveland public schools (2000-01), adjunct professor of jazz at Youngstown State University (2002), trumpet instructor at Montclair College's music preparatory division (2005), and is currently on the jazz faculty at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh. He is the lead trumpeter with Wynton Marsalis's Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, and is a member of the Pittsburgh Jazz Orchestra.

Since 2004, Jones has released five albums, all on the Mack Avenue label: Eternal Journey, Gemini, Roots, Kaleidoscope, and The Search Within. His playing has been described as having the technical facility of Clifford Brown, lyricism of Freddie Hubbard, intervallic content of Woody Shaw, and forward thinking of Miles Davis. Atlanta Jazz wrote of Jones, He sets the standard for the next generation of jazz musicians.

Bibl.: Heath, Travis. "Sean Jones on the Joy and Discovery of Jazz Trumpet" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010); "Sean Jones" (www.allaboutjazz.com).

Jones, Stephen G[raf] (b. Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 17, 1947). American trumpeter. Jones grew up in Lancaster, Ohio. He began playing trumpet at age eleven; his first teachers were James Mercer, David Kearney, and Gary H. Bailes. After graduating from Lancaster High School in 1966, he attended The Ohio State University where he earned a bachelor of science degree in 1970, studying with Richard Suddendorf and Thomas Battenberg. He then accepted an assistantship in trumpet at Wichita State University (1970-72), studying with Walter J. Myers, and performing with the Wichita Symphony Orchestra and Wichita Brass Quintet (faculty). After completing his master of music degree, he became a faculty member at Western Michigan University, a position he has held since 1972. He continued his education at the University of Michigan (1975-78), earning a doctor of musical arts degree studying with Clifford Lillya. He also studied with Gerard Schwarz at the Aspen Music Festival.

Jones has been a member of the Western Brass Quintet since 1972, and was principal trumpet in the Kalamazoo Symphony Orchestra (1972-84). He has performed with the Santa Fe Chamber Orchestra and throughout the United States, as well as in other countries including Sweden, Germany, England, Russia, South Korea, China, Thailand, Italy, and Holland. An active member of the International Trumpet Guild, he has served as ITG Secretary (1981-87), President (1989-93), Past President (1993-95), and board member (1995-99). He received the ITG's Award of Merit in 2006.

Jones was previously married to pianist Terry Turner-Jones (1976-78). He and his present wife Linda L. Jones, a retired university administrator, were married in 1992 and have a son, Peter A. Jones (b. 1994). Steve's hobbies include transcribing and arranging music, designing mutes, and financial investing.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Stephen G. Jones" (www.wmich.edu/music/faculty/faculty_pages/som_fac_jonessteven.html); personal interview, Apr. 7, 2011.

Jones, Thad[deus Joseph] (b. Pontiac, Michigan, Mar. 28, 1923; d. Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 20, 1986). American cornetist. Jones taught himself to play the trumpet at about age thirteen. He began playing professionally when he joined his older brother Hank's (piano) jazz group, the Arcadia Club Band, at the age of sixteen. From 1943 to 1946, Thad was in the army, first as a cargo specialist at Camp Walters in Texas, then playing overseas in a band. After his service years, he joined the Charles Young jazz band in Oklahoma City and assumed its leadership when Young unexpectedly died, but returned to Michigan a short time later when his father (a lumber inspector for General Motors) had serious health problems.

From 1950 to 1953, Jones joined his younger brother, Elvin (drums), as a member of the Billy Mitchell Jazz Quintet in Detroit. He then joined the Charles Mingus Jazz Composers Workshop in 1954 with which he played for over a year, but his membership in Count Basie's Orchestra (1954-63) was what made him famous in the jazz world. In 1956, Downbeat magazine awarded Jones the "New Star Award." In 1957, he appeared with the Basie orchestra at a Command Performance for Queen Elizabeth in London. After leaving the Basie organization in February of 1963, Jones worked with Gerry Mulligan, George Russell, and Thelonious Monk.

In December of 1965, Jones and drummer Mel Lewis formed an eighteen-piece big band, and although not a fulltime group, the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra performed for fourteen years, ten of which were as one of the resident bands at the Village Vanguard in New York. They toured the United States, Japan, USSR, and all of Europe. The Jones-Lewis partnership ended in 1979 after Jones's lip was injured during a mugging in Yugoslavia in 1978, so he began playing the valve trombone for a time (in 1984 he played the cornet and flugelhorn). Without explanation, Jones suddenly moved to Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1979 where he formed the Thad Jones Eclipse band and conducted the Danish Radio Orchestra. He returned to the United States in 1985 when he was hired to take over the Count Basie Orchestra. However, Jones began having health problems in 1985, and resigned from the Basie orchestra in February of 1986. He died six months later, reportedly due to cancer, but this was not made public at the time of his death.

Jones had a compact, crisp tone on the cornet, and his flugelhorn solos were also excellent. He was a prolific composer and published dozens of works that are now considered standard repertory for school jazz bands. Some of his best-known tunes are A Child is Born, The Big Dipper, Central Park North, Mean What You Say, Little Pixie, Fingers, Greetings and Salutations, Tiptoe, and It Only Happens Every Time. His original scores are now in the George P. Vanier Library of Concordia University in Montreal.

As a bandleader, Jones recorded many albums. Among his best as a soloist and available on CDs are The Fabulous Thad Jones, The Magnificent Thad Jones, Eclipse, Motor City Scene, Mean What You Say, Thad Jones and the Mel Lewis Quartet, Three and One, and the LP Consummation. He was a fine teacher, having been on the faculties of William Patterson College (now William Patterson University) and the Royal Danish Conservatory in Copenhagen. He and his wife Lis had two sons and a daughter. Jones is buried at the Vestre Kirkegaard Cemetery in Copenhagen.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barrie (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz; (St. Martin's Press); Wendell, Eric. "Thad Jones" (Encyclopedia of Jazz Musicians: www.jazz.com/encyclopedia); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Victor F. (b. Newark, New Jersey, Sept. 25, 1954). American trumpeter. Jones began playing trumpet at age eleven, and was playing with rock bands by age fifteen. He studied classical trumpet with Robert Blumenthal and Charles Hansen, and became a fine jazz performer who played with bands led by Lou Donaldson (1975-77), Stan Getz (1977-78), James Moody (1982), Woody Shaw (1983), Freddie Hubbard (1987), Stanley Turrentine (1989), Stanley Clarke, Phyllis Hyman, Dizzy Gillespie, Johnny Mathis (1977), and others. In 1991, he founded the Victor Jones R & B-Bop Band. Jones has recorded over one hundred albums as a sideman on trumpet or drums. With his newer group, Cultur-Versey, he recorded a CD titled Visible Sound Groove (New Frontier Records, 1995).

Jones is also a professional drummer. He taught at the Newark Community Center of the Arts (1975-80), New School (1989-91), and is an active jazz club performer in New York City. He appears with Stan Getz in the film, The Exterminator: Forest Eyes, and has played (with Getz) on the television shows The Mike Douglas Show and The Dick Cavett Show.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jones, Virgil (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, Aug. 26, 1939; d. Indianapolis, Indiana, Apr. 21, 2012). American trumpeter. Jones began studying the trumpet with Russell Brown while attending Crispus Attucks High School. He later performed with Lionel Hampton (1960-63), Johnny "Hammond" Smith (1964), Ray Charles (1967-68), Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1969), Charles Tolliver-Stanley Cowell Orchestra (1971), George Gruntz (1972), Charles Mingus (1972), Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra, Billy Harper (Antibes Festival, 1974), Illinois Jacquet Big Band, and the Archie Shepp Septet.

For much of his career, Jones was a New York studio player and performed in many Broadway show pit orchestras. He recorded one album as leader, Coolin' 'N Groovin' (Lexington), and participated in hundreds of other recordings for labels such as Prestige, RCA, Columbia, Muse, BGP, Vanguard, Black Saint, Trip, Uptown, Mainstream, Impulse, GRP, Coco, Tamia, Buddah, Pablo, Ember, Strata-East, Milestone, Epic, MPS, Soul Note, Riverside, and Original Jazz Classics.

Jones was a fixture of the New York jazz scene for over forty years, and has also performed with the American Jazz Orchestra, Clark Terry (1989), Dizzy Gillespie (1987-88), Joey De Francesco, Joe Henderson, Milt Jackson, Benny Carter, Sonny Stitt, McCoy Tyner, the Smithsonian Masterworks Orchestra, Jimmy Heath, Frank Foster, Barry Harris, Dameronia, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Teddy Edwards, and T.S. Monk.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Joos, Herbert (b. Karlsruhe, Germany, Mar. 21, 1940). German trumpeter and flugelhornist. After studying at Karlsruhe University, Joos became a member of the Karlsruhe Modern Jazz Quintet in the 1960s, and then played with the Baden-Baden Free Jazz Ensemble (1972) and Michael Sell (1977). During the 1970s, he led his own groups and began recording in 1973. He joined the Mike Gibbs Orchestra n 1975 and the Vienna Art Orchestra in 1979, and also recorded with Hans Koller, Wolfgang Dauner, Joe Koinzer, Four Men Only, New Jazz Ensemble, and many others. In 1976, he toured Africa with the New Jazz Ensemble for the Goethe Institute.

Joos was one of the first German trumpet and flugelhorn players to play free jazz, although he is also a fine performer of traditional, contemporary, and experimental jazz, as well as classical music. In 1984, he was awarded the Southwest German Television Jazz Prize. Among his numerous albums are Daybreak (Polygram), Ballade Noire (Free Flow), Herbert Joos / Joe Koinzer Duo (Sesam), The Philosophy of the Flugelhorn (Japo), Herbert Joos Plays Billie Holiday Songs (Emercy), Blow (FMP), Adagio 1 + 2 (Discovery), Cracked Mirrors (ECM), and Nature Way (PAO). Joos is also a gifted artist who creates drawings and paintings of jazz musicians.

Bibl.: Carr, Ian and Digby Fairweather and Brian Priestley. The Rough Guide to Jazz, Third Edition (Penguin); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Herbert Joos's official website: (www.myspace.com/herbertjoos); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jordan, [James] Taft (b. Florence, South Carolina, Feb. 15, 1914; d. New York, New York, Dec. 1,1981). American trumpeter. Jordan grew up in Norfolk, Virginia, and learned to play the alto horn before switching to the trumpet in 1929. He studied music in Philadelphia.

During the early 1930s, Jordan's first performances and recordings were with the Washboard Rhythm Kings (his cousin Dave Riddick was a trumpet player with the group). From 1933 to 1939, he played with Chick Webb where he was often a featured trumpet soloist and occasionally a vocalist. He stayed in the band under the leadership of Ella Fitzgerald (1939-41). Jordan then led an octet at the Savoy Ballroom (1942-43) and became a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra from 1943 to 1947. His best recordings were with Ellington.

After playing with Ellington's band, Jordan freelanced in New York. He worked with Lucille Dixon (1949-53), Sy Oliver, Don Redman (1953), and Benny Goodman (including a European tour in 1958), and co-led a group with trumpeter Dick Vance. He often performed in local studios and sometimes played in pit orchestras for Broadway shows such as Hello, Dolly! In 1963, Jordan played with Ellington's Jazz Society at Town Hall.

In his early career, Jordan was influenced by Louis Armstrong, Roy Eldridge, and Rex Stewart. He led three albums, one each for Mercury (1958), Aamco (late 1950s), and Moodsville (1961).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jordan, Marlon (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Aug. 21, 1970). American trumpeter. Marlon is the seventh and last child of Edward and Edridge Jordan, both prominent New Orleans musi-cians. Marlon played violin, saxophone, and drums before switching to trumpet at age ten. As a child, he was inspired by Wynton Marsalis and Terence Blanchard, both of whom he knew personally. He graduated from the New Orleans Center for the Creative Arts.

At age sixteen, Jordan was soloist with the New Orleans Symphony, performing classical music. At age eighteen, he began recording jazz albums for Columbia, and toured with the Jazz Futures (with Roy Hargrove in 1991). During the past twenty years, Jordan has been a leading performer in New Orleans, and has performed at numerous music festivals around the world. In 1996, he recorded New Orleans Legacy Ensemble with trumpeters Nicholas Payton and Jamil Sharif on the Candid label. When Hurricane Katrina struck New Orleans, Jordan and his girlfriend were trapped on the roof of his house for five days. He managed to save the lives of two neighbors who were caught in a burning building, but fractured both his ankles in the process. He later appeared in a live television broadcast of Jazz at Lincoln Center during a Higher Ground benefit concert.

Jordan's albums include For You Only (Columbia), Learson's Return (Columbia), The Undaunted (Columbia), You Don't Know What Love Is (Louisiana Red Hot), and Marlon's Mode (Arabesque). His brother Kent is a noted flute player (with Wynton Marsalis), and his sister Stephanie is a fine jazz singer.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Marlon Jordon's official website: (www.marlonjordan.com); "Marlon Jordon" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jorgensen, Richard ("Dick") E. (b. c1950). American trumpeter. Jorgensen has been professor of trumpet at Arkansas State University since 1975, and principal trumpet of the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra since 1976. He is a founding member of the Arkansas State University Brass Quintet (faculty), and is also a member of the Arkansas Symphony Brass Quintet and Arkansas Bach Chorus.

Jorgensen spends his summers as concert manager at the Interlochen Arts Festival in Michigan. His hobbies include crossword puzzles.

Bibl:. "Richard E. Jorgen sen" (http://www2.astate.edu/a/fine arts/dept/music/faculty/richard-jorgensen.dot).

Joris, Bert (b. Antwerp, Belgium, Jan. 18, 1957). Belgian trumpeter, composer, and arranger. As a boy, Joris studied classical violin, piano, and string bass, but switched to trumpet at age fourteen. He studied for a while at the Antwerp Conservatory, but left school when he became interested in jazz. In 1978, he was hired by the Belgian Radio and Television Jazz Orchestra under the leadership of Etienne Verschueren, and became one of the group's top jazz soloists, composers, and arrangers until 1987 when he left to tour Europe as a guest soloist with many leading organizations such as the European Broadcasting Union Big Band in Sweden, the big bands of the WDR and NDR, the Metropole Orchestra of Holland, ACT Big Band, Brussels Jazz Orchestra, and the bands of Klaus Weiss, Al Porcino, Peter Herbolzheimer, Joe Haider, Mel Lewis, Benny Bailey, Roman Schwaller, Bart Van Lier, and many others. He has also appeared as a guest soloist with small jazz groups led by Woody Shaw, Sal Nistico, Billy Brooks, Reggie Johnson, Wolfgang Haffner, Rob Van Bavel, Lew Tabackin, Lee Konitz, Charlie Mariano, Jimmy Cobb, Marc Johnson, and Clark Terry (1998).

Joris is renowned not only as a performer, but also as a composer and big band arranger. He has received numerous awards including the 1998 "Belgian Best Trumpeter of the Year" and the 2009 Flemish Culture Prize for Music. He has taught at the Lemmens Institute in Leuven, Belgium, and is currently teaching at the Swiss Jazz School in Bern. He is the founder of his own quintet, and has recorded albums including Bert Joris Quintet Live (Werf), Meeting Colors, and a double-CD titled The Music of Bert Joris (Werf). He has also recorded with such artists as Jean Evans, Bob Porter, Joe Lovano (1987), Tony Bauwens, Jochen Feucht, Enrico Pieranunzi, Wolfgang Haffner, Joe Haider, Klaus Weiss, and the ACT Big Band. In addition to his own quartet, he is currently performing as a member of the Philippe Aerts Quartet, Hendrik Braeckman Group, and the Nathalie Loriers 3 + Bert Joris + String Quartet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bert Joris" (www.jazzinbelgium.com/musician/bert.joris).

Joseph, Charles (b. Paris, France, May 2, 1868; d. prob. Sept. 1, 1918). French cornetist. Joseph attended the Paris Conservatory and won the first prize in trumpet in 1888, playing a solo by Prof. J.H.L. Cerclier (1st accessit in 1885 and second prize in 1886). He studied under Cerclier, and may have also studied with Prevet and Arban. In 1889, he became the principal cornetist in the Musique d'Artillerie de Vincennes, and on January 7, 1891 was named the "piston ripiane" in the Garde Républicaine Band. The French government bestowed the title of Officier d'Academie on him in 1901. Upon the retirement of Jean Lachanaud in 1903, Joseph became the head of the cornets and a frequent soloist until 1918.

As a cornet soloist, Joseph appeared with the Garde Républicaine at the Saint Louis World's Fair in 1904. He also appeared as soloist in Alais (Spain) in 1905 and in London in 1906. He was the soloist with the Fanfare municipale de la ville de Genève in 1906, and also worked at the Tivoli in Paris. He was named an officier d'instruction publique after his London success in 1906, and received further government awards in 1908 and 1912. In 1899-1907, Joseph made many records under his own name.

Bibl.: Pierre, Constant. Le Conservatoire National de musique et de declamation: documents historiques et administratifs (Paris, Imprimerie National); Tarr, Edward H. "European Cornet and Trumpet Soloists" (booklet to CD published by International Trumpet Guild, 2004); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Joseph, Donald ("Don") Frederick (b. Staten Island, New York, 1923). American trumpeter and cornetist. Joseph began his career during the mid 1940s with the bands of Buddy Rich, Alvino Rey, and Lucky Millinder. He freelanced in New York City for several years, sometimes sitting in with jazz sax player Charlie Parker. He played with Dave Schildkraut (1950), toured with Gerry Mulligan's band in 1957, and is featured on an album by guitarist Chuck Wayne called String Fever.

Despite his success as an excellent sideman, Joseph became addicted to drugs to the point where it was thought that he had a self-destructive nature. His health declined during the 1960s, and he dropped out of the New York jazz scene. He taught music for the next two decades, performing only occasionally. However, he made a surprise comeback in 1984 when he released an album as leader, One of a Kind, for Uptown Records. His other album is titled Bebop Is Where It's At. Both of these excellent discs are tribute to an excellent musician who has been underrated due to a somewhat obscure career since the mid 1960s.

Bibl.: Dunton, John. "The Names of the Forgotten" (www.pennilesspress.co.uk); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Jouvin, Georges [Raymond Francis] (b. Rennes, France, June 19, 1923). French trumpeter and bandleader. Jouvin comes from a musical family. He began playing the piano at age ten, and the trumpet at age four guided by his father Stéphane. He attended the Rennes Conservatory of Music (1939-42), receiving prizes in theory and trumpet. He then studied with Eugène Foveau at the National Superior Conservatory in Paris (1942-44). He also studied accordion with the legendary Medard Ferrero.

Jouvin played solo flugelhorn in the army's 2ème Région de l'Armée de l'Air, a band conducted by Roger Fayeulle. Early in his career, Jouvin played in the dance bands of Charlie Blareau, Jo Bouillon (1946, 1953), Maurice Mouflard (1950), Paul Norman (1952-53), Pierre Spiers (1953), Gaston Lapeyronnie, Félix Chardon (1954), Jo Moutet (1954-55, as solo trumpet), Jerry Mengo (as lead trumpet, 1957), Jacques Hélian, Camille Sauvage, Noël Chiboust, Wal-Berg, Guy Luypaerts, Hubert Rostaing, and Michel Legrand. Jouvin put together the most famous trumpet section in Paris from 1945 to 1950, able to play classical, popular, and jazz styles: Robert Fassin (lead), Georges Jouvin, and Yves Lalouette (sometimes Roger Guérin, fourth trumpet and jazz soloist). This section played many gigs of all kinds, along with staying at the Gaumont-Palace for an extended period. Jouvin also backed noted French popular singers such as Tino Rossi, Charles Trenet, and Edith Piaf.

At the beginning of his solo career, Jouvin's style of playing like Harry James quickly made him a very popular soloist, and he soon formed his own band in 1952. Later, under the influence of popular singers, he found his own Bel Canto style on the trumpet, which became immensely popular, and influenced many trumpeters to become professional musicians.

Throughout the 1950s, '60s, and '70s, Jouvin recorded over one hundred solo albums for the EMI, Pathé, and His Master's Voice labels, garnering several gold records. Altogether, he sold over twenty-five million discs, earning him the title "The Man With The Golden Trumpet." His wife Dominique—now deceased—was his band singer from 1957. Jouvin recorded film soundtracks as a soloist, including Le Rouge est mis with Jean Gabin (1957). For decades, he performed over two hundred concerts annually. He also recorded many radio shows and albums under the name Ray Tchicoray.

In 1971-72, Jouvin led the successful Trompettes de Paris with Roger Delmotte and Roger Guérin. Throughout his career, Jouvin wanted to illustrate all of the aspects of the trumpet, from bravoura pieces (Flight of the Bumble Bee, Hora Staccato, etc.) to jazz hits and songs in a crooner-like style.

Since retiring, Jouvin has been very active in many associations and organizations, such as the SACEM (a French professional association that collects and distributes payments of artists' rights). He was named Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1994.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Georges Jouvin" (http://en.wikipedia.org); information from Laplace's personal interview with G.J. on Oct. 19, 2011.

Junek, Václav (b. Kladno, Czech Republic, Apr. 16, 1928). Czech trumpeter. Junek studied in his home city with Václav Pařík from 1952 to 1953, and was engaged as principal trumpet of the Prague Symphony Orchestra from 1957 to 1960. He then became principal of the Czech Philharmonic from 1960 until 1994, and taught at the Prague Conservatory from 1960 to 1983 (becoming full professor in 1963). Among his many students are Jan Hasenöhrl and Miroslav Kejmar. Junek made many records including one of the earliest versions of the Concerto by Arutyunyan [Arutunian] in 1963.

Bibl.: Keim, Freidel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

K

Kaart, Ray [Desire François] ("De") (b. Haarlem, Netherlands, Jan. 13, 1934; d. Haarlem, Netherlands, Jan. 13, 2011). Dutch trumpeter. As a youngster, Kaart taught himself to play the mellophone, bass, piano, and trumpet. He was a career trumpeter, although he also composed works for film and theater. In 1953 at the age of nineteen, he won the soloist's prize in a jazz competition in Alkmaar.

Kaart's career as a Dixieland trumpeter began with groups led by Freddy Hull, John Milestone, and with the Skymasters. From 1962 to 1967, he was with the famous Dutch Swing College Band, which made many recordings and television appearances. He also performed with Ben Webster, Ted Easton, the Storktown Dixie Kids (touring numerous countries), and the Revival Jazz Band. In 1977, he again played with the Dutch Swing College Band.

Kaart died on his seventy-seventh birthday.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kaderabek, Frank [John] (b. Chicago, Illinois, May 24, 1929). American trumpeter. Kaderabek's parents immigrated to the United States from Czechoslovakia in 1921. His father was a butcher. Kaderabek grew up in a suburb of Chicago and began studying the violin and piano; he later started playing the trumpet, and had his first lessons with a local Czech trumpeter from the neighborhood. While attending Cicero High School, he studied with Edward Masacek of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Kaderabek's parents wanted him to learn a trade, so he apprenticed as a tool and die maker during the day, and played in local dance bands at night. His favorite player was Harry James, but he also loved to listen to recordings of Rafael Méndez.

After high school, Kaderabek worked as a tool and die maker, but soon enrolled in the Chicago Musical College (1946). He played in the Civic Orchestra of Chicago for two years and received lessons from Adolph Herseth. When the Korean War broke out in 1950, Kaderabek enlisted in the Academy at West Point, where he served in the West Point Academy Band along with other trumpeters such as Kenneth Schermerhorn, Mel Broiles, and David Zauder. He took lessons in New York City from William Vacchiano, Harry Glantz, and Nathan Prager.

Following military service, Kaderabek won his first orchestral job as principal trumpet of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in 1953, and during the summers also played in the Grant Park Symphony in Chicago. Just before his fifth year in the DSO, he played as an extra with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in a performance of La Mer by Debussy. The CSO's associate principal had difficulty playing the soft passages in the first cornet part, and Maestro Fritz

Reiner fired the player on the spot. Kaderabek was told to audition for Reiner the next morning, and won the position. So in 1958, Kaderabek joined the CSO as associate principal trumpet, and stayed with the orchestra for eight years. However, his desire to play principal trumpet was strong, and he joined the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in 1966, where he served as principal trumpet for nine years. During this time, he also played in Leonard Smith's Detroit Concert Band.

Kaderabek accepted his fourth full-time orchestral job in 1975 as principal trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy. During his twenty years there, he also taught at the Curtis Institute and Temple University. Among his best-known students are Calvin Price, Terry Everson, Richard Carson Steuart, Eric Berlin, John Roschella, and Kevin Cobb.

Trouble occurred in 1980 when Maestro Eduardo Muti became music director and conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Muti wanted to fire several principal players, and Kaderabek was among them. Several of the targeted musicians agreed to leave the orchestra in exchange for certain amounts of money, but Kaderabek felt that he was too young to retire and too old to find another job as principal of a top orchestra. He and his wife Mary had also adopted several Korean children, making it necessary for him to keep his position and salary. The battle between the orchestra and its principal trumpet became very bitter, and the dispute eventually wound up in court. Kaderabek was allowed to keep his position, but was not allowed to play first trumpet parts whenever Muti conducted. Kaderabek resumed playing all first parts when Muti left in 1992.

Kaderabek participated in the Claude Gordon Brass Workshop during the summers of 1982, 1987, and 1992. He has been an active member of the International Trumpet Guild, serving on its Board of Directors for many years, and has presented sessions at numerous annual conferences. In 2004, he received the ITG's Award of Merit for lifetime achievement. He recorded a solo album titled An American Trumpet in Prague (Music Vars, 1992), and was the first American to be invited to serve as a judge for the International Trumpet Competition in Czechoslovakia (1982, 1987, 1992). He was honored by the New York Brass Conference for Scholarships in 1991.

Kaderabek is considered to be a legend among orchestral trumpet players. He is known for his large, sonorous and powerful tone. Although he retired in 1995, he is still active as a guest clinician and private teacher, and served for several years as an adjunct faculty member at West Chester University in Pennsylvania. He enjoys collecting rare books about World War I. He resides on a farm in Berks County, Pennsylvania.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Raschella, John. "A Tribute to Frank Kaderabek: 42 Years of Great Music Making" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1996); "Frank Kaderabek" (www.wcupa.edu); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Kaderabek with Eugene Ormandy.

Kadleck, Tony (b. Binghamton, New York, Nov. 2, 1964). American trumpeter. Kadleck began playing baritone horn and drums as a child, but switched to trumpet at age fourteen; his first teacher was Bernard Shifrin. After graduating from Binghamton High School in 1983, he attended the New England Conservatory, studying with André Côme of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (1983-85), but left school to go on the road with the Buddy Rich Band (1986). He later transferred to the Manhattan School of Music (1986-89) where he studied with Lew Soloff.

Since 1989, Kadleck has had a successful career as a freelance artist, performing in Broadway pit orchestras for Beauty and the Beast, Little Shop of Horrors, Gypsy, Spider-Man, Lennon, The Addams Family, Little Women, and others, and backing celebrities such as Michael Jackson, Elton John, Céline Dion, Stevie Wonder, Ella Fitzgerald, Frankie Valli, Anne Murray, Diana Ross, Tony Bennett, and Harry Connick Jr. He has recorded numerous movie soundtracks, including Meet the Robinsons, Perfect Stranger, and American Gangster, as well as jingles for radio and television commercials. He has also recorded with Dizzy Gillespie, Natalie Cole, Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand, Count Basie, the New York Pops orchestra, and the R&B band, Blood, Sweat & Tears.

Kadleck is currently performing with the orchestras of Maria Schneider, John Pizzarelli, Bob Mintzer, Bob Belden, and John Fedchock. He has released a debut CD titled Extended Outlook. Since 2008, he has been an adjunct faculty member at Montclair State University.

Kadleck is married to Shelagh Abate—a freelance horn player— and has a son, Jack (b. 2002) from a previous marriage. His hobbies include golf.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Tony Kadleck" (www.montclair.edu/Arts/music/faculty/brass.html); Tony Kadleck's official website: www.kadleck.com; personal interview, Aug. 22, 2011.

Kaestner, Klaus (b. Berlin, Germany, Mar. 31, 1937). German trumpeter. As a boy, Kaestner decided to play the trumpet after hearing Harry James perform Hora Staccato in the movie, Bathing Beauty. He played in his school band and took private lessons from Peter Rückert. He became a Dixieland-oriented trumpeter, performing and recording with the Spree City Stompers, Dixieland Messengers (founding member in 1963), the Albert Mangelsdorff Quintet, Jazzlife-Podium (1974-84, Frankfurt), and the Hot Fountain Six (Wiesbaden).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Kafelnikov, Vladimir [Yulyevich] (b. Kerch, Crimea, Russia, Aug. 23, 1951). Russian trumpeter. Kafelnikov began studying with Vitaly A. Gutsal before attending the Kiev Conservatory where he studied with Nikolay Berdiyev from 1970 to 1975. While at the conservatory, he became a member of the onstage band of the Ukrainian National Opera, then assuming duties as the regular principal trumpet from 1975 to 1980. Kafelnikov became principal of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra in 1980, a prestigious position he would hold until 1990 when he moved to France in 1991 to become principal of l'Orchestre National Bordeaux Aquitaine. Kafelnikov was honored by the Soviet Union in 1986 and 1991.

In addition to his orchestral performing in Bordeaux (using the B-flat trumpet exclusively), Kafelnikov teaches at the Belgium Brass Academy. Among his pupils is Michaël Tambour. His brother, Yury Kafelnikov, is also a trumpeter who won first prize in the Republican Competition of Performers in Kiev (1977).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Vladimir Kafelnikov" (www.ibba.be/en/node/209).

Kail, Josef (b. Boži Dar, Bohemia, Mar. 11, 1795; d. Prague, Czech Republic, Jan. 29, 1871). Czech hornist and instrument designer. Kail began his career as a horn player who also experimented with the keyed horn (not to be confused with the keyed bugle). After horn study (1811-17) at the newly founded Prague Conservatory, he played the horn in the orchestras of the Pest Theater (1819-23) and the Vienna court opera (1823-24). An innovator, he worked closely with instrument maker Joseph Felix Riedl (d. 1840) in Vienna to design several early valve brass instruments. They were the inventors of the so-called "Vienna valve," still in use today on some German horns, which utilizes a double-piston design for each valve. Together, they patented this design in 1823 and applied it to trumpets and trombones as well. They also developed what they termed the "wheel valve," which is today called the rotary valve. Their patent on this design is dated 1835, and is their most important contribution to brass playing.

Although his instrument was the horn, Kail became the first professor of valve trumpet and valve trombone at the Prague Conservatory in June 1826. Beginning in 1827, he wrote and commissioned several solo pieces for trumpet and piano (the first ever written for the valve instrument), as well as works for trumpet and orchestra that were also prepared in alternate versions for flugelhorn and valve trombone. The first known solo for valve trumpet is his Variationen für die Trompete in F, which was premiered by his student, Karl Chlum, on March 23, 1827. He also made an arrangement of the second movement of Mozart's Horn Concerto No. 4 (K. 495), transposing it from E-flat to F and calling it Romanze für die Trompete v[on] Mozart. In so doing, Kail added occasional embellishments of his own. These two pieces have recently been recorded on the F alto trumpet by Edward H. Tarr for the Christophorus label. Kail also encouraged other composers to write solos for valve trumpet, including Conservatory director Friedrich Dionys Weber (1771-1842), Conradin Kreutzer (1780-1849), and Johann Wenzel Kalliwoda (1801-1866).

Kail is recognized today for his important valve designs and significant development of trumpet pedagogy during the first half of the nineteenth century. As professor of trumpet and valve trombone at the Prague Conservatory in June of 1826, he was historically the first professor of a brass instrument with valves, preceding Dauverné (Paris Conservatory) by a full seven years. He wrote a method for the trumpet and flugelhorn and composed trios and quartets for brass based on opera motifs. He retired in 1867.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W. W. Norton); Cassone, Gabriele (Eng. trans Tom Dambly). The Trumpet Book (Zecchini Editore); Čížek, Bohuslav. "Josef Kail (1795-1871)," Brass Bulletin 73 (1991), 64-75, and 74 (1991), 24-29; Dudgeon, Ralph T. The Keyed Bugle (Second Edition) (Scarecrow Press); Tarr, Edward H. "The Romantic Trumpet II", Historic Brass Society Journal 6 (1994), 110-215; Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Kallensee, Peter (b. Schönstedt, Germany, Nov. 8, 1934). German trumpeter. Kallensee began studying trumpet with his father, attended the Musikhochschule in Weimar, and studied there with Alfred Kette from 1950 to 1955. He then played with the Loh Orchestra of Sondershausen, State Theater Orchestra in Kassel, Bamberg Symphony Orchestra, State Orchestra of Hanover, and the State Philharmonic Orchestra of Hamburg. He was a member of the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra, and toured with the German Opera of Berlin, Bayerisches Staatsorchester, and the Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio.

A well-known teacher, Kallensee taught for twenty years at the Hamburg Musikhochschule (full professor in 1989), and later became a professor at the Musikhochschule in Lübeck. He was the first teacher of the well-known soloist, Matthias Höfs.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kaminski, Michelle (b. Chicago, Illinois, 1967). American trumpeter. Kaminski attended the University of Illinois where she studied with Michael Ewald and Raymond Sasaki, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1989. She then studied with Leonard Candelaria at the University of North Texas, receiving a master of music degree in 1992.

A successful competitor in numerous international solo competitions, Kaminski won second place in the 1990 Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild International Trumpet Solo Competition, held in Bad Sāckingen, Germany. Other prizes include being a finalist at the 1992 Ellsworth Smith-ITG competition (Tallahassee, Florida), second at the Women's International Brass Conference solo competition in 1993, finalist in the Munich competition in 1993, and first prize at the 1995 Moscow International Trumpet Competition.

Kaminski is also a skilled performer on the Baroque (valveless) trumpet. She is a freelance musician in the Dallas, Texas area, where she is a member of the Dallas Bach Society, Les Petits Violons, and Orchestra of New Spain. Timofei Dokshitser said of her, [Kaminski is] a true master of the instrument. Likewise, Edward Tarr commented after her win in Moscow, A great player...a charming stage presence.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Michelle Kaminski Master Class" (http://fac.hsu.edu/bucknej/Trumpet%20Faculty/Guest%20Artists/Michelle_Kaminski.htm).

Kaminsky, Max (b. Brockton, Massachusetts, Sept. 7, 1908; d. Castle Point, New York, Sept. 6, 1994). American trumpeter. At the age of twelve, Kaminsky led a kid's band in Boston called the Six Novelty Syncopators. He turned professional during his teen years when he joined Art Karle's group. He got advice from Bix Beiderbecke in 1926, and moved to Chicago in 1927 where he played with guitarist Eddie Condon. His musical relationship with Condon lasted his entire life.

In Chicago, Kaminsky also played with George Wettling (1928), Bud Freeman, Frank Teschemacher, Jess Stacy, and others. In

New York, he took lessons with Max Schlossberg (1928). In 1929, he played in New England with Red Nichols and joined Leo Reisman's society orchestra in New York (1931-33). There, he recorded with Benny Carter, Eddie Condon, and Mezz Mezzrow. He played with Joe Venuti (1934), Ted Roy (1935), and later with Tommy Dorsey and the Clambake Seven (1935-36). Kaminsky's style of playing was patterned after that of King Oliver, Freddie Keppard, and the great Louis Armstrong.

Although mostly a small group player, Kaminsky worked with several big bands during the Depression, including those of Jack Jenny, Benny Goodman (1937), and Artie Shaw (1938). He also played Dixieland music with Eddie Condon, Lee Wiley, and Bud Freeman's Summa Cum Laude Band (1935-40). During the 1940s, he returned to the big bands, including those of Tony Pastor (1940-41), Artie Shaw (1941-42), Alvino Ray, and Joe Marsala. Kaminsky joined the Navy in 1943, and spent two years playing with Artie Shaw's band, entertaining troops in the South Pacific.

After the service, Kaminsky became a star soloist in Condon's band during its concerts at Carnegie Hall and Town Hall (1944-45). In 1944, he recorded as leader for the Commodore label. He then played with Sidney Bechet, Georg Brunis, Condon, Art Hodes, Joe Marsala, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Jack Teagarden. In addition, Kaminsky led his own Dixieland group. He worked in television during the 1950s, and appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival (1964) and the New York World's Fair. Kaminsky also played with Zutty Singleton (1966), Maxine Sullivan (1967), and Roswell Rudd at Your Father's Moustache in Greenwich Village (April 1971). He toured Europe, playing with Maxim Saury (Paris television, November 1971), and George Chisholm in London.

During the 1960s and '70s, Kaminsky performed at Ryan's in New York. He wrote his autobiography, Jazz Band: My Life in Jazz (Da Capo Press) in 1963. He recorded many records for labels such as MGM (1953), Victor (1954), Jazztone (1954), MK (1955), Westminister (1960), United Artists (1963), Fat Cat's Jazz (1974-75), and Chiaroscuro (1977). His best albums include Tea for Two (Fat Cat's Jazz) and When Summer Is Gone (Chiaroscuro).

Max Kaminsky died of a stroke at the age of eighty-five, survived by his wife Virginia and their two sons, Sam and Matthew.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Watrous, Peter. "Max Kaminsky, 85, A Jazz Trumpeter With Top Bands" (The New York Times, Sept. 8, 1994). Yanow, Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kanstul, Zigmant ("Zig") J. (b. Minneapolis, Minnesota, May, 1929). American manufacturer. Zig Kanstul was raised in St. Paul and Red Wing, Minnesota. He comes from a musical family, and began playing the drums while in junior high school. Throughout his high school years, he played with several touring dance bands. After graduating from Red Wing High School in 1947, he joined the military where he played with the 745th Air Force Band (1947-50).

After discharge from the service, Kanstul took a job as an instrument repairman at Knight-McGraw Music in Salina, Kansas. He also majored in music at Bethany College. Wanting to learn more about brass instrument design and construction, he spent the summer of 1953 at the F.E. Olds & Sons factory in Fullerton, California, but ended up working there for eighteen years. He eventually became superintendent of research and design, learning all he could about brass instruments from the plant supervisor, Foster Reynolds. During the 1960s, Kanstul was the first to design bell-front marching brass instruments. Kanstul said that the most difficult (and amusing) trumpet repair job he had was when Olds artist Rafael Méndez brought in three trumpets that were badly damaged from having been stuffed into one case so that he could use the other cases to bring home several bottles of wine from Spain.

Kanstul left Olds in 1971 to become manager of the Benge Company, a trumpet manufacturer in Los Angeles. When Benge was purchased by King Musical Instruments, Kanstul became vice president of King and head of the Benge division. He was asked to leave King when he openly disapproved of the president's financial growth policies. In 1979, he took a position as vice president of the C.G. Conn Corporation.

As Kanstul predicted, King eventually suffered huge financial losses and was forced to downsize its operation, moving the plant to Cleveland and letting about eighty skilled factory workers go. Some of the plant's machinery was sold, and Kanstul seized the opportunity to purchase the equipment and hire several workers to form Kanstul Musical Instrument Company in 1981 in Anaheim, California. Being a wise businessman, Kanstul had made an agreement with Boosey & Hawkes to build a re-creation of the older Besson B-flat trumpet prior to forming his own company.

Today, Kanstul Musical Instruments produces over ninety different models of brass instruments, and employs over eighty workers. Kanstul married Jacqueline ("Jackie") Spreckler (now deceased), and their sons Jack, Zig Jr., and Mark have been involved with the company at different times and in different capacities. Jack, born on May 20, 1952, is a trumpet and flugelhorn player and former manager of Kanstul Music, Inc. (1994-96).

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Zig Kanstul talks to Philip Biggs" (The Brass Herald, Aug. 2010); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "From the Largest to the Smallest, Kanstul Can Build Them All" (The Music Trades, Nov. 2003); "Zigmant Kanstul" (www.hihorns.com).

Karon, Robert ("Bob") Allen (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Nov. 8, 1949). American trumpeter. Karon grew up in New Orleans, but moved to Minneapolis for a year before moving to Tustin, California. He began playing trumpet at age eight, studying with Jerry St. Amand (New Orleans), Stephen Chenette (Minneapolis), and Harold "Pappy" Mitchell (Tustin). After graduating from Foothill High School in Tustin in 1967, he attended the University of California-Los Angeles (1967-71), studying with Robert DiVall and earning a bachelor of music degree. He attended the Music Academy of the West festival during the summer of 1970. He also took lessons from Irving Bush before studying with William Vacchiano at The Juilliard School in New York City (1971-73). Additionally, he studied with Arnold Jacobs in Chicago, Mel Broiles and Vincent Penzarella in New York, and Thomas Stevens in Los Angeles.

Karon's performing experience is extensive: American Youth Orchestra (1969-71), Los Angeles Philharmonic (extra, 1971 to present), Maracaibo Symphony Orchestra (principal trumpet, 1973-76), Radio City Music Hall (1977-78), Metropolitan Opera Orchestra (extra, 1977-78), Grand Teton Festival Orchestra (1980), Mexico City Philharmonic (1978-80), Sacramento Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1981-82), Sacramento Chamber Orchestra (principal, 1981-82), Long Beach Municipal Band (1983-85), California Brass Ensemble (1983-2000), Master Symphony Orchestra (associate principal, 1982-85), Pasadena Chamber Orchestra (principal, 1983-86), Santa Barbara Symphony (1982-87), Los Angeles Brass Quintet (1984-94), Joffrey Ballet, LA Opera, Opera Pacific, and the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra (1990-95). He has been a leading freelance and studio musician since 1982, recording soundtracks for films such as The Babe, Hello Dolly, Look Who's Talking Too, Meteor Man (trum-pet solo), Problem Child II, Real Genius, Throw Mama from the Train, Metal Storm, Stay Tuned, Stewardess School, That's Entertainment III, I Love Trouble, The Babysitters Club, Under Siege: Dark Territory, and The Ernest Green Story (solo trumpet). Television credits include Jag and Star Trek.

Karon has toured with Englebert Humperdinck, Tom Jones, Emerson Lake and Palmer, and several symphony orchestras, and has appeared as a soloist with numerous bands and orchestras, in addition to recording chamber works with Anthony Plog, Arturo Sandoval, Wayne Bergeron, David Hickman, Jens Lindemann, James Wilt, Doc Severinsen, and others.

As a teacher, Karon has taught at the University of the Pacific (1981-82), Yamaha Music Education Center (1982-85), University of California-Santa Barbara (1985-90), The R.D. Colburn School (1984-2002), Pomona College (1987-2000), Occidental College (1987-2000), and the University of California-Los Angeles (1996-2001). He hosted the 1989 International Trumpet Guild Conference at UC-Santa Barbara.

Karon and Jeanie Karon have been married since 1982, and have a son, Benjamin Mel Karon (b. 1983). Bob is also an amateur ham radio operator, and received a letter of commendation from the US Coast Guard after he intercepted a distress call in 1996 from a small ship that had run aground 150 nautical miles southwest of Jamaica; he communicated with the distressed ship and the Coast Guard in Miami, helping to save four lives.

Bibl.: Cardenas, José. "HERO: Ham Radio Operator Recognized for Rescue" (Los Angeles Times, Apr. 4, 1996); personal interview, July 25, 2011.

Karparov, Petar Angelov (b. Bata, Pazardžik, Bulgaria, Mar. 11, 1920; d. Sofia, Bulgaria, Mar. 27, 2013). Bulgarian trumpeter. Karparov began playing trumpet at age fourteen in a military band. In 1948, he studied with Atanas Gardev at the State Music Academy in Sofia, and from 1949 to 1950 studied with Jaroslav Kolář in Prague, Czech Republic.

Karparov was principal trumpet of the Sofia National Opera-Ballet Orchestra and was an active soloist. He was professor of trumpet at the State Music Academy in Sofia from 1950 to 1987, and is considered the founder of the Bulgarian trumpet school. He has authored numerous methods and etudes for trumpet. His many awards include an honorary doctorate from the State Music Academy in Sofia.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Karpilovsky, Murray (b. New York, New York, May 12, 1915; d. Mar. 12, 1996). American trumpeter. It is surprising that more is not known about Murray Karpilovsky, one of the finest orchestral trumpeters in New York City during the 1940s and '50s. Murray's parents, David and Ray Karpilovsky, were both from Kiev, Russia. His father was a prominent clarinet player and teacher. As a young man, Murray studied with Sol Klass, Saul Caston, and Max Schlossberg as well as cellist János Starker to instill musicianship. He played with the Ballet-Russe de Monte-Carlo (1937). He was then principal of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra from 1938 to 1942. After his tenure with the Pittsburgh Symphony he enlisted in the Army (WWII) and played many cornet solos to entertain audiences during prize fights in the Army. He played in the Jewish Theaters in New York, the circus, and many Radio Shows. He also played solo cornet in Paul Lavalle's Band of America which included some of the best trumpeters in New York, including Ray Crisara, James Burke, and Carl Poole. One of his good friends was Izzy Blank who was Principal Trumpet with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. For many years, Murray was Principal Trumpet with the Symphony of the Air (formerly the NBC Symphony Orchestra) under the baton of Arturo Toscanini. He recorded with Xavier Cugat (1959-60) and with Roger Voisin (1963).

Karpilovsky taught many of today's leading trumpeters. Several of Murray's prominent students were Norton Krasnoff and Paul Oman who both held the position of principal trumpet with the Houston Symphony, and Gary Goren who played with Murray in the Symphony of the Air and in many other groups in New York during the 1950s and early 60s. Karpilovsky was known for his great sound, unmatched power and endurance, a hard-nosed teaching style, and "take no prisoners" loud playing ability.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Hood, Al. "What a Wonderful World! Reflections of Ron Modell" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2005); http://www.trumpetherald.com/forum/viewtopic.php?t=35040&start=7.

Kasper, Max ("Macky") (b. Breslau, Germany, Feb. 17, 1922; d. Berlin, W. Germany, Apr. 4, 1968). German trumpeter. Kasper was a popular dance band trumpeter and soloist during World War II and the postwar era in Germany. He also performed on tenor sax (before 1941). As a trumpeter, he played in a style similar to that of the great Harry James, and was a prominent member of the bands of Heinz Sandberg, Hans Georg Schütz (1942-43), Radio Berlin Dance Orchestra (1946-47), Willi Stanke (Berlin, 1947-48), and Walter Dobschinski (1947-48, 1952, 1954). He played with Werner Müller's RIAS dance orchestra (1949-53, first chair), Lionel Hampton, Heinz Burzynski, Benny de Weille, Lutz Templin, and Paul Kuhn. He was also a studio performer who was featured in the soundtrack for the film, The Streets of Rio (original German title: Die Straße nach Rio).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Tom; Oct. 2008).

Katzman, Lee (b. Chicago, Illinois, May 17, 1928). Katzman began playing the trumpet at age thirteen, and at eighteen joined Sam Donahue's big band (1947). He soon played with Buddy Rich (1948), Claude Thornhill (1949 and 1951), and Jimmy Dorsey (1949). He recorded in New York with Herbie Fields, and did freelance work there before moving to southern California around 1955.

Katzman's mellow tones were heard with the bands of Stan Kenton (1956-58), Les Brown (1958), Terry Gibbs (1959), Med Flory, Pepper Adams, Bill Holman-Mel Lewis quintet, Anita O'Day, Jimmie Rowles, Sonny Stitt, June Christy, Shelly Manne (1965), and Les McCann. He also worked in the Hollywood studios, appearing on over seventy-five recordings, and led his own albums during the early 1980s.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kawasaki, Kenzo (b. Toyama, Japan, 1948). Japanese instrument designer. Kawasaki began playing trumpet at age eleven. One day, he accidently dropped his trumpet, and fearful that his parents would punish him, he smoothed out the dents in the bell with a drumstick. Noticing that the trumpet's tone had changed after the repair, he became fascinated with trumpet design and modifications.

After graduating from high school at age eighteen, Kawasaki joined the musical instrument division of Yamaha of Japan, where he worked as an apprentice brass maker. He studied the designs of Renold Schilke, and from 1966 to 1970 began experimenting with new designs of bells and leadpipes. When Schilke was hired as a design consultant for Yamaha in 1966, he invited Kawasaki (with the blessing of Yamaha) to move to Chicago and work with him at Schilke Music Products, Inc. After almost a year of intensive apprenticeship, Kawasaki moved back to Japan in 1972 to help design a new line of professional trumpets. From 1977 to 1983, he was primarily involved with setting up the Atelier Tokyo custom pro shops around the world. In 1983, he moved to the city of Hamamatsu to launch the development of the second generation of custom instruments. Working closely at Yamaha with Hiroo Okabe, Kawasaki has been a key figure in the growth of Yamaha brass instruments. He has established important working relationships with such trumpet consultants as the Canadian Brass, Thomas Gansch, Bobby Shew, Allen Vizzutti, Armando Ghitalla, John Hagstrom, and Chris Martin.

Bibl.: Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "40 Years of Brass—Yamaha" (Brass Bulletin, No. 108, Apr. 1999).

Kazebier, Nathan ("Nate") Forest (b. Lawrence, Kansas, Aug. 13, 1912; d. Reno, Nevada, Oct. 22, 1969). American trumpeter. Kazebier grew up in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He began playing trumpet at age nine; his first experiences were in Midwestern territorial bands and groups led by Austin Wylie, Jan Garber, and Slatz Randall. He was a member of the Benny Goodman Orchestra (1935-36), and then moved to California where he played with Ray Noble, Seger Ellis, Spud Murphy, and others. He was a member of Gene Krupa's first big band (1939-40), the Jimmy Dorsey Band (1940-43), and returned to the Goodman band (1946-47), after having served in the military during World War II. From the late 1940s through the 1960s, he worked as a studio player in the Los Angeles area.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nate Kazebier" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nate_Kazebier).

Keat, James (b. London, England, May 7, 1813; d. Winchester, New Hampshire, Mar. 17, 1845). English maker. It is not known exactly when Keat emigrated to America, but he arrived as an experienced brass instrument maker who had apprenticed under his father, Samuel Keat, a famous English brass instrument manufacturer. James Keat began working for Graves & Company in Winchester, New Hampshire, during the mid 1830s. He brought with him the latest designs in keyed bugle construction, and influenced Graves to specialize in brass instruments. There is no doubt that Keat was the leading keyed bugle designer for Graves. Rather than produce instruments quickly for the masses, Graves & Company built carefully handmade instruments for the professional artist. Thus, their reputation as a top maker kept demand for the instruments high. Instruments personally built by Keat were labeled "J. Keat for Graves & Co. Winchester NH," indicating Keat's special position in the firm.

In 1837, Keat established his own company and opened a shop next to Graves. Keat and Graves kept a close relationship, and were good friends. Keat sold his company to Graves in 1942, and died three years later at the age of thirty-one. The circumstances of his early death are unknown.

Bibl.: Dudgeon, Ralph T. The Keyed Bugle (Second Edition) (Scarecrow Press); "Graves & Co." (www.ulgheri.it).

Keberle, Daniel Craig (b. Wausau, Wisconsin, Oct. 6, 1955). American trumpeter. Keberle attended Wausau East High School and was principal trumpet of the World Youth Orchestra at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Michigan, during the summers of 1972 and 1973. After graduating, he studied with William Adam at Indiana University, receiving his bachelor of music degree in 1978, and a master of music degree in 1980.

Keberle began his teaching career in 1980 when he accepted a four-year position at Northeast Missouri State University where he taught trumpet, jazz band, jazz history, and theory. From 1984 to 1986, he taught at California State University in Chico, and from 1986 to 1988 served as a graduate teaching assistant under Regents' Professor David Hickman at Arizona State University. He completed his DMA in trumpet at ASU in 1988, and joined the faculty at Whitworth College in Spokane, Washington, during the fall of that same year. In 1990, he received the Whitworth Outstanding Faculty Service Award.

Keberle has occasionally performed with The Phoenix Symphony and the Spokane Symphony Orchestra. He was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship in 1995 that allowed him to teach in Cape Town, South Africa, for five months.

Keberle has published dozens of big band charts through the University of Northern Colorado Jazz Press and other publishers. His hobbies include fishing, water skiing, and gardening.

Bibl.: Keberle, Daniel Craig. The Use of the Trumpet in the Music of Robert Erickson (unpublished diss., Arizona State University, 1998); "Daniel Keberle" (www.whitworth.edu); Daniel Keberle's official website: http://dankeberle.com.

Kejmar, Miroslav (b. Kladno, Czechoslovakia, July 3, 1941). Czech trumpeter. Kejmar began his music studies on violin at the age of seven, and at age ten began playing the trumpet. He played both instruments until age fourteen, when he entered the Army music school at Liberec as a trumpeter. There, he studied with Frantisek Jesek from 1955 to 1958. After graduating, Kejmar served in an army band in the town of Sumova, near the German border. He was inspired by radio broadcasts from Germany that featured American jazz trumpeters such as Louis Armstrong, Clark Terry, Miles Davis, Cat Anderson, and Chet Baker.

After military service, Kejmar moved to Prague and began to prepare for an entrance audition at the Prague Conservatory. He took private lessons for two years from Václav Parik, and was accepted into the conservatory where he studied for four years with Václav Junek. He then advanced to the Prague Music Academy where he again studied with professor Parik. After only two years there, he won a position as utility trumpet with the Czech Philharmonic (age twenty-six). Three years later, he was made principal, and was simultaneously allowed to complete his Academy studies for two more years.

Kejmar has recorded fifteen albums as a soloist, performing mostly Baroque and Classical repertoire for trumpet; he received valuable advice on piccolo trumpet playing from Adolf Scherbaum. Now retired from the orchestra, Kejmar teaches at the Prague Conservatory, and has served as a judge for the Prague Spring International Trumpet Competition. His son John is also a trumpet player.

Bibl.: Kaderabek, Frank. "Against All Odds: An Interview with Miroslav Kejmar" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2005); Keim, Freidel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Kelley, Rich (b. date unknown). American trumpeter. Kelley (often misspelled as Kelly) grew up in Boston. At age sixteen he was selected to perform as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. He attended The Juilliard School in New York City, and also taught in its Music Advancement Program. He became a versatile and dependable freelance musician, playing on occasion with the Philharmonic Virtuosi, New York Trumpet Ensemble, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, Brooklyn Philharmonic, New York Pops, and many other leading ensembles. He also served as principal trumpet of the Queens Symphony Orchestra. He worked in various New York studios, backing such artists as Vanessa Williams, Jennifer Aniston, Ray Charles, James Taylor, Nancy Wilson, Glenn Close, and Danny Aiello. He also played in Broadway pit orchestras for many shows including Cats, Crazy for You, Kiss of the Spider Woman, Les Misérables, The Secret Garden, Will Rogers Follies, and Show Boat.

Kelley returned to Boston and began working with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston Pops, Boston Philharmonic, Boston Classical Orchestra, and Boston Trumpet Ensemble. He toured with the Boston Brass for ten years and upon leaving the group, was replaced by José Sibaja. He continues to be a leading freelance artist in the Boston area.

Bibl.: "Rich Kelley" (http://www.musicmanage.com/artists/Rich_Kelley).

Kellso, Jon-Erik (b. Dearborn, Michigan, May 8, 1964). American trumpeter. Kellso began playing the trumpet at age ten under the guidance of his father, an amateur trumpet player. He enjoyed listening to his father's recordings of Louis Armstrong, Harry James, and Bunny Berigan. He also took lessons with Gordon Smith, Simon Austin, and Gordon Stomp. Kellso began gigging in seventh grade, and, by age fifteen, was working in Detroit after being taken under the wings of Marcus Belgrave and Tom Saunders. At age thirteen, Kellso was a member of the International Youth Symphony Orchestra (1977-79), and later played in the Allen Park Symphony Orchestra (1981-82) and Michigan Youth Orchestra (1980-82). From 1980 to 1983, he studied with Jack Pierson at Henry Ford Community College, and from 1982 to 1988 attended Wayne State University under Matt Michaels.

Kellso's main career started when he joined the New McKinney's Cotton Pickers, J.C. Heard's orchestra (1987-89, one concert backing Dizzy Gillespie), and James Dapogny's Chicago Jazz Band. He moved to New York City in 1989, and began working with Vince Giordano's Nighthawks. Although he still performs with Dapogny and Giordano, Kellso has also performed or recorded with Dan Barrett, Ralph Sutton (1997-79), Bob Haggart, The Flying Neutrinos, Peggy Come, Dick Hyman, Kenny Davern, Ruby Braff (recording two CDs with him), Bob Wilber, Rick Fay, Howard Alden, Harry Allen, Marty Grosz, Dan Lewisch, Doug Finke's Independence Hall Jazz Band, The Magnificent Seven, Stanley's Washboard Kings, The Back Bay Ramblers, Milt Hinton (1993), Judy Carmichael, The World's Greatest Jazz Band, and others. Kellso is also a current member of the Brock Mumford band, David Ostwald's Louis Armstrong Centennial Band (aka Gully Low Jazz Band), and the Manhattan Ragtime Orchestra.

Jon Kellso has performed extensively throughout the world and has appeared at dozens of international jazz festivals. More recently, he played with Duke Heitger in New Orleans, with Catherine Russell, and at the JazzAscona Festival with the Attilio Troiano International Big Band. He has appeared on over thirty albums, and has released three CDs as leader for Arbors Records. He can be heard on several movie soundtracks including The Aviator, Ghost World, The Good Shepherd, and Revolutionary Road.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Jon Kellso's official website (www.kellsojazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kelly, Adrian (b. Burnley, Lancashire, England, Feb. 19, 1974). British-born Australian trumpeter and composer. Kelly began studying the cornet at age six with Frank Waddington, and switched to trumpet at age nine when he and his family moved to Perth, Western Australia in 1983. His teachers there were Les Pearce, Geoffrey Lowe, and Andrew Evans. While earning a bachelor of music (jazz) degree at the Western Australian Academy of Performing Arts (1995), he studied with Andrew Evans and Kevin Johnson, jazz trumpet with Patrick Crichton, and composition with Graeme Lyall. He also studied classical composition with Lindsay Vickery and Nigel Sabin in 1998.

Kelly founded three improvisational music groups: Pantheon, The Collective, and The Adrian Kelly Quartet that showcase many of his compositions and arrangements. He has performed with Ray Charles, Wayne Newton, The Manhattan Transfer, James Morrison, Olivia Newton-John, Tim Rice, Jacky Cheung, and many others. He has an extensive career playing Broadway shows, film and television music, and with several Australian big bands including Hip Mo' Toast, the Perth Jazz Orchestra, and the One For All Big Band. A highly versatile performer, Kelly has also acted as principal trumpet of the West Australian Philharmonic, Perth Pops Orchestra, West Australian Symphony Orchestra, and is currently principal of the City Chamber Orchestra of Hong Kong. He is also a founding member of the Q Brass Quintet.

Kelly has released solo albums titled Intercontinental Drift and Chinese Whispers (both self-released), and is currently touring with the Jacky Cheung ½ Century Tour. He has taught at Wesley College (1991-2000), the Western Australian Academy of Performing Arts (1998-2010), Santa Maria College (2000-09), Iona Presentation College (2004-09), and Hale School (2009-10). He was the winner of the Western Australian Music Industry "Song of the Year" award in 2007.

Kelly's hobbies include riding road motorcycles, and following Formula 1 and MotoGP motorsports.

Bibl.: Adrian Kelly's official website: www.adriankelly.com; personal interview, Aug. 22, 2011.

Kendall, Edward ("Ned") (b. Newport, Rhode Island, Mar. 20, 1808; d. Boston, Massachusetts, Oct. 26, 1861). American keyed bugler. Kendall was the greatest keyed bugle soloist of all time, reaching celebrity status as a soloist on the E-flat keyed bugle.

In his teens, he joined the army at Fort Adams as a fifer and drummer. He began playing the keyed bugle and practised incessantly, even being chastised once by a policeman who regarded his playing on the streets at night as too noisy. His first public solo performance was in 1830.

After military service, Kendall became leader and soloist of the Waring, Tufts & Company Circus band in 1834, and the Palmer Circus band in 1835. In the latter year, at the age of twenty-seven, he directed the Boston Brass Band and continued with it for four or five years. His reputation as a soloist grew, and he was often called the "Paul Bunyan of New England" because of his height, handsomeness, and large black moustache. His playing was formidable, his technique unequaled, and his endurance and range seemingly limitless. Stories about his playing reached mythical proportions.

Kendall's favorite solo was Wood Up Quickstep by J. Holloway. Other favorites were Money Musk, The Wrecker's Daughter, and Winslow Blues. He performed Wood Up thousands of times, sometimes twice in one concert. A reporter wrote: Ned played it and it took like wild-fire! It was sometimes the case that a rival player would be brought into contest with Ned for first honors, but the goose always went home plucked.

Kendall gave up his post with the Boston Brass Band around 1839 in order to travel as soloist with various musical organizations in New England. During the 1840s, he formed a concert company with his brother James, and a celebrated singer named Miss Anna Stone. They performed in all of the major cities in the East, but disbanded when Miss Stone retired from singing in order to get married.

Kendall and the Hall brothers, Randolph and D.C., formed a music troupe that toured with Spaulding's Circus. Here, Kendall earned a great deal of money—a weekly salary five times that of a skilled carpenter. He continued soloing with various circuses until he traveled to London in 1850. There, he was surprised and pleased that his reputation as the world's leading keyed bugle player had preceded him, but he was humbled by solo performances he heard on the valve cornet. He returned to America early, and resumed concertizing with circus bands.

In 1856, Kendall played in a famous contest with Patrick Gilmore, who at the time was a relatively unknown cornetist, conductor, and director of the Salem Brass Band. Always the showman, Gilmore staged the contest knowing that Kendall would draw a huge crowd. He advertised that the duel would include Kendall's warhorse, the Wood Up Quickstep. The contest is chronicled in detail by Harry Schwartz in his book Bands of America, and depicts the contest as ending in a draw. Although each soloist played equally well, the fact that a somewhat unknown cornetist and bandleader in his late twenties could equal the world's greatest keyed bugle soloist in his prime, spelled pending disaster for the keyed bugle as the instrument of choice.

Ned Kendall's last solo appearances were in 1858 with Nixon's Great American Circus and Kemp's Mammoth English Circus. He had contracted tuberculosis at about the time of the great contest with Gilmore, and his health was beginning to decline. Alcoholism may have contributed to his death in 1861. The Boston Brass Band performed at his funeral, and during the band's first number, E.H. Weston walked up, took a silver bugle from its case, placed it on the coffin and said, "Whose strains had entranced millions." Kendall is buried in Boston's Old Forest Cemetery. His gravestone is a large monument measuring four feet square at the base and tapering to a point fifteen feet high. A bugle is depicted and the inscription reads;

> As a musician he had few superiors; as a performer on his favorite instrument, the Bugle, he had no equal. He was a kind husband, an indulgent father, a faithful friend, ever ready to respond promptly to the call of charity, and to freely exercise his great talent in the cause of suffering humanity. To perpetuate the memory of one who did so much to elevate the profession which he himself adored, THIS MONUMENT procured by the voluntary contribution of those who admired his genius as an artist, was erected by a few of his personal friends, who knew and appreciated him, not only as an artist, but as a man.

A presentation keyed bugle in E-flat made by Sibley and given to Kendall by the Boston Brass Band is now in the musical instrument collection of the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.

Bibl.: Dudgeon, Ralph T. The Keyed Bugle (Second Edition) (Scarecrow Press); Eliason, Robert E. Keyed Bugles in the United States (Smithsonian Institution Press).

Keneke, [Koenicke, Koenecke, or Kenecke] Emil (b. Magdeburg, Germany, Apr. 7, 1866; d. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Aug. 11, 1930). American cornetist and trumpeter. Keneke attended the Leipzig Conservatory where he studied cornet and trumpet. For four years he was solo cornet of the Potsdam Hussar Guards, for two years in the Coblenz Field Artillery, finally two years as principal trumpet and solo cornet in the Warsaw Symphony Orchestra. He was particularly adept at switching between cornet and trumpet.

He immigrated to the United States in 1892, and played in various bands and orchestras in New York and Boston. At the turn of the century, he worked for several recording companies as a staff musician. He was featured in numerous solo selections and was a member of the Victor Brass Quartet consisting of himself, Herbert Clarke, Arthur Pryor, and the bass trombone player of the Philadelphia Orchestra. From 1913, he worked almost exclusively for the Victor Company, participating in recordings by all of the finest soloists of the time including the famous soprano, Nellie Melba, and the great tenor, Enrico Caruso. Keneke was particularly skilled playing oratorios, and recorded "The Trumpet Shall Sound" from Handel's Messiah, and "Sound the Alarm" from Handel's Judas Maccabaeus (1906).

Keneke was assistant to Clarke in Sousa's band in 1909, and replaced Clarke a few times in 1912 and 1913. He was first chair in the bands of Innes, Pryor (1907-11), and Stewart, and recorded duets with Pryor and Clarke for the Victor label.

Trumpet and cornet solos recorded by Keneke include *Day by Day, Flora Waltz, Hosana, "*Inflammatus" from Rossini's Stabat Mater, Killarney, Love Me and the World is Mine, Pretty Peggy, Silver Threads among the Gold, The Holy City, and his own Remembrances of Prague.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2006); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, (Schott).

Kennel, Hans (b. Schwyz, Switzerland, Apr. 20, 1939). Swiss trumpeter, flugelhornist, and Alpine horn player. Kennel began playing in local brass bands before attending music conservatories in Fribourg and Zurich. While in college, he played with Bruno Spoerri's band and with Oscar Pettiford. He was considered to be the leading bop trumpeter in Switzerland during the early 1960s, and from 1962 to 1969 played throughout Europe with Kenny Clarke, Mal Waldron, Albert Mangelsdroff, Waldi Heidepriem, Abdullah Ibrahim, George Gruntz (1965), Remo Rau, Irène Schweizer, Alex Bally, and Pierre Favre. In the early 1970s, he and Spoerri formed the Jazz Rock Experience. In the late 1970s, he worked with Klaus Koenig, Paul Hague, and Peter Schmidlin. He formed the group, Jazz Community, in 1977, and in 1982 he and Jürg Solothurnmann formed the Alpine Jazz Herd.

He has also played or recorded with Carla Bley, Habariagani, and Steve Lacy.

Since 1990, Kennel has been performing with his alphorn quartet, Mytha, and his septet, Alpine Experience, which appeared at the 1999 Montreux Jazz Festival. He composes film music, and in 1998 was honored with the Central Swiss Cultural Prize for his pioneering and committed engagement with elements of Alpine music in the Swiss border areas, from folk to jazz and classical.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Mytha: Regina Steiner, Hans Kennel (front right), Marcel Huonder, Philipp Powell

Kent, George ("Bunky") (b. Westerly, Rhode Island, Dec. 18 or 19, 1936). American trumpeter, organist, choir director. Kent grew up in Stonington, Connecticut, and as a child played the piano. He began playing the trumpet in third grade because his dentist told him that playing the instrument could fix his buckteeth. He earned a bachelor of music education degree at the University of Rhode Island before enrolling at the New England Conservatory where he received a master of music degree in organ. While in Boston, he studied trumpet with Roger Voisin.

During the early 1960s, Kent taught at Rhode Island College. In 1959, he established the Choir of Westerly, an ensemble he still directs. Since 1968, he has been on the music faculty of the University of Rhode Island, teaching trumpet, organ, harpsichord, and music history. He is perhaps best known for his organ playing on numerous recordings and tours with trumpeter Edward Tarr.

Kent was named an honorary member of the Royal Society of the Arts in England (1988), and received an Honorary Doctorate from the General Theological Seminary in New York City (1996). Other awards include Award of Excellence from the South County Center of the Arts (1998), Lifetime Achievement Award from Choral Arts New England (1999), and being deemed a "History Maker" by the Rhode Island Historical Society (2000). Kent lives in Charlestown, Rhode Island, and is the organist at Christ Episcopal Church in Westerly.

Bibl.: Chrupcala, Frank. "From Dental Advice to Musical Fame: George Kent of the University of Rhode Island" (www.uri.edu/artscl/jor/kent.pdf); "George Kent" (www.uri.edu/artscl/mus/Faculty_Staff/faculty_staff.html).

Kent, Timothy J. (b. Ossineke, Michigan, May 22, 1949). American trumpeter. At age ten, Kent began learning to play the trumpet from his father, George Kent, an amateur musician. He developed an interest in jazz and swing music, and as a teenager, formed his own combo that played at many gig bars, dances, and other functions. He was greatly influenced by LP trumpet recordings of Rafael Méndez, Doc Severinsen, Al Hirt, Harry James, and Maynard Ferguson.

Kent received a full scholarship to the University of Michigan, where he worked towards a bachelor of music education degree, studying with Clifford Lillya. It was during his freshman year in 1967 that he was first introduced to classical music—a live concert performed by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. When he met Adolph Herseth, principal trumpet of the CSO, his career immediately took a different direction. He began commuting to Chicago for lessons with Herseth, and left school in 1970 to join the Civic Orchestra of Chicago for the next two years. It was at this time that he married his high school sweetheart Doree (Dorothy) Minton, then a student at Michigan State University. (She is now a family therapist and adoption counselor.) In 1971, he continued his studies at De Paul University (without trumpet lessons), and completed a bachelor of music performance degree in 1972. In 1973, he auditioned twice in Germany, winning a position with the Trier Opera orchestra in Germany. While in Germany, Tim performed with the Edward Tarr Trumpet Ensemble, and won by audition the first trumpet position of the Stuttgart Radio Orchestra. Before he arrived on the job, however, the two orchestras of this broadcasting company were merged, and Tim turned down the position when he was offered the fourth chair. He and Doree spent a total two years in Germany, and returned to Chicago in 1975.

Back in Chicago, Kent freelanced, performing in numerous musicals, circuses, studio recording sessions, etc., and began substituting in the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. At age thirty, he won an open audition for the fourth chair in the CSO, replacing Philip Smith, who had moved to the New York Philharmonic as coprincipal (beginning in September 1979). Kent played in the orchestra for a total of eighteen years, but his passion for the history of the French fur trade, and for paddling three thousand miles across most of the United States and Canada along the mainline fur trade canoe route was drawing him back to his hometown of Ossineke—a passion that gradually developed into a second career.

Although Kent was well liked and admired as a musician, he drew some personal criticism during the mid and late1980s when he began growing a full beard, and not cutting his hair. His desire was to assume a look similar to the North American French traders of the seventeenth century, but his unkempt appearance often caused him to be mistaken for a vagrant or manual laborer. When the CSO toured, there were times when Kent, dressed in white shirt and sweater, and waiting in the lobby of the hotel to board the busses to the concert hall, was asked by other hotel guests to porter their bags. On other occasions when he was dressed more casually, hotel managers would ask him to remove himself from the premises. In 1990, one CSO concertgoer wrote a letter to the orchestra management stating, I think the undignified and unkempt appearance of Timothy Kent is a great detriment to all the members of the CSO. Management must exercise control over such outrageous appearance. If Mr. Kent wishes to look like an unkempt woodsman, then that is where he should stay. Sincerely, An unhappy subscriber.

Despite the politically incorrect criticisms, Kent performed in a professional and exemplary manner. He retired from the CSO in November of 1996, and he, Doree, and their children Kevin (b. 1976) and Ben (b. 1978) moved to Ossineke, in northern Michigan, where Timothy has become a leading researcher and writer about colonial America. His books on the subject are Birchbark Canoes of the Fur Trade, Vols. 1 & 2; Rendezvous at the Straits, Vols. 1 & 2; Ft. Pontchartrain at Detroit, Vols. 1 & 2; A Modern-Day Voyager Family; Paddling Across the Peninsula; and Tahquamenon Tales—all published by his own company, Silver Fox Enterprises. Kent has also written an informative autobiography and tribute to his mentor, Adolph Herseth: Within the Sphere of the Master (Silver Fox Enterprises).

Bibl.: Kent, Timothy J. Within the Sphere of the Master (Silver Fox Enterprises); "Timothy Kent" (www.timothyjkent.com).

Keppard, Freddie [Freddy] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 27, 1890; d. Chicago, Illinois, July 15, 1933). American cornetist. Now considered a historically important pioneer in early jazz, Keppard is more obscure than he should be due to his early refusal to make recordings during his prime years, 1910-20. As a boy, he started on mandolin, violin, and accordion before switching to the cornet in 1905. He played cornet in John Brown's band in New Orleans, and by age seventeen (1907) formed and led the Olympia Orchestra. He studied cornet under Adolph Alexander Sr. (1908), Manuel Perez, George McCullum Sr., and got advice from Bunk Johnson. Keppard could play classical music from the written score and played duets for piano and cornet with Manuel Manetta. He also worked occasionally with Frankie Dusen's Eagle Band.

When Buddy Bolden, the inventor of jazz, dropped from the scene in the early 1910s due to dementia, Keppard became the greatest jazz cornetist in New Orleans. Keppard left the city in 1914 to join Bill Johnson's Original Creole Orchestra in Los Angeles. This band also played for a while in Chicago (1914) and New York (1915), and toured the vaudeville circuit. Keppard was fearful that other cornetists would copy his technique, so he often covered his right hand with a handkerchief while playing. This same paranoia may be the reason that he initially refused to record. He made good money, but spent much of it on liquor. When the Victor label offered him $25 to record, Keppard replied Twenty-five dollars? I drink that much gin each day! Keppard left Johnson's band in 1918.

Keppard settled in Chicago in 1918, and became a sideman for musicians such as King Oliver (1920), Jimmie Noone, Erskine Tate (1923), Doc Cooke's Orchestra (1924-25 and 1926 to September 1927) and Jelly Roll Morton (1926). He eventually began to record in 1923, cutting two songs with Tate in that year, plus a few more with Cooke in the following year. He recorded the remainder of his twenty-five recorded tunes between June 1926 and January 1927. His best tunes are on a Paramount disc from this latter period: Stockyard Strut and Salty Dog. (All of his known recordings have been reissued on CD: The Complete Freddie Keppard 1923/27 on the King Jazz label.)

In 1927, Keppard led his own band and played with Charlie Elgar's society orchestra at the Savoy Ballroom in Chicago. He was back with Erskine Tate (1928), played with Lil Hardin-Armstrong (spring 1928), Jerome Don Pasqual (late 1928), and toured Illinois and Indiana. In 1930, he was back in the Doc Cooke Orchestra.

Unfortunately, alcoholism and tuberculosis caused his playing to fade quickly. He died at the age of forty-three. His brusque staccato style marked the sound of New Orleans-style cornet playing in the early days of jazz.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Freddie Keppard" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ketch, James (b. Evanston, Illinois, Apr. 14, 1952). American trumpeter. Ketch grew up in Peoria, Illinois. He began playing the trumpet at age ten; his first teachers were Frank Sturm, Carl Wood, and James Aitken. After graduating from Honey Creek High School in 1970, he attended Indiana State University from 1970 to 1974, studying with Dalvin Boone. He then studied with David Hickman at the University of Illinois from 1974 to 1976, earning a master of music degree and receiving the Haskell O. Sexton Award for most valuable trumpeter.

Ketch began his teaching career in 1976 when he accepted a position at Southern Utah State College (now Southern Utah State University). In 1977, he moved to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, to begin duties as trumpet teacher and director of jazz studies at the University of North Carolina. He also serves on the faculty of the Jamey Aebersold Summer Jazz Workshops, and is an artist-clinician for the Savannah Music Festival's "Swing Central Jazz." A highly versatile musician, Ketch has performed with The Four Tops, Ben E. King, Natalie Cole, Mel Tormé, Bucky Pizzorelli, The Manhattan Transfer, Marcus Roberts Trio, The Temptations, Gene Krupa Orchestra, Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, Tom Harrell, Byron Stripling, Slide Hampton, Herbie Riley, Victor Goines, Lynn Seaton, and many others. He is leader of the North Carolina Jazz Repertory Orchestra, and has been featured on Public Television. He has recorded for labels such as Summit, Crystal, and Metro, and has released the solo CDs, A Distant View (Summit) and Next Set (Summit). He has performed and conducted throughout the United States, England, France, Switzerland, and Holland. Ketch received praise from Wynton Marsalis in his book, Sweet Swing Blues On The Road.

Ketch has received numerous awards including the Renold Schilke Outstanding Soloist Award at the 1987 North American British Brass Band Nationals (Columbus, Ohio), Tanner Award for Outstanding Undergraduate Teaching (UNC, 1992), and the Bowman and Gordon Grad Professorship for Outstanding Teaching (UNC, 1993-96).

Ketch and his wife Susan have been married since 1975, and have two children: Katie (b. 1978) and Megan (b. 1982). His hobbies include gardening, watching Carolina basketball and Chicago Bears football, and spending time with his grandchildren.

Bibl.: James Ketch's official website: www.jimketch.com; personal interview, Feb. 1, 2011.

Kiefer, Richard ("Rick") (b. Cleveland, Ohio, May 24, 1939). American trumpeter. A Doc Severinsen-style big band trumpeter, Rick Kiefer has played with the big bands of Buddy Morrow (1957), Benny Goodman, Woody Herman, Tito Puente, Urbie Green, and Maynard

Ferguson (1959-63) before moving permanently to Germany in 1965 where he has been a lead trumpeter and featured soloist with the bands of Max Greger, Kurt Edelhagen (1968), Peter Herbolzheimer, and (especially) James Last. Since the late 1970s, he has been a member of the trumpet section of the West German Radio Big Band. He has been featured at numerous jazz festivals throughout Germany, and has also recorded with Stan Getz, Art Farmer, Sarah Vaughan, Bob Brookmeyer, and many others. He can be heard on the soundtrack of the 1968 Steve McQueen film, Bullitt.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Killian, Al[bert] (b. Birmingham, Alabama, Oct. 15, 1916; d. Los Angeles, California, Sept. 5, 1950). American trumpeter. At age eighteen, Killian began his career with Charlie Turner's Arcadians (1934-35) and the big bands of Baron Lee (1937), Teddy Hill, Don Redman (1940), Claude Hopkins, and Count Basie (1940-43). He later played on and off with Charlie Barnet's band from 1943 to 1946. Killian briefly played with Basie again, and then with Lionel Hampton in 1945.

In 1946, Al Killian led his own band and also toured with Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic. With Granz, he played alongside such legendary artists as Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and Lester Young. He then played with Billy Eckstine in Los Angeles (1947), Sonny Criss and Wardell Gray, Earle Spencer, and Boyd Raeburn (summer 1948). In 1947, he also led a bop band on the West Coast, but received mixed reviews. Some critics felt that his trumpet technique was not advanced enough to handle his creative improvisations, but most people simply enjoyed his exuberant style, powerful tone, and extraordinary high range. Dur-ing the pre-Ferguson era, Killian's only equals in the high note arena were Cat Anderson and Leo Shepherd.

Killian joined the Duke Ellington Orchestra from 1948 to 1950. While on a European tour with Ellington, he led a recording session in Stockholm, recording four tunes. He also recorded with Lester Young. In 1950, he left the Ellington band and settled in Los Angeles. He took an apartment, but was later murdered by his landlord. Evidence showed that the landlord was psychopathic, but one must wonder if the playing of high notes triggered the landlord's anger. At any rate, it is tragic that Killian's life was ended at the age of thirty-three, for he might have become a star with more time to develop his technique.

Al Killian was also a fine composer. He led a jam session and recorded the album, Black California, for the Savoy label. Duke Ellington composed a solo for him titled Killian's Lick.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.) The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Al Killian" (www.allmusic.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kime, Warren (b. Collins, Iowa, Jan. 6, 1928). American trumpeter. Kime first studied with his father, Charles F. Kime, a band conductor and former cornetist with Sousa's band. Warren attended Northwestern University, and began his career during the 1950s in the big bands of Ray Anthony, Ralph Marterie, Ray McKinley, Glenn Miller's Service Orchestra, Les Elgart, Skitch Henderson, and Art Damme.

Kime eventually settled in Chicago where he became a staff trumpeter, arranger, and producer for CBS, NBC, and ABC. He also played first trumpet in the Metropolitan Brass Quintet of Chicago. He was a guest soloist with numerous university big bands, concert bands, and symphony orchestras.

In the mid 1960s Kime produced a tape of some of his brass arrangements, and took it to Command Records in New York, which decided to record the arrangements with some of the top studio players in the city, including Carl "Doc" Severinsen. Although the release of Brass Impact did little to publicize Kime's name, sales were excellent due to the use of innovative and state-of-the-art fidelity of the day. Command also released Explosive Brass Impact and Brass Impact Goin' Someplace!

During Kime's career, he played in bands for Nat King Cole, Barry Manilow, Andy Williams, Quincy Jones, Nelson Riddle, Billy May, Frank Sinatra, Roberta Flack, Gary McFarland, Joe Williams, Sarah Vaughan, Bob Crosby, Doc Severinsen, Tony Bennett, John Gary, and others. In the early 1980s, he recorded Warren Kime and Brass Impact #2 for the Claremont label, but it had little commercial success. Kime's other albums are Two of a Kime (Replica) and Holiday for Five Trumpets and Percussion (CBS West Music).

Kime was married to Donna Kime, a singer, but they divorced in the late 1960s. He moved to Florida in the late 1990s where he is active with his jazz quartet. He recently began playing the recorder, and has released the album, Recorder Jazz, for the Sunlight label. Kime also invented Finger Lightenin' in 2005, a wooden valve section with movable "valves" that is used to exercise the fingers of the right hand.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Warren Kime" (www.answers.com); "Warren Kime" (www.allmusic.com).

Kinch, Don (b. Kelso, Washington, May 14, 1917). American cornetist and tubist. Kinch grew up in southern California and attended high school in San Diego. He started on violin, but soon took up the cornet.

After graduating from high school, Kinch held various day jobs at shipyards and steel mills, and as a carpenter, while gigging at night with local classic jazz bands. His first significant playing job was as a member of the Rose City Stompers in Portland, Oregon.

Kinch moved to San Francisco around the mid 1940s where he became well known as a member of the Castle Jazz Band (1947-50) and Turk Murphy's band (1950-53). He moved to Los Angeles in 1953 or 1954 and became a studio musician, doubling on string bass. He often played at the Disney studios, and played second cornet next to Danny Alguire in the Firehouse Five Plus Two (1958-69). With the Firehouse group, he also played tuba. He made numerous recordings with each band, including The Famous Castle Jazz Band (Good Times Jazz), Castle Jazz Band Plays "The Five Pennies" (Good Times Jazz), Twenty Years Later (Good Times Jazz, with the Firehouse Five Plus Two), Jazz Band Favorites, Vols. 1-2 (Good Times Jazz, with Turk Murphy), and At the Italian Village (Music Makers, with Turk Murphy).

Kinch is one of the most admired cornetists of the New Orleans Revival movement, and for many years, he led the Conductors Ragtime Band. Don Kinch moved to the San Francesco area and semi-retired in the 1970s.

Bibl.: Smith, Hal. "Yerba Buena Tuba" (Frisco Cricket, summer 1998); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kindermann, Steven Joseph (b. Evanston, Illinois, May 20, 1964). American trumpeter. Kindermann is the son of Charles Joseph (an insurance underwriter) and Beverly Jean (a secretary) Kindermann, and grew up in Dallas, Texas. He began playing the trumpet under the guidance of Phares Corder. Kindermann graduated from Richardson High School in 1982, and then attended Southern Methodist University (1982-88) where he studied with Thomas Booth of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. He also studied with William Pfund and Philip Collins. After graduating with a bachelor of music degree, Kindermann became a member of the US Air Force Band at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, touring with the Wright Brass from 1988 to 1994. He joined the Air Force Academy Band in Colorado Springs, Colorado, in 1994 and serves as a member of the Stellar Brass, a quintet with percussion, as well as principal trumpet with the Concert Band.

Kindermann and his wife Lisa were married in 1989. He has two siblings: Douglas Walter Kindermann (b. 1966) and Debra Lynn Kindermann (b. 1970). He professes that his greatest passion is serving Jesus Christ. His hobby is radio-controlled models.

Bibl.: "Steven Kindermann" (www.usafacademyband.com); personal interview, Aug. 7, 2010.

King, David (b. Newcastle, Australia, c1956). Australian cornetist and conductor. King's early cornet lessons were with his father, Edward King. He later studied trumpet with Ken Smith at the Sydney Conservatorium, and music education with Alan Thrift at Avondale College, graduating in 1978. King became the Australian Cornet Champion in 1982, winning a scholarship to study band music at Salford University in Manchester, England. While there, he was the North of England Solo Champion in 1983, 1984, and 1985 (the year he completed his master of music degree). He won the British Open Solo Championships each year from 1987 to 1991, and in 1992 won the title of International Brass Musician of the Year in Auckland, New Zealand.

As a famous conductor, King with his bands won the European Brass Band Championships ten times, the Norwegian National Championships seven times, the British Open Championships four times, and the National Championships of Great Britain in 2010. He became Head of Performance at the University of Salford (1988-2009) and completed his doctor of music degree there in 2000. In 2006, he was appointed Conductor Laureate to Her Majesty's Band of the Coldstream Guards in London, the first civilian to hold such a post. Also, in 2008 he was appointed Music Advisor of the Federation of Australasian Brass Bands.

King retired from fulltime teaching in 2009, and in 2010 was given the title of Professor Emeritus at the University of Salford. He is currently serving as conductor of the Brighouse and Rastrict Brass Band in England, and is the founder and conductor of the Qdos Institute of Musical Arts. He has received the Medal of the Worshipful Company of Musicians London.

Bibl.: "David King" (http://es.yamaha.com/es/artists/brass_woodwinds/david_king); Artistic Director David King" (www.nationalaustraliabrass.com/index.php?option=com_content&view=category&layout=blog&id=42&itemid=161).

King, Robert [Davis] (b. North Easton, Massachusetts, Nov. 27, 1914; d. Dec. 2, 1999). American publisher. The King family is of British ancestry, and arrived in America on the Mayflower in 1620. His father, Fred King (1887-1968), was a tuba player. Robert studied the trumpet from age eleven to fourteen with the famous cornetist Walter M. Smith. However, he switched to baritone for the remainder of his career. King established the Boston Brass Quartet in 1936, an ensemble that performed in the New England area until around 1960.

King's first publication was Pezel's Sonate No. 1 in 1940. His idea was to make brass chamber music available because nothing for small brass groups existed. His publishing company, Robert King Music, grew until it became a fulltime operation for him in 1954. He purchased a printing press and installed it next to his bedroom. He did all of the printing himself and purchased surplus paper to keep the costs low. It didn't take long before he became wealthy. He then began to distribute brass music and books from other publishers through a mail order service. His Brass Players Guide catalog was (and still is) an important tool for all brass players.

King was a generous supporter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He provided numerous scholarships to the Tanglewood Institute, endowed the Robert King Principal Trumpet Chair of the BSO, and served on the BSO's board of directors. He also was a member of the Advisory Board of Summit Brass. He was a quiet and humble man who was known for his integrity. He is today considered an important pioneer in brass music publishing and chamber music. He was married to Sally King.

In 1981, King turned the mail order operation over to his daughter, Nancy, who named it Robert King Music Sales, Inc. It was sold to Éditions Alphonse Leduc et Cie in 1987. Three years later, Leduc purchased the entire King operation that consisted of Robert King Music Publishing Company and Easton Music Company. The company continues operating in North Easton.

Bibl.: Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Robert Davis King" (Brass Bulletin, No. 109, Jan. 2000); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kirgan, Michael (b. c1963). American trumpeter. Kirgan grew up in Indiana and learned to play the trumpet from his father, Larry Kirgan. During high school, Michael studied with Stephen Orcutt. He attended Northern Illinois University where he studied with Ron Modell and Stephen Squires, and graduated with a bachelor of music degree in 1985. After graduation, he accepted a position with the Mexico City Philharmonic. He was also a founder and coprincipal of the Filarmónica del Bajio in Guanajuato. He took a leave of absence to do graduate work at Northwestern University where he studied with Vincent Cichowicz and Luther Didrickson. He was invited to play principal trumpet in the New Philharmonia of Portugal in Lisbon, a position he kept until 1992 when he returned to Mexico to become principal trumpet of the Symphony of the University of Guanajuato.

Kirgan became the coprincipal trumpet of the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra in 1995, and was named principal in 1997. He also teaches at Victoria University in Wellington. He resides in Wellington with wife Judith and sons Danny and Julian.

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "ITG Profile: Michael Kirgan" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2005).

Kirkpatrick, Thomas ("Tom") J. (b. Enon, Ohio, Dec. 15, 1954). American trumpeter. Kirkpatrick began playing piano as a child, but then switched to the trumpet as his main instrument. He became interested in jazz after hearing Charlie Parker play the saxophone. He attended The Juilliard School and performed in several dance bands, and in 1978 became a huge Chet Baker fan. He subsequently studied jazz at Indiana University and Eastern Illinois University.

Kirkpatrick toured Europe with the Charlie Parker Memorial Quintet, and is a member of a jazz trio with Bent Jaedig. He is a fine singer and composer, has released an album titled In the Chet Baker Mood, and is now working as a jazz musician in Ferrara, Italy.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Kisor, Ryan (b. Sioux City, Iowa, Apr. 12, 1973). American trumpeter. At five, Kisor's first lessons were with his father, Larry Kisor, and at twelve, he studied classical trumpet under Doug Gerhart in Sioux City. By age ten, he was playing in local bands, and at age fifteen became a member of the Eddie Skeets Orchestra. After performing with several all-star high school jazz groups and winning the trumpet division of the first Thelonious Monk Institute's jazz competition in 1990 (age seventeen), Kisor attended the Manhattan School of Music in New York where he studied with Lew Soloff. He was signed by Columbia Records in 1992, releasing his first two albums of many—Minor Mutiny and On the One.

One of the 1990s Young Lions (a conservative new jazz movement led by Wynton Marsalis and his father), Ryan Kisor performed with the Mingus Dynasty, Mingus Big Band, Gil Evans Orchestra, Charlie Haden's Liberation Orchestra, Bobby Watson's big band, Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra (since 1994), Vanguard Orchestra, and the Michel Camilo Big Band. He has recorded with Gerry Mulligan, Ray Anderson, Mingus Big Band, Melvin Rhyne, Wynton Marsalis, Wycliffe Gordon, Horace Silver, Walter Blanding, and many others. His albums include Battle Cry (Criss Cross), Point of Arrival (Criss Cross), Usual Suspects (Fable), Dragon Fly (with Gerry Mulligan on Telarc), Stick to the Kick (with Melvin Rhyne on Criss Cross), Power Source (Criss Cross), Soulmates (Criss Cross), Textures (Telarc), The Sidewinder (VideoArts), and Kisor (VideoArts). Kisor also leads his own small ensembles.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ryan Kisor" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Ryan Kisor" (www.jazztrumpetsolos.com).

Klatzkin, Benjamin ("Benny") (b. Russia, Nov. 26, 1884; d. Los Angeles, California, Apr. 13, 1965). Russian-born American trumpeter. Klatzkin immigrated to the United States in 1904. He was first trumpet of the Republic Theater Orchestra in New York City during the late 1900s, and principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic from 1914 to 1920. Klatzkin recorded on Edison with the Jaudas Society Orchestra (1914), and also made recordings under his own name, including Der Trompeter von Säckingen. He was second trumpet in the National Symphony Orchestra in New York City during the 1920-21 season, and then moved to Minneapolis, Minnesota, to become principal trumpet of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra (now the Minnesota Orchestra) under Emil Oberhoffer (1921-23).

Klatzkin was principal trumpet of the Los Angeles Philharmonic from 1923 to 1931, but when financial difficulty caused the orchestra to shut down during the 1931-32 season, Klatzkin accepted the position of principal trumpet of the San Francisco Symphony where he played from 1931 to 1944. He returned to the Los Angeles Philharmonic in 1945, and played through the 1946-47 season.

The roster of the San Francisco Symphony lists a third trumpeter in 1937, an "L. Klatzkin," but it is not known what relationship, if any, this person had to B. Klaztkin.

Bibl.: Clark, Keith C. "The Beginning of a Legend: The Young Mr. Glantz and His Contemporaries" (New York Brass Conference for Scholarships Journal, 1978); Cooper, Stefan. "The Trumpet Players of the San Francisco Symphony 1911-1995" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1996); "Principal Musicians of the San Francisco Symphony" (www.stokowski.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Klein, Emmanuel ("Mannie") (b. New York, New York, Feb. 4, 1908; d. Los Angeles, California, May 31, 1994). American trumpeter. Klein grew up in New York City, and took trumpet lessons from Max Schlossberg, principal trumpeter of the New York Philharmonic. He freelanced during his early twenties before joining Louis Katzman's Ambassador Orchestra. He performed and recorded with the Paul Whiteman band from 1928 to 1937; his first big break occurred when the Whiteman band recorded Makin' Whoopee and soloist Bix Beiderbecke became indisposed. Klein stepped in and performed the solo so well, that many people thought it was actually Bix playing it.

Klein moved to Los Angeles in 1937, and began work with Frank Trumbauer's orchestra. He joined Manny Malneck's band in 1939, and in the following year recorded with Artie Shaw. He worked in film studios, and became first trumpet for MGM, where he recorded hundreds of movie soundtracks including From Here To Eternity (1933, ghosting the famous bugle call Taps for Montgomery Clift), The Sound of Music (1959), The Benny Goodman Story (performing And the Angels Sing), My Fair Lady, Rio Bravo, and East Side of Heaven (1939). He also recorded Shostakovich's Piano Concerto No. 1, Hugo Montenegro's version of the movie, *The Good, The Bad and The Ugly, and Tutti's Trumpets featuring several of the top studio trumpeters of the day.

When war broke out in 1941, Klein was drafted into military service. He recommended that the second trumpet, Rafael Méndez, replace him as first trumpet at MGM. After resigning from the military, Klein returned to freelancing in Los Angeles, where he recorded hundreds of records with such celebrities as Don Voorhees, Red Nichols, Fred Rich, Roger Wolfe Kahn, the Boswell Sisters, Dean Martin, and the Dorsey brothers. Altogether, he worked in the studios for forty years. He also worked at Columbia Pictures and several television studios. In one of the TV shows, The Munsters, there was an episode in which little Eddie decided to play the cornet in his school band. Mannie came to the studio and found that he was the only musician called. He was asked to play the melody of Carnival of Venice as badly as possible, representing Eddie's first attempt to play the cornet. After Eddie's grandfather concocted a magic potion for Eddie to drink, Eddie turned instantly into a cornet virtuoso. Klein was then asked to play the most difficult triple-tongue variation possible with no music provided. Klein managed to play an impressive variation from memory based on his boyhood practice in New York.

Klein had an uncanny talent for imitating other great trumpet players' styles and tone qualities. He was especially good at sounding like Bunny Berigan, Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke, and Ziggy Elman. Unfortunately, his career came to an end in 1973 when a stroke caused him to cease professional playing. He died in 1994.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Klein, Oscar (b. Sauerbrunn [near Graz], Austria, Jan. 5, 1930; d. Plüderhausen (Rems-Murr-Kreis), Austria, Dec. 12, 2006). Austrian trumpeter. Being of Jewish decent, Klein's family fled Austria in 1938 when the Nazi regime annexed Austria just before World War II. While living in Switzerland, Klein had the opportunity to learn several different languages, eventually speaking seven. He learned to play the guitar, banjo, harmonica, and clarinet as a hobby, but was trained as a graphic artist. At age eighteen, he moved to Florence, Italy, and became a teacher. He taught himself to play the trumpet during his early twenties, and in 1952 joined Joe Zawinul's band called Fatty George (1952-57). He led the group Tremble Kids from 1957 to 1960, later playing in the Netherlands with the Dutch Swing College Band (1959-63). He returned to the Tremble Kids (on and off, 1963-77), and performed in Europe with Americans and others such as Lionel Hampton, Wild Bill Davison, Bill Coleman, Dexter Gordon, Chris Barber, Paul Kuhn, and Hazy Osterwald. He also recorded with Lionel Hampton, Albert Nicholas, Wild Bill Davison, and Joe Venuti.

Klein was married to singer Miriam Klein. Although he never learned to read music, Klein appeared on over two hundred recordings, including his own albums titled Early Oscar Klein (RST), Big Four/ Jazz for Two (Lino Patruno), Oscar Klein's Jazz Show, Live at the San Martino Jazz Festival, and Pick-a-Blues. A top Dixieland player, Klein was known throughout the world for his energetic performances. He played in New Orleans (1984), guest soloed with the Barrelhouse Jazz Band, and, with Spiegel Willcox (1999), wore a white sailor's hat and did comic gags to entertain audiences. He often appeared at festivals in Ascona.

Oscar Klein was awarded the silver Medal of Honor by Austrian President Thomas Klestil in 1996. Klein was planning a seventy-seventh birthday concert when he passed away on December 12, 2006 at the age of seventy-six.

Bibl.: Cole, William J. "Austrian-born Jazz Great Oscar Klein Dies" (obituary, The Washington Post, Dec. 13, 2006); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Oscar Klein" (www.discogs.com).

Kleindienst, Uwe (b. Cologne, Germany, July 10, 1961). German trumpeter. As a boy, Kleindienst studied piano and trumpet; his first trumpet teacher was Adam Bauer. He attended music schools in Cologne and Düsseldorf before studying orchestral repertoire with Hellmut Schneidewind at the Detmold Music Academy. He also became a specialist on the Baroque (valveless) trumpet, and has performed all of the difficult trumpet works of J.S. Bach. His studies also include conducting.

At age twenty-three, Kleindienst was appointed coprincipal trumpet of the Staatorchester Rheinische Philharmonie. Five years later, in 1989, he became principal of the Bavarian State Orchestra in Munich. He has been a guest principal of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, Munich Philharmonic, and the Symphony Orchestra of Bavaria under Maestro Lorin Maazel. He has also received the title of "Bavarian Chamber Virtuoso" (2000).

Kleindienst has taught at the Musikhochschule in Nürnberg-Augsburg since October of 2000, and in 2008 began teaching at the Leopold Mozart Center of Music at Augsburg University. He made his recording debut of Baroque and Classical works in 1998.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Uwe Kleindienst" (www.stomvi.com/familia.php?&id=9&local=en).

Photo: Upper photo - Kleindienst at age thirteen.

Kletsch, Karl (b. 1884; d. 1953). German trumpeter. Kletsch graduated from the Academie der Tonkünste in Munich where he was a star pupil in trumpet, violin, and piano. He was one of a nucleus of musicians who established the Keim Orchestra in Munich, which evolved into the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra in 1910. His daughter, Mrs. Cita Widmann, established the Karl Kletsch Memorial Fund through the International Trumpet Guild in 1978. The fund generates numerous scholarships and trumpet competition awards administered by the ITG.

Bibl.: "Descendant of Trumpeter Karl Kletsch Donates to ITG" (news item, ITG Newsletter, Feb. 1978); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Klingler, Florian (b. Mils [near Innsbruck], Tyrol, Austria, Oct. 25, 1977). Austrian trumpeter. Klingler began taking lessons from Hannes Buchegger at age eight, and from 1993 to 1998 studied with Erich Rinner at the Tyrolian State Conservatory in Innsbruck. As a boy, he performed in several youth orchestras, including the Austrian Philharmonic (principal trumpet, 1995-97) and the Orchestra of the European Union (1996-97). He won first prize in the 1996 Yamaha Competition in Vienna, and, as part of the Tyrol Trumpet Sextet, won first prize at the 1997 Brass Competition of the City of Passau.

Klingler was principal trumpet of the NDR Symphony Orchestra of Hamburg from 1997 to 2000, and since 2000 has been principal of the Munich Philharmonic. He is a regular guest of the German Brass ensemble, Pro Brass, and Blechschaden. He is a current member of the Austrian Brass Connection, Art of Brass (Vienna), and the Fröschl Hall Brass Band (with which he recorded a solo CD in 2005). From 2005 to 2008, he taught at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in Munich. As a member of the International Celebrity Trumpet Ensemble, he recorded the CD, Proclamation, for the Brass Classics label.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

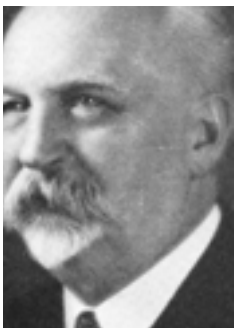
Kloepfel, Louis [Ludwig] F. (b. Thuringia region, Germany, Mar. 1867; d. Needham [near Boston], Massachusetts, Oct. 10, 1936). German trumpeter. Kloepfel studied trumpet with Langhof and Christian Ferdinand Weinschenk in Berlin and Leipzig. He played principal trumpet in the Leipzig Symphony Orchestra before studying with Kretchmar in Hannover and Bock in Cologne. Kloepfel played with the Johann Strauss Orchestra prior to immigrating to the United States in 1889. His first important position in the U.S. was as principal trumpet of the New York Symphony Orchestra (1891-98) under Maestro Walter Damrosch. During the summer of 1894, Kloepfel was a soloist with Anton Seidl's resort orchestra at Brighton Beach. In 1895, he also served as a trumpeter in New York's National Symphony Orchestra.

From 1898 to 1914, Kloepfel was principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. After sixteen years, he began to have trouble with his teeth, so he moved into the BSO section where he remained until 1927 when he effectively stopped playing. During the 1910s, he conducted the Boston Ladies Brass Octet, and taught at the New England Conservatory of Music from 1902. His approach to teaching trumpet playing was simplistic. Among his students were William Vacchiano, Walter M. Smith, and Charles Colin.



In 1902, Kloepfel was the first trumpeter in America to perform Bach's difficult Brandenburg Concerto No. 2. However, his performance was of an arrangement by Felix Mottl that often transposed many of the higher passages down an octave; an assistant solo trumpeter also participated. He was a proponent of the B-flat trumpet as the standard orchestral instrument, and helped design an orchestral-model B-flat trumpet for the C.G. Conn Company.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Principal Musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra" (www.stokowski.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Klotchkov, Pavel Vasilyevich (b. Shkurinskaya-Kubanskaya colony, 1884; d. Kislovodsk, Sept. 10, 1966). Russian trumpeter, cornetist, composer, and conductor. Klotchkov was born into a worker's family.

He and his brother were neglected by their parents. His favorite plaything was a fiddle he had made himself; he also somehow learned to play the trumpet and earned a little money as a choir singer. Against his parents' wishes, he accepted a scholarship to attend a music school in Rostov-on-Don from 1903 to 1906. He then traveled to Moscow and successfully auditioned for a spot in Willy (Vasily) Brandt's cornet class at the Moscow Conservatory. Although Klotchkov was destitute, the director of the conservatory saw to it that he had enough money to survive.

Professor Brandt took a keen interest in Klotchkov. He gave him a Courtois cornet with a screw-rim mouthpiece, and also arranged a violin concerto for cornet for Klotchkov to play when he auditioned for the solo cornet position in the Imperial Orchestra in St. Petersburg (1910); Klotchkov won the audition. He was awarded the title of Free Artist from the Moscow Conservatory in 1912, and was Brandt's last student there. Klotchkov was the most prolific cornet soloist to record during the early days of the phonograph. It's likely that he recorded sixty-two solos, thirty-five of which were made between 1911 and 1914.

While playing in the Imperial Orchestra in St. Petersburg (later becoming the Leningrad Philharmonic), Klotchkov earned a diploma in composition at the St. Petersburg Conservatory of Music (1918). He then turned his attention to conducting, and led the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra on a regular basis. He received favorable invitations to emigrate to Canada and Japan, but preferred to remain in his homeland. After World War II, he was imprisoned for ten years because of false testimonies saying that he had entertained the Germans when they captured the town of Kislovodsk in the mineral-spring Caucasus resort area, where he had come to live. He was later fully reinstated. Klotchkov died during an unsuccessful operation at the approximate age of eighty-two.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. "European Cornet and Trumpet Soloists" (Notes to CD published by the International Trumpet Guild, 2004); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kluesner, James F. (b. Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 7, 1947). American trumpeter. Kluesner grew up in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He began taking lessons from his father, Frank Kluesner, at age seven, and later studied with Richard Brickley. After graduating from Regis High School in 1965, he attended the University of Iowa (1965-69) where he studied with John Beer and did graduate work at Northwestern University, studying with Vincent Cichowicz (1969-71). He also studied with Adolph Herseth (1970-71).

Kluesner taught at Bemidji State University in Minnesota (1971-73) before taking positions as principal trumpet of the Symphony Orchestra of Schleswig-Holstein in Flensburg, Germany (1973-75), and the Orchestra of the State Theater of Hessen (1975-81). He also taught at the Wiesbaden Conservatory (1979-81) and at the Academy of Music in Darmstadt (1978-81). He returned to the United States in 1981 to assume duties as professor of trumpet at James Madison University, from which he received the Carl Harter Distinguished Teaching Award in 2000. In addition, he was a member of the Roanoke Symphony Orchestra (1985-99) and served as its principal trumpet from 1994 to 1999. After retiring from JMU in 2009, he assumed the position as principal trumpet of the Waynesboro (VA) Symphony in 2010. He has performed with the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra, Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and the Frankfurt Radio Orchestra.

Kluesner and his wife Candace, a musician and teacher, have three children: Stephanie (b. 1980), David (b. 1982), and Joseph (b. 1984). His hobbies include golf, travel, and history.

Bibl.: "James Kluesner" (www.latrompette.org/james_kluesner.htm); personal interview, Aug. 22, 2011.

Klushkin, Yury Stepanovich (b. Fergana, Khazakhstan, Feb. 7, 1937). Khazakhstani trumpeter. Klushkin studied with Alexander Yakovlevich Malashin at the Tashkent Conservatory from 1955 to 1959 (also with A. Pulatov in 1957), and with A. Spirin at the Alma-Ata Conservatory from 1959 to 1961. He won second prize at the 8th International Youth Festival Competition in Helsinki (1962), and third prize at the All-Union Competition of Performers in Leningrad (1963). He played radio broadcasts in pop orchestras, and in 1962 became principal trumpet of the Kazakhstan Symphony Orchestra in Alma-Ata, where he played until 1979; he also performed as a soloist. He taught at the Alma-Ata Conservatory beginning in 1966, and was made a full professor in 1987. He was honored by the State in 1962, and again in 1984.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Knapp, W. Roland (b. Baltimore City, Maryland, Aug. 18, 1912; d. Severna Park, Maryland, Apr. 19, 1962) American trumpeter. Knapp learned to play piano and trombone, and began playing the trumpet at age seven; his teachers were Paul Schoenfelder and Frank Feldman. He began his music career quite early, teaching private lessons and serving as a soloist and assistant director of the Baltimore Evening Sun Newsboy Band (once conducted by John Philip Sousa) while attending Baltimore City College High School. While a youth member, he once played the Call to Post for the Preakness horse race.

From 1930 to 1932, Knapp played in the 29th Division Army National Guard Band. He then freelanced in the Baltimore area performing in vaudeville and burlesque, and all types of music for television, radio (WBAL Radio during the late 1930s), Broadway musicals, ice shows, nightclubs, concert bands, symphonies, and circuses. He was a member of the pit orchestras of the Gayety Theatre, the Hippodrome Theatre, The Lyric, Ford Theatre, and the Maryland Theatre. He was also principal trumpet of the Baltimore City Park Band and the Baltimore Municipal Band beginning in 1933.

During the 1940s and '50s, Knapp taught privately at several large music stores, played extra with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, and was principal at the Painters Mill Music Fare (traveling Broadway shows). He backed numerous entertainers including Red Skelton, Vic Damone, Frank Sinatra, Marilyn Maxwell, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Robert Alda, the Three Stooges, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, Helen Forest, Sonia Heine, and Mickey Katz.

Knapp died of cancer at the age of forty-nine. He and his wife Audrey (Schillinberg) Knapp had two children, Evelyn (b. 1933) and Roland Jr. (b. 1936). His hobbies were fishing and crabbing at his beach home on the Severn River, and a love for the game of soccer.

Bibl.: personal interviews with W. Roland Knapp Jr., May 15 & 21, 2011.

Knarren, Piet (b. Schinnen, Netherlands, Aug. 4, 1948). Dutch trumpeter. At age nine, Knarren played flugelhorn in a local brass band. He studied music at a school in Geleen, and at the conservatory in Maastricht, finishing with distinction. There he founded a well known dance band called the EP Band that made recordings for the Killroy label and performed at balls and dance schools throughout the Netherlands. The group performed hit tunes made popular at the time by Al Hirt and Herb Alpert. As a young soloist, he won twenty-eight talent contests that led to several appearances on radio and television. In appreciation for his talent, he received a gold-plated trumpet from the Schenkelaars factory in Eind-hoven in 1973.

When the EP Band dissolved in 1974, Knarren decided to become a fulltime soloist. He began his professional career as a studio player, and by recording several single-play records. He became a popular entertainer at American military clubs (performing hit tunes made popular at the time by Al Hirt and Herb Alpert), and began to perform with artists such as Tony Marshall, Roy Black, Rex Gildo, and others. Since 1990 he has appeared mainly in Germany, with frequent tours to Austria and Switzerland. He has appeared on dozens of television shows including the Tony Marshall Show, Der große Preis, Hallo Heino, Kein schöner Land, Musikanten Stadie, Grand Prix der Volksmusik, Steiners Hitparade, and Volkstümliche. In 1983, he recorded Midnight Blue, a hit that for fourteen weeks made the pop charts in England. Altogether, he has released ten LP albums, fifteen singles, and eleven CDs. He has been given the nickname, "Gentleman of the Trumpet." In 2001, he was honored by the state and elevated to the rank of a Knight of the Oranje-Nassau Order.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Piet Knarren's official website: www.pietknarren.com/uk.

Knodt, Peter (b. Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Oct. 8, 1964). German trumpeter. Knodt began to play the trumpet at age eleven. He studied trumpet with Malte Burba and music pedagogy at the Mainz Conservatory in 1987-92. He is an accomplished classical musician who specializes in avant-garde music for trumpet. Knodt's main interest is the meeting point between music and other media. He used to be a member of Transparente Signale, Glasotronik Ensemble, and Trumpet Meets Marimba. He presently concentrates himself mainly on his teaching positions: (1) in Mainz at the Peter Cornelius Conservatory (trumpet) and the Hochschule für Musik Rheinland-Pfalz (trumpeters' pedagogy), (2) in the Frankfurt Musikhochschule (didactics and pedagogy for brass players), and (3) in the Basel Hochschule für Musik as a professor for didactics (brass, group teaching, and video training), pedagogy, and pedagogic research. As part of the research project Insights/Perspectives II | Deepening/ Multiperspectives of the Basel Hochschule, he is preparing a handbook for teachers' further training with video documentation of instrumental and singing teaching and an interactive E-learning platform.

He likes to play on a natural trumpet made of glass. The following CDs of his original compositions have appeared: New York Manhattan – Klangspuren einer Metropole, Haiku und Klangspuren in Glas, Dietrich Bonhoeffer – Versuch einer Annäherung.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); personal interview with Edward Tarr, Feb. 19, 2013.

Knoll, Anton H. Jr. (b. Erie, Pennsylvania, July 2, 1855; d. date unknown). American cornetist. Anton Knoll Sr. was a bandleader who immigrated to America in 1840. He had seven sons and five daughters and together, they formed a family band, the Knoll Band, that became well known. Anton Jr. played cornet in the band and was its leader. In 1874, the band enlisted in the navy and performed on board the USS Michigan.

Anton Jr. left Erie for Boston in 1880 at the age of twenty-five to become cornet soloist with the Boston Cadet Band for two years, replacing Walter Emerson. Then, on June 3, 1883 he played John Hartmann's Carnival of Venice in a national cornet solo contest held in Detroit, and won first place among sixty-seven contestants from all over the country. Two years later, he was engaged as soloist with Cappa's Band, playing at Brighton Beach and sharing solo duties with Walter Rogers.

During the summer of 1886, Knoll "competed" with the great Jules Levy by performing as soloist at one end of the Subtropic Exposition Building in Jacksonville, Florida, while Levy soloed at the other end. Each band attempted to draw the most number of people toward it. Levy was known for his brilliant triple-tonguing, and Knoll for his amazing upper register and lip trills.

Knoll toured with several vaudeville shows and formed a musical partnership with Marie McNiel, an accomplished female cornetist. They were billed as Knoll & McNiel and traveled throughout America and Canada for twenty years. They played vaudeville shows, concerts, and state or world fairs. They had a vast repertoire of over three hundred pieces ranging from the classics to the popular tunes of the day. One of the most exciting features of their show was when each played on two cornets, making the music sound like a cornet quartet. They performed at the Panama Exposition in 1912.

When McNiel retired, Knoll spent his remaining years performing as a soloist. He recorded, among other works, McNiel Schottische for the Berliner Gramophone Company together with Marie McNiel in the late 1890s. He also composed several cornet solos including Blue Bells of Scotland, Liberati's Delight, Monarch March, and Spanish Fort Polka. His last public performance was on August 11, 1925.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Knudsvig, Peter (b. Williston, North Dakota, Nov. 16, 1948). American trumpeter. Knudsvig studied piano with his mother, and began playing the cornet at age ten; two years later, he was one of the youngest students to attend the Interlochen Music Camp. His first teacher was his band director, Virgil Syverson. Knudsvig attended the University of Montana for one year before transferring to Concordia College in Moorhead, Minnesota (1967-70), where he studied with Dr. J. Robert Hanson. After completing his bachelor of music degree, he joined the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. (1970-73), and studied with Lloyd Geisler at Catholic University of America, earning a master of music degree in 1972 and a doctor of musical arts degree in 1975. After leaving military service, he played in the National Ballet Orchestra (1973-75), and studied in Chicago with Adolph Herseth (1976-77) and Arnold Jacobs (1972, 1980).

Knudsvig taught at the American Institute of Musical Studies festival in Dallas during the summer of 1976, then accepted a position with the Spoleto Festival Brass Quintet in Charleston, South Carolina (1977-78), and taught at the College of Charleston (1976-78). He taught at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio (1978-81), followed by a brief position in 1981-82 as assistant principal trumpet with the Cape Town Symphony Orchestra. This was followed by the first-chair position in the Hof Symphony Orchestra in 1982. He was a member of the Rekkenze Brass (founded by members of the HSO in 1978) that performs many concerts and has produced several recordings. Among his more than one hundred quintet arrangements, the large majority was made for Rekkenze (a word derived from the original medieval name for Hof). Brasszination—fascinating with the sound of brass—is the watchword with this group.

In 1988, Knudsvig was a founding member of the European Trumpet Guild, later serving a short term as interim president. He gave summer courses for brass instruments art the Bayreuth Youth Festivals in 1992-94. He has been a professor of music at Concordia College since 2007, and continues to return to Europe in the summertime to perform concerts with Rekkenze.

Knudsvig and his wife Debora, a professional horn player, have a daughter, Kaitlyn.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Peter Knudsvig" (www.willingtonherald.com/articles/2007/05/local_news/news8.txt).

Koenig, Hermann (fl. 1840—1870). German-born British cornetist. Koenig studied violin and cornet. He was a member of the Drury Lane Orchestra in London in 1840. In 1840, he discovered a young Scotsman, Matthew Arbuckle, who became his best-known pupil. Koenig and a Mr. Pask were partners in a business known as Pask & Koenig in London that sold brass instruments. The company was formed in 1849 but was already discontinued in 1851. Koenig came to the United States with the Louis Jullien Orchestra in 1853 for a series of concerts at Castle Garden in New York City and Boston where he demonstrated triple tonguing. He returned to Europe with Louis Jullien in the following year. Arban heard him and was impressed by his playing.

Between 1856 and 1858, the French instrument company Courtois made two Koenig-model cornets that became quite popular. Koenig invented the "Koenig Horn" in alto F (produced by Courtois). He became a famous cornet soloist known as the "King of the Cornet." His playing was lovely, his phrasing perfect, and his style not unlike that of Bottesini on the double bass. Yes, Koenig was a great artist (H. Lazarus, 1895).

Koenig wrote a cornet method and several solos including Post Horn Galop, Eclipse Polka, Bird of Paradise Waltz, and March in B-flat.

Bibl.: Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Koerselman, Herbert L. (b. George, Iowa, Mar. 29, 1941). American trumpeter. Koerselman began playing the trumpet at age ten. After graduating from George High School in 1959, he attended Morningside College (1959-63) where he studied with James Hustis (father of hornist Greg Hustis). He then did graduate work at Indiana University, studying with Herbert Mueller, and earning his master of music degree in 1966. His graduate work was interrupted when he accepted a position as principal trumpet of the Portland (Oregon) Symphony Orchestra during the 1964-65 season. After finishing his studies at IU, Koerselman became the assistant principal and second trumpet of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra (1966-68).

Koerselman's teaching career became fulltime when he taught at Central Missouri State University (1968-74). (He took a sabbatical during the 1973-74 academic year to complete a doctorate in music at the University of Iowa where he studied with John Beer.) Koerselman then assumed duties as professor of trumpet at Illinois State University (1974-82). While there, he was principal of the Bloomington-Normal Symphony and a member of the Ewing Brass Quintet. He also founded the ISU Chamber Wind Ensemble, and performed on occasion with the Peoria Symphony Orchestra, Kansas City Philharmonic, and the Saint Louis Symphony. He was appointed assistant chair of the music department in 1977.

In the fall of 1982, Koerselman accepted a position at Sam Houston State University as chair of the music school, trumpet professor, and chamber musician. He held these positions for ten years before becoming dean of music at the University of Louisville. He became Dean Emeritus and professor of music in 2002, teaching alongside Dr. Michael Tunnell, and performing in the Louisville Brass.

Koerselman and his wife Arlene have been married since 1963, and have two children: Lisa (b. 1967) and Brian (b. 1969). His hobbies include golf and woodworking.

Bibl.: "Herbert Koerselman" (http://louisville.edu/music/faculty-staff/bios/herbert-koerselman.html); personal interview, Dec. 13, 2010.

Koglmann, Franz (b. Modling, Austria, May 22, 1947). Austrian trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. Koglmann grew up near Vienna. His mother was a fine singer, and his grandfather played accordion. Franz learned to play the accordion at age five, but at first did not have an ambition in music. He learned to be a bookbinder, but when he entered college at the university in Vienna, he decided to switch to music. He took up the trumpet and studied at the conservatory, learning both classical (1961-67) and jazz music (1969-72) under trumpeter Robert Politzer. As part of the inaugural jazz class there, he began playing dance music, which soon became his primary focus. Embouchure difficulties led him to study for a short while with Donald S. Reinhardt in Philadelphia. He also spent a summer in New York City listening to jazz.

After returning to Vienna, Koglmann dropped out of school and formed a free jazz group called Masters of Unorthodox Jazz. He has always shunned African-American jazz because he said that his lineage was not that of black American cotton pickers, but rather white European tradesmen. Although inspired by twice hearing Louis Armstrong in Vienna, he has not felt the need to devote his style of playing to music of the past, and he has openly criticized Wynton Marsalis and others for doing so. Thus, Koglmann's jazz and compositional style are more avant-garde, with a tendency toward Third Stream (a term coined in 1957 by Gunther Schuller to describe the synthesis of classical music and jazz) because of his classical background.

Koglmann formed the Pipe record label in 1973 as an outlet for himself and other modern jazz performers. He played with the Improvising Music Orchestra (1975-85), Reform Art Unit, Eugene Chadbourne (1980s), Georg Grawe, and established his own groups called Pipetet, KoKoKo, and the Pipe Trio. He has recorded with Steve Lacy, Lee Konitz, Andrea Centazzo, Enrico Rava, John Lindberg, Tony Coe, Bill Dixon, Misha Mengelberg, Paul Bley, Wolfgang Reisinger, Theo Jörgensmann, Ran Blake, Yitzhak Yedid, and many others. His early albums for Pipe include Flaps and Opium for Franz.

As a composer, Franz Koglmann has received numerous awards, commissions, and grants. His music became very popular during the late 1970s, '80s, and early '90s. He began recording for Hat Art records, releasing albums such as Cantos I-IV, 12+6 in a Row, Itinerary, A White Line, O Moon My Pin-Up, The Use of Memory, L'Heure Bleu, and We Thought About Duke. He also recorded for the French label, Disque d'Or, releasing His Diapasson that was voted "Record of the Year" by the London Times newspaper during the early 1990s. Koglmann formed another label, Between the Lines, that has produced a number of his CDs including Make Believe, Don't Play Just Be, Venus in Transit, Fear Death by Water, and An Affair with Strauss.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Franz Koglmann" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Franz Koglmann" (www.artistdirect.com).

Kolax, King [born William Little] (b. Kansas City, Missouri, Nov. 6, 1912; d. Chicago, Illinois, Dec. 18, 1991). American trumpeter and bandleader. Kolax moved with his family to Chicago at a young age. He attended Douglas Elementary School and Wendell Phillips High School where his music teacher was Walter Dyett; he earned a degree at the Chicago Conservatory of Music in the early 1930s. He played with various dance bands in the Chicago area, and from 1938 to 1942, led his own band, which toured the United States and performed regularly in Chicago at the 65 Club, the Savoy Theater, and the Grand Terrace; saxophonist Charlie Parker joined his group in March 1939. The King Kolax Band may have been the first all-black band to play on NBC Radio (1942 or 1943).

Kolax put together a new band in 1943, which toured the American South and performed at numerous military bases through 1946, but the band broke up in May of 1946. Kolax then joined Billy Eckstine's big band, which made several recordings and the soundtrack for the film Rhythm in a Riff. When Eckstine's group broke up a few months later, Kolax formed another group that included John Coltrane (1947), but after a year or so, Kolax returned to Chicago to play in various small groups. In 1948, he made his first recording under his own name (as singer and leader) for the Opera label. He played at the Ritz Lounge in 1949 and in J.T. Brown's band in 1951, and formed a new combo in 1951 that featured himself as a blues singer. Over the next few years, he worked and recorded with Joe Williams, Danny Overbea, The Flamingos, Mabel Scott, Rudy Green, Sun Ra, Earl Pugh, Brooks & Brown, Clyde Williams, and Harvey Ellington. In the early 1960s, he recorded with Wilbur White, The Chaunteurs, Jerry Butler, McKinley Mitchell, Otis Rush, and The Vondells.

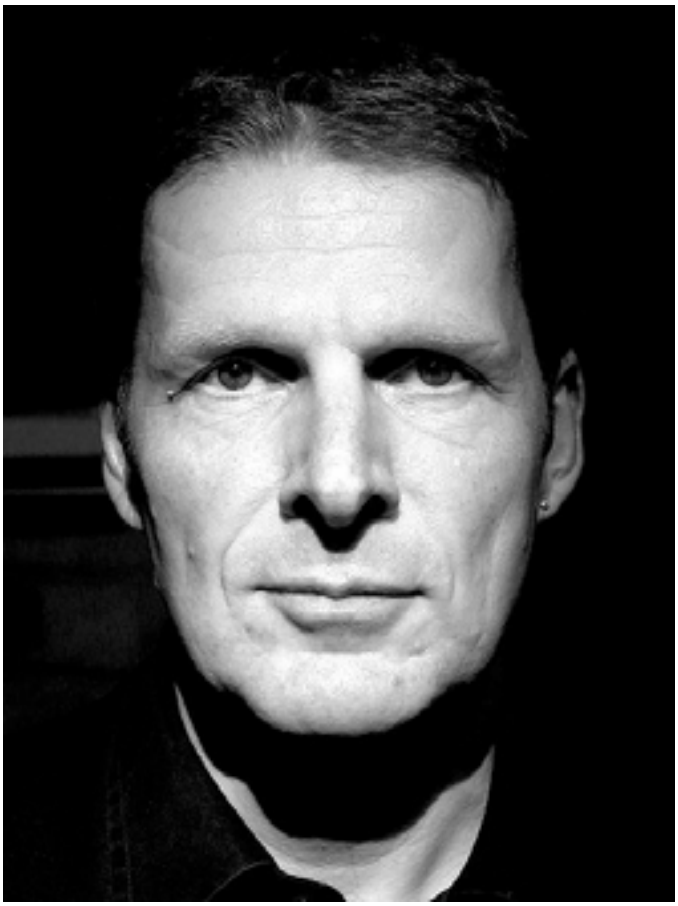
Kolax became an Artists & Repertoire representative for Marvello Records from 1961 to 1965. He made a few recordings during the 1960s, and in August of 1970 made his last recording. He became an officer of the Chicago Musicians Union and retired in 1981. He was known as being a ladies' man, full of jokes. He died ten years later after an extended period with Alzheimer's disease.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "King Kolax" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/King_Kolax); "The King Kolax Discography" (http://hubcap.clemson.edu/~campber/kolax.html).

Köller, Uwe (b. Neuss, Germany, May 15, 1964). German trumpeter. Köller started on trumpet at age seven. He studied with Rodney Miller in Düsseldorf (1978), Pierre Thibaud in Paris (1978-85), Martin Kretzer in Berlin (1986-88), and Günther Beetz in Mannheim. He then began his orchestral career as principal trumpet of the Berlin Symphony Orchestra (1988-91), followed in 1991 by the same position with the Berlin Opera Orchestra. He toured and recorded with the German Brass beginning in 1995. He became a guest professor at the Universität für Musik und darstellende Kunst in Graz in 1997, and left orchestral playing in 1999 for a full-time professorship there, becoming a full professor in 2000. In Graz he also worked with the Austrian Brass Band, which he had founded in 2000 after an English model. Since 2003, he has been professor of trumpet at the Folkwang-Hochschule in Essen, where he has also founded a similar group, the Folkwang Brass Band. In addition, Uwe Köller has been the conductor of the Friedberg Municipal Band since October 2012.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Uwe Köller's official website: www.uwekoeller.de/home.php.

Komischke, Uwe (b. Schwelm, Germany, Dec. 5, 1961). German trumpeter. He was animated at age seven to learn the trumpet by his father, an orchestral musician and later teacher at the Bochum music school. Komischke studied with Franz Willy Neugebauer (1969-73), Walter Holy (1973-75), Rudolf Lodenkemper (first privately and then at the Northwest German Academy of Detmold until 1981), and Rolf Quinque in Munich (1982). In January of 1981, he became a standing extra as principal trumpet of the City Orchestra of Gelsenkirchen; in June he was confirmed as principal. He moved to the principal chair of the Munich Philharmonic in September of 1983, and was concurrently standing extra principal trumpet with the Bayerische Staatoper (1986, 1987).



Komischke has performed throughout the world as a soloist, and has recorded five CDs with organ. In addition, he recorded Haydn's Concerto in E-flat with the Munich Philharmonic, and the Concert Piece by Johann Cilenšek (1913-98) with the Flemish Radio Philharmonic in Brussels. He is a cofounder and member of the Best Of Brass quintet, and has performed with the Moscow Soloists, Jena Philharmonic, Munich Chamber Orchestra, Arthur Rubinstein Philharmonic Lódź, Philharmonica Hungarica, and Capella Istropolitana. Concertos by Hans Stadlmair and Peter Michael Hamel have been dedicated to him. From 1987 to 1994, he taught at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in Munich, and has been a guest professor at the Senzoku Gakuen High School in Tokyo (from 1993). In 1994, he became a professor at the Franz Liszt Hochschule für Musik in Weimar. He wrote Virtuosity Drills for Trumpet/Cornet (Editions Marc Reift) and Warm-ups for E-flat Horn.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Komst, Marinus ("Rinus") [Johannes] (b. Amsterdam, Netherlands, Sept.18, 1908; d. Amsterdam, Netherlands, Jan. 27, 1997). Dutch trumpeter. Komst studied trumpet with Emil Kresse. He began his carrier in 1923, playing in various theaters, and then joined the Netherlands Radio Symphony Orchestra (1925-26). One of Europe's leading orchestral trumpeters, Komst was principal of the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra from 1934 to 1972, where he introduced the use of the C trumpet (a French Besson). As leader of the Koper

Quartet, he was a pioneer in chamber brass playing, something that influenced Philip Jones to start his own brass ensemble. He was also an important teacher, and composed 12 Characteristic Etudes for trumpet (C.W.H. Snock).

Komst's grandson Marinus Komst has been the timpanist with the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra since 1991.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kondo, Toshinori (b. Imabari City, Shikoku Island, Japan, Dec. 15, 1948). Japanese trumpeter. Kondo began learning music at age twelve, and played trumpet in his school band. In 1967, he entered Wako University in Kyoto as a mechanical engineering student, but in 1972 moved to Tokyo to become a professional musician. He also studied the martial art of Shintaido. He co-established a jazz trio and his Evolution Ensemble Unit in 1976, and moved to New York City in 1978. He performed at various jazz festivals, and in 1981 formed the Easy Music band for about a year. He then formed the "Tibetan Blue, Air, Liquid" band. During his New York years, Konto founded the record label Bellows. He returned to Japan in 1984.

Searching for a new and innovative sound, Kondo formed another avant-garde band, the International Music Activities (IMA). His trumpet playing ranges from gentle sounds to wild screams, depicting every possible human emotion. He also played with Steve Lacy, Milford Graves, Derek Bailey, Herbie Hancock, and Peter Brotzmann (1995).

In 1993, he disbanded IMA and moved to Amsterdam in the Netherlands to start the project, Blow the Earth, that involves him playing in remote locations in the Negev Desert, Andes and Himalaya mountains, and other exotic places. His solo CD, Israel, is the result of these performances. He is currently based in Amsterdam, but frequently tours throughout the world. His other CDs include Aida's Call, God-Zilla Funk/Kondo-IMA, This That and the Other, Club New Light, and Find a Planet.

Besides working as a musician, Kondo is a producer, writer, and actor. He has performed in several Japanese movies, and during the 1980s appeared as an actor in numerous television commercials. He is the chairperson of the Federation for Universal Responsibility of the Dalai Lama.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2012); Toshinori Kondo" (http://bells.free-jazz.net/bells-part-two/toshinori-kondo); "Toshinori Kondo Biography" (http://grommens.tripod.com/Music/Kondo/bio.htm).

König, Rudolf Iosifovich (b. St. Petersburg, Russia, June 2, 1906; d. Leningrad, Russia, 1937). Russian trumpeter. König began his music career by playing in various military bands from 1923 to 1926. While in the military, he studied with Alexander Gordon at the Leningrad Conservatory, graduating in 1927. In 1924, at the age of eighteen, he became principal trumpet of the Leningrad Opera Orchestra, a position he held until his early death in 1937 at the approximate age of thirty-one.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon).

Konnerth, Johann (b. Sighişoara, Romania, Sept. 26, 1966). Romanian trumpeter. Konnerth began playing trumpet at age ten under the direction of his father, a professional tuba player. He then studied with John Muritean at a music school in Cluj (Transylvania) from 1980 to 1985. After his military service (1985-87), he emigrated to Germany. He freelanced with various dance bands before studying with Werner Heckmann and Helmut Erb at the Hochschule für Musik in Würzburg, and Günther Beetz in Mannheim.

Since 1990, Konnerth has been principal trumpet of the Ulm Philharmonic Orchestra and Ulm Theatre Orchestra. He is an active soloist in southern Germany, and a member of Brass Philharmonic Stuttgart, the Baden-Wurttemberg Brass Quintet, the Baroque Trio (trumpet, soprano, organ), and a trumpet and organ duo with Thomas Haller. He has won first prize in musical competitions in Würzburg (1989) and Ulm (1992). His solo CDs include Tromba Aalensis, Tromba Aalensis 2, and Erschallet Trompeten.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Johann Konnerth" (http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Johann_Konnerth).

Köpp, Rudolf (b. Berlin, Germany, Mar. 25, 1934). German trumpeter. Köpp began his music studies at age fourteen, and from 1949 to 1957 studied with Hans Bode at the Hochschule für Musik Berlin. A talented student, Köpp was a member of the RIAS Youth Orchestra from 1954 to 1958, after which he played principal trumpet for the State Philharmonic Orchestra in Bremen from 1958 to 1997. He also played with the Berlin Opera, Radio Bremen, and the Bremen Big Band. Since 1991, he has been a member of Ten of the Best, a trumpet and rhythm section ensemble led by Otto Sauter.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Korak, John (b. Youngstown, Ohio, Apr. 5, 1962). American trumpeter. Korak grew up in Poland, Ohio (until age ten), and Albuquerque, New Mexico. He began playing the trumpet at age ten, and while in middle school, took lessons from Ed Wolf. While attending El Dorado High School in Albuquerque, he took lessons from his band director, Ron Lipka. After graduating in 1980, he attended the University of North Texas, studying with Dr. Leonard Candelaria and earning a bachelor of music education degree (1980-1984), master of music (began in 1984 and completed in 1993), and a doctor of musical arts degree (began in 1993 and completed in 1999). He was the Associate Director of Bands at Lewisville (Texas) High School from 1985 to 1992.

Korak became the trumpet professor at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville in 1995, a position he still holds in addition to having served as chair of the music department from 2002-2005. He is an active soloist, and has performed with the Texas Wind Symphony, Dallas Bach Society, Texas Baroque Ensemble, Texas Brass Ensemble, Bluebonnet Brass, Bach Society of St. Louis, Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra, Illinois Sym-phony, St. Louis Brass Band (solo cornet), the Mexico City Philharmonic, and at several conferences of the International Trumpet Guild. He is currently principal trumpet of the American Kantorei Orchestra.

Korak is the Book Review Editor for the International Trumpet Guild Journal. He has authored Giuseppe Concone: The Complete Solfeggi (Balquhidder) and Bel Canto Studies for Trumpet (Bahquhidder).

John and Jennifer Korak (a middle school band director) have been married since 1993, and have two children, Brendan (b. 1999) and Abby (b. 2002). His hobbies include tennis, fishing, and cycling.

Bibl.: "John Korak" (www.siue.edu/artsandsciences/music/Korak.shtml); personal interview, Apr. 15, 2011.

Korniliev, Alexey Olegovich (b. Moscow, Russia, Jan. 8, 1980). Russian trumpeter. His first teacher was Yuri Pashkov. Orniliev studied from 1994 to 1998 at the Moscow Conservatory with professor Yury Usov, pursuing further graduate and postgraduate studies there in 1998-2003 with professor Vadim Novikov. In 1995, he won first prize at the first Moscow International Trumpet Competition. Along with Dmitry Lokalenkov, he won third prize at the second version of the competition two years later. Since 1999, he has been a principal trumpeter with the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra in Moscow. In 2005 he became a teacher, and in the following year, senior teacher at the Moscow Conservatory. He is also an active soloist and a member of several brass ensembles.

Bibl.: Candelaria, Leonard. "The 1997 Moscow International Trumpet Festival and Competition" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1998); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon); Shook, Brian. "Bolshoi Theatre of the Russian Federation Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2012).

Kos, Klaas (b. Harenkarspel, Netherlands, Nov. 15, 1939). Dutch trumpeter. Kos began by playing in the fanfare ensemble, Onder Ons. He studied privately with Freddy Grin, and later with Marinus Komst in Amsterdam. He became principal trumpet of the Art Market Orchestra which later became the Netherlands Philharmonic Orchestra, from 1959 to 1963, and principal trumpet and cornet of the Concertgebouw Orchestra from August 1963 to January 2001. He became well known for his performances of the posthorn solo in Mahler's Third Symphony. He also taught at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kosleck, Julius (b. Naugard, Pomerania, Dec. 1, 1825; d. Berlin, Germany, Nov. 5, 1905). German cornetist and trumpeter. In 1853 at the age of twenty-eight, Kosleck joined the 2nd Infantry Foot Guards' Regiment Band and was a member until 1893. In the same year he joined the band, he was first trumpet of the Königliche Kapelle in Berlin. He later became one of Europe's leading cornet soloists, and by 1868 was touring Russia as well as Germany. In 1870, he formed the Kaiser-Cornet-Quartett that began major concert tours in 1872. The ensemble performed at many important venues that included several high-level government celebrations and inaugurations as well as performances at the 1872 World's Peace Jubilee in the United States.

Kosleck spent many years studying the high trumpet parts of J.S. Bach, and developed a two-valve straight trumpet in alto A, which he unveiled to the public in 1881. It was so long that Kosleck had to stand to play it; reviewers often failed to notice the valves and thought it was a natural trumpet. The instrument was a great success, but was unfortunately named the "Bach trumpet" by the public, a name that caused much confusion because Bach's music was not originally played on valve instruments. Nonetheless, Kosleck's successful performances with this instrument led to an invitation to perform Bach's B-Minor Mass in London in 1885 on the 200th birthday of Bach. George Bernard Shaw was present for this performance, stating: Herr Julius Kosleck, of Berlin, showed us on Saturday that the old trumpet parts are as feasible as ever. He brings out the high D with ease, executes shakes, rivals our finest flautists in the purity of the tone he produces in the upper register, and seems able to do, with his prodigiously long, straight instrument, all the feats that the first cornet heroes of the military bands accomplish in their "staccato polkas," and the like double-tonguing atrocities.

During Kosleck's career, he was best known as a cornet soloist. He toured Germany, Russia, England, and the U.S. He composed numerous works for brass ensemble and cornet that include Aelpler's Abschied (cnt. + pno., also orch. acc.), Romance (cnt. + pno.), Concert Arie (cnt. + pno.), Gruss an die Waldes Rose (cnt. + pno.), Eine Jagdfantasie (cnt. + pno.), Russisches Zigeunerlied (cnt. + pno.), Triumphmarsch (brass ens.), Fanfare for the birthday of Prince Wilhelm II of Prussia (4 tpts. + tym.), and several transcriptions for brass quartet or cornet and piano. His Marsch aus der Zeit Friedrichs des Großen is still performed today in Germany during festive state receptions and regularly sets emotions free in its listeners. Pope Johannes Paul II, on hearing the piece, once paused and then—contrary to all diplomatic protocol—turned to the conductor and exclaimed, What beautiful music!

1872 was an important year for Kosleck. At this time, be began teaching at the Berlin Conservatory where he was named professor in 1893, and published his Grand Method for Cornet and Trumpet, a text for the cornet and alto trumpet. He was a very successful teacher; Max Schlossberg and W. Paris Chambers are said to be among his many students.

In 1890, Kosleck left the cornet quartet in order to form Kosleck's Brass Band, which became quite successful and continued for years after his death in 1905. Richard Strauss composed his Feierlicher Einzug for this group in 1909. Ramsøe dedicated his Sixth Quartet to Kosleck, who was known for his heartfelt renditions of songs and lyrical passages, as well as his technical accuracy.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Köstler, [Johann] Caspar (fl. 1740—d. July 9, 1795). German-born Austrian trumpeter. Köstler was born in the Palatinate, and studied in Vienna with the famous Heinisch. He was a field trumpeter in the cuirassiers' regiment of Johann Graf Pállfy [Palfy] (1740-44), trumpeter for Prince Esterházy in Bratislava (1744-47), first trumpeter for the bishop of Olomouc (1747-50), court trumpeter for the Archbishop of Salzburg during the time of Mozart (1750-69), and a trumpeter of the Hungarian Noble Lifeguard until his retirement in May 1790. He is one of a handful of players who could perform the ultra high concertos such as those composed by Leopold Mozart, Michael Haydn, Riepel, Richter, Gross, and Querfurth. Leopold Mozart remarked of Köstler that he gave the trumpet a "fine, pleasing, [and] singing tone," and that "one hears his concertos and solos with great delight." Köstler (who also played the violin) was an esteemed member of the Austrian Trumpeters' Society, and the teacher of Schachtner (for whom Leopold Mozart wrote his trumpet concerto).

Köstler was married to Theresia Köstler (b. c1730). They had two children: Caspar (b. c1751) and Theresia (b. c1754).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lindner, Andreas. Die kaiserlichen Hoftrompeter und Hofpauker im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert (Hans Schneider); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Kottek, Hannes (b. Korneuburg [near Vienna], Austria, Aug. 23, 1958; d. Vienna, Austria, Sept. 26, 1994). Austrian trumpeter. At age fifteen, Kottek studied in Stockerau with Josef Spindler, and four years later began studies at the Conservatory of the City of Vienna with Robert Politzer (trumpet) and Erich Kleinschuster (jazz). He subbed at the ORF (Austrian Broadcasting organization) Big Band in 1977. His excellent upper range à la Cat Anderson, his impeccable accuracy, and his ability at sight reading led to a spot in the Vienna Art Orchestra, which toured Europe, Africa (1984), and America. He became lead trumpet in the group in 1985. His reputation with the VAO was formidable, and is evidenced by his playing on numerous CDs. He later studied theory at the Vienna Conservatory under Heinz Czadek, graduating in 1993.

Kottek was a highly versatile musician, and performed with the Vienna Opera Orchestra, Pro Brass, Vienna Folk Opera, and ORF Sinfonietta. He played in the Broadway show, Cats, in Vienna, as well as with the show bands of Max Reger and Wolfgang Lindner. He also formed his own jazz quartet in 1990. He died suddenly of leukemia, which had first been diagnosed and treated in 1992 and was thought to have been healed in January 1994.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kovalinsky, Andrey Vitalyevich (b. Minsk, Belarus, Aug. 15, 1977). Belarussian trumpeter. Kovalinsky is one of the world's leading young classical soloists, who has also been principal trumpet of the Flemish Radio Orchestra since 2001. He graduated from the Minsk Music Academy at the age of eighteen, studying with Nikolay Volkov in 1987-95 at the age of eighteen. From 1998 to 1999, he studied with Volkov at the Bielorussian Music Academy, and from 1998 to 1999 was also enrolled at the Dortmund Conservatory (under Professor Riester). From 1999 to 2001, he studied with Reinhold Friedrich and Edward H. Tarr at the Karlsruhe Conservatory in Germany. While in Karlsruhe, he also apprenticed as an orchestral player with the Krefeld-Mönchengladbach Municipal Orchestra.

Kovalinsky has been a prizewinner in numerous solo competitions: Moscow International Trumpet Competition (first prize, 1997), Porcia International Trumpet Competition (second prize, 1999), Toulon International Trumpet Competition (second prize, Paris, 2000), Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild Solo Competition (first prize, Bad Säckingen, Germany, 2000). He was also awarded the Richard Wagner Scholarship in 1998.

Bibl.: Candelaria, Leonard. "The 1997 Moscow International Trumpet Festival and Competition" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1998); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Kozderka, Vladislav (b. Brno, Czech Republic, July 1, 1947). Czech trumpeter. Kozderka comes from a large musical family. He attended the conservatory in Brno, studying with Bedřich Dvořáček in 1968, but completed his music degree with Václav Pařík at the Janáček Music Academy in 1972. During this period of his studies, he played in the Brno Philharmonic Orchestra. Thereafter, he won several prizes in international solo competitions, including: Prague "Spring" (first prize, 1974), Geneva (third prize, 1975), and Toulon (first prize, 1976). From 1972 to 1980, he was principal trumpet of the Prague National Theatre Orchestra, and since 1980 has been principal of the Prague Symphony Orchestra. He continues to be an active soloist, and has recorded several CDs including Czech and Italian Baroque Music for Trumpet and Vladislav Kozderka (Panton).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Kratzer, Bernhard (b. Radolfzell am Bodensee, Germany, Sept. 21, 1962). German trumpeter. Kratzer studied with Horst-Dieter Bolz in Trossingen from 1980 to 1987, and with Max Sommerhalder in Zürich. As a boy, he played in the German Youth Philharmonic and the Tonhalle-Orchester Zürich. He also won a prize during the 1987 instrumental competition of the German music universities. Since 1988, he has been principal trumpet of the Stuttgart State Orchestra, and has also performed with the German Brass, Bach-Collegium Stuttgart, Württemberg Chamber Orchestra, and the Cologne Chamber Orchestra.

A prolific soloist, Kratzer formed a trumpet and organ duo with Monika Nuber (1980 to 1987). They recorded several CDs together, including Virtuose Trompetenmusik des Barock, Vols. 1 & 2 (Fermate), and Virtuoso Baroque Trumpet Music (Audite). After Nuber's accidental death in 1986, he has worked with other organists, performing music of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and twentieth centuries, notably OKNA: Trompete & Orgel im 20. Jahrhundert with Martin Sanders. Since 1993, he has been a professor at the Musikhochschule des Saarlandes in Saarbrücken.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bernhard Kratzer" (www.heroicmusic.de/k-biography.htm).

Krauss, David (b. Long Island, New York, Nov. 29, 1971). American trumpeter. Krauss's parents, Alvin and Judith Krauss, played the piano. His father and grandfather owned and operated a machine shop, and his mother owned an art gallery in New York City before earning a law degree. He grew up in Old Westbury, New York, and graduated from the Wheatley School in 1989. While in grade school, he studied trumpet with Wynton Marsalis and Henry Nowak. In Krauss's words, "lessons were untraditional, to say the least."

Krauss attended the Juilliard pre-college program for two years before entering the upper school. At Juilliard, he studied with Edward Treutel, but continued lessons with Marsalis whenever possible. He also switched to studying with William Vacchiano for two years, and then Chris Gekker. Additionally, he took lessons from James Pandolfi in exchange for babysitting (his lessons took place in the depths of the Metropolitan Opera House.) It is from Pandolfi that he acquired his beautiful tone and passion for opera music. He finished his bachelor of music degree in 1993, and his master of music degree in 1995. While at Juilliard, he won a competition that allowed him to perform Copland's Quiet City on a tour of France with the Juilliard Orchestra.

After graduating from The Juilliard School, Krauss freelanced in New York City, and performed with the Orchestra of St. Luke's, Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, New York Philharmonic, New Jersey Symphony, and several Broadway shows. He became principal trumpet of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in 2001, and also teaches as an adjunct professor at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

During the summers, Krauss and his wife Kristen live in West Stockbridge, Massachusetts, with their children where he teaches at the Boston University Tanglewood Institute, and often performs with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. During the regular season, his wife teaches violin at a Suzuki school in New York City called the School for Strings; all four of their children (Noah, Eli, Margot, and Ava) study there.

Krauss enjoys cooking and making espresso coffee. He says that when freelancing was slow during his early career, he almost became a chef.

Bibl.: personal interview, Jan. 24, 2010.

Krauss, Samuel ("Sam") G. (b. Salem, Ohio, Dec. 3, 1909; d. Evanston, Illinois, May 8, 1992). American trumpeter. From the age of twelve, Krauss studied with Saul Caston in Philadelphia. As a teenager, he founded Krauss's Peerless Players, and participated in his father's Quaker City Band. At age nineteen, Krauss founded and conducted the Salem High School Band.

Krauss began his orchestral career in 1930 when he became principal trumpet of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C. He moved to St. Louis in 1936 to assume duties as principal of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and from 1943 to 1945 was fourth trumpet there. He became principal of the famed Philadelphia Orchestra in 1945, a position he retained until the fall of 1958 when he became coprincipal with his student, Gilbert Johnson. A year later, he played mostly second trumpet until 1967, after which he played mostly fourth. He retired from the orchestra in 1975.

Krauss was an excellent teacher who taught at the Curtis Institute from 1947 to 1968, as well as at Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, Temple University in Philadelphia, the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, the Interlochen Academy of Music, and the University of Wisconsin, retiring from teaching in 1983. Among his legions of students are Manuel Araujo, Stephen Chenette, Richard Giangiulio, Gilbert Johnson, Leon Rapier, Russell Plylar, George Bitzer, Janis Marshelle Coffman, and Vincent Penzarella. Krauss was featured as soloist on a Philadelphia Orchestra recording under Maestro Eugene Ormandy titled Philadelphia Orchestra First Chair, playing Purcell's Trumpet Voluntary (April 1952).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct.

2008); "Musicians of the Philadelphia Orchestra" (www.stokowski.org/Philadelphia_Orchestra_Musicians.htm).

Kresse, Emil (b. Waltersdorf, North Moravia, Sudetenland, Nov. 9, 1856; d. Amsterdam, Netherlands, June 28, 1935). German trumpeter. Kresse played second trumpet in the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam from 1891 to 1925. He also taught at the orchestral school of the Amsterdam Conservatory starting in 1895. Among his students was Marinus Komst, who later became principal trumpet of the Concertgebouw Orchestra (1934-72).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kretzer, Martin (b. Wolfenbüttel, Germany, Aug. 30, 1950). German trumpeter. Kretzer began studying trumpet with his father at the age of twelve, and later with Viktor Belkius in Braunschweig. Kretzer joined the Kassel State Theater Orchestra and the Hanover State Opera orchestra in 1970, and continued with both until 1973 when he became the principal trumpet in the Berlin Philharmonic, a position he held for thirty-one years before moving to second trumpet in 2004.

Kretzer is a member of the Berlin Philharmonic Brass Ensemble and Berlin Philharmonic Brass Quintet. He has performed and recorded with the German Brass, and appears on an album with the Canadian Brass. He has also taught at the Orchestra Academy of the Berlin Philharmonic since its founding in 1978.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Martin Kretzer" (www.berliner-philharmoniker.de).

Kreutz, Karl Simeon (b. Leipzig, Germany, Aug. 1, 1916; d. Leipzig, Germany, May 23, 2003). German trumpeter. Although Kreutz started his career as an interior decorator (wall papering), his trumpet lessons with Alfred Gräfe and Heinrich Teubig encouraged him to turn to a fulltime career in music. During the early 1940s, he played in various dance bands, and from 1941 to 1944 studied with Teubig at the Leipzig Hochschule für Musik. In 1945, he became a member of the State Orchestra in Dessau, and from April 1, 1946 to December 31, 1981 was second trumpet of the Leipzig Gewandhausorchester.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel: Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Krivosheyev, Yury Filippovich (b. Dnepropetrovsk, Ukraine, Aug. 15, 1941; d. Dnepropetrovsk, Ukraine, July 15, 2000). Ukrainian trumpeter. Krivosheyev studied with Pyotr Nikolayevich Ivanov at the Dnepropetrovsk Music School (finishing in 1960) and Mikhail Semyonovich Vetrov at the Leningrad Conservatory (1960-63), and graduated from the Moscow Conservatory under Georgy Antonovich Orvid (1964-69). He played professionally during his student years: Opera-Ballet orchestra in Kirovsk (1960-62), in Mologo (principal, 1962-65), Tiflis (1965-66), and principal of the USSR Symphony Orchestra (beginning in 1967). After the fall of the Soviet Union, the USSR Symphony Orchestra became known as the Philharmonic Orchestra of Moscow (since 1990), and Krivosheyev remained its principal trumpet.

Yury Krivosheyev was an active conductor, and taught at the Moscow Conservatory from 1971 to 1980. His most famous student is Andrei Ikov, currently principal of the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon).

Krug, Willi (b. Dankerode, Germany, June 3, 1925; d. Dankerode, Germany, July 15, 2000). German trumpeter. As a child, Krug studied the violin for six years. At age ten, he began studying trumpet with his father, Wilhelm Krug, an amateur trumpeter. He attended a music school in Sangerhausen, and played in a military band, in which he became a prisoner of war in England in 1944. In the military prison he founded an eighteen-piece orchestra which in 1947 even played for Queen Elizabeth's wedding. In 1948 he was released, and completed his music studies in the Weimar Musikhochschule. In 1981 he became solo flugelhorn in the Leipziger Rundfunk-Blasorchester. One year later he became the principal trumpet of the East Berlin Radio Symphony. Krug recorded the Bach's 2nd Brandenburg Concerto (with the Gewandhaus Orchestra conducted by Helmut Koch) and one solo album for the Eterna label, Berühmte Trompetenkonzerte, in which he demonstrated a wonderful command for the upper register of the piccolo trumpet. He was an adviser for the design of the Scherzer piccolo trumpet, spending years on perfecting it (without pay), and when it was finished, he was allowed to purchase one!

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal information told to Tarr by Krug.

Kryl, Bohumir (b. Horice, near Prague in today's Czech republic, May 2, 1875; d. Wilmington, New York, Aug. 7, 1961). Bohemian-born American cornetist. Kryl began playing the violin at age ten. At age eleven, he ran away from home to join a circus in which he became a tumbler and a trapeze artist. While with the circus, he learned to play the cornet and soon joined the circus band. After an accident in 1886, he quit the circus, and in 1889 sailed to New York City, paying for his passage by playing in the ship's orchestra. It is believed that he had relatives in Indianapolis, because he did not hesitate to go there. He earned a living as a sculptor, something his father had taught him years earlier; he worked on the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Kryl's first opportunity as a cornet soloist came in 1890 with the When Clothing Store Band in Indianapolis. In 1894, the Sousa Band came to Indianapolis and featured Albert Bode as their cornet soloist (since Herbert Clarke had left to join the Gilmore band). Enthralled by the performance, Kryl managed to meet with Mr. Bode and asked if he could take a few lessons from him while the band was in town. Reluctantly, Bode agreed to hear him, and was shocked at how well Kryl played. Bode told his band colleagues, That boy wants to take lessons from me, but Hell, I can't teach him anything. He's better than I am. Kryl did actually take a few lessons from Bode, as well as from A.F. Weldon at a later date.

Bode introduced Kryl to Sousa, who asked the young man to play for him. Sensing a star, Sousa immediately offered Kryl a contract as a soloist and assistant to Bode. The date of his appointment is not known. However that may be, Bode left the band in 1894 and was replaced by Walter F. Smith. Kryl played with the Sousa Band until 1898.

By age nineteen, Kryl had developed an unusually high range on the cornet, and an equally impressive pedal register. His use of pedal tones in his solos soon became one of his trademarks. He had a beautiful, rich tone that some compared to the great Italian tenor, Enrico Caruso.

In 1899, Kryl joined T.P. Brooke's Chicago Marine Band and stayed with this organization for two years. During this time he studied with Weldon, conductor of Chicago's Second Regiment Band. In 1901, he was a special soloist for the Duss Band of New York. During the years 1902 through 1906, he was soloist with Innes's famous band, and performed more than six hundred solos in his first year. He became assistant conductor in 1903.

After seeing the flamboyant maestros Creatore and Vessela in concert, Kryl stopped cutting his hair and fashioned it after theirs. It took on a "lion's mane" appearance that became another one of his trademarks. After leaving the Innes Band, he organized his own concert band, which performed at numerous fairs, expositions, and cities. The band toured for nearly thirty years and was one of the finest bands in the country. Kryl claimed that he performed more than twelve thousand solos with it. He was considered a difficult conductor to play for; during a concert, he would sometimes point with his left hand at any musicians who made a mistake, while continuing to conduct with his right hand.

Kryl had twin daughters: Josephine played the violin, and Marie the piano. He founded the Women's Symphony Orchestra in which his daughters played, and served as its conductor and soloist. They performed on the Chatauqua circuit.

Kryl performed well into his sixties, but retired after enduring disputes with the musicians union. He lived most of the year in Chicago, but also owned a summer home in Wilmington, New York, where he died on August 7, 1961 at the age of eighty-six. He had been an astute businessman and quite frugal, so Kryl's estate was worth over one million dollars. Much of its value was due to Kryl's art collection, much of which was purchased from C.G. Conn when Conn was going bankrupt at the end of his career. According to Milan Yancich who knew Kryl personally, Bohumir Kryl lived in a large Lake Shore Drive apartment on the near north side of Chicago. The view from his front windows overlooked a boat harbor on Lake Michigan. Over one hundred twenty-five oil master paintings covered the walls of his apartment. Oriental rugs carpeted the floors: lovely art objects such as bronzes, porcelains, and glassware, decorated the various rooms from one end to the other. A grand piano graced the living room. An exquisite desk, with a rare Tiffany lamp, further beautified the room...Much of his art collection had been obtained at the lowest prices from C.G. Conn, the famous maker of Conn instruments, who had gone broke due to the depression. He also obtained many objects at art auctions. At the time of his death, Kryl owned 125 paintings, some by famous artists such as Manet, Girard Dou, Corot, Rubens, Millet, and Hogarth.

Solo compositions by Kryl include Columbia Fantasie, Carnival of Venice, Fantasie on Irish Airs, Du Du with Variations, King Carnival, Theresa Polka, National Fantasie, and Josephine Waltz. For the Columbia, Victor, and Zonophone labels, he recorded such solos as Ambassador Polka, The Tyroleans, Utility Polka, Columbia Fantasie, Arbucklenian Polka, Du, Du with Variations, The Last Rose of Summer, National Fantasie, King Carnival, Kryl's Favorite, and Grand Russian Fantasia. His recording of Arban's Carnival of Venice with his own band is considered a masterpiece of cornet playing. His usage of pedal tones and multiphonics are still considered phenomenal. His cornet was placed in a museum in his hometown of Horice.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008) ; Yancich, Milan. An Orchestra Musician's Odyessy : A View from the Rear (Rochester, NY : Wind Music, Inc., 1995).

Kubli, Nikolay Alexandrovich (b. Ahja [near Tartu], Estonia, May 4, 1894; d. Tallin, Estonia, Dec. 20, 1963). Estonian trumpeter and conductor. From 1913 to 1915, Kubli studied at the Viborg Music School while playing trumpet in the Helsinki Symphony Orchestra. He transferred to the Saratov Conservatory in 1915, graduating in 1918. Little is known of his early career, but he continued studying with Julius Wachs at the Tallinn Conservatory until 1934. From 1935 to 1941, he was a member of the Estonian Radio Orchestra. Later positions include being a member and conductor of the Estonian Musical Artistic Ensemble (1941-44), band conductor (1950-53), conductor of the Ilmarin factory band (1953-63), and professor of trumpet at the Tallinn Conservatory (1944-58). His most noted pupil was Abi Zeider.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kuehn, Daniel (b. Denver, Colorado, Jan. 14, 1953). American trumpeter. Kuehn grew up in Denver, Colorado. He began playing the trumpet at age twelve; his early teachers were his band directors. He later studied with John Lund (principal trombone of the Denver Symphony Orchestra) and Manuel Araujo (principal trumpet of the Denver Symphony Orchestra). After graduating from Abraham Lincoln High School in 1971, he studied with Legh Burns at the University of Denver for a year, but transferred to the North Carolina School of the Arts where he studied with William Vacchiano, Allan Dean, and Robert Nagel. He left school in 1976 to begin his playing career, but eventually completed his coursework in 1987. Additionally, he has studied with Carl "Doc" Severinsen, Vincent Cichowicz, and Frank Kaderabek.

Like his older brother David, Daniel has devoted his career to orchestral playing, serving as second trumpet of the Denver Symphony Orchestra (now the Colorado Symphony Orchestra) since 1976. He has also performed as principal of the Denver Municipal Band, Central City Opera Orchestra (1984-92), Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra (Canada, 1978), and numerous show bands. He recorded for the television show, At the Palace, for twenty-six weeks in 1979 with Jack Jones and members of the Boss Brass in Toronto. He has taught at the University of Denver (1982-86), University of Northern Colorado (1987-2003), University of Wyoming (2000-01), and Colorado State University (2009-10). In addition, he has performed and recorded with the Denver Brass, Boulder Brass, and Alpen Brass, and can be heard on the soundtrack for the film, Warriors of Virtue (1998). With his brother, he performed during the 2004 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Denver.

Kuehn and his wife Cedra, associate principal cellist with the Colorado Springs Philharmonic, have two children: Clay (b. 1988) and Leah (b. 1992). He is a certified master cabinetmaker and homebuilder.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Daniel Kuehn" (www.coloradosymphony.org/meet-the-orchestra/musicians/daniel-kuehn); personal interview, Aug. 8, 2011.

Kuehn, David W. (b. Denver, Colorado, Oct. 9, 1941). American trumpeter. Kuehn grew up in Denver. He took piano lessons before beginning to play the trumpet at age eight, studying with George Roy, and later with Edward Lenicheck. After graduating from West High School in 1959, he attended the University of Colorado for two years (1959-61) where he studied with Frank Baird, before transferring to The Juilliard School in New York City (1961-63) where he studied with William Vacchiano, and received the G. Schirmer Scholarship as outstanding student. Kuehn began his professional career playing second trumpet with the Denver Symphony Orchestra (1964-65) under Maestro Saul Caston before being drafted into the military. He was solo cornet in the US Army Field Band from 1965 to 1967, and from 1967 to 1969 was principal trumpet of The Phoenix Symphony. While with the PSO, he completed a bachelor of music education degree at Arizona State University, studying with Harold Hines. He became principal of the Buffalo Philharmonic in 1969, a position he held until 1992, and again from 1994 to 1996. He also taught at the University of Buffalo from 1972 to 1992.

In 1992, Kuehn and his wife Dr. Lisa Tedesco moved to Ann Arbor, Michigan, when Lisa was recruited as associate dean of the Dental School at the University of Michigan. At about this time, Kuehn became interested in a position in Florence, Italy, auditioned in Los Angeles for Maestro Zubin Mehta, and won the position of principal trumpet with the Maggio Musicale Orchestra. He divided his time between Ann Arbor and Florence, as well as spending a few months performing with the Symphony Orchestra of Bilboa in Spain. In 1997, Lisa began her tenure as secretary and vice president of the University of Michigan, so Kuehn left his position in Florence in 1998, and returned to Michigan where he played principal in the Michigan Opera Theatre Orchestra and principal of the Ann Arbor Symphony. He was also a member of the Detroit Chamber Winds and Strings, Chamber Brass Ensemble, and Galliard Brass Quintet.

Today, Kuehn and Lisa reside in Atlanta, Georgia, where Lisa is dean of the Graduate School and vice provost at Emory University. Although retired, Kuehn plays E-flat cornet in the Georgia Brass Band, was a featured soloist at the 2004 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Denver, and has released a CD titled Musical Landscapes for Trumpet on the Fleur de Son label. Their twin daughters are Amelia and Anna (b. 1985). Kuehn also has two sons from a previous marriage: Dean (b. 1968) and Scott (b. 1971). Kuehn has a younger brother, Daniel Kuehn, a professional trumpeter with the Colorado Symphony Orchestra. They can be heard on a recent recording (Fleur de Son) in a work by Persis Vehar. David's hobbies include reading mysteries and political economics books.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); personal interview, July 17, 2011.

Kümmel, Ludwig [Louis] (b. Gießen-Wieseck, Germany, Dec. 12, 1866; d. Darmstadt, Germany, Apr. 6, 1941). German trumpeter and cornetist. Kümmel was a pioneer cornet soloist in Germany. He was a leading performer at the Landestheater Darmstadt from 1893 to 1925, and was also known for his fine chamber music playing. He toured Russia, performing solos including his arrangement of Pablo Sarasate's violin solo, Zigeunerweisen. He had a fantastic technique and mastery of pedal tones. One of his cornet solo compositions, Introduction and Rondo (Polka-Caprice), was dedicated to Eduard Seifert (1870-1965).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Kunkee, Patrick William (b. Santa Barbara, California, Mar. 17, 1963). American trumpeter. Kunkee grew up in Santa Barbara and Goleta, California. His first trumpet teachers were Ed Harmon and John Clyman. After graduating from Dos Pueblos High School in 1981, he attended California State University-Northridge (September 1981 to June 1983, January 1984 to December 1986), and received a bachelor of music degree studying with Clyman and Mario Guarneri. He studied at the Manhattan School of Music in New York for one semester (Fall 1983). He also earned a master of music degree studying with Roy Poper and Boyde Hood at the University of Southern California (1987-89).

Kunkee attended the Music Academy of the West (summers of 1982, 1983, 1984) and the Tanglewood Music Festival (1985, 1986). He also studied with Anthony Plog, James Stamp, Rob Roy McGregor, and Nick Norton. Kunkee was a member of the National Repertory Orchestra (summers of 1987, 1988), and performed and recorded with the Summit Brass (1987).

Kunkee freelanced in Los Angeles (1985-90) before joining the Utah Symphony as second trumpet in September of 1990. The following year, he was appointed principal of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra, and in 2000 became coprincipal. Kunkee has taught as an adjunct professor at Vanderbilt University (1991-97, 2008 to present).

During his career, Kunkee has played on occasion with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, Los Angeles Philharmonic, Los Angeles Opera Orchestra, Pacific Symphony, and the Fine Arts Brass Quintet. He can also be heard on a CD titled The Colors of the Baroque (Summit) with Anthony Plog, Nick Norton, Michael Sachs, and James Thompson.

Kunkee and his wife Katie Hagen, former second horn of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra, have two daughters: Anja (b. 2005) and Nora (b. 2008). His hobbies include old cars and reading.

Bibl.: "Patrick Kunkee" (www.nashvillesymphony.org); personal interviews, Oct. 3 and 12, 2010.

Kuszyk, Brian (b. c1960). American trumpeter. Kuszyk grew up in Boyertown, Pennsylvania, with his musical family. He studied trumpet at Temple University with Seymour Rosenfeld, and was principal trumpet of the Opera Festival of New Jersey for sixteen years before becoming principal of the Opera Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Ballet, and Delaware Symphony Orchestra. He is also a member of the Chamber Orchestra of Philadelphia (since 1984), Philadelphia Brass, and Bethlehem Bach Festival Orchestra. In addition, he often serves as a substitute or extra trumpeter with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Kuszyk and his wife Laure have two children: Matthieu and Isabella. His hobbies include motorcycles and studying the French language.

Bibl.: "Brian Kuszyk" (www.philadelphiabrass.com/members/brass-kuszyk-trumpet).

Photo: Kuszyk on left, Rodney Mack on right.

Kvebæk, Harry (b. near Oslo, Norway, May 4, 1925). Norwegian trumpeter. Kvebæk grew up in a small logging community near Oslo.

He learned to play the trumpet on his own, and attended the Music Academy in Oslo where he studied with Christian Brachel and Willy Mittelbach. From 1947 to 1963, he served in the 2nd Division Band in the Norwegian Army, and during this time developed his incredible ability as a soloist.

In 1963, after his service years, Kvebæk became principal trumpet of the Oslo Philharmonic Orchestra, but relinquished this position in order to join the faculty of the Music Academy in Oslo in 1973 when he also cofounded the Norwegian National Youth Symphony Orchestra. He served as one of its instructors, and became an internationally famous teacher. His relaxed and thorough method of study helped countless brass students including Ole Edvard Antonsen and other leading Norwegian soloists. He has recorded many solo and chamber works for trumpet.

Kvebæk is a humble and congenial man. Now retired, he has devoted his time to other interests including the establishment of a logging museum in his hometown.

Bibl.: Haug, Inger. "Harry Kvebæk, A Pure Musical Vocation" (Brass Bulletin, no. 75, Mar. 1991); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Photo: Upper photo by Leif Ørnelund.

L

Laanen, Theo (b. The Haag, Netherlands, Mar. 5, 1912; d. The Haag, Netherlands, Apr. 8, 2000). Laanen was one of the most influential trumpeters in the Netherlands. He was principal trumpet of the Philharmonic Orchestra of The Haag from 1933 to 1976, and taught at the Royal Conservatory of The Haag for twenty-five years. One of his students, Otto Ketting, composed the solo work, Intrada, for him in 1958.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Lachenmeir [Lachenmeier], Paul (b. Munich, Germany, Mar. 10, 1930). German trumpeter. Lachenmeir began playing trumpet at age sixteen. From 1947 to 1950, he studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Munich (MHS) with Walter Uhlemann. He specialized in works of Bach early in his career, and was a soloist and guest orchestral player in Berlin (including ten years under Maestro Herbert von Karajan), Vienna, Cologne, Stuttgart, and Hamburg. According to Nösselt, he was also principal from 1955 until after 1980 in the Munich State Orchestra (formerly Court Orchestra). He made several recordings with the Munich Bach Orchestra conducted by Karl Richter from 1968 to 1977. From 1982 to 1996, he was a professor at the MHS.

Bibl.: Nösselt, Hans-Joachim. Ein latest Orchester (Munich, Bruckmann); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lackner, Andreas (b. Innsbruck, Austria, Sept. 7, 1964). Austrian trumpeter. Lackner studied with Karl Steininger at the Mozarteum in Salzburg. He developed a keen interest in the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, and has performed or recorded with many early music ensembles including Concentus Musicus, Ars Antiqua Austria, Chamber Orchestra of Europe, Cantus Cölln, Toronto Tafelmusik, New York Bach Ensemble, Vienna Academy Ensemble, Il Giardino Armonico, Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, Armonico Tributo Austria, Klangforum Vienna, and several others.

Lackner has performed on over one hundred CDs and gives regular master classes in Munich, Linz, Salzburg, and Trossingen. He taught Baroque trumpet at the Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy Musikhochschule in Leipzig from 1994 to 1998, and since 1999 has been teaching that instrument at the Tyrol Conservatory.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Ladnier, Thomas ("Tommy") [J.] (b. Florenceville, Louisiana, May 28, 1900; d. New York, New York, June 4, 1939). American trumpeter. Ladnier grew up in Mandeville, near New Orleans, and took trumpet lessons there from Willie "Bunk" Johnson (in 1914). He played in Mandeville with clarinetist Isidore Fritz and in Baton Rouge with Toots Johnson. In 1917, he moved to Chicago and worked in a band led by John H. Wickcliffe. He later played with Charlie Creath in St. Louis (1921), Milton Vasser (1921), and Ollie Powers (1923). His first recordings were with Powers. He also recorded many records as a backup artist for singers such as Ida Cox, Ethel Waters, Julia Davis, Edmonia Henderson, Monette Moore, Alberta Hunter, Ma Rainey, Edna Hicks, and the team of Ford and Ford.

During the years 1924-25, Ladnier made some excellent recordings with Lovie Austin's Blue Serenaders. His style was similar to that of King Oliver and Louis Armstrong. In 1925, he briefly played with Fate Marable and King Oliver, but in June of that year sailed to Europe to tour with Sam Woodling's Chocolate Kiddies. He left the band in June of 1926 to go to Poland and work with Louis Douglas's revue, but returned to New York two months later where he played with Billy Fowler's orchestra and then with Fletcher Henderson's big band. He was a leading soloist with Henderson (October 1926 to late 1927). Among his most popular solos were The Chant, Tozo, I'm Coming Virginia, St. Louis Blues, Snag It, Clarinet Marmalade, and St. Louis Shuffle.

Ladnier went back with Sam Woodling in early 1928, and embarked on a yearlong tour of Europe. He recorded ten songs in Spain (1929) while on the tour. After the tour, he stayed in Europe and performed with Benny Peyton, Harry Flemming's Blue Birds, Louis Douglas, and his own band in France (spring 1930). He then continued to tour Europe with Noble Sissle's Sizzling Syncopators. In 1930, he made a film with Noble Sissle in London alongside trumpeter Arthur Briggs. He returned to the U.S. in 1931.

Tommy Ladnier and Sidney Bechet, also a Sissle alumnus, formed a band called the New Orleans Feetwarmers that regularly played at the Saratoga Club in Harlem and the Savoy Ballroom in New York. In 1932, they recorded six tunes including Shag and Maple Leaf Rag. As a side business, the two men ran the Southern Tailor Shop but spent much of their time jamming in the back of the building. A year later, Bechet rejoined Sissle's group, bringing both the Feetwarmers and the tailor business to an end. Ladnier then formed his own group in New Jersey. Finding little success, he taught music for a while and then a few years later moved to the town of Newburgh in upstate New York. He became a heavy drinker and did little trumpet playing until he was finally invited to join the critic Hugues Panassié for a series of historic recordings with Mezz Mezzrow in 1938.

The first recording session, supervised by Panassié, was difficult. One of the trumpet players in the band was Sidney De Paris, whose incessant growling on the trumpet became bothersome to Mezz and Ladnier. Ladnier got drunk and the session soon deteriorated. Mezzrow ended up throwing De Paris out of the session. A week later, they recorded again (without De Paris), producing a classic recording of Really the Blues. A month later, Ladnier recorded in Carnegie Hall with a reformed New Orleans Feetwarmers group. He also made a fine recording with singer Rosetta Crawford.

On June 4, 1939, just one week after his thirty-ninth birthday, Tommy Ladnier suffered a heart attack and died. Four days later, the Port of Harlem Jazzmen (including Sidney Bechet) recorded Blues for Tommy as a tribute to their friend.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Lindström, Bo and Dan Vernhettes. Traveling Blues - The Life and Music of Tommy Ladnier (Jazz'Edit; June 2009).

Lafosse, Marcel (b. Marly-le-Roi [near Paris] France, 1894; d. 1969). French-born American trumpeter. His mother gave him piano lessons, but when his father started to give him trumpet lessons, the latter instrument won out! In 1914, he graduated with a First Prize in cornet from the Paris Conservatory (under Alexandre Petit). His teacher wrote the last of his 12 Grandes Études for him. Then he was immediately mobilized, spending the next four years in the army. After World War II, he became principal trumpet for two seasons with the Concerts Pasdeloup and then joined the orchestra of the Concerts Colonne as first cornet. In 1922, he became principal trumpet with the orchestra of the Casino de Monte Carlo. In 1924, he returned to Paris to perform with the orchestra of the Opéra Comique and of the Concerts Koussevitzky. It was here that Maestro Koussevitzky invited Lafosse in 1926 to become second trumpeter in the Boston Symphony Orchestra; he served in this position in a nearly all-French trumpet section (including principal Georges Mager and third trumpet René Voisin, later René's son Roger and Lafosse's nephew André Côme, as well as Joseph Mann from Prague) until 1957. He and Mager became the teachers of Roger Voisin (member of the BSO 1935-73, principal in 1950) and Adolph Herseth (principal in the Chicago SO from 1948 to 2001). Lafosse subsequently became professor at the New England and Boston Conservatories.

As hobbies, he enjoyed fishing and teaching Belotte.

Bibl.: Crane, Paul. "Men Behind Music" (article from unnamed Boston newspaper, Feb. 3, 1940, supplied by Norman Schweikert).

Charcoal sketch of Lafosse (1936) by Gerome Brush.

Lafrance, Manon (b. Montreal, Québec, Canada, Apr. 16, 1964). Canadian trumpeter. Lafrance began playing bugle in a drum corps at age ten, and at age twelve started playing trumpet in her high school band. At age thirteen, she was admitted to the music conservatory in Montreal where she studied with Jean-Louis Chatel for seven years. She won the First Prize in chamber music in 1985, and First Prize in trumpet when she graduated from the conservatory in 1986. She received a grant to travel occasionally to New York City for monthly lessons during one year with Philip Smith, principal of the New York Philharmonic. She also studied for one summer in Banff, Canada with David Hickman. In addition, she studied with Vincent Cichowicz, and had one lesson with Arnold Jacobs.

Lafrance has maintained a varied career. She is currently principal of the Orchestre Symphonique de Laval, Orchestre Symphonique de Longeuil, and the Orchestre des Grands Ballets Canadiens in Montreal. She has performed with the Montreal Symphony (1994-95) and the National Arts Center Orchestra.

From 2007-09, she was a member of the "trumpet dream team" of the Canadian Brass. She has recorded numerous soundtracks for radio, television, and film, and can be heard on over fifty commercial recordings including three CDs with the Canadian Brass. She is a member of the Société de Musique Contemporaine du Québec and the Ensemble Contemporain de Montréal.

Lafrance has been a professor at the Montreal Conservatory since 1997, and since 1989 has also taught at the University of Québec. Since 2001, she has served on the faculty of the summer camp for the Domaine Forget Music Academy in Charlevoix, Québec. Lafrance was a featured soloist during the 2008 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Banff, Canada.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Manon Lafrance" (The Brass Herald, May 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lyron, Delon. "Teaching and Living with Respect for Values: An Interview with Manon Lafrance" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2010); "Manon Lafrance Biography" (www.manonlafrance.ca); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lafricain, Edward N. [L'Africain, Edouard] (b. Montreal, Quebec, Canada, Dec. 2, 1852; d. Malden, Massachusetts, May 16, 1921). Canadian-born American trumpeter. Lafricain's family immigrated to the United States in 1866 when he was fourteen years old. Little is known of his early studies and career, but he is reported to have been in the Boston Symphony Orchestra (1894-97) as third trumpet, and the Boston Promenade Concerts Orchestra (1887-93, 1896-97, and 1900-02). He served as principal trumpet in the Boston Symphony for one season (1887-88), as second trumpet (1888-93 and 1900-02), and as third trumpet (1896-97).

Lafricain performed Handel's Messiah with the Haydn & Handel Society in 1887. He also played with the New York Philharmonic (1898) and Paur's Orchestra (1899). Lafricain is also known to have conducted the Naval Brigade Band of Boston.

Bibl.: "Principal Musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra" (www.stokowski.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lagorce, Marcel [Antoine] (b. Ussel, France, June 14, 1932). French trumpeter. Lagorce is from a family of musicians. His father was an amateur trumpeter; his son, Patrick Lagorce, also plays the trumpet.

Marcel Lagorce studied under Mr. Durant at the conservatory in Limoges, and made his debuts in the Limoges Municipal Band conducted by René Lagorce (1947-50). Lagorce received a bachelor's diploma in philosophy and letters in 1951. Beginning in October 1951, he studied with Raymond Sabarich at the Paris Conservatory where he was a classmate of the great Maurice André. Lagorce won prizes in cornet in June 1954, and in trumpet in 1955.

Lagorce played in an army band, Garde Républicaine (1956), Concerts Colonne Orchestre (1956), and the RTF Philharmonic Orchestra (1957-67). He became principal of the Orchestra de Paris (1967-93), and was a member of the Ars Nova Brass Quintet. He taught at the Paris Conservatory from 1980 to 1988 (succeeding André), and published Petites Etudes Concertantes (Editions Robert Martin). Lagorce appeared on many recordings and tours with Maurice André. After retiring from his Parisian activities, he joined the Limoges Municipal Band in 1994, switching to French horn, then tuba.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Laird, Michael (b. Harpenden, England, Aug. 22, 1942). British trumpeter. Laird was a student of Walter Holy, the person who successfully led the worldwide revival of the Baroque trumpet. Laird studied briefly with Helmut Wobisch in Vienna, and attended the Royal College of Music, studying with Dennis Clift and Richard Walton (1963-65).

In 1965, Laird introduced the "clarino" in his country with John Wilbraham and Ian Wilson in Bach's Cantata 69 with the English Chamber Orchestra under Paul Steinitz. He also played with the London Philharmonic Orchestra (alongside Gordon Webb as principal trumpet). During this period, he played with Duke Ellington's orchestra, but soon became a specialist on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet. Laird has freelanced a great deal in London as a player of Baroque and modern trumpets and has performed on many recordings including several of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 by Bach (performed on Baroque trumpet). He has been a member of the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble and David Murrow's Early Music Consort.

When vent holes began to appear on replicas of Baroque trumpets during the late 1960s and early 1970s, Laird invented the "English system" that utilizes four holes. He uses this instrument in ensembles such as the Orchestra of the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, the London Classical Players, and his own ensemble—Baroque Brass of London. He is a professor at the Royal College of Music in London, the Birmingham Conservatory, and a teacher at the MHS Trossingen where he specializes in Baroque trumpet performance.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lamberth, Arne (b. Mjölby, Sweden, Oct. 13, 1926; d. Hjärnarp, near Helsingborg, Sweden, Nov. 21, 1977). Swedish trumpeter and bandleader. Lamberth came from a musical family, started at age seven to play the violin in the family circle, and began studying music at age fourteen. From 1942 to 1946, he played trumpet in a Swedish military corps band, and from 1944 to 1946 studied trumpet, violin, oboe, and piano at the Royal Academy of Music in Stockholm. After graduating, he moved to Denmark where he played first trumpet with Danish pop and jazz orchestras led by Niels Foss, Bruno Henriksen, and Kai Mortenson. Beginning in 1951, he was a member—soloist and leader— of the Danish Radio Big Band. He also founded Arne Lamberth's Progressive Jazz group, which showed a preference for Stan Kenton's style.

Despite the various styles in which he was conversant, Lamberth was most successful in the entertainment field. During the late 1950s and 1960s, Lamberth released over a dozen albums that became so popular that he was considered a bigger music star in Sweden and Denmark than Elvis Presley. He was particularly well known for playing ballads such as Stranger in Paradise and Greensleeves. He also composed music for Swedish and Danish films, and led a band in Copenhagen for thirteen years. He toured throughout all of Europe including Russia. In 1971 he returned to Sweden, founded a music school, and played often in churches. Unfortunately, he died of cancer of the vocal cords at the early age of fifty-one.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lamprecht, Ernst (b. Oberwaltersdorf, LowerAustria, Sept. 10, 1929). Austrian trumpeter. Lamprecht began playing violin and saxophone, but switched to trumpet at age twenty, learning by himself with the Arban method. He later joined the orchestra of Albert Baldsiefen on the Linz Radio, and played with dance bands led by Horst Winter, Karel Krautgartner, Johannes Fehring, Buddy Rich, and with the ORF Big Band and other studio formations. He toured with Shirley Bassey, Peter Alexander, and Freddy Quinn. For the last several years, he has run an a studio in Möllersdorf, near Traiskirchen.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Lane, Steve (b. London, England, Nov. 7, 1921). English cornetist.

Lane first played the guitar and banjo. He attended The Latyman School on a science scholarship, and after graduating, worked for C.A. Vandervell, a leader in diesel technology. He was in the military during World War II, and then joined The Ragtime Trio as a guitarist. Because of difficulty in reaching certain chords, Lane switched to the cornet during his twenties. He studied with Phil Parker Sr. and Phil Parker Jr.

Lane's interest in Dixieland music led him to form the Southern Stompers in 1951. The group became popular—even legendary—during the second half of the twentieth century, and changed its name to the Red Hot Peppers during the mid 1980s. It recorded numerous albums for the VJM, Stomp, Major Minor, 77, Stomp Off, and Azure labels. A few of Lane's albums include Just Gone (Major Minor), Snake Rag (Stomp Off), and Easy Come—Easy Go (Azure). Now retired, Lane enjoys writing articles for various jazz magazines.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lanese, Robert ("Bob") (b. Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 2, 1941). American trumpeter living in Hamburg, Germany. Lanese first learned to play the violin at age five, then the trombone, and finally the trumpet at age eight. He studied with Richard Liederbach, Harry Herforth, and Louis

Davidson, and earned a bachelor of science in music education degree from The Ohio State University in 1965 under Richard Sudendorf. Upon graduation, he joined the military as a member of the NORAD Commanders big band in Colorado Springs, Colorado. With the First Division, he was stationed in Saigon (1967-68) during the Vietnam War. In 1968, he became one of John Haynie's graduate teaching assistants at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) where he played with the One O'Clock Lab Band and received a master of music degree in performance. Additional study was with James Stamp and Carmine Caruso.

After a short time in New York City, Lanese toured Europe with the Glenn Miller Orchestra under the direction of Buddy De Franco (1971). He played in the North German Radio big band in Hamburg, Germany from 1971 to 1975, and also became a member of the James Last band in 1972, a relationship that lasted thirty years. He played at times in the bands of Bert Kaempfert, Jo Ment, Kai Warner, Roberto Blanco, Peter Herbolzheimer, Vicky Leandros, Robbie Williams, Frank Valdor, and others. In the late 1970s, Lanese formed his own group in Hamburg, the Downtown Big Band, which made several recordings including That Lovin' Feelin' and Trumpet in the Sun for Europa Records. This rehearsal band provided an excellent start for numerous musicians who have become professional players and teachers. Since 2002, he has done a great deal of studio work, and has been an active clinician. In 2002, he started teaching at the Danish-German Wind Academy in Rømø, Denmark. He has worked with such artists as Lew Soloff, Arturo Sandoval, Bobby Shew, Randy Brecker, Clark Terry

(with whom he recorded the CD, Live in Hamburg), Jiggs Whigham, Ack van Rooyen, and many others. He has also conducted numerous big bands including the Landesjugend Big Band Thüringen, Big Band Bremen, Westphälische Wilhelms-Universität Big Band, and the Werder Bremen Big Band. He is a member of Otto Sauter's Ten of the Best trumpet ensemble.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bob Lanese" (http://en.wikipedia.org); personal interview, Nov. 16, 2012.

Lang, William ("Willie") (b. County Mayo, Ireland, 1919; d. Harrogate, England, Dec. 14 [18?], 2006). British cornetist and trumpeter. Lang grew up in Moorland. His father played the flute. As a boy, "Willie" played in the Norland Band and the Bradford Band. At age sixteen, be became assistant principal cornet in the Black Dyke Mills Band (alongside the legendary Harold Jackson), and in 1941 recorded Jenny Jones with the Black Dyke band. He also worked as an apprentice builder and stonemason at Parkers Yard, Sowerby Bridge.

In 1941, Lang served as a tank commander in the 1st Field Squadron Royal Engineers of the 8th Army, and fought in Italy, Austria, and North Africa. In 1945, he returned to the Black Dyke band with which he played for five years. In 1950, he resigned that position to join the West Riding Orchestra, but returned to Black Dyke in 1952, with which he played for two more years. He also played in the Hallé Orchestra conducted by Sir John Barbirolli (1953-60) before joining the BBC Northern Orchestra.

Lang joined the London Symphony Orchestra as principal trumpet (1962-71), then coprincipal to Howard Snell (1971-75), and then principal again. With the LSO, he recorded numerous movie soundtracks including Star Wars (1977), Superman: The Movie (1978), The Guns of Navarrone, and Where Eagles Dare. In 1980, he toured with the London Philharmonic Brass Ensemble (concerts in France). In 1987, he performed a work for four cornets and band by Elgar Howarth with Maurice Murphy, James Shepherd, Phillip McCann, and the Black Dyke Mills Band. He also worked with many celebrity musicians including Frank Zappa, Mike Batt, and The Wombles. In July 1968, he participated in the hit song, Hey Jude, with The Beatles, alongside Denis Egan, Ralph Izen, and David Mason.

Lang was one of England's finest cornet soloists. He won the All England Solo Championship in 1947, 1948, and 1949. He also recorded an album of trumpet concertos by Haydn, Hummel, and Neruda. He died in 2006 from lung cancer.

Bibl.: Rutter, Suzanne. "Death of Musician Who Played with The Beatles" (Evening Courier, Jan. 9, 2007); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Lange, Arno (b. Berlin, Germany, Aug. 30, 1937). German trumpeter. Lange began playing trumpet at the relatively late age of seventeen, and from 1955 to 1961 studied with Hans Bode at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin. He immediately became principal trumpet of the orchestra of the Deutsche Oper Berlin, a position he held for many years.

In 1968, Renold Schilke invited Lange to replace him as teacher at the Chicago Music College (summer session). Lange returned to Chicago for the 1973-74 season to play in the Lyric Opera Orchestra as well as teaching at the Chicago Musical College in an exchange with Tom Crown, who replaced him in the Deutsche Oper Berlin. He was also a guest teacher at Northwestern University.

Lange was a founder and member of the Berlin Brass Quintet in 1969, a cofounder of the former Euro-International Trumpet Guild, and has judged international trumpet competitions and presented workshops in Germany, Holland, and the U.S. Among his recordings is Kabinettstücke: Trumpet Pieces of the 1920s (Stegemann). From 1993 to 2009, he was the brass teacher for the International Youth Festival in Bayreuth. He retired from the opera orchestra in 2002, but is still active in coaching the brass sections in youth orchestras as well as teaching in workshops.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); http://www.tomcrownmutes.com/about_tom_crown.html; personal interview with Edward Tarr, Feb. 15, 2013.

Lange, Peter ("Sputnik") (b. Hamburg, Germany, July 13, 1938). German trumpeter. Lange's first trumpet lessons were with his father. He later attended the Klärscher Conservatory, and joined the Old Merry Tale Jazzband. From 1960 to 1962, he performed with the Tremble Kids, a traditional jazz band, which was very popular in Germany. From 1963 to 1967, he lived in Frankfurt where he was a member of the City Orchestra of Frankfurt am Main and several dance orchestras.

Lange was a member of the Joe Lord Company Showband from 1967 to 1980, which often appeared on radio and television, and with which he learned to play jazz in the style of Clifford Brown. Between 1980 and 1987, he played with the Hot Swingers and the Darktown Jazzband in Frankfurt, and beginning in 1987, was a member of the Frank Runhof Quintet in Darmstadt. Since 1995, he has been a member of Alexander's Swingtime Band in Stuttgart, Allotria Jazz Band (Ascona Festival 2005), and Louis Armstrong Revival Band (all of Armstrong's lead and solo work has been meticulously transcribed and arranged for three trumpets by Lange).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Langhage, Henning (b. Hildesheim, Germany, July 21, 1943). German trumpeter. As a boy, Langhage learned to play the harmonica and the cornet. During his teens, he listened to, and was inspired by the recordings of Eddie Condon and Wild Bill Davison, more than the traditional jazz (Dixie) recordings coming out of England.

Langhage's career began with the Hot Rhythm Aces (1966-84), a Dixie group in Hannover. At the end of the 1980s he played with the Dixie College Band in Hamm, and in addition since 1991 has been a key member of the Dixie Small Stars in Fröndenberg. He has also performed with Terry Lightfoot, Peter "Banjo" Meyer, Olivia Detante, Sonny Morris, Ian Wheeler, and many others. Some of his recordings include Back Home in Honky Tonky Town (with the Dixie Small Stars), The July Sessions (with Lutz Eikelmann), and My Blue Heaven (with the Hot Jazz Society).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Laplace, Michel (b. Bois Colombes [near Paris], France, Nov. 7, 1949). French trumpeter and radiologist. Laplace is well known among trumpeters as an avid writer and organizer of two trumpet festivals. He comes from a family that is filled with amateur musicians. His great-grandfather, Jean Davezies (1861-1923), was a well-known French cornetist. Laplace was first musically inspired by opera singer Robert Massard (b. 1925), who was a close friend of the family. Laplace became interested in jazz music when he heard a 1966 concert with Buck Clayton. Laplace's father purchased a trumpet for him when he was sixteen, and he began lessons with his lifelong friend, Gaëton Berton. Laplace became interested in classical trumpet playing when he heard his first concert by the famed French trumpeter, Maurice André.

Laplace attended the University in Tours (1969-77), becoming a medical doctor in 1977, and completing radiology and medical imagery studies (1977-81). At the same time, he studied trumpet with Berton (1966-74) and took lessons from Denis Egan (1977, 1980, and other occasions). Laplace was an active musician, playing with the Jacques Jay Big Band (1981, lead), Big Brass & Company (1979-80), Jerome Naulais Big Band, Trumpet Brothers (1981), Marc Roberts (1977-78; 1980-81), Bill Coleman (1980), Roger Voisin Trumpet Ensemble (1983), Raymond Fonsèque, SAMP (1984-92), and others. He also performed in numerous concerts for trumpet and organ, and formed Michel Laplace's Bunk Gang jazz group. He can be heard on a cassette recording, Meditation, by Connie Westerberg (flugelhorn solo) included with Edna White's book, On Taming the Devil's Tongue (published by Edna White).

Laplace established a trumpet workshop in Tours (summer 1977) and was the French editor of the International Trumpet Guild Journal during the late 1970s. He, along with Roger Delmotte and Henri Van Haeke, formed the Guilde Française des Trompettes, and with Thierry Caens, cofounded Cuivres en France. His close associations and friendships with some of the world's leading trumpeters led to an insatiable desire to interview such people as Maurice André, Edna White, Louis Davidson, Armando Ghitalla, Pierre Thibaud, Roger Delmotte, Timofei Dokshitser, and many others. As a result, Laplace is today considered to be the world's leading expert on the lives and careers of famous trumpeters.

Laplace has authored dozens of articles for various medical journals, as well as brass and music magazines such as Brass Bulletin, International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jazz Hot, the New Grove Dictionary of Jazz, and Diapason. He published an English translation of the text of Charlier's 36 Etudes Transcendantes through the ITG, has contributed to Friedel Keim's book, Das große Buch der Trompete, and has published an electronic encyclopedic work of trumpeters titled Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (self-published CD-Rom, 2005).

Laplace retired from medicine in December 2009 after working as a radiologist in Tours (1977-81) and in Bourges (1982-2000; Chief of the Imagery Department, 1995-2000), Saint Flour (Chief of Imaging Department, 2000-04) and Agen (2004-09). Laplace and his wife Lisiane ("Lily") (married in 1978), a retired doctor of ultrasound imaging and musician, live in Marciac, France, and have two sons: Cedric (b. 1978) and Jean-Marc (b. 1981). Laplace enjoys playing the trumpet for fun, gardening, and writing articles about trumpet players.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); personal interviews, Sept. 11 and 12, 2010.

Larkin, Milton ("Milt" "Tippy") (b. Houston, Texas, Oct. 10, 1910; d. Houston, Texas, Aug. 31, 1996). American trumpeter, vocalist, trombonist, and bandleader. Larkin's father died when he was six. Inspired by watching Willie "Bunk" Johnson in concert, Larkin taught himself to play trumpet, and soon freelanced with the bands of Chester Boone and Giles Mitchell. He formed his own band that toured the Southwest from 1936 to 1943, and occasionally played in cities such as Kansas City, Chicago, and New York. He moved his band (that included "Wild Bill" Davison, Illinois Jacquet, Arnett Cobb, and Eddie Vinson) to Chicago where it became comparable to those of Cab Calloway and Jimmy Lunceford. However, his band did very little recording because Larkin refused to accept the low pay offered to black musicians at the time.

Larkin was drafted into the US Army in 1943-46. He was assigned to a band led by Sy Oliver, and began doubling on valve trombone. After his service years, he formed another band. Between 1946 and 1954, his band recorded only about a dozen tunes. Most of these featured Larkin as a vocalist or valve trombonist. He played with Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Buck Clayton, B.B. King, and settled in New York City in 1956, played with his own septet at the Celebrity Club, and retired to Houston during the mid 1970s.

Larkin founded Get Involved Now, a nonprofit music organization that provided live concerts for audiences that were unable to travel, such as at hospitals and nursing homes. He was given the Jefferson Award for community service by the City of Houston. He suffered from Alzheimer's disease during his last few years of life, and died from pneumonia on August 31, 1996 at the age of eighty-five. He was survived by his wife Catherine (Mouton) Larkin (married in 1930) and their four children.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Milt Larkin" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Milt_Larkin); "Milt Larkin" (www.allaboutjazz.com/php/musician.php?id=8586).

Photo: Milt Larkin and his band.

LaRocca, Dominic ("Nick") ("Joe Blade") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Apr. 11, 1889; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 22, 1961). American cornetist and trumpeter. LaRocca remains an important, yet controversial figure in jazz history. His parents immigrated to America from Sicily. His father was an amateur cornetist. Nick taught himself to play the cornet and freelanced while earning a living as an electrician. He formed his first band in 1908 and also played in early white groups led by the Brunies Brothers (1911) and Eddie Edwards.

From 1912 to 1916, LaRocca played in Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Bands, and in 1915 also became a member of Johnny Stein's band. In 1916, Stein and LaRocca moved to Chicago and formed Stein's Dixie Jass Band, which soon played for five months at Schiller's Café. The members of the band became dissatisfied with their salaries, and broke away from Stein to form a new group called the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, which LaRocca led.

In 1917, the ODJB moved to New York and quickly became a sensation, since this was the first time New Yorkers had heard jazz music. It was the first jazz group to ever record, making its debut recording with Columbia. Side A consisted of Darktown Strutter's Ball, and side B, Indiana. Although the recording was cut on January 30, 1917, the label decided to shelve the project because it feared that the music was too crude and wild for public taste at the time.

Frustrated, LaRocca approached Columbia's rival company Victor to plan a recording for February 26 of the same year. Victor was quick to release a disc containing two tunes, Livery Stable Blues and Dixie Jazz Band One-Step, which became a hit and made the ODJB nationally famous. Columbia immediately released its earlier recording to capitalize on the group's popularity.

The ODJB appeared in a silent movie for Charlie Chaplin in 1917 called The Good-for-Nothing that fueled public awareness of the group. Later that year and into 1918, the group made many other recordings that included three original compositions by LaRocca: Tiger Rag, At the Jazz Band Ball, and Clarinet Marmalade. These tunes alone would later establish LaRocca's place in jazz history, overshadowing his other important accomplishments.

It didn't take long for other jazz groups to form, imitating the style and music of the ODJB, competition that LaRocca did not welcome. He even offered money to new groups if they would leave New York. But, when a new band bested the ODJB in a "battle of the bands" concert, LaRocca was so upset that he took a knife to the drumheads of the competing band's drums, leading to his becoming known by the nickname "Joe Blade."

The ODJB brought jazz to Europe during a 1919-20 tour. It recorded in England and received the same degree of success in Europe as it had in the United States. After the group returned to New York, it recorded four more records. However, several members of the group began to leave for various reasons, some of which were due to LaRocca's increasingly difficult personality. Additionally, dance music was becoming more and more popular, and so the group's appeal to the public diminished.

LaRocca suffered a mental breakdown in January of 1925, and was advised to give up music because the strain of keeping his band going was too much for him. He took the advice and returned to his hometown of New Orleans where he ran a successful building contractor business for the next eleven years.

LaRocca was approached in 1936 with an offer to reform the ODJB to appear in the movie, The Big Broadcast of 1937, but he felt that it would be too difficult to assemble the original members of the band, so he declined it. But he later reconsidered the offer, and eventually managed to reform the group with its charter members. Although too late for the movie, the group did appear on the Ed Wynn Radio Show and made a strong comeback. Inspired by this success, yet wanting to be more in style with current trends, LaRocca formed a fourteen-piece dance orchestra that recorded nine tunes in late 1936. His ODJB group also rerecorded six of its earlier hits and appeared in the film, The March of Time. However, just as before, members of the two groups began to have personality conflicts, and they broke up on February 1, 1938. This time, LaRocca retired from performing music for good.

During the last twenty-three years of his life, LaRocca became increasingly bitter about Negroes being credited with the invention of jazz music, stating Our music is strictly a white man's music. We patterned our earlier efforts after military marches which we heard at public concerts in New Orleans in our youth. Many writers have attributed this rhythm that we introduced as something coming from the African jungles, and crediting the Negro race with it. My contention is that the Negroes learned to play this rhythm and music from the whites. He called himself "The Creator of Jazz," "The Christopher Columbus of Music," and even "the most lied about person in history since Jesus Christ." He even went so far as to characterize the attribution of the origins of jazz to Negroes as "a Communist conspiracy."

LaRocca's letter writing campaign to newspapers and radio stations accomplished little, except to damage his reputation. His autobiography, The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, written with H.O. Brunn is also controversial. While it is an important glimpse into early jazz history, it also reveals the mind of an extreme egotist who discredited the other members of the ODJB in their roles as jazz pioneers. In 1958, LaRocca donated his collection of hundreds of papers, photographs, and memorabilia to the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University in New Orleans. Again, many jazz historians feel that this gold mine of information was biased by LaRocca to exclude or alter certain documents that would have given more credit to his colleagues. Knowing LaRocca's state of mind during his last years, it is difficult to separate fact from exaggeration.

During the 1980s, LaRocca's heirs raised awareness of his importance by helping to commission a bronze bust of his likeness and placing it in the foyer of the Auditorium LaRocca in Salaparuta, Sicily, where the LaRocca family originated. Copies of the bust now reside in the lobby of the Vincenzo Bellini Palermo Music Conservatory in Italy, and the Louisiana State Museum. Recent CDs of LaRocca's ODJB are 75th Anniversary [of the ODJB] (Bluebird) and In England [with the ODJB] (EMI Pathe). His son, James LaRocca, is trumpeter and leader of Dixieland groups in New Orleans.

LaRocca's playing influenced later jazz trumpeters such as Bix Beiderbecke. Several of his compositions are jazz standards, and his ODJB made the first jazz recordings and introduced jazz to Europe.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Nick LaRocca" (www.biographybase.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Laroo, Saskia (b. Amsterdam, Netherlands, July 31, 1959). Dutch trumpeter. Laroo learned to play several instruments beginning with the recorder at age seven, as well as cello, saxophone, bass, and trumpet (age eight). She first played trumpet in a local brass band. At age fifteen, she began playing the guitar as well, and joined her first big band at age sixteen. Her favorite trumpeter was Miles Davis, who left an indelible mark on her style, resulting in her being called by American critics, the Lady Miles Davis.

From 1978 to 1979, Laroo studied at the University of Amsterdam with Roy Raaymakers. She then transferred to the Hilversum Academy where she studied with Ack van Rooyen. After graduating in 1985, she began her professional career with Pim Jacobs, Denise Jannah, Madeline Bell, Toots Thielemans, Ronnie Cuber, and Teddy Edwards, playing free jazz and avant-garde music. Her performances include a substantial measure of electronic, rap, poetry, jazz, and hip-hop styles.

Laroo has toured the world, performing in concerts at dozens of leading festivals and jazz venues. Most of the time, she plays the trumpet with only one hand (left or right!). She has formed several groups, including Salsa Bop, Jazzkia, and the Saskia Laroo Band. She established her own label, Laroo Records, and has released five albums under her name: It's Like Jazz, Bodymusic, Jazzkia, Sunset Eyes (with Teddy Williams), Really Jazzy.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Saskia Laroo's official website: www.saskialaroo.com.

Larsen, Tage (b. Cambridge, Massachusetts, Nov. 7, 1970). American trumpeter. Larsen grew up in Cambridge, Massachusetts, graduating from Cambridge Rindge and Latin High School. He studied at Michigan State University with Richard Illman, receiving a bachelor of music degree, and at the Eastman School of Music with Barbara Butler and Charles Geyer where he received his master of music degree. Additionally, he studied with Philip Smith and Langston Fitzgerald III.

Larsen began his professional career as solo cornet of the US Marine Band in Washington, D.C. in 1995, and was also principal trumpet of the Annapolis Symphony Orchestra. After his service years, he joined the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra as second trumpet (2000-02). In July of 2002, he became the first Afro-American musician of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, serving as fourth/utility trumpet. He is also an adjunct faculty member at DePaul University.

Larsen and his wife Amy, acting principal trumpet of the Peoria Symphony Orchestra, have two sons, Zachary and Ethan.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Tage Larsen" (http://africlassical.blogspot.com/2009/09/ebayjetcom-tage-larsen-chicago.html); "Tage Larsen" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/news02/larsen.htm).

Larson, Jacob ("Jake") F[rancis]. (b. Grafton, North Dakota, Dec. 4, 1936). American trumpeter. Larson grew up in Drayton, North Dakota, and began playing trumpet at age twelve. His first teachers were William Pond and Leo Haesley. After graduating from Grand Forks High School in Grand Forks, North Dakota in 1954, he received a bachelor of music degree at the Cincinnati College-Conservatory (1954-57), master of music degree at Kent State University (1958-61), and a doctor of musical arts degree at the University of Cincinnati (1969-76). His teachers include Frank Simon, Henry Wohlgemuth, Eugene Blee, Don Jacoby, and Bert Truax.

Larson's long and distinguished teaching career began in the public schools of Youngstown, Ohio (1964-67). He taught trumpet at Youngstown State University (1967-69), Colorado State University (1969-77), and the University of Oklahoma (1977-99, although still teaching there part-time). He has served as a clinician in Guatemala, Australia, Europe, Singapore, and China, and for over ten years taught at the Summer Arts Institute at Quartz Mountain. Among his many students are David B. Hooten, Alan Wise, Robert Goodner, and Rick Jordan. Larson was inducted into the Oklahoma Higher Education Hall of Fame in 2007.

As a performer, Larson was principal of the Birmingham Symphony Orchestra (1957-58) and the Mineria Orchestra in Mexico City (summer 1986). He served in The US Air Force Band in Washington, D.C. (1959-63), and the Oklahoma City Philharmonic (since 1977).

Jacob and Lorna Larson have three children, Christina Casey (b. 1961), Eric (b. 1964), and Kurt (b. 1967), but are now divorced. Jacob is currently married to Ella Joy Nelson (since 1994). She is the Boyd Professor of Music and head of the music education department at the University of Oklahoma.

Bibl.: Greig, Murray. "The Oklahoma City Philharmonic Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2005); "Jacob F. Larson" (www.ohehs.org/hof/jacoblarson.html); personal interview, Jan. 8, 2012.

Laskey, [Joseph] Scott A. (b. Elmhurst, Illinois, Apr. 17, 1953). American designer. Laskey grew up in Itasca, Illinois. He began playing the trumpet at age ten, and studied with several local teachers including Frank Lisanti. After graduating from Lake Park High School in 1971, he attended Illinois Wesleyan University for one year, but transferred to Roosevelt University in Chicago in the fall of 1972, where he studied with Renold Schilke, Tom Crown, and Arno Lange. In 1974, he began presenting clinics and working at conventions for Schilke trumpets.

In January 1975, Laskey was surprised when Schilke hired him as sales manager for Schilke Music Products. He gradually learned how custom mouthpieces were produced, and was later put in charge of mouthpiece production. In April 1999, he formed The Laskey Company, which produces trumpet mouthpieces and custom trumpets in Lisle, Illinois.

Laskey and his wife Susan Stockton, a former advertising manager for a large insurance company, and now the chief financial officer of The Laskey Company, have a son, Alexander Laskey (b. 1991).

Bibl.: personal interview, Aug. 25, 2011.

Lässig, Karl (b. Bockau, Erzgebirge, Saxony, Germany, Dec. 21, 1924). German trumpeter. Lässig studied with Heinrich Teubig. He was a member of the State Opera Orchestra in Berlin from 1952 to 1959, played with the State Theatre Orchestra of Braunschweig from 1959 to 1963, and with the National Theatre Orchestra in Mannheim from 1963 until his retirement in 1989. He also performed with the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra during the summers of 1960 to 1963. He taught at the Musikhochschule Heidelberg-Mannheim.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lattuca, Gino (b. Mons, Belgium, Jan. 6, 1955). Belgian trumpeter and flugelhornist. After World War II, Lattuca moved with his Italian parents to Belgium. First he learned to play an E-flat military trumpet, and then he studied first at the academy of La Louvière and next with André Marchal at the Mons Conservatory. He began his playing career as a classical performer in the National Orchestra and the Belgian Radio-Television Orchestra, but during the early 1980s, began turning his attention to jazz music. He has played with the Brussels Jazz Orchestra, ACT Big Band, Jazz Addiction Band, South Spirits, Free Time, Diva Smiles, Lilith, Belgian Trumpet Combination, and other groups. He has recorded with most of the groups he has played with, as well as with Gianna Nannini, Kris Defoort, Myriam Alter, Judy Niemack, David Linx, Michael Blass, Steve Houben, and many others.

A popular freelance soloist at jazz festivals throughout Europe, Luttuca has also performed at dozens of jazz clubs in Germany and France. He is currently active with his own Gino Lattuca Quartet, as well as with other groups such as Radoni's Tribe, Village Big Band, Alain Cupper Quintet, Marco Locurcio Sextet, and The Belgian Jazz Big Band. Among his many CDs are My Impression (B. Sharp), Speed Limit (B. Sharp), Wait and See (B. Sharp), Diva Smiles (Arpèges), Silent Walk (Challenge), and Bad Influence (Igloo).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Gino Lattuca" (www.jazzinbelgium.com/person/gino.lattuca).

Läubin, Bernhard (b. Müllheim, Baden, Germany, Sept. 21, 1959). German trumpeter. Läubin began playing the trumpet under the guidance of his father, as did his brothers Hannes (b. 1958) and Wolfgang (b. 1965). He won first prizes in solo and chamber music competitions of the National Youth Orchestra, and was a member of the German Youth Orchestra and the Junge Deutsche Philharmonie. Like his brothers, he studied with Robert Bodenröder at the Musikhochschule in Freiburg im Breisgau.

Läubin joined the NDR Symphony Orchestra in 1980, and since 1982 has also played with the Stuttgart Bach Collegium under Maestro Helmuth Rilling. Along with his brothers, he recorded the album, Awake the Trumpet's Lofty Sound, for DGG.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Läubin, Hannes (b. Neuenburg am Rhein, Germany, June 22, 1958). German trumpeter. Hannes is the older brother of Bernhard (b. 1959) and Wolfgang (b. 1965) Läubin, both trumpeters. Hannes began playing the trumpet at age nine under the guidance of his father, Hans Läubin. As a boy, he won three solo competitions and played in the National Youth Orchestra from 1971 to 1976. He also won second prize at the Concertino Prague competition (1974). He studied with Franz Xaver Streitwieser and Robert Bodenröder in Freiburg im Breisgau.

At age eighteen, Läubin became third trumpet of the NDR Symphony Orchestra, and two years later became principal. In 1995, he became a regular substitute in the Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio under Maestro Lorin Maazel and (in 2003) Mariss Jansons. He also plays, together with his brothers, with the Stuttgart Bach Collegium conducted by Helmut Rilling (including a Japan tour in 1985) and his own brass ensemble.

Läubin taught at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule from 1992 to 1996, and since October of 1996 has been a professor at the Munich Musikhochschule.

Läubin has recorded several solo albums including Baroque Chamber Concertos with Trumpet (Audite), Awake the Trumpet's Lofty Sound (with brothers Bernhard and Wolfgang on the DGG label), Trompetenkonzerte (DGG), and Solos de Concours (Audite). He has given concerts and master classes at numerous international music festivals.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); personal interview by Edward Tarr with H.L. on Feb. 13, 2013.

Läubin, Wolfgang (b. Müllheim, Baden, Germany, Mar. 7, 1965). German trumpeter. Läubin learned to play the trumpet from his father, as did his brothers Hannes (b. 1958) and Bernhard (b. 1959). He later studied with Robert Bodenröder at the Musikhochschule in Freiburg im Breisgau.

Läubin's career began in 1982 when he became a member of the Chamber Orchestra of Europe and the State Youth Orchestra of Baden-Württemberg, playing all the parts in both orchestras. He also performed concerts in Germany, Poland, the Soviet Union, South America, and Japan with the Stuttgart Bach Collegium. In 1984, he became principal of the Radio Symphony Orchestra of Frankfurt, and in the following year joined the Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio in Munich.

Läubin has participated in several major music festivals. Since 1987, he has performed with the Läubin Trumpet Ensemble consisting of himself and his two brothers. In 1990, composer Siegfried Matthus wrote Concerto for Three Trumpets for the group.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Laudermilch, Kenneth (b. c1943). American trumpeter and conductor. Laudermilch received his bachelor of music education degree from Lebanon Valley College in 1965, a master of music degree from the New England Conservatory (studying with Roger Voisin) in 1967, and a doctor of musical arts degree from Catholic University of America (studying with Lloyd Geisler) in 1976. Other teachers include Gilbert Johnson, Robert Nagel, Gerard Schwarz, and James Thurmond.

Laudermilch was professor of trumpet and director of the university wind ensemble at West Chester University in Pennsylvania for thirty-eight years. He played in the Westminster Brass Quintet and was principal trumpet of the Delaware Symphony Orchestra for twenty-five years. He is currently an adjunct professor at Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and since 2005 has been director of The New Holland Band. He has authored An Understandable Approach to Musical Expression published by Meredith Music/Hal Leonard, and has received citation awards from several state band organizations. He is a founding member of the American Baroque Trumpet Ensemble, and has performed as an extra/substitute with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Bibl.: "Kenneth Laudermilch" (http://directory.fandm.edu/kenneth_laudermilch).

Laughton, Stuart John (b. St. Catherines, Ontario, Canada, Aug. 19, 1951). Canadian trumpeter. Laughton began his trumpet studies with Joseph Umbrico, principal trumpet of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He played in the National Youth Orchestra of Canada in 1967, and joined the Hamilton Philharmonic a short time later. He became a charter member of the Canadian Brass Ensemble (now the Canadian Brass) in 1970, but left the group in 1971 to study with Gilbert Johnson at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. During his senior year of study, he successfully auditioned for the principal chair of the Scala Opera Orchestra in Milan, Italy, where he played for twenty-eight years.

Laughton returned to Canada in 2001 in order to pursue a career as a soloist and chamber music performer. He again joined the Canadian Brass in 2003, replacing Ryan Anthony. He left the group in 2005 in order to pursue a career as a soloist and chamber music performer, although he occasionally returns to perform with them as part of the Canadian Brass "Trumpet Dream Team." His passion for contemporary music continues through his own record label, Opening Day Recordings (founded in 1993), and as an eight-year president of R. Murray Schafer's Patria Music/Theatre Projects.

Laughton is an adjunct faculty member at Redeemer University College, a founding member of True North Brass, and principal cornet of The Hannaford Street Silver Band. He has toured with organist William O'Meara many times; together they released the album Baroque Banquet on the Opening Day label. His other solo CD is Remembrance (Marquis Classics). In addition, he is a current member of the folk/country band, Porkbelly Futures, in which he plays lead guitar, harmonica, mandolin, and pedal steel guitar, as well as tin whistle, saxophones, and trombone. He is founder of The Forrest Festival in Ontario's Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve.

Laughton and his wife (a medical doctor and former professional ballet dancer) have three daughters.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Stuart Laughton" (www.marquisclassics.com/artists/laughton_bio.html); "Stuart Laughton" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Laumer, Jack C. (b. Rapid City, South Dakota, Aug. 22, 1945). American trumpeter. Laumer was attracted to the trumpet during third grade when his music teacher played a recording of Rafael Méndez for his general music class. When he wanted to play the trumpet in his fourth grade band, his director told him that it would not be possible due to his disability; he was born without fingers on his right hand. Undaunted, Laumer began to play on a used cornet given to him by Joseph Brodsky, a retired World War I Army trumpeter who also gave him his first lessons. Brodsky also took him to a concert that featured cornet virtuoso James Burke, a soloist who had to learn to play with only a left arm and hand because his right arm was severely injured during childbirth, and never developed.

After graduating from Newell High School in 1963, Laumer attended St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota. He was inspired after hearing the Minneapolis Symphony (now the Minnesota Orchestra) in a concert that included his trumpet teacher, Ronald Hasselmann. After completing his music education degree in 1967, he taught music in the public schools for one semester before moving to New York City to study with Cecil Collins and William Vacchiano at the Manhattan School of Music, completing his master of music degree in 1970. While in New York, he won an audition to play in the Goldman Band (1970-74) where he sat next to his earlier idol, James Burke, and also played coprincipal in the National Orchestral Association Orchestra and Brass Quintet. In addition, he taught at Music and Art High School (1969-71) and Performing Arts High School (1971-73).

Laumer was head band and orchestra director at Manchester College in Indiana from 1973 to 1977, after which he accepted his current position as professor of trumpet at Texas State University in San Marcos. He also serves as associate principal of the Austin Symphony Orchestra. He has performed with the Austin Lyric Opera Orchestra, and plays Baroque (valveless) trumpet with the Texas Early Music Project, Texas Bach Choir, Southwest Baroque Ensemble, and the University of Texas Early Music Ensemble. His Baroque trumpet teachers were Leonard Candelaria, Edward Tarr, and Niklas Eklund.

Jack Laumer has been married to pottery and jewelry artist De Anne Laumer since March of 2012. His children from a previous marriage are Kurt (b. 1975) and Anne (b. 1977). His hobbies include driving and restoring vintage BMW automobiles, camping, hiking, and sailing his twenty-six-foot MacGregor.

Bibl.: "Jack Laumer" (www.music.txstate.edu/facultystaff/bios/laumer.html); "Professor's Musical Talent Unhindered By Disability" (http://star.txstate.edu/node/4033); "Newell native is among nation's top trumpeters" (http://rapidcityjournal.com/buttecountypost/news/article_5c7f2374-6b8a-11e0-ac74-001cc4c002e0.html); personal interview, Dec. 5, 2012.

Laureano, Manny (b. New York, New York, Aug. 17, 1955). American trumpeter. Laureano was born to Puerto Rican parents, and attended the public schools in New York. While in elementary school, he participated as an actor and singer in plays and short operas. He began playing the trumpet in seventh grade, and won a scholarship that enabled him to study music at the 92nd Street YMCA with Jimmy Smith, fourth trumpet in the New York Philharmonic. His early inspiration came from hearing the great Rafael Méndez on the radio. He later attended New York's High School for Music and Art, where he studied with Sid Baker and Jack Laumer. After graduating in 1973, he attended The Juilliard School, where he studied with William Vacchiano and Mel Broiles. He also studied briefly with Rob Roy McGregor at the Eastern Music Festival.

Laureano played in Latin bands and with Emerson Lake & Palmer, but shortly after graduation from Juilliard in 1977, he became the principal trumpet of the Seattle Symphony. He held this position for four years before replacing Charles Schlueter as principal trumpet of the Minnesota Orchestra in Minneapolis in 1981. While he had been in Seattle, Laureano had become good friends with the second trumpeter, Jeff Cole, who had interested him in the concepts of sound and breathing associated with the so-called "Chicago School" of brass playing. Subsequently, Laureano studied for a short while with Arnold Jacobs, Adolph Herseth, and Vincent Cichowicz.

Laureano premiered the Trumpet Concerto by Wildgans under Leonard Slatkin (1983), and played Dmitry Shostakovich's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Maxim Shostakovich (1984). In 1986, he performed the Concerto Classico by Horovitz with Vincent DiMartino and the Black Dyke Mills Band (1986). He also premiered the Concerto for Two Trumpets by Paulus with Doc Severinsen and the Minnesota Orchestra (2006).

Laureano has taught on a part-time basis at the University of Minnesota, has presented numerous clinics and master classes throughout the world, and has appeared at the conferences of the International Trumpet Guild. He is a highly respected soloist who has appeared with the Minnesota Orchestra and other leading groups. He is also a fine conductor who serves as an assistant conductor of the Minnesota Orchestra and the Minnesota Youth Symphonies. Laureano frequently collaborates with Luis Loubriel, authoring books on the teachings of Arnold Jacobs and Vincent Cichowicz.

Laureano has held a black belt in Martial Arts since 2000, and is also a chess enthusiast—he studies with William Harrison of Minneapolis. He and his wife Claudette R. Laureano, a string teacher at the Breck School in Golden Valley, Minnesota, have a son, Max (b. 1989) and a daughter, Kiko (b. 1995).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Loubriel, Luis. "Manny Laureano's Quarter Century with the Minnesota Orchestra" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2008); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, July 13, 2010.

Lavrik, Vladislav ("Vlad") Mikhailovich (b. Zaporozhie, Ukraine, Sept. 29, 1980). Russian trumpeter. Lavrik comes from a musical family. His father is a trumpeter, military conductor, and teaches at the Moscow Institute of Military Conductors. His mother is a pianist. In his youth, Vladislav studied piano and trumpet, and attended the Moscow State Conservatory of Music where he studied with Yury Vlasenko, graduating in 2003. He also received a master's degree there in 2005. At ages fourteen and sixteen, he won the Dokshitser Competition for Young Trumpeters, and in 1994 won the Classical Heritage International Competition in Moscow. He was also a prizewinner in the 1997 and 1998 International Festival of Young Soloists in Moscow.

Lavrik was named principal trumpet of the National Russian Symphony in 2001, the youngest principal in the orchestra's history.

Since 2008, he has served as a faculty member at the Moscow State Conservatory. He is leader of the NRS Brass Quintet and an active soloist, having toured Russia, Brussels, and the United States. He has served as a judge for the 2008 and 2009 National Trumpet Competition in Fairfax, and appears at numerous music festivals. Since 2008, he has served as a faculty member at the Moscow State Conservatory. He has premiered solo works by Tatiana Smirnova, Oleg Oblov, and Rashid Kalimullin. Lavrik was a featured artist during the 2011 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Minneapolis.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Vladislav Lavrik" (www.russianarts.org/mo/lavrik.cfm); Vladislav Lavrik's official website: http://vladlarik.com.

Lawler, Roy (b. Miami, Florida, Jan. 4, 1960). American hornist and designer. While growing up in South Miami, Lawler began playing the French horn at age ten; his first teacher was Elizabeth Bobo. After graduating from South Dade High School in 1978, he attended the University of South Florida, studying with horn professor Tom Newell. Lawler attended the Boston Conservatory, but left in 1982 before graduating. While in Boston, he freelanced for five years, and learned about instrument repair and design by apprenticing with Robert Osmun. In 1985, Lawler started his own company in Longwood, Florida, now located in Flat Creek, Tennessee, that makes high quality trumpets and trombones. Lawler attributes his talents to his "Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ...To Him the Glory."

Lawler is married to Tysh Lawler, CFO of Lawler Trumpets and Trombones, Inc. His hobbies include fine automobiles.

Bibl.: Reeves, Mary. "A joyful noise as horn maker relocates to Flat Creek". (www.t-g.com/story/1592650.html); personal interview, July 26, 2011.

Lawrence, Andy (b. Swindon, south England, Nov. 2, 1954). British trumpeter, vocalist, and composer. Lawrence began playing trumpet at age eleven, and at age fourteen began to teach himself harmony and arranging. After playing with local brass bands, he began playing professionally at age seventeen when he joined the American pop group, The Fantastics. He then toured for five years with the Roy Pellet Jazz Band. He moved to south Germany where he coached the Baden-Württemberg Youth Jazz Orchestra, and became the busiest traditional jazz trumpeter in South Germany.

Lawrence led his own big band Swingtime and combo Andy Lawrence Swingtet, and played as lead trumpeter on numerous television shows with the Joe Schwarz Orchestra. He also fronted the Louis Prima revival band, Jump & Jive. He became a popular singer during the 1980s, and recorded over twenty LPs and CDs. During the 1990s, he played a great deal of commercial music. He also composed over 140 original works.

More recently, Lawrence has played cornet with such groups and leaders as the Lindfors Swing Affairs, The Chicagoans, Stuttgart New Orleans Society, New Storyville Jazz Band, Flat Foot Stompers, Frl. Mayer's Hinterhaus Jazzers, and Alexander Katz.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Andy Lawrence" (www.will-lindfors.de/lsa/index.php?lang=en).

Lawrence, Peter J. (b. Barrow-in-Furness, England, May 19, 1965). British trumpeter and composer. Lawrence studied in London at the Royal College of Music where he received the David Mason Orchestral Trumpet Prize and the Malcolm Sargent Award. In 1988, he joined the Scottish Opera Orchestra, Royal Shakespeare Company orchestra, and the English Philharmonic. After that, he played for two years with the Broadway musical, Cats, in Zürich. In 1994, he joined the Hof Symphony Orchestra (becoming principal trumpet in 1995). He is a versatile musician who is comfortable in styles ranging from Baroque to jazz. He has also played with the groups Bach Blech und Blues, Munich Brass, Fürstbischöfliches Bläserconsortium zu Würzburg, and German Brass.

Lawrence is best known as a composer. He has written works for orchestra, brass ensemble, and solo instruments. His Trumpet Concerto with orchestra is becoming increasingly popular, and his entertaining work, Von Méndez mit Liebe for two trumpets and band (depicting a "duel" between Rafael Méndez and Willi Liebe) was premiered in Bad Säckingen, Germany during the Sixth Trumpet Festival and Second International Altenburg Competition hosted by Edward Tarr. For this performance, the soloists were Vincent DiMartino and Richard Carson Steuart. They were accompanied by the Bad Säckingen Stadtmusik, conducted by Johannes Brenke (who later succeeded Tarr as director of the Bad Säckingen Trumpet Museum).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lawson, Yank [John Rhea Lausen] (b. Trenton, Missouri, May 3, 1911; d. Indianapolis, Indiana, Feb. 18, 1995). American trumpeter. As a boy, Lawson learned to play various saxophones and studied piano with his mother. He switched to the trumpet during his teen years, and later attended the University of Missouri as a music student. During the early 1930s, he played with Wingy Manone, and in 1932 made his recording debut with Slatz Randall. He joined Ben Pollack's orchestra in 1933, and when Pollack's band broke up a year later, Lawson worked with Will Osborne, recorded with the Mound City Blues Blowers, and freelanced as a studio player.

In 1935, Lawson and several other former members of the Pollack orchestra, along with bassist Bob Haggart, formed the Bob Crosby Orchestra in which Lawson was a featured soloist. He received a great deal of recognition when he recorded Dogtown Blues and Five Point Blues with Crosby. He played with Haggart and Crosby until 1938 when he joined Tommy Dorsey's orchestra, with which he became well known through his recordings of Hawaiian War Chant and Milenberg Joys.

In 1939, Lawson joined the bands of Abe Lyman, Richard Himber, and several theater orchestras. He rejoined Bob Crosby's Bob Cats in 1941-42 and played for a short while with Benny Goodman in 1942. Lawson then became a studio player, working for television, radio, and various recording studios. In 1944, he backed Frank Sinatra in a recording of Stormy Weather.

During the early 1950s, Lawson recorded as coleader of the Lawson-Haggart band, and also played on and off with guitarist Eddie Condon. About that time, Louis Armstrong selected Lawson to play the part of King Oliver in a recording project called Satchmo: A Musical Autobiography. Armstrong and Lawson appeared together at the 1962 Newport Jazz Festival; Lawson also played at times with reunions of the Bob Crosby Bob Cats in New York. From 1966 to 1969, Lawson was a regular with Eddie Condon's band whenever the Lawson-Haggart band wasn't working. In 1968, Lawson and Bob Haggart co-led the World's Greatest Jazz Band, which continued for much of the next ten years until 1978. Trumpeter Billy Butterfield joined the group in its early days.

After 1978, Lawson worked mostly as a freelance performer and recording artist. He appeared at many jazz festivals and was known for his beautiful tone, powerful sound, soft mute work, and wide range. Among his many albums are Yank Lawson's Dixieland Jazz (Riverside), [Yank Lawson] Plays King Oliver Jazz (Decca), The Best of Broadway (Signature), Century Plaza (World Jazz), Ole Dixie (ABC/Paramount), South of the Mason-Dixon Line [with Haggart] (Decca), and [Lawson-Haggart] Plays Jelly Roll's Jazz (Decca). Many of Lawson's recordings as soloist and sideman are now available on labels such as Atlantic, Dr. Jazz, Jazzology, ABC, GRP/Decca, and Bluebird.

Lawson died from a heart attack at the age of eighty-four. He was active up until his death and was even scheduled to perform in Japan in the following May. He was survived by his wife Harriett, son John, and daughters Margaret Armont, Elizabeth Burgess, and Linda Franke.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Yank Lawson. 84, Trumpeter with Prominent Jazz Bands" (The New York Times, Feb. 21, 1995); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Laycock, Arthur (b. Todmorden, England, Mar. 4, 1887; d. St. Austell, England, Feb. 5, 1929). British cornetist. Laycock received a used cornet as a present from his parents on his ninth birthday. His first lessons were with Arthur Hirst, a local bandmaster, and later with George Nicholls, a well-known cornetist. Laycock improved quickly and began his career in 1904 when he joined the Hebburn Colliery Band in northeast England. He then played with the Earby Band where he sat next to the legendary cornetist Edwin Firth, and in 1908 joined the Dalton-in-Furness Band.

Beginning in March of 1909, Laycock was principal cornet of the St. Hilda's Band, an ensemble that garnered numerous championships. He played continuously with this band for fourteen years, except for a world tour with the Besses o'th Barn in 1910-11. During World War I, Laycock joined the 16th Durham Light Infantry, and was later assigned duties as bandmaster of the 1st Training Reserve Battalion Band, and then the 58th London Division Band in France. He returned to his old position with the St. Hilda's Band in 1919.

Laycock's career as a cornet soloist hit its stride in the early 1920s. He won forty medals, three silver Challenge cups, four Championship Crystal Palace Medals, and performed Command Performances for the King and Queen of England. He was known as an immaculate, if not pedantic, man. His pains-taking attention to appearance was well known, and he was governed by a sense of routine and perfection in his personal and professional life. Two of his best-known solos were Rule Brittania and The Miniature. He made several recordings as soloist, and performed on a par with other great soloists such as Jules Levy and Herbert Clarke. His recordings with the St. Hilda Colliery Band were on the Zonophone and The Winner labels; recordings under his own name were on the Pathé and Columbia labels (1912-14).

In 1923, Laycock became a member of the Eastbourne Municipal Orchestra. However, in 1926, he suffered for months from a nervous breakdown, and was also hospitalized in London for a serious heart infection. In 1928, he played with the Whitby Municipal Orchestra and was a frequent guest soloist with bands throughout the United Kingdom. One of these engagements, in 1929, turned out to be his last. Even though he had the flu, he not only fulfilled his solo duties with the band of a close friend, but also sat in with the band for the entire concert. He was hospitalized the next day, and was diagnosed with bronchopneumonia; he died a week later at the young age of forty-one.

Laycock's funeral was considered a "Who's Who" of the brass world, and his widow Maggie (Cowgill) Laycock (married in 1914) received over two hundred letters and telegrams of sympathy.

Arthur Laycock was known as an immaculate man, both as a performer and person. Harry Mortimer once said: Perhaps one day I might be as good a cornet player as Arthur Laycock. Someone responded: Yes, you might...but you will never look as well dressed as he does.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Helme, Chris. "Thanks for the Memory No. 10—Arthur Laycock" (www.4barsrest.com/articles/2004/art390.asp); "Arthur Laycock" (www.earbybrassband.co.uk/index.php/en/personalities/arthur-laycock).

Lazarus, Charles ("Chuck") (b. Shelby, North Carolina, July 14, 1969). American trumpeter and composer. The highly versatile Lazarus grew up in North Carolina. His father Larry Lazarus (now retired) was a drug store owner and pharmacist, and his mother Sandy Tucker (also retired) worked as a manager and owner of a retail health food store. Lazarus studied with Don Morris and David Mills (both tuba players) during junior high and early high school, and with Raymond Mase during his last two years of high school at the North Carolina School of the Arts. After graduating in 1987, he attended The Juilliard School of Music in New York under Mase until 1990.

Lazarus performed with the Dallas Brass from 1990 to 1999, and with the Meridian Arts Ensemble from 1998 to 2000. He taught at Princeton University from 1999 to 2000, and performed with the New York Trumpet Ensemble, the New York Big Brass, the London Brass, Montreal Symphony Orchestra, Barry White, Joe Williams, and other leading artists. He joined the Minnesota Orchestra as fourth trumpet in September of 2000. In 2005, he took a one-year leave of absence to perform and record with the Canadian Brass, but resumed duties with the orchestra in 2006. He also served as an adjunct faculty member at St. Olaf College in 2006.

A skilled jazz player, Lazarus has given performances at the Montreal and Ottawa jazz festivals, and has released two jazz albums on his own label, Lazarus Music. Both CDs, Solo Settings (2005) and Zabava (2008), received rave reviews and awards for his compositions. He also recorded three CDs and a video with the Canadian Brass. In 2007, he premiered his orchestral pops program, A Night in the Tropics, with the Minnesota Orchestra. In addition, his jazz quartet has opened for Tony Bennett. Lazarus has performed as a soloist with many orchestras including the Minnesota Orchestra, Oregon Symphony, Florida Orchestra, North Carolina Symphony, and Les Violons du Roy. He presented a jazz concert of original music during the 2009 annual conference of the International Trumpet Guild.

In 2010, Lazarus and arts entrepreneur Paul Grangaard established a production company called American Riffs, named after the Steve Heitzeg concerto commissioned for Lazarus that same year. Dedicated to the creation of original programming for solo trumpet with symphony orchestras, Lazarus initiated several jazz programs and a series of young peoples' concerts designed to feature original music, and teach young people about the creative process.

Bibl.: Greig, Murray. "The Minnesota Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); Charles Lazarus's website (www.charleslazarus.com); personal interview, Mar. 19, 2010.

Leach, Cathy (b. Springfield, Vermont, July 26, 1956). American trumpeter. Cathy's father, Dr. William A. Leach, was a dentist, and her mother, Frances Johnson Leach, a homemaker, part-time teacher, and dental office manager. Cathy grew up in Springfield, Vermont, and studied trumpet with her band director, Malcolm Rowell, as well as with Gary Partridge and Walter M. Chestnut. After graduating from Springfield High School in 1974, she attended the University of Michigan where she studied with Clifford Lillya (1974-78), and earned a bachelor of science degree in music education. She was a member of the Toledo Symphony Orchestra and the Galliarde Brass Ensemble (1976-79). She then studied with Jeffrey Piper at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque (1979-81), where she earned a master's degree while also playing in the faculty brass quintet, and performing with the New Mexico Symphony. Immediately after graduating, she played in the Orquesta Sinfonica del Estado de Mexico (summer 1981).

Leach became the trumpet professor at the University of Tennessee and second trumpet of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra in 1981. In 1984, she won an audition to become principal trumpet of the orchestra, a position she continues to hold concurrently with her teaching job at UT-Knoxville. In 1995-96, she took a leave of absence from her positions in order to pursue a doctor of music degree at Northwestern University in a one-year residency. There, she studied with Vincent Cichowicz, continued study during several summers, and completed the degree in 2002. Leach took another leave of absence in 2009-10 to study jazz trumpet and improvisation.

Leach has received several awards for teaching: 2004 School of Music Leadership Award, 2006 Chancellors Award for Outstanding Teaching, and 2007 James R. and Nell W. Cunningham Outstanding Teaching Award. She has been a member of the UT Brasswind Quintet since 1981, and plays in the Monarch Brass, an all-star ensemble consisting of many of America's finest female brass performers, as well as the all-female Stiletto Brass quintet. Her playing can be heard on the Musical Heritage Society and Opus One labels. Her hobbies include running, working out at the gym, playing electric bass and violin, spending time with her dogs, reading, knitting, and studying languages. Leach served on the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild in 1990-94, 2005-07, and 2007-11.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Knoxville Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2010); "Dr. Cathy Leach" (www.music.utk.edu); personal interview, May 18, 2010.

Leasure, Timothy ("Tim") (b. Marietta, Ohio, Dec. 22, 1965). American trumpeter. Leasure received his bachelor of music degree from Ohio University in 1990, and a master of music degree from The Ohio State University in 1993. Following post master's work at OSU, he joined the US Navy Band in Washington, D.C. in 1995, selected with the group as the 1997 national tour soloist. He was also its soloist for concerts in Stockholm, Sweden.

Leasure has performed as a member of the Springfield (OH) Symphony (principal, 1994-95), ProMusica Chamber Orchestra of Columbus, Arlington Symphony, Annapolis Symphony, West Virginia Symphony, and the Columbus Symphony. He is currently second trumpet with the ProMusica Chamber Orchestra and a fulltime faculty member at The Ohio State University (since 2001). He is the author of three software applications for the Apple iPhone: Tromba Musica, Wotton Dictionary of Music, and Mahler Translations. New York Public Radio selected Mahler Translations as a top five App of the Year for Classical Music in 2011.

In 2001, Leasure was awarded the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University, and was also the recipient of the 2004 Distinguished Teaching Award at OSU. Recently, he was made an honorary member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia.

Leasure and his wife Lasea (a reference librarian) have three children: Andrew, Elizabeth, and Grace.

Bibl.: "Timothy Leasure" (http://music.osu.edu/people/leasure); personal interview, Apr. 18, 2013.

Le Barbier, Henri Charles (b. Le Mans, France, Nov. 13, 1873; d. after 1936). French trumpeter. Le Barbier studied at the Paris Conservatory under Jules Cerclier (1893-94) and Merri Franquin (1895, second prize). He became principal trumpet of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in the Netherlands in 1904, and played there until 1909 when he replaced Christian Rodenkirchen as principal trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra, a position he held through 1914 before accepting a position as principal trumpet of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra (now the Minnesota Orchestra) (?-1920, 1923-36).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe siècle; CD-Rom, Oct. 2008); www.Stokowski.org/Philadelphia_Orchestra_Musicians.htm.

Leczkowski, Gregor (b. Tczew, Poland, Apr. 6, 1959). Polish trumpeter and flugelhornist. Leczkowski learned to play the trumpet at a music school in his hometown of Tczew, and attended a Gymnasium in Danzig. He then earned a master's diploma from the Frédéric Chopin Music Academy in Warsaw. Already during he study period, he became principal trumpet of the Warsaw Radio Orchestra, and in 1981 joined the Warsaw National Philharmonic in the same capacity. Equally strong in classical and jazz music, he performs with dance and show bands, and became a member of the Wuppertal Symphony Orchestra in 1989. Since 1992, he has been principal of the Beethovenhalle Orchestra in Bonn.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ledford, Mark (b. 1960; d. Los Angeles, California, Nov. 1, 2004). American trumpeter, composer, and singer. Ledford attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1978-82) where he studied music composition and arranging. After graduating, he played trumpet in the bands of Jon Hendricks and for the Broadway musical, Sarafinal! He also became the music director for Stephanie Mills, produced television jingles, and released his only solo album in 1998, Miles 2 Go.

Ledford was a fine singer in the style of Jon Hendricks and Bobby McFerrin. He sang in McFerrin's vocal group, Circle, and played trumpet, guitar, and drums in Pat Metheny's band. He recorded with Joe Locke, Michael Brecker, Special EFX, Bill Evans, Eliane Elias, Don Byron, Kevin Eubanks, and Branford Marsalis.

Bibl.: "Mark Ledford" (www.billboard.com).

Leduc, Alphonse Girard (known as Leduc) (b. Nantes, France, Mar. 9, 1804; d. Paris, France, June 17, 1868). French publisher. Alphonse

Girard was a teacher, composer, virtuoso flutist, and played guitar and bassoon at a professional level as well. The Girards were a large family, originally from the French town of Arnay-le-Duc, and when they moved to Nantes, France, added Leduc to their name. Girard founded a publishing business, and in 1841, transferred it from Nantes to Paris, reorganizing it as Éditions Alphonse Leduc, which initially only published songs and piano pieces, but which has since become perhaps the largest publisher of trumpet and brass music in the world.

The company has been run by five successive generations of the Leduc dynasty:

- Alphonse Girard (known as Leduc)
- Alphonse-Charles Leduc (1844-1892)
- Alphonse Émile Leduc (1878-1951)
- Claude-Alphonse Leduc (1910-1995) and Gilbert Leduc (1911-1985)
- François Leduc (son of Claude), Basile Crichton (nephew of Claude and Gilbert), assisted by their respective brothers, Jean Leduc and Michel Crichton.

After Alphonse's death in 1868, his son Alphonse-Charles ran the company and expanded it by acquiring several small music publishers. He began selling solos and methods for all band and orchestral instruments, and gradually vocal music, including the rights to Verdi's opera, Aida, which made the company wealthy. When Alphonse-Charles died prematurely at the age of forty-eight, the company was taken over by his wife Emma Leduc-Ravina. Their son, Alphonse Émile, expanded the company considerably by signing the well-known composers Messiaen, Ibert, and Glazunov. Alphonse Émile's sons, Claude-Alphonse and Gilbert, ran the firm from 1951 to 1985, and greatly expanded worldwide sales by translating many of the Leduc methods publications into various languages. Today, the company is headed by François, son of Claude-Alphonse, and Basile Crichton, nephew of Claude-Alphonse and Gilbert, assisted by brothers Jean Leduc and Michel Crichton. The company acquired Robert King Music Sales in 1987.

There is historical uncertainty regarding the connection of the current publisher and the publishing house Leduc on rue du Hazard, which ceased operation in 1823. That publisher was founded in 1767 by Simon Le Duc ("L'Aîné," b. Paris, c1745; d. Paris, Jan. 1777), a violinist who studied under Gaviniès, and played at the Concert Spirituel in Paris. The company was later operated by Pierre Le Duc ("le Jeune," b. Paris, c1755; d. Holland, 1816), younger brother and pupil of Simon Le Duc. After 1804, the company was run by Auguste Le Duc (d. c1825), son of either Simon or Pierre. Upon Auguste's death, his wife succeeded him and sold the company to Alphonse Girard Leduc.

Bibl.: "History of Éditions Alphonse Leduc & Cie." (www.alphonseleduc.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Éditions_Alphonse_Leduc; http://imslp.org/wiki/Alphonse_Leduc; http://www.alphonseleduc.com/EN/historique_editions_leduc.php.

Photos: First photo, Alphonse Girard Leduc. Second photo, Alphonse-Charles Leduc.

Lee, R. Matthew ("Matt") (b. Monmouth, Illinois, July 15, 1961). American trumpeter. Lee grew up in Little York, Illinois. He began playing trumpet at the age of ten; his first music teachers were his band directors Joe DeWeese, John Spurgeon, Greg Bimm, and Carl Meyer, as well as his trumpet teacher John Schlabach. He attended Western Illinois University (1979-83), studying with William DeJong and earning a bachelor of music education degree. He then studied with Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University (1983-84) where he received a master of music degree. He was a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago (1986-88), and guided by Adolph Herseth, won the orchestra's concerto competition during the 1987-88 season.

Lee's experience includes a long list of performances with ensembles such as the Chicago Symphony Orchestra (extra/substitute since 1986), Illinois Philharmonic Orchestra (principal trumpet, 1987 to present), Chicago Sinfonietta (principal since 2005), Joffrey Ballet Orchestra (principal since 2005), Lyric Opera of Chicago Orchestra (extra/substitute since 1992), Millar Brass Ensemble (1985), Grant Park Symphony, Tower Brass of Chicago (1997), Chicago Brass Quintet (1994), Lancaster Festival Orchestra, and Woodstock Mozart Festival Orchestra. He has served on the faculties of the VanderCook College of Music (1988-94), Elmhurst College (1988 to present), and DePaul University (since 1994). He has recorded several times with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, including live performances at Carnegie Hall with Sir George Solti, Kiri Te Kanawa, and Luciano Pavarotti. He can also be heard on seven compact discs with the Millar Brass Ensemble on the Crystal, Koss, and Delos International labels.

Lee and trumpeter Kari Phelps Lee have been married since 1996, and have three children: Ella (b. 1999), Erin (b. 2001), and Nathan (b. 2003). His hobby is cooking.

Bibl.: "R. Matthew Lee" (http://music.depaul.edu/FacultyAndStaff/L/mlee.asp); personal interview, July 20, 2011.

Leeb, Leonhard J. (b. Graz, Austria, Jan. 17, 1962). Austrian trumpeter. Leeb studied with Carole Dawn Reinhart and Josef Pomberger at the Vienna Musikhochschule, and had additional study with Arturo Sandoval, Edward Tarr, Friedemann Immer, Maurice André, and Ludwig Güttler. He has played with the Berlin Brass Ensemble, Orpheus Chamber Orchestra in New York, and the Moscow Virtuosi. An active soloist, Leeb has appeared at numerous music festivals across Europe, and recorded CDs such as Ciaconna (trumpet and organ). Several composers have written works for him. He also completed a law study at the Vienna University. In 1993, he began teaching concert management (artistic self-management) at the Vienna Musikhochschule, and in 1994 founded the trumpet ensemble, The Art of Trumpet Vienna, that has released CDs such as Imperial Fanfares and What a Wonderful World—Trumpets in Concert. He has also commissioned several new works for trumpet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lehman, Richard B. (b. Kettering, Ohio, Apr. 2, 1958; d. Washington, District of Columbia, Jan. 12, 1999). American trumpeter. Lehman began playing trumpet at age six under the guidance of his father, Donald. He studied with Dr. Richard Burkart at The Ohio State University, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1980. He continued his studies under Leon Rapier at the University of Louisville, receiving a master of music degree in 1982.

Lehman taught at Illinois State University from 1982 to 1989. He became principal cornet of the US Marine Band "The President's Own" in 1990, performing solos on many tours until leaving the group in 1998. He remained in Washington where he taught at the Landon School in Bethesda, Maryland, freelanced, and played with the National Guard Band. His unexpected death at the age of forty-one stunned the trumpet world. His parents and friends established the Richard B. Lehman Memorial Scholarship Fund through the International Trumpet Guild in 1999.

Bibl.: "Richard B. Lehman (1958-1999)" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/lehman.htm).

Leick, John S. (b. 1878; d. 1951). American cornetist. Little is known of Leick's early life. He was cornet soloist with the Innes Band from 1902 through 1904, soloist and associate conductor of the Kilties Band of Canada during the 1904-05 season, and a featured member of The Military Octet during the 1905-06 season. He married another brilliant cornet soloist, Mabel Keith, known to many as "The Sousa Girl." They directed bands in Nebraska before moving to Denver, Colorado, where they became members of the Denver Municipal Band under Albert Sweet and Frederick Innes. John was also principal trumpet of the Denver Symphony from 1924 through 1935.

John and Mabel toured a great deal together, and toured Europe seven times between c1904 and 1911. He performed at Balmoral Castle in Scotland on September 27, 1904, and on November 9 of that same year, at Sandringham House in England for King Edward VII, Queen Alexandra, and the Royal Family. Numerous concert reviews in newspapers of England, Scotland, and Wales during these years give high praise to Mr. Leick's talents: Mr. John S. Leick is an expert cornetist, his solo, the "Whirlwind Polka" (Levy) being loudly applauded. He obtains a bright, clear ringing tone, his extreme upper notes telling wonderfully, while his triple tongueing was amazing in its rapidity and distinctness; apparently nothing ever written for the cornet could come wrong to so adept and facile a player (Portsmouth Times, Oct. 15, 1904). John and Mabel also performed at the Coronation of King George of England in 1911.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Leick, Mabel Keith (b. Holdrege, Nebraska, Nov. 7, 1883; d. Denver, Colorado, Mar. 12, 1961). Amerian cornetist. Mabel learned to play the piano at an early age and studied with her mother, who was a professional pianist. She later learned to play the cornet and attended the C.G. Conn Conservatory of Music in Elkhart, Indiana. For three months, she took cornet lessons from the famed Jules Levy. She also took conducting lessons from John Philip Sousa, who named her "The Sousa Girl."

Mabel became a virtuoso on the cornet, a leader and soloist with The Military Octet, and toured the United States as a soloist. She married John Leick, a leading cornetist. Together, they toured Europe seven times, and even performed at the Coronation of King George in 1911.

She and John directed bands in Nebraska before moving to Denver, Colorado, where they played in the Denver Municipal Band under Albert Sweet and Frederick Innes. Mabel taught the members of the first DeMolay Band in Denver, and taught cornet at the University of Denver.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Leiner, Peter (b. Landau, Pfalz, Germany, Oct. 14, 1962). German trumpeter. Leiner studied trumpet and conducting with Reinhold Lösch at the Musikhochschule in Mannheim (1984-92), was a prizewinner in various competitions, and in 1986 became a member of the SWF Radio Orchestra. An active soloist and chamber musician, he has released several solo CDs for the Brilliant Classics label, presented master classes internationally, and served as a jury member at important competitions. Since 1993, he has been a professor of trumpet at the Musikhochschule Saarbrücken, and is a member of the SWF Brass Quintet ("Das Rennquintett").

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Leisring, Stephen W. (b. Waterbury, Connecticut, Mar. 28, 1963). American trumpeter. Leisring grew up in Watertown, Connecticut, the son of Clarence (a factory administrator) and Helen Leisring (a homemaker); he has a sister named Nancy (b. 1957). Stephen began playing the trumpet at age ten, and studied with Carl Berg. After graduating from Watertown High School in 1981, he attended the University of North Texas, where he studied with professors Keith Johnson and Leonard Candelaria, and earned bachelor of music education and bachelor of music performance degrees. Leisring also attended the Mannes College of Music in New York City, where he studied with Vincent Penzarella, and earned a master of music degree. He has also studied with Don Jacoby, Richard Giangiulio, and Bert Truax.

Leisring's professional career began in 1989 when he became assistant principal of the Tenerife Symphony Orchestra in the Canary Islands, Spain. During his fourteen years in Spain, he also taught as interim professor at the Conservatorio Superior de Música de Santa Cruz de Tenerife (1994) and the Orchestral Academy of the Tenerife Symphony Orchestra (1997-2003). Additionally, for three years he played semiprofessional baseball for Los Rojos de Tenerife. In 2003, he accepted a position as professor at the University of Kansas in Lawrence. He has been an active clinician and has appeared in China, Finland, Puerto Rico, Taiwan, Latvia, and throughout the United States. He has also performed with the Gothenburg Symphony Orchestra (Sweden), Tokyo Symphony Orchestra, Milwaukee Symphony, Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Kansas City Symphony, Music in the Mountains Festival Orchestra (Durango, Colorado), and is a member of the Kansas Brass Quintet.

Leisring is on the advisory board of the National Trumpet Competition. Among his leading former students are Adan Delgado and Antonio Marti. In 2009, he married Dr. Peilien Wu-Leisring. His hobbies include baseball and sports psychology.

Bibl.: "Stephen Leisring" (Kansas University Trumpet Ensemble program booklet for the 2010 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Sydney, Australia); "Stephen Leisring" (http://arts.ku.edu/music/faculty); personal interview, July 11, 2010.

Le Lann [Lelann], Eric (b. Ploeuc-sur-Lié, Bretagne, France, Nov. 4, 1957). French trumpeter and composer. Le Lann studied trumpet with his father Hervé, and began to play in the Dixieland band led by his father. He began his career in Paris at age twenty, and won the Grand Prix at La Défense in 1979, the Django Reinhardt Prize in 1983, and the Critic's Grand Prix for "Best Theatre Music" in 2001. He has performed with René Urtreger (Antibes, 1980), Roger Guérin-Jean-Loup Longnon (1980), Caratini-Fosset Onztet (1980-81), Big Band Martial Solal (1980-94), Pepper Adams (1980, 1982), Glenn Ferris (1981), Archie Shepp (1996), Chet Baker, Herbie Hancock, Billy Hart, Dexter Gordon, Mike Stern, Eddie Gomez, as well as with his own groups. He has recorded fifteen albums under his own name, including with Martial Solal. Two documentary films have been made about him. He can also be heard with Hancock on the soundtrack for the film, Round Midnight.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Eric Le Lann" (http://store.harmoniamundi.com/eric-le-lann.html).

Lemos, Alexander Vasilyevich (b. Žytmyr, Ukraine, Apr. 15, 1875; d. Leningrad, Russia, Mar. 29, 1942). Ukrainian cornetist. Lemos studied the cornet with his father, a cornet player and conductor of the opera in Kharkow, and later studied with August Marquardt at the Musical College of the Moscow Philharmonic Society (graduating in 1902). Lemos played at the Mariinsky Theatre (1903), and then the St. Petersburg/Petrograd Opera Orchestra from 1903 to 1922. He was also a conductor, composer, and teacher. However, he is best known as an excellent cornet soloist.

Lemos participated in many of the Pavlovsk summer concerts. After one particular performance of Danse Napolitaine, Tchaikovsky gave Lemos an autographed photograph of himself. Lemos made several recordings of cornet solos, some of which he had composed himself. During the 1930s, he mostly conducted amateur orchestras in Leningrad.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. "European Cornet and Trumpet Soloists" (Notes to a CD recording published by the International Trumpet Guild, 2004); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lenicheck, Charles Edwin (b. Denver, Colorado, Aug. 30, 1922; d. Denver, Colorado, Nov. 19, 2002). American trumpeter, conductor, and educator. Lenicheck grew up in Denver where he studied with cornetist Mabel Leick. While in high school, he began his fifty-year association with the Denver Municipal Band—25 as cornet soloist, and 25 as conductor. He earned bachelor and master of music degrees at the University of Denver before embarking on a teaching career in the Denver public schools.

Maestro Saul Caston hired Lenicheck as principal trumpet of the Denver Symphony Orchestra in 1942, a position he held for twelve years while also teaching trumpet at the University of Denver. Although he was encouraged by Caston to audition for orchestras such as those in Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, Lenicheck elected to remain in Denver due to his love of Colorado, and having relatives in the area. He served for a total of twenty-nine years in the Denver school system, and taught at North High School, South High School, Cole Junior High, and Byers Junior High. He was also a leading dance band musician in the Denver area, and a member of Milton Schredrik's KOA Radio Orchestra.

In 1944, Lenicheck married his wife Elaine, a flutist with the Denver Symphony Orchestra for forty-three years. He and Elaine had three children: Rob (b. 1950), Debra (b. 1952), and Diane (b. 1957), all musicians. His hobbies included hiking and tennis. He was a highly respected trumpeter, educator, conductor, and friend to all who knew him. He died of a massive stroke at the age of eighty.

Bibl.: personal interviews with Elaine Lenicheck on Aug. 17 and 26, 2010.

Leonhart, Michael J. C. (b. New York, New York, Apr. 21, 1974). American trumpeter. Leonhart comes from a musical family. His father Jay Leonhart is a bassist and songwriter, and both his mother Carolyn Leonhart and his sister Carolyn are fine vocalists. Michael began playing violin, but also took classical trumpet lessons from Jim Hamlin from 1985 to 1992. Leonhart became interested in jazz before studying at New York's Fiorello LaGuardia High School of Performing Arts. By age thirteen, he was performing as a guest jazz soloist with various local jazz bands; his first professional gig was with his father's group, The Blue Note. He began composing while in high school and won over twenty international composition awards before graduating. At age seventeen, he won a Grammy Award, and was named the most outstanding musician in a U.S. high school. His 1991 composition, Suite for Jazz Trumpet, was premiered during his senior year by family friend, Clark Terry. Making national news, Leonhart was named Person of the Week by ABC's News with Peter Jennings. The New York Times newspaper also published a feature article on his early accomplishments. In 1992, together with Wynton Marsalis, Jon Faddis, Harry "Sweets" Edison, and Doc Cheatham, he presented a tribute concert to Dizzy Gillespie.

Leonhart received a scholarship to attend the Manhattan School of Music, but after studying composition for six months, he transferred to Columbia University where he studied French literature. Before graduating from Columbia, Leonhart decided to leave school in order to pursue his interests in music. He composed for films, produced shows and recordings, and played trumpet with many of New York's finest jazz musicians including the Mel Lewis Orchestra, Phil Woods, James Moody, Jon Faddis, Stanley Turrentine, Milt Hinton, A Tribe Called Quest, Arif Mardin, Arto Linsday, Caetano Veloso, Bill Withers, D.J. Spooky, Henry Mancini, James Brown, Bobby McFerrin, Slash, Wynton Marsalis, and Yoko Ono. In 1996, he joined Steely Dan, recording two albums, one of which won a Grammy. He has also worked as a singer and songwriter.

Leonhart is comfortable playing jazz, pop, and hip-hop music, and has played on over one hundred recordings, many of which were as the staff trumpeter for the Truth and Soul record label. Albums that he led include Aardvark Poses (Sunnyside), Glub Glub (Sunnyside), Out of Nowhere (Sunnyside, with Meredith d'Ambrosio), Slow (Sunnyside), The Suzy Lattimore EP (St. Ives), The Ballad of Minton Quigley (St. Ives), Hotel Music (St. Ives), and Seahorse and the Storyteller (Truth and Soul).

Leonhart is an avid sports fan and participant. He and his wife singer/songwriter Jamie Leonhart have one son, Milo Quincy Leonhart.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Michael Leonhart" (www.allaboutjazz.com); "Michael Leonhart (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Letman, John ("Johnny") [Bernard] (b. McCormick, South Carolina, Sept. 6, 1917; d. New York, New York, July 17, 1992). American trumpeter. Letman grew up in Chicago. He studied the trumpet in 1930, and played in a boys' band and a school band. Soon, he joined Frankie François and other Louisiana players in Chicago. He played with Nat King Cole at the Royal Dukes (1933-34), and it's thought that his first professional engagements were with Ray Charles, then an obscure pianist (1934-35). Letman spent the next several years playing in numerous Midwest bands including those of Gerald Valentine, Scat Man Carruthers, Jimmy Raschelle, Delbert Bright, Bob Tinsley, Johnny Long, Horace Henderson (1941-42), Red Saunders (1942), Ted Buckner (1943), and his own group (1940-41).

Letman moved to New York in 1944 and played with Lucky Millinder (1944), Phil Moore (1944-45), Cab Calloway (1947-49, 1950, 1958), Milt Buckner (1948-49), Count Basie (1951), and Sammy Benskin. He also played in television studio bands and in Broadway pit orchestras during the early 1950s. Throughout the mid 1950s, '60s, and '70s, Letman led combos and played as a sideman with Eddie Condon, Sam "The Man" Taylor, Wilbur De Paris, Claude Hopkins, Panama Francis, and Tiny Grimes.

Although he had previously recorded a great deal as a sideman, Letman led his own recording sessions (1959, 1960, 1968) while continuing to record with such artists as Joe Thomas (1958), Stuffy Smith, Chubby Jackson, Panama Francis, Lionel Hampton, Cozy Cole, and Earl Hines. He played in Paris with Milt Buckner in 1968 and reached the zenith of his fame during the 1980s when he toured Europe and the U.S. with the New Orleans Blues Serenaders. The group performed at numerous festivals including the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival, Oude Stijl Jazz Festival (Breda, Netherlands), and the Festa New Orleans Music in Switzerland.

Although Letman never became world-famous as a jazz soloist, he was a prominent swing-era performer and sideman for over fifty years. The albums Many Angles of John Letman (Bethlehem) and A Funky Day in Paris (Black & Blue) represent two of his best.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Harvard Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Levine, [Dr.] Henry ("Hot Lips") (b. London, England, Nov. 26, 1907; d. May 6, 1989). American trumpeter and bandleader. Although born in London, England, Levine came to New York City with his parents when he was six months old. He began playing the bugle for the Boy Scouts when he was a boy, and soon took lessons from Max Schlossberg. After graduating from Brooklyn Boys' High School, at age nineteen he replaced Harry Gluck as the trumpeter in the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (1925 for seven weeks), and beginning in 1925, was the usual substitute for Red Nichols. In 1927, he went to England to play with a popular band led by Bert Ambrose that also included trombonist Ted Heath. In 1930, he returned to New York where he established himself with various bands, including that of Rudy Vallee.

Levine became a staff trumpeter for NBC studios from October 1933 to 1944, and from 1945 to 1958. He soon became director of a jazz band called The Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street (also known as The Barefoot Dixieland Philharmonic) that aired a weekly radio show. The band worked with several celebrity artists, and recorded with Dinah Shore, Lena Horne, Sidney Bechet, Jelly Roll Morton, and others. Levine was drafted into the Army in 1944-45, and after serving as a bandleader in Italy and Sicily, he returned to his NBC job in New York. The band was transferred to an NBC affiliate, MTAM Radio in Cleveland, during the mid 1940s, and performed live for the daily Johnny Andrews Morning Bandwagon Show. When NBC sold the Cleveland studio to Westinghouse in 1956, Levine moved to Miami Beach, Florida, during the late 1950s where he was trumpet soloist and leader of several hotel bands. He recorded numerous albums for labels such as RCA, RCA Victor, Saga, Swaggie, Harlequin, Masters of Jazz, Music Memoria, and Shamrock. He spent the latter part of his career leading hotel bands in Las Vegas.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Henry 'Hot Lips' Levine" (www.cleveland.oh.us/wmv_news/jazz43.htm).

Levora, Josef (b. c1913). German trumpeter. Levora is a pupil of Franz Dengler. He was coprincipal trumpet of the Vienna State Opera Orchestra and the Vienna Philharmonic from 1934 to 1974, and taught at the Vienna Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art from 1959. One of his best-known students is Josef Pomberger. Together with Helmut Wobisch, Levora worked with Karl Breslmair in 1968 to produce the Breslmair (wooden) mouthpiece.

Bibl.: www.trumpetmaster.com/vb/f131/helmut-wobisch-30908.html.

Levy, [Issac] Jules (b. London, England, Apr. 24, 1838; d. Chicago, Illinois, Nov. 28, 1903). British cornetist. Levy was the most celebrated cornetist of his day, and one of the most colorful and egotistical musicians that ever lived. He billed himself as "The World's Greatest Cornetist."

As a boy, he was kept awake at night by the cornet sounds emanating from a theater next door. He asked his parents to buy a cornet with money he had saved, but instead they purchased him a pair of boots. He loved music and listened to the cornetists in local bands, sometimes turning pages for them; they would signal a page turn by winking. At age nine he performed on stage in a pantomime, and at age twelve as a skater in the opera, Le Prophète, at the Grand Opera House. He saved his pay in hopes of buying a cornet, but could only afford a mouthpiece, which he practiced on for hours each day. After a few years of mouthpiece work, he developed a strong embouchure and keen ear.

When he was fifteen, he summoned enough courage to pick up one of the opera musicians' cornets and play it. He had learned the fingerings from watching others, and his embouchure was well trained. Everyone was amazed that he could play a tune so well on his first try. Finally, at age seventeen after he had saved enough money, he convinced his father to purchase an old cornet at an auction. He practiced many hours each day, but did not play correctly. Rather than using his tongue to articulate, he "huffed" the notes, causing in his words, "a consumption." He was hospitalized for three months at the Charing Cross Hospital in London. Subsequently, in order to learn to play correctly, he took six lessons from a well-known cornet player in London.

Levy joined the Grenadier Guards Band at the age of eighteen, for which he was paid two dollars per week. He practiced ten to twelve hours per day and improved rapidly. At age twenty-one, he played at the Princess Theater for eight dollars per week. The theater often performed music between acts, and one night Levy was featured playing his own Whirlwind Polka. The applause was deafening and continued long after the curtain rose for the start of the next act. Finally, the curtain had to be lowered until Levy had finished his bows and the audience settled down again. Due to his popularity as a regular evening soloist, Levy was given a salary of fourteen dollars per week. Later, he auditioned for the Royal Opera House Orchestra and was paid a weekly salary of twenty-five dollars.

In 1864, Levy won a gold medal in Paris, leading to an engagement with Pape Bateman's music troupe, which toured America, arriving in Boston in 1865. The following year, he returned to London for engagements with Alfred Mellon, with whom he appeared in Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, and other venues throughout England, Ireland, and Scotland. He then played with the Parepa Concert Company, which toured Holland and America. When Parepa became ill in 1869, the group disbanded and Levy joined the Theodore Thomas Company for concerts at Central Park in New York City. Two years later, he became soloist with Fiske's band for an amazing annual salary of ten thousand dollars. When Grand Duke Alexis of Russia visited America, he was so ecstatic over Levy's playing, that he offered him a position as Chief Bandmaster and Imperial Cornetist of the Russian Army, and invited him to live at the Duke's luxurious palace. Levy stayed in Russia for some twenty months, often supping with the Tsarevich (the future Alexander III), himself an accomplished amateur cornetist, and for his achievements received numerous medals, which he proudly wore at every concert. A hitherto overlooked review from the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik of a performance of his in the large theater of St. Petersburg on March 23, 1873 shows that his reputation as "The World's Greatest Cornetist" must have been justified: Mr. Levy is incontestably the greatest and foremost living virtuoso on his instrument; in the bravura realm and in that of the most delicate poetry he is the master over all difficulties. His accomplished performances generated the greatest enthusiasm. During this period, he was a reinforcing member of Alexander III's amateur band, on cornet. It is probably then that Levy composed his Grand Russian Fantasia for cornet and piano.

A weekly salary of one hundred pounds brought Levy to London in the late 1870s to perform at the London Promenade Concerts. Afterwards, Patrick Gilmore hired Levy to appear at the Hippodrome in New York City where he played for one year. Levy accepted other solo engagements in Philadelphia, Manhattan Beach, and Brighton Beach. He toured throughout the 1880s and 1890s, and became a household name. He was a natural cornet player with a knack for removing the mouthpiece quickly at every breath or rest in order to relax his lips.

Jules Levy was the first musician to test Thomas Edison's Grammophone recording device. As legend has it, Levy was performing in a park concert one afternoon in 1878 while Edison was at home working on his machine. Edison wanted to try recording music, so he went to the concert and approached Levy about coming to his house and playing into the Grammophone. Imagine Levy's puzzlement as he heard of Edison's device! He went with Edison and played Yankee Doodle into the large bell of the machine. When Edison played it back, Levy was amazed and played again with "garnished variations," but Edison's machine repeated it back flawlessly. Not completely understanding how a contraption could play as well as he could, Levy returned to the challenge and played his fastest variation. But while playing it back, Edison turned the crank faster than normal, which made the recording sound even faster and higher than Levy's own rendition. Feeling upstaged and upset, Levy's cornet was "shut up and put in its box."

Levy's conceit was well known. When another cornet soloist was billed as the "World's Greatest Cornetist," Levy changed his own title to the "World's Greatest Cornetist of All Time." Gilmore took advantage of Levy's reputation, by advertising contests between Levy and Matthew Arbuckle, another Gilmore soloist at the time. Although Gilmore meant the daily duel to be a publicity stunt, it caused enough friction between Levy and Arbuckle that they actually broke into a fistfight after a performance. As a result, Levy left Gilmore's band.

Levy toured Australia and New Zealand in 1877, performing over two hundred concerts. The press hailed him as the "Cornet King," the "greatest living instrumentalist," the "people's idol," the "wonder of the age," and, in an accolade that placed him squarely in the company of Gabriel, "the best player of the cornet-à-piston that has ever appeared on this side of the Line." Despite his success as a soloist, the tour was not without mishap. He was sued by his first Australian manager whom he had fired, and also sued by a contralto singer who was terminated before the end of the tour. He lost both lawsuits and went bankrupt. However, his second manager was able to arrange concerts in New Zealand. After weeks of touring there, he realized that there would not be enough concerts to sustain him and the orchestra until the next ship sailed for America in a few weeks. He secretly booked passage for him and his family to sail to San Francisco before the tour ended, leaving the orchestra musicians without payment or money to return to Australia.

Levy's last years were spent as a cornet tester for C.G. Conn in the Elkhart, Indiana, factory. In 1883, Conn presented him with a diamond-studded cornet. However, after a later argument with Conn, he left to work for the Lyon & Healy Company in Chicago. He taught students to supplement his income, and was considered to be a fine teacher; his best-known student was Edwin Franko Goldman. He wrote Levy's Instruction Book (published by Conn) in 1895.

According to an article in the July 28, 1883 New York Times, Levy had previously been married before marrying Minnie Conway on August 15, 1875. Minnie and Jules had two children, a boy and a girl (names unknown). Minnie had the marriage annulled, probably because Levy never legally divorced his first wife. In 1885, Levy was married a third time to Stella Corbett, a music teacher. They had two daughters (Louise M. Levy, born August 1885 in New York, and Julliette Levy, born February 1895 in New York). They also had a son (Jules Levy Jr., born January 8, 1889 in New York), who became a cornetist of some repute.

Levy died in Chicago in a fit of apoplexy (stroke) on November 28, 1903. Herbert Clarke stated, I was fortunate to hear Levy when he was at his best in the eighties, as a young man just beginning to play the cornet seriously; his wonderful power, technique and endurance was a marvel to me. How could he master the extreme intervals, from the lowest to the highest notes, without changing the quality of tone or missing a note, the absolute command over the embouchure was wonderful. Levy was acknowledged the head of all cornetists from 1870 through the 1880s. His most critical and sometimes jealous contemporaries had to admit that he had no close rivals with the possible exception of Liberati and Emerson as soloists. Few came close to Levy, either as to technical ability on the cornet, the power of execution in the most demanding and brilliant compositions, or the ability to sing with the instrument, with all the phrasing and power of the human voice. Unfortunately, all of Levy's many recordings for Columbia and Victor were made after his prime, and only occasionally provide a glimpse of his former abilities.

A few of Levy's more than thirty-eight recorded solos are Au Revoir, Blue Bells of Scotland, The Last Rose of Summer, Levy-Athan Polka, Robin Adair, The Lost Chord, The Palms, My Country 'tis of Thee (in four octaves), Home Sweet Home, In the Gloaming, Our Own Make Polka, Nancy Lee, and Ye Merry Birds (his last recording on October 8, 1903). His cornet compositions include Whirlwind Polka, Emily Polka, Salute Polka, Ye Merry Birds, Grand Russian Fantasia, Lizzy Polka, Best Shot Polka, Levy's Cornet Polka, Palm Branches, Robin Adair, Carnival of Venice, Yankee Doodle with Variations, Young America Polka, and The Promenade Polka.

Although he was considered to be the most egotistical of all cornet soloists, Levy's reputation as the world's greatest cornetist was well deserved. Reviews of his concerts consistently describe flawless precision, amazing endurance, and complete mastery of the instrument. He was treated as royalty around the world, no small accomplishment considering that during his prime there were no recordings, radio, television, or Internet!

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Levy, Jules. Levy's Cornet Instruction Book (C. G. Conn); Schwartz, H. W. Bands of America (Doubleday); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); "Jules Levy" (O. J.s Page, http://abel.hive.no/trumpet/links.htm); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008); lecture at International Trumpet Guild Conference in Sydney, Australia, by George Foreman, titled "Jules Levy – The World's Greatest Cornetist's Tour of Australia and New Zealand." July 10, 2010.

Photo: Jules Levy model cornet, owned by Gerald Endsley.

Levy, Robert (b. New York, New York, Apr. 4, 1943). American trumpeter and conductor. Levy grew up in Freeport, New York. He began playing the trumpet at age nine, and studied with Arthur Goldstein. After graduating from Freeport, New York Senior High School in 1961, he attended Ithaca College from 1962 to 1966, studying with James Burke, Joan Beeler, and James Ode. He then earned a master of music degree at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) studying trumpet with John Haynie in 1967. He pursued doctoral studies at the University of Iowa (1968-70) with John Beer, completing the coursework and performing the required DMA degree recitals. Additionally, he studied with Robert Nagel and Armando Ghitalla.

Levy has performed with the National Symphony Orchestra, Ithaca Brass Quintet, University of Iowa Brass Quintet, Lawrence Brass, and the Tidewater Brass Quintet with which he recorded Alec Wilder's Brass Quintets Nos. 4-8. Along with marimba virtuoso Gordon Stout, he founded the Wilder Duo in 1976, performing throughout the U.S. and commissioning and premiering many new works. He has been a guest faculty member at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Tanglewood Institute, Red Lodge (Montana), Tidewater Music Festival (Maryland), St. Mary's College of Maryland, Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, and other summer festivals. As a soloist and clinician, he has toured the U.S., China, Portugal, Australia, Canada, Haiti, and Jamaica. He was a featured recitalist during the 1975 and 1985 International Trumpet Guild conventions, and was a founder and member of the ITG's first board of directors. He also conducted the Composers Brass Orchestra in New York.

Levy joined the faculty at Lawrence University in 1979, where in addition to teaching trumpet, he was Director of Bands, and was given an Honorary Master of Music degree. Among his more than forty recordings, Levy has recorded for the Albany, CRI, Golden Crest, Trilogy, Serenus, Accurate, Klavier, and Northeast labels. He has also recorded the solo albums, Cross Over (Stellar Sound Productions) and Blackberry Winter (Mark Records). He is leader of Big Band Reunion, an eighteen-piece big band, and has performed with the improvisation quartet, the Flex Ensemble. An advocate of and leader in furthering new music for trumpet, Levy has premiered over 130 works, many composed expressly for him and published by Ensemble Music and several other publishers.

Levy retired from Lawrence University in 2004 to focus on composing. He still performs and regularly presents in-school clinics. He is married to Jacqueline Levy, owner and manager of a quilt shop in Lawrence. His daughter, Randi (b. 1968) teaches middle school instrumental music in Germantown, Maryland. Levy's hobbies include composing, writing poetry, and reading. He is currently working toward producing a documentary film on the life of American composer Alec Wilder.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Robert Levy's official website: www.robertlevymusic.com; personal interview, Apr. 21, 2011.

Levy, Yoram (b. Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 28, 1955). Israeli trumpeter. Levy grew up in Tel Aviv and Kibboutz Naan, Israel, the son of Niko (an auto mechanic) and Aviva (a theater actress and later a beautician). He has two brothers—Dan (b. 1966) and Shai (b. 1969). Yoram began playing the trumpet at age eleven after hearing a Chet Baker LP album he saw in a supermarket. His teachers were Yerah Lampert and Edmund Cord. After graduating from Kibboutz Naan High School in 1973, Levy spent three years in the Israeli Army Band (1973-76) before attending McGill University in Montreal, Canada (1976-79), where he studied with James Thompson and earned a bachelor of music degree. He also traveled to New York City (1978-79) for lessons with Vincent Penzarella. After graduating, Levy became the principal trumpet of the Israel Sinfonietta (1979-80). He then earned a master of music degree studying with Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University (1980-81). While in the Chicago area, he also took several lessons from Arnold Jacobs.

Levy was appointed to the trumpet section of the Israel Philharmonic in 1982, a position he held until 1990 when he accepted a senior lectureship at the Queensland Conservatory in Brisbane, Australia (1990-97). He was associate principal trumpet of the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra in 1994, working alongside principal John Tabor. Since 1998, Levy has been principal trumpet of the Tasmanian Symphony Orchestra. He also serves as an adjunct professor and brass coordinator at the Tasmanian Conservatory in Hobart (since 2010), and has performed with the Australian Chamber Orchestra, Sydney Symphony Orchestra, Musica Nova (Israel), and the Queensland Symphony, and continues to occasionally perform with the Israel Philharmonic. Levy has released a solo CD with organ titled One 2 One (Move Records).

Levy is considered one of Australia's finest trumpet teachers. Among his many students are David Elton, John Foster, and Mark Carter. He claims that his interest in teaching grew from his own physical and mental struggles in his early career. He is president of the Island Brass Academy in Hobart.

Since 1999, Levy has been married to his wife Elinor; they have three children: Tomer (b. 2000), Iris (b. 2004), and Adam (b. 2008). Yoram's hobbies include tennis and history.

Bibl.: "Yoram Levy" (2010 ITG Conference program book biography); "Yoram Levy" (www.australianbrass.com); personal interview, July 10, 2010.

Lewark, Egbert (b. Mainz, Germany, Sept. 7, 1953). German trumpeter. The highly versatile Egbert Lewark studied in Mainz with Rudolf Güttler and Heinz Zickler (1974), and with Helmut Erb in Würzburg (1980-84). Additional study was with Edward Tarr, David Tasa, and Günther Beetz. He also studied composition, music education, and political science. He was given fixed positions at the Kreismusikschule Ludwigshafen (1980-82) and the Städtishe Musikschule Frankenthal in 1982.

Lewark was an assistant professor at the Gesamthochschule Kassel (1992-94), and played in various jazz groups and big bands. He has also performed with the Kurpfälzisches Chamber Orchestra, Mannheim Bach Collegium, Walter Scholz's ensemble (on flugelhorn), Mainz Theatre, and other ensembles. He was the trumpeter with, and founder of the chamber groups La Banda Palatina (1989), Con Voce Festiva (1991), and Splendid Brass (1992). He has recorded numerous solo CDs of Baroque and Classical trumpet works, and has published several of his compositions for trumpet.

His daughter Sarah (b. 1988) began to play the trumpet at age five, before she could read or write. She practiced daily with her father and began to perform in public in 1999; the following year she played in Ibiza with her father's group, Splendid Brass.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lewis, Bobby (b. Oshkosh, Wisconsin, Jan. 23, 1936). American trumpeter. Lewis's father and uncle were musicians. Bobby began playing the cornet at age nine, and by age sixteen was performing professionally with his own band. After graduating from Oshkosh West High School, Lewis attended the University of Wisconsin in Madison, where he studied with Ed Mirr and Don Whitaker, and earned a bachelor's degree in music education, and a master of music degree in 1958.

Lewis moved to Chicago in 1961, and worked with Jack Teagarden (1962-63), toured with Peggy Lee (1965-85), played first trumpet for Tony Bennett for fifteen years, took part in the First International Brass Congress in Montreux, Switzerland (1976), and worked a great deal as a studio musician. He formed and led four groups during his career: Ears (1975-92), Muggles (a Dixieland and Louis Armstrong-style group), Rhythmakers (1978-92), and Forefront (four trumpets plus drums, 1972-77).

Bobby Lewis's solo recordings include Inside This Song, Passion Flower, Flugel Gourmet, Just Havin' Some Fun, In the Forefront, Instant Groove, On Fire!, Here I Go Again, and Another Time, all made on the Southport label beginning in 1993. He has played over 7,000 studio sessions for television, radio, films, and record albums. Among the hundreds of musicians he has worked with are Tony Bennett, Ella Fitzgerald, Peggy Lee, Doc Severinsen, Maynard Ferguson, Natalie Cole, Al Hirt, Curtis Mayfield, Jack Teagarden, Rosemary Clooney, Alice Cooper, Sy Zentner, Tex Beneke, Jerry Butler, Ramsey Lewis, Barry Manilow, Clark Terry, Jabbo Smith, Roy Eldridge, Art Hodes, Richie Cole, Skitch Henderson, Sarah Vaughan, Liza Minelli, Sammy Davis Jr., Bernadette Peters, Henry Mancini, Benny Carter, Harry Belafonte, Benny Goodman, Lena Horne, Mel Tormé, Vic Damone, Maureen McGovern, Nancy Wilson, Bill Conti, Judy Garland, Johnny Carson, Buddy Morrow, the Modernaires, Claude Thornhill, Frank Sinatra, and Ira Sullivan. He has also performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Saint Louis Symphony, Milwaukee Symphony, and Grant Park Symphony.

Lewis received the "Musician of the Year" award in 1997 from the Del Segno Musicians Club of Chicago, as well as the "Distinguished Alumni Award" in 2000 from his alma mater, Oshkosh West High School. Lewis has been a jazz instructor at the University of Illinois-Chicago.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Bobby Lewis's official website (www.bobbylewis.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lewis, Carroll ("Cappy") (b. Brillion, Wisconsin, May 18, 1917; d. 1991). American trumpeter. Lewis began playing the trumpet at age ten, and was inspired by recordings of Bunny Berigan, Bix Beiderbecke, and Louis Armstrong. At age twenty-three, he joined Woody Herman's band (1939-44), and played for a few months with Tommy Dorsey while in the military. After his service obligations, Lewis returned to Woody Herman's band (now called the First Herd) in late 1946.

Lewis moved to Hollywood during the late 1940s to become a studio musician. His work for television, film, and recordings included backing celebrity vocalists such as Frank Sinatra, Ella Fitzgerald, and Helen Carr with magnificent trumpet solos. He made a television film called Louis Armstrong: Chicago Style (music by Benny Carter). He recorded with Nellie Lutcher (1956), Frankie Carle (1967), and Nelson Riddle's orchestra on numerous albums, as well as playing on the soundtracks for films such as Hello, Dolly! and The Jungle Book. He also played lead trumpet for Benny Goodman on occasion. Lewis doubled on harmonica, and often played the instrument on recordings.

In addition to the hundreds of recordings Lewis played as a studio musician, he also recorded his own album for HiFi titled Get Happy with Cappy. Unfortunately, a stroke in 1978 (at the age of sixty-one) put an end to his performing career. He died about thirteen years later at the approximate age of seventy-four. His son, Mark Lewis, played trumpet with Woody Herman's band.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace. Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Woody Herman's trumpet section 1940, Cappy Lewis, Bob Price, and Steady Nelson.

Lewis, Charles ("Charlie") (b. Wilmington, Delaware, Oct. 18, 1948). American trumpeter. Lewis's early introduction to music was at age five through piano lessons with his mother, Harriet White Lewis. He took up the trumpet at age ten, studying for a brief time with William Wallace. He continued his trumpet studies under Richard Rizzo for about a year while attending the Wilmington School of Music (now the Delaware School of Music), and finishing his public education at P.S. DuPont High School under the tutelage of Harold Rehrig of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Lewis then earned a bachelor of music degree at the Peabody Conservatory of Music (1966-70) and a master of music degree at the New England Conservatory (1970-72), studying with Armando Ghitalla.

Lewis received a fellowship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in 1972 where he performed under Maestro Leonard Bernstein and received the C.D. Jackson Prize. His professional career began when Bernstein invited him to play as principal trumpet on his Mass at the opening of the Kennedy Center in Washington, DC in 1973. In the same year, he became a founding member of the Empire Brass (until 1985), a quintet that was the first brass ensemble to win the prestigious Naumburg Chamber Music Award. He was also hired to play in the orchestra for the New York Shakespeare Festival production of Much Ado About Nothing that later went to Broadway and CBS Television. In addition, he has performed with the Boston Jazz Repertory Orchestra, Boston Orchestra and Chorale, Boston Pops, Duke Ellington Orchestra, New Japan Philharmonic, New York Philharmonic, Rhode Island Pops, and for Gunther Schuller's Grammy Award-winning Red Back Book of Scott Joplin. Beginning in 1978, Lewis received career saving help from James Stamp.

As a teacher, Lewis taught for many summers during the Empire Brass Quintet seminars at Indian Hill (associated with Tanglewood), and was on the faculty of the New England Conservatory (1972-73), Williams College, and Boston University (early 1970s to 1997). Since 1997, he has been on the faculty of the Berklee College of Music in Boston; he received the 2006 Teaching Excellence Award as well as the 2001 Brass Department Achievement Award. With his Berklee colleague, Tiger Okoshi, he has coauthored the Berklee Practice Method: Trumpet (Berklee Press). He has recorded with the Empire Brass, Commonwealth Brass Quintet, Carol Comune, Big Bang, Don Byron, and David Amram. He also recorded for the 1982 film, Koyaanisqatsi: Life Out of Balance (music by Philip Glass).

For leisure, Lewis enjoys cooking, baseball, travelling, and spending time at the ocean.

Bibl.: "Charles Lewis, Associate Professor" (www.berklee.edu/faculty/detail/charles-lewis); "Charlie Lewis Biography" (http://people.brandeis.edu/~adeb/Lewis/bio.htm); personal interviews, Apr. 17 and 20, 2013).

Lewis, (Big) Ed (b. Eagle City, Oklahoma, June 22, 1909; d. Blooming Grove, New York, Sept. 18, 1985). American trumpeter. Lewis grew up in Kansas City. He played baritone horn in Shelly Bradford's Brass Band (alongside his father who played brass instruments) and with Jerry Westbrook in 1924. He switched to trumpet in 1925, and for a short while played with Paul Bank and Laura Rucker before playing from 1926 to 1932 with Bennie Moten's Orchestra with which he first recorded. These recordings often feature Lewis as a soloist, and best represent his solo work during his career. His main influences were Joe Smith, Red Nichols, and Bix Beiderbecke.

In February of 1932, Lewis left Moten and played with several leading groups in the Kansas City area including those of Thamon Hayes, Pete Johnson, Harlan Leonard, and Jay McShann. Because of his strong upper register, Count Basie hired him as his lead trumpet player, a position he held from February 1937 through September 1948. (Buck Clayton and Harry "Sweets" Edison were the featured soloists.) Lewis also composed several tunes for Basie's band including Justrite and It's Sand Man.

When Basie disbanded the group, Lewis worked as a cabdriver and motorman on the New York subways. In 1954, he began playing again and led a part-time twelve-piece band. In 1984, he toured Europe with the Countsmen, but died in the following year at the age of seventy-six. His son, Oscar Lewis, also played trumpet.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lewis, H[orace] M[onroe] (b. Little Rock, Arkansas, Nov. 26, 1945). American trumpeter and cornetist. Lewis's father was a Methodist minister, so the family moved several times while H.M. was growing up. He began playing the trumpet at age twelve, and studied with Dr. Ashley Coffman at Hendrix College in Conway, Arkansas, when he was a junior in high school in the neighboring town of Morrilton. He later continued study with Coffman at Hendrix College, receiving bachelor of music (with honors) and bachelor of arts degrees in 1967. From 1967 to 1968, he earned a master of music degree at Northwestern University studying with Vincent Cichowicz, and later attended Louisiana State University where he received his PhD in 1975.

Lewis began his teaching career in 1970 when he taught at The College of the Ozarks. In 1982, he moved to Shreveport, Louisiana, to teach at Louisiana State University, and in 1989 accepted his current position at Georgetown College in Georgetown, Kentucky, where he teaches music history and literature, brass classes, music appreciation, orchestration, and conducts the Chapel Brass ensemble and the orchestra. He has performed with the Fort Smith Symphony, Arkansas Symphony Orchestra, Shreveport Symphony, Baton Rouge Symphony, Red River Brass (1983-89), and has played solo cornet and flugelhorn with the Lexington Brass Band.

A prolific author, Lewis has penned hundreds of articles about brass instruments and their history. He has edited numerous editions of trumpet works, and is an avid collector of antique trumpets and cornets. He has presented lectures at the 1991, 1998, and 2001 International Trumpet Guild conferences.

Lewis and his wife, violinist Eloise Reeves Lewis, have two children: Matthew (b. 1978) and Jonathan (b. 1982).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "H.M. Lewis" (http://spider.georgetowncollege.edu/music/Faculty/Lewis/lewis.html); personal interview, July 27, 2011.

Lewis, Jon (b. Gainesville, Florida, Nov. 15, 1959). American trumpeter. Now one of the top studio players in Los Angeles, Lewis grew up in Falls Church, Virginia, and began playing the trumpet at age nine; his first teacher was Pat Mastroleo. After graduating from Falls Church High School in 1977, he attended the University of Kansas, studying with Roger Stoner (1977-81) and receiving a bachelor of music degree. Subsequently, he studied with Thomas Stevens, James Stamp, Armando Ghitalla, and Anthony Plog.

After college, Lewis moved to Los Angeles and began a career as a freelance and studio musician. Over the years, he has performed over one thousand soundtracks for feature films such as Transformers, Blades of Glory, Pirates of the Caribbean, Alien vs. Predator, Fracture, Enchanted, The Reaping, The Matrix, The Patriot, Cars, Monsters Inc., Shooter, Spiderman 3, and National Treasure. Television credits include Star Trek, Deep Space Nine, Next Generation, Voyager, and many others. He is also principal trumpet of the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra and the Santa Barbara Symphony, and is a charter member of the Los Angeles Chamber Brass Quintet. In addition, he often performs with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Pasadena Pops Orchestra, Los Angeles Opera Orchestra, and Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. Lewis was a featured artist at the 2003 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Ft. Worth, Texas.

Lewis and violinist Laine Mautner were married in 2011. He has five children from a previous marriage: Ben (b. 1989), Jeff (b. 1990), Tim (b. 1994), Amy (b. 1996), and Andrew (b. 1999); and a stepdaughter, Caitlin (b. 1989). His hobbies include traveling, and computer-related technology and gadgets.

Bibl.: "Jon Lewis" (www.moviebrass.com/intro/Musicians/trumpetplayers/jon_lewis.html); personal interview, July 25, 2011.

Liberati, Allesandro [Alessandro] (b. Frascati, Italy, Aug. 24, 1847; d. New York, New York, Nov. 6, 1927). Italian cornetist. Handbook of American Music and Musicians (1886) refers to him as Alessandro; otherwise his name is curiously and commonly spelled Allesandro. Liberati grew up in Italy and learned music from his parents, both professional musicians. At age twelve, Alessandro learned to play the cornet from his father Carlo, a well-known bugler and keyed trumpet player, and at age fourteen performed his first public solo. In 1864, he joined the Papal army and played first cornet in the First Cacciatori Band of Rome. Two years later, he became the bugler in Garibaldi's army. From 1866 to 1872, he performed as a cornet soloist, band conductor, and teacher throughout Italy. In 1871, he was in the French Foreign Legion for a brief period.

Patrick Gilmore heard of Liberati and sent for him to be a special soloist in the 1872 Peace Jubilee in America. The following year, Liberati became director of Artillery Bands for all of Canada. He returned to the United States in 1873 and became a citizen in 1876. In 1975, he became the conductor of the Michigan National Guard Band in Detroit as well as the Detroit Police Band, with which he performed the following year in the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition.

Liberati was cornet soloist with Baldwin's Band of Boston for two seasons beginning in 1877. He and the band performed at the 1878 and 1879 Interstate Exposition in Chicago. In the summer of 1879, he was invited to be a special soloist at the opening of the famed Brighton Beach Hotel on Coney Island. He made such a strong impression that he was engaged for the following two summers. During the winter seasons of 1879 and 1880, Liberati was first trumpet (on cornet) in the Philharmonic Society of New York.

In 1881, Liberati was specially selected to play a series of concerts in New York's Central Park for several French and German dignitaries. One of them, the Margrave de Rochambeau, was so impressed with Liberati's performances that on his return to Paris he commissioned a portrait of Liberati as a souvenir of New York. Liberati was also engaged for a series of concerts at the West End Resort in New Orleans. His concerts were so impressive that a leading newspaper sponsored a large dinner in his honor, at which Count Marafoschi, the Italian consul, awarded him an elegant medal containing diamonds. In 1881 or 1882 (sources disagree), he was engaged to entertain foreign guests at the Centennial Celebration in Yorktown, Virginia. In 1883, Liberati was the main musical attraction at the Southern Exposition in Louisville, Kentucky. Again, there were many dinners given in his honor including one by Governor Knott.

Liberati became soloist with the Regiment Armory Band in New York City, which performed for President Grover Cleveland. Liberati was by this time a household name across America, and was in great demand. When several San Francisco band musicians learned that he was in town on vacation in 1886, they honored him by inviting him to perform at a concert in Golden Gate Park. The trolley cars that were used to transport the audience to the park were not able to accommodate all of the people wanting to attend, so Liberati agreed to several repeat performances.

In 1889, Liberati organized his own band—"The World Renowned Liberati Band"—that toured all of America and Canada. Concerts in Portland, Oregon, were so popular that he was invited back each year and received many expensive gifts including one from Governor Pennoyer. He eventually received more medals than any other cornetist, due in part to his magnetic personality and handsome appearance.

In September 1899, Liberati had his perhaps greatest public triumph as the Grand Marshall and band director of a parade of the Grand Army of the Republic in Philadelphia, which he led dressed in his medal-decorated uniform, riding a black stallion, and playing his own Kansas City Star march with variations on a gold cornet, while President McKinley and other officials looked on.

Liberati was known for his incredibly fast single-tongue articulation. Herbert Clarke said that Liberati was a close rival of the great Jules Levy, and that he was able to single-tongue four sixteenth notes per beat at a metronome speed of 160. (!) Liberati made numerous cylinder recordings for Edison in 1898-1915 and toured until 1922. His best-known recorded works are Four and One-Half Octave Schottische, Remembrances of Switzerland, Facilità, and The Pyramids. Some of his many cornet solo compositions include Canzone Neapolitaine, Battle Cry of Freedom, Equatone Cornet Polka, Felice Waltz, La Mia Speranza, Polka Tirolese, Pyramids Polka, Souvenir de la Suisse, Valse Caprice, Spring Song, Past and Present Polka, Gabriel's Trumpet Polka, and Golden Gate Polka. His band recorded four cylinders for Edison.

Liberati died in New York City on November 6, 1927. He was arguably one of the two or three finest cornet soloists that ever lived. Even more amazing is that he achieved this while wearing dentures for many years.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Liebe, Willi (b. Wuppertal-Elberfeld, Germany, Aug. 31, 1905; d. Bad Tölz, Germany, Mar. 30, 1977). German cornetist and trumpeter. Liebe came from a musical family; his father was a trumpet player. He attended a conservatory in Cologne from November 1919 to July 1921, studying with Ludwig Werle. At age fifteen, he was a substitute trumpeter in the Gewandhausorchester Leipzig; at age sixteen was third and assistant first in the Münster City Orchestra; and a year later he played with the City Orchestra of Baden-Baden. In 1925 at the age of twenty, he began his forty-year career as principal trumpet of the German Opera Orchestra in Berlin under Maestro Bruno Walter.

As a soloist, Liebe performed in clubs in Berlin and Heidelberg from 1945 to 1949, getting to know Louis Armstrong and Harry James. He was also one of the pioneers in performing cornet solos in Germany. In his programs, whether with piano or orchestra accompaniment, he usually played six solos plus two encores. Some of his cornet solo compositions and arrangements include Bravour Polka (1930), Napoli (Bellstedt, arr. Liebe), Bravour Fantasie (Nägeli, arr. Liebe), and Liebesgeschichten (1923). Liebe always included the first and last of these in his concert appearances.

Approximately twenty-five years after Liebe's death, Liebe's widow Gudrun donated her husband's Vincent Bach B-flat trumpet and his music library to the Trumpet Museum in Bad Säckingen, Germany, where he had once enjoyed one of his biggest successes. She also commissioned a work for two trumpets and wind ensemble that represents a duel between Liebe and Rafael Méndez. This entertaining work, Dialogue: Von Méndez mit Liebe by Peter J. Lawrence, was premiered on November 3, 2001 during the Sixth Trumpet Festival and Second International Altenburg Trumpet Competition hosted by Dr. Edward Tarr and Frank Amrein in Bad Säckingen. The soloists were Richard Carson Stewart (playing the part of Liebe) and Vincent DiMartino (playing the part of Méndez). The accompanying wind ensemble was the Bad Säckingen Municipal Band, conducted by Johannes Brenke (who soon was to succeed Tarr as director of the Trumpet Museum).

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

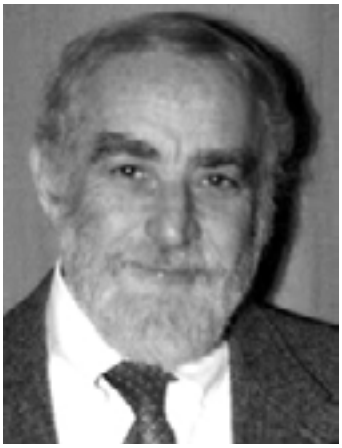
Lieberman, Harold J. (b. Hartford, Connecticut, Apr. 17, 1931). American trumpeter. Lieberman earned a bachelor of music degree at



The Juilliard School, and a master's degree at Columbia University. At age eighteen, he played second trumpet in the Hartford Symphony Orchestra, before joining a US Air Force Band (for four years). He began his career in New York City, performing in various Broadway pit orchestras, and eventually becoming a staff musician for CBS. With the anticipation of having a child (daughter Rhonda), he and his wife Toby moved to Mount Vernon, New York, in order to live in a home larger than their downtown New York apartment. To earn more money than he was making as a freelance artist, Lieberman accepted a job as a band director at a high school in New Rochelle, New York.

In 1962, with the encouragement of saxophonist Tommy Newsome, Lieberman auditioned for Benny Goodman's orchestra. After hearing him perform the trumpet solo in And The Angels Sing, made famous by Goodman's former trumpeter Ziggy Elman, Goodman hired Lieberman for a two-month tour of the United States. Lieberman played with several other big bands, and later in the rock band, Pink Floyd.

Lieberman released an album titled Complete Arban Duets for the Music Minus One label, and Progressive Records All Star Trumpet Spectacular. In 1973, Lieberman commissioned composer Richard Peaslee to write Nightsongs for a trumpet recital at Carnegie Hall. The work, for flugelhorn and trumpet, has become a popular work in the repertoire.

Lieberman taught at Ramapo College, the Mannes College of Music, and the Manhattan School of Music. Now retired, he is an award-winning professor emeritus.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Lieberman, Harold J. "The Love Call of Harold J. Lieberman" (http://harldj.blogspot.com/2008/08/early-60s_07.html).

Liesering, Ludwig (b. Haintchen [now Selters im Taunas], Germany, May 5, 1861; d. Würzburg, Germany, Feb. 10, 1943). German trumpeter and cornetist. Between 1877 and 1883, Liesering studied trumpet, violin, piano, and music theory, after which he made a living as a musician in Holland (1883-84), France (1884-85), England (1885-87), and North America (1887-89). He served as principal trumpet of the City Theater Orchestra of Halle in Germany (1890-93), and was also an active chamber music musician. He taught trumpet at the Würzburg State Conservatory (1893-1923, becoming professor of trumpet and violin in 1914).

Liesering wrote Method for Transposition (1909), a book still used today (published by Simrock), as well as Concertino for Cornet and piano or orchestra (1904), Cornelia (Concert-Polka for cornet and piano, 1911), and Serenade for Trumpet and piano or orchestra (1912).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lillya, Clifford P. (b. Joliet, Illinois, Jan. 20, 1910; d. Ann Arbor, Michigan, May 3, 1998). American cornetist and trumpeter. Lillya began his music studies in the public schools of Joliet, Illinois; in high school he took cornet lessons from H.A. VanderCook, and won a first place medal in the State Solo Contest in 1925 and 1926. After graduation, he attended the VanderCook College of Music in Chicago, and graduated in 1931.

Lillya taught music in Chicago's Van Steuben Junior High School, Englewood High School, and Marshall High School before earning a master of music degree from Northwestern University in 1944 where he studied with Veran Florent. Lillya taught at the Interlochen Camp (1945-53), and joined the music faculty at the University of Michigan in 1947 where he taught there for thirty-two years before retiring in 1979. He was awarded the Earl V. Moore Professor of Music title in 1974 for his outstanding teaching and academic abilities. Beginning in 1971, he was made chair of the department of winds and percussion. Lillya had numerous students; among the best known are Emerson Head, Donald E. McComas, Rob Roy McGregor, Cathy Leach, Stephen Jones, Terry Sawchuk, Donald R. Tison, and the jazz soloist Louis Smith. He also influenced Pierre Thibaud.

Lillya wrote several articles and books for trumpet including the Lillya Cornet Method and Trumpet (Cornet) Technic (1952). In 1931, he married his high school sweetheart, Helen Keltie. He received the Goldman Citation from the American Bandmasters Association, and was posthumously awarded the Honorary Award of the International Trumpet Guild. He was vice president of the International Trumpet Guild from 1975 to 1977.

Bibl.: Jones, Stephen G. "Portrait of a Teacher: Clifford P. Lillya" (ITG Newsletter, Oct. 1979); "Clifford P. Lillya" (Orbituaries: www.umich.edu); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lindblom, Peter ("Pete") (b. Jamestown, New York, Oct. 19, 1961). American trumpeter. Lindblom began playing trumpet at age nine, and studied with David Kuehn, James Stubbs, and Robert Nagel. He graduated from Jamestown High School in Jamestown, New York, in 1979, and attended the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Barbara Butler from 1979 to 1983, earning a bachelor of music degree. From 1984 to 1985, he studied with David Hickman at Arizona State University where he received a master of music degree and served as a graduate teaching assistant. He then studied for a doctorate with Ronald Anderson at the State University of New York-Stony Brook where he served as a graduate teaching assistant from 1990 to 1992.

Lindblom's orchestral career began when he accepted a position as coprincipal trumpet of the Charleston Symphony Orchestra in South Carolina (1985-89). From 1991 to 1996, he toured as principal trumpet with the American Sinfonietta, a select chamber orchestra led by Maestro Michael Palmer. He is a founding member of the Emerald Brass Quintet which won first prize in the Summit Brass International Brass Ensemble Competition, and has been substitute principal of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra. Since 1999, he has been the trumpet instructor at the State University of New York-Fredonia, and since 1991, assistant principal of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra.

Lindblom and his wife Bonnie, a fellow classmate and trumpeter at Eastman during the mid 1980s, have three children. His hobbies include golf, running, and watching his children compete in gymnastic competitions.

Bibl.: personal interview, Sept. 11, 2011.

Lindemann, Jens [Horst] (b. Peine, Germany, June 13, 1966). Canadian trumpeter. Born in the small town of Peine, Germany (near Hanover), Lindemann was raised in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, where he studied with Alvin Lowrey and William Dimmer. His father Horst is a retired welder, and his mother Helga is a homemaker. After graduating from McNally High School in 1984, he attended McGill University in Montreal (1985-88) studying with James Thompson, and spent the summer of 1985 at the Banff Centre for the Arts studying with David Hickman. After finishing his bachelor of music degree at McGill, he received a grant from the Canada Council to study in Los Angeles and Phoenix where he took lessons from Roy Poper, Donald Green, Mario Guarneri, and Hickman. Lindemann then received his master of music degree from The Juilliard School in New York City as a student of Mark Gould (1990-92).

Lindemann won a solo competition in Canada that provided funds under the Canada Council to present recitals and residencies in many small communities throughout Canada. He was in residence at the Banff Centre of the Arts (1992-93) where he took a few lessons with Hickman, and developed his solo skills before entering several international competitions. In 1992, he won first prize in the Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild Solo Competition (Florida), a prize at the ARD Competition in Munich (1992), and first prize at the Prague International Trumpet Competition in 1992.

When Fred Mills retired from the Canadian Brass in 1996, Lindemann was hired as his replacement. He toured and recorded with this prestigious ensemble for five years before leaving the group to launch a solo career in 2001. In the same year, he was hired as a professor of high distinction at the University of California-Los Angeles (UCLA). He released his first solo album, Flying Solo, on the Marquis label and began concertizing throughout the world. His other two CDs for Marquis include Rising Sun and The Classic Trumpet. He received the Echo Klassik award in Germany for his recordings and has also been nominated for Grammy and Juno awards

Lindemann has performed with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, given a Command Performance for the Queen of England, performed recitals at various conferences of the International Trumpet Guild, and performed during the Stanley World Cup competition. He has performed at many of the world's most renowned venues and was featured in front of forty thousand people during the Last Night of the Proms in London. He also performed a solo during the opening ceremonies of the 2010 Winter Olympics in Canada before a television audience of billions.

Lindemann served as a member of Summit Brass while teaching at the 2003 and 2004 Rafael Méndez Brass Institutes at the University of Colorado in Boulder. He also hosted the 2008 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Banff, Canada, and was the artistic advisor for summer sessions at the Banff Centre for the Arts for several summers. In 1999, McMaster University awarded him an Honorary Doctorate of Music degree.

Lindemann has been a guest soloist with leading orchestras throughout the world, including the London Symphony Orchestra, Philadelphia Orchestra, Beijing Symphony, Bayerischer Rundfunk Orchestra, Buenos Aires Chamber Orchestra, Atlanta Symphony, Toronto Symphony, Vancouver Symphony, Saint Louis Symphony, Detroit Symphony, Seattle Symphony, Houston Symphony, Montreal Symphony, Warsaw Symphony, Thailand Symphony, National Arts Center Orchestra of Canada, Welsh Chamber Orchestra, Mostly Mozart Orchestra of Lincoln Center, I'Musici de Montreal, Pro Musica Chamber Orchestra of Columbus, and many others. He performs classical as well as jazz styles. Recently, The Brass Herald magazine named him the "International Brass Personality of the Year."

Lindemann and pianist Jennifer Snow have been married since 1998.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Jens Lindemann" (www.music.ucla.edu); personal interview, Mar. 22, 2010.

Lindenau, John R. (b. c1945). American trumpeter. Lindenau grew up in Michigan, and spent much of his time fishing with his father. He majored in music at Baldwin-Wallace College Conservatory, and then attended graduate school at the University of Michigan, where he studied with Clifford Lillya and earned a master of music degree. His first trumpet teaching position was at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa. In 1976, he was a guest trumpet instructor at Michigan State University.

Lindenau spent much of his music career as the trumpet instructor and brass ensemble coach at the Interlochen Arts Academy in Interlochen, Michigan. In 1989, he served again as a visiting professor of trumpet at Michigan State University, where he substituted for Byron Autry who was on leave during the winter session. Lindenau has performed with the Sioux City Symphony, American Wind Symphony, Chicago Little Symphony, Interlochen Jazz Quartet, Dave Sporny Big Band, Woody Herman Orchestra, and the New York Trumpet Ensemble.

In 1984, John and his wife Pamela purchased the fishing vessel, Infinity, and began a charter fishing service out of Leland, Michigan ("Fishtown"). Their son, Jon, is also a fisherman who helps with many of the charters. John is still somewhat active as a jazz musician.

Bibl.: "Lindenau Accepts Post at Michigan State University" (news item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1989); "The Crew" (www.infinity.charter-fishtown.com).

Lindgren, Lasse (b. Göteborg, Sweden, Mar. 11, 1962). Swedish trumpeter. Lindgren fell in love with the sound of the trumpet at age five after hearing Louis Armstrong on the radio. He began taking lessons on the trumpet at age nine, and later attended high school music programs in Ljungskile (1980-81) and Ingesund (1981-83). He attended the Royal College of Music in Stockholm (1984-86) and spent the next several years working as a freelance trumpeter in Stockholm.

Lindgren formed his first band, Outfront, and moved his wife and family to the city of Sandviken where he played as lead trumpet and jazz soloist with the Sandviken Big Band (1989-97). He has also played with the Bohuslän Big Band (1991-97) and the Danish Radio Big Band (1997-2000), among many others. His solo CDs include Walkin' Around, Spirits, In the Mood for Standards, Right On Time, and To My Friends—all on the Imogena Records label. He has toured the world with jazz artists such as Ray Charles, Clark Terry, Kenny Wheeler, George Gruntz, Maria Schneider, Joe Henderson, and Bob Mintzer.

Currently, Lindgren performs with his three groups: Lasse Lindgren's Hip Bop Constellation, Lasse Lindgren's Quartet Constellation, and Lasse Lindgren's Big Constellation. He is the proud owner of Maynard Ferguson's original Conn "Connstellation" B-flat trumpet used by Ferguson during the 1950s and '60s.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lasse Lindgren's official website: www.lasselindgren.se.

Lindsay, Douglas ("Doug") Stephen (b. Plainfield, New Jersey, June 18, 1962). American trumpeter. Lindsay began playing piano at age five, and later studied trumpet with Herb Tiemeyer. He received a bachelor of music degree at Baldwin-Wallace College Conservatory, studying with James Darling, and a master of music degree at the Manhattan School of Music in New York, studying with William Vacchiano.

Lindsay began his orchestral career with the National Symphony Orchestra of the Dominican Republic, where he met his wife, a Dominican Republic native. He then played with the Charlotte (North Carolina) Symphony Orchestra and the Dayton Philharmonic in Ohio. He joined the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra in 1991, and since 1996 has been associate principal trumpet (sometimes playing the majority of principal parts) of the CSO and Cincinnati Symphony Pops.

Lindsay's solo CD is titled French Recital Music for Trumpet (Trumpet Studio Recordings). His hobbies are golf, reading, backpacking, and camping.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Douglas Lindsay" (http://concertnova.com/trumpet).

Linn, Leslie ("Les") (b. Topeka, Kansas, May 28, 1961). American trumpeter. Linn grew up in Wichita, Kansas, and began playing the trumpet at age nine. His first teachers were Clifford Sproul, John Aley, and Walter Myers. After graduating from Wichita High School East in 1979, he studied with Myers at Wichita State University from 1979 to 1983, earning a bachelor of music education degree, and playing as third trumpet in the Wichita Symphony Orchestra (1981-83). From 1984 to 1986, he attended Arizona State University under David Hickman where he received his master of music degree and served as a graduate trumpet teaching assistant. He was also a member of the National Repertory Orchestra in Colorado during the summer of 1986.

Linn began his professional career as second trumpet of The Phoenix Symphony from 1985 to 1986. He accepted a position as principal of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra in 1986, and also taught as an adjunct faculty member at Friends University in Wichita (1986-88). In addition to his orchestral duties, he was an instructor at Wichita State University from 1987 to 1993.

Les Linn returned to Tempe, Arizona, to study with Hickman towards a doctor of musical arts degree (1993-95). He freelanced in the Phoenix area, and performed on occasion with the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra and the San Diego Symphony Orchestra. During the 1996-97 season, he was principal trumpet of the Bilbao Symphony Orchestra in Spain. Since 1997, he has been coprincipal of the Arizona Opera Orchestra, a regular extra or substitute with The Phoenix Symphony, and third trumpet of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra each summer since 1999.

Les Linn married his second wife Lynn Tuttle (a flutist and Director of Arts Education for the Arizona Department of Education), in 2000. Their two sons are Landon (b. 2004) and Peterson (b. 2007). His hobbies include hiking, bicycling, and reading.

Bibl.: personal interview, Jan. 26, 2012.

Linn, Ray[mond Sayre] (b. Chicago, Illinois, Oct. 20, 1920; d. Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 4, 1996). American trumpeter. Linn studied with Forrest Nicola, even though his father was a trumpet player. Linn played in several Chicago area society orchestras before joining the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra (1938-41). He then played on and off with Woody Herman (1941-42, 1945, 1947), Jimmy Dorsey (1942-45), Benny Goodman (1943, 1947), and Artie Shaw (1944-46).

Linn moved to Los Angeles in 1945 and led two swing recording dates that year. In 1946, he became a member of the Boyd

Raeburn band and was one of the earliest bop trumpet players on the West Coast. In that same year, he began working as a studio musician, but also worked with the big bands of Bob Crosby (1950-51), Shorty Rogers, Maynard Ferguson. Buddy DeFranco, Barney Kessel, Les Brown, and again with Woody Herman (1955-59). Most of his career during the 1960s and '70s was as a studio player.

In 1973, Linn formed his own Dixieland band that made two fine LP recordings, Chicago Jazz (Trend, 1978) and Empty Suit Blues (Discovery, 1980).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Listo, Juhani (b. Rovaniemi, Finland, June 10, 1952). Finnish trumpeter. Listo began playing trumpet at age eleven and later studied at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki, and the Orchestra Academy of the Berlin Philharmonic. While in Berlin, he acquired an interest in the Baroque (valveless) trumpet, and eventually studied the instrument with Holger Eichhorn and Edward H. Tarr.

Listo played with the German Opera Orchestra in Berlin from 1976 to 1977, and since 1977, has been principal trumpet of the Philharmonic Orchestra in Turku, Finland. He is an active performer on Baroque trumpet throughout Europe, and teaches the instrument at the Sibelius Academy and the Tampere Conservatory. He also teaches modern trumpet and chamber music at the Turku Conservatory. In working towards the unification of the technical and musical possibilities on both types of trumpet, he has often been collaborating with Friedemann Immer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Little, Booker [Jr.] (b. Memphis, Tennessee, Apr. 2, 1938; d. New York, New York, Oct. 5, 1961). American trumpeter. Born into a musical family, Little started playing the trombone under his father Booker Sr., followed by the clarinet when he was twelve, but he switched to the trumpet a few months later. He studied the trumpet under his cousin Louis Smith, then Matthew Garrett at Memphis High School. While growing up, he played in various jazz groups including those of Charles Lloyd, Phineas Newborn, and Harold Mabern. He also backed Dave Bartholomew and B.B. King. He established himself in Chicago (1954) and took lessons from Joe Summerhill of the Chicago Lyric Orchestra. Booker played with the Chicago Civic Orchestra alongside Bill Fiedler. Booker even received advice from Louis Armstrong, a friend of Booker Sr. He attended the Chicago Conservatory of Music in 1955, graduating with a bachelor of music degree in 1958. While in Chicago, he played with Johnny Griffin and Walter Perkins's MJT + 3.

In June of 1958 at the age of twenty, Little joined the Max Roach Quintet, making some of his first recordings. He stayed with Roach until February of 1959 when he moved to New York City and began working with Mal Waldron and John Coltrane. He returned to Chicago in 1960 and formed his own groups that recorded for Time-Bainbridge (1960), Candid (1961), and Bethlehem (1961). He also recorded Africa/Brass with Coltrane in 1961. During the summer of 1961, Little spent two weeks in New York playing with Eric Dolphy at the Five Spot. They recorded three albums during those two weeks.

Just as he was hitting his prime, Little died from uremia, a disease of the kidneys. He was twenty-three years old. Booker Little played an Al Cass mouthpiece, an Olds trumpet Recording-model and a V. Bach trumpet. His routine was based on Schlossberg exercises. A disciple of Clifford Brown, Little opened the post-bop area with harmonies that influenced later players such as Terence Blanchard and Dave Douglas.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom with extract on mp3, video clip; Oct. 2008).

Litzler, Philippe [Charles] (b. Mulhouse, France, Nov. 13, 1969). French trumpeter. As early as age four, Litzler started his music making in his hometown of Saint-Louis as a member of the firemans' band conducted by his father, Charles Litzler, and at age six he became a flugelhornist. In 1987 at age seventeen, he entered the École Normale de Musique de Paris where he studied with André Daire, winning his diploma in trumpet in 1988, and as a soloist in 1989. He then attended the Paris Conservatory where he studied with Pierre Thibaud. There, he won first prize in chamber music in 1990, and first prize with distinction in trumpet in 1991.

Litzler began his orchestral career at age fifteen. He has been a member of the Basel Symphony Orchestra, Radio Symphony Orchestras in Basel and Sarrebruck, the Straßburg Philharmonic Orchestra, and principal trumpet of the National Orchestra of France (1991-2005) under Maestros Charles Dutoit and Kurt Masur. In 2005, he moved to Switzerland to assume duties as principal of the Zürich Opera Orchestra. He is currently principal of the Zürich Tonhalle Orchestra.

An active soloist, Litzler toured South America in 1994 with the instrumental ensemble, La Follia. He also founded the trumpet ensemble, Die Basler Bachtrompeter, in Basel, Switzerland. He performed the premiere of the trumpet concerto by the French composer, Christian Gouiguené, in 1995, and of the concertino Segments by Anthony Plog in 1998, and was a featured artist during the 2001 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Evansville, Indiana. After a memorable performance of the Second Brandenburg Concerto with the Mainz Chamber Orchestra in 1995, he was invited to perform it again on the 250th anniversary of Bach's death on July 28, 2000. He is a member of the Grand Ensemble de Cuivres d'Alsace, and since 2008 has been teaching at the Musikhochschule in Lucerne, Switzerland.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Philippe Litzler" (http://en.wikipedia.org); http://www.philippelitzler.com).

Llewellyn, Edward B[each] (b. St. Louis, Missouri, Jan. 11, 1879; d. Monahans, Texas, Sept. 25, 1936). American cornetist and trumpeter. Edward's father, James D. Llewellyn, was a cornetist and trumpeter of note who played professionally in St. Louis, and was a featured soloist with the Official Band of the St. Louis World's Fair in 1893. In 1895, the family moved to Chicago where James continued performing as a musician. At the age of eleven, Edward began learning the cornet from his father.

Edward attended the Chicago Music College where he studied violin, piano, and harmony. At age seventeen, he joined T.P. Brooke's band (1896-1904), and at age twenty became principal trumpet with the Adolph Rosenbecker Symphony Orchestra (1898-1900); for a while he was concurrently in both organizations. During the summer of 1903, Llewellyn was soloist with a band on Catalina Island, and in the following year a special soloist at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair. He was soloist with the US Marine Band in Washington, D.C. (1905-06), and in the summer of 1907 was guest soloist with the British Guards Band at Manhattan Beach, New York.

Conductor Emil Pauer hired Llewellyn as principal trumpet of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra in 1907 (until 1909). Pauer said of him, I've never heard a more remarkable trumpet player in Europe or America than this Llewellyn. During the summers of 1908-12, Llewellyn played as soloist with the Rochester (NY) Municipal Band. He was principal of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra from 1909-11, and from 1911-12 was principal of the Chicago Opera Company orchestra. Llewellyn spent twenty-two years as principal trumpet of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra (1912-33), but then lost his teeth and moved to the third trumpet position until 1936; Elden Benge succeeded him as principal trumpet. He was also orchestra manager from 1925 to 1936. At the same time he was in the CSO, he played principal trumpet during the summers with the Ravinia Park Opera Company (1916-23). Llewellyn played an arrangement of the Second Brandenburg Concerto by Bach on a Besson trumpet in F.

Llewellyn composed over twenty-five cornet solos including My Regards, Salute Polka, You and I, Ocean Breezes Waltz, Premiere Polka, and Anne: Valse Caprice. He was killed in an automobile accident near Monahans, Texas, on September 25, 1936 at the age of fifty-six when a truck in front of him suddenly stopped and pipes fell off, going through his windshield. He died instantly, and his wife was severely injured. Few people today know that he was a champion bicyclist who also loved to wrestle, box, and golf.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Crown, Thomas. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1902-1932" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompette (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Llewellyn, James D. (b. Wales, Great Brittan, 1854; d. Chicago, Illinois, 1920). British-born American trumpeter. Llewellyn's career began at the age of ten; his first musical experience was with the Volunteer Regiment Band in Abersychan, Wales, and while still young, he became a star cornet soloist, sometimes being called "The Little Giant."

Llewellyn immigrated to the United States in 1869 at the age of thirteen, and soon found employment in various bands. He moved to St. Louis, where he had relatives, to become cornet soloist with Postlewaite's Great Western Band, later played in De Bar's Grand Opera House, and in 1879 performed at Pope's Theater. He moved to Chicago in 1885, and became cornet soloist at the Chicago Opera House, a vaudeville theatre. In 1893, he was a featured soloist at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago; his son, Edward, also participated. In 1894-99, he and his son toured the country and played solos and duets with Brooke's Chicago Marine Band that was featured during the 1901 Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, New York.

In 1902, James Llewellyn joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra as second trumpet (succeeding Frederick Dietz) and its first non-German trumpeter; he played with the CSO until 1907. He was a union official with the Chicago Federation of Musicians from 1902 until his death at the approximate age of sixty-four. He taught at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008); Crown, Thomas. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1902-1932." (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011).

Lohse, Peter (b. Freiberg, Saxony, Germany, Apr. 3, 1960). German trumpeter. Lohse began playing the trumpet at age six, and, from ages thirteen to eighteen, attended a special school for music that was associated with the Hochschule in Dresden. He then studied at the Carl Maria von Weber Hochschule für Musik with Rudolf Haase, Bernd Hengst, and Ludwig Güttler. While a student, he substituted in the Staatskapelle Dresden, and joined the orchestra as coprincipal trumpet in 1982 (principal in 1987).

Since 1984, Lohse has taught at the Dresden Music Academy, and in 1999 became an honorary professor; since 1992 he is a guest teacher for solo playing and chamber music at the Hochschule in Tokyo. The Staatkapelle Dresden gave him the title of Chamber Virtuoso in 1998 and the Musikhochschule made him Honorary Professor one year later. In 2003, he was awarded the Fritz-Busch Prize of the Foundation for the Semper Opera. Lohse often performs with other leading German orchestras, often on world-wide tours, and as a soloist and chamber musician with Concertino Dresden, Musica Viva Ensemble Dresden, and Capella Sagittariana. On his CD recording, Italienische Trompetenkonzerte, he plays not only piccolo trumpets in A and G, but also on the reproduction of a Saxon trumpet from the time of August the Strong (1670-1733).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trumpete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Peter Lohse" (www.staatskapelle-dresden.de); http://www.hfmdd.de/studium/dozenten/kv-prof-peter-lohse-trompete.

Lokumba, Hannibal [Marvin "Hannibal" Peterson] (b. Smithville, Texas, Nov. 11, 1948). American trumpeter, composer, and poet. Born as Marvin Peterson, Lokumba grew up in Smithville and Texas City, Texas. His mother (a pianist) gave him a trumpet when he was thirteen, and in 1961 while in high school he formed a jazz group called The Soul Masters that backed several name artists including Otis Redding, Jackie Wilson, and T. Bone Walker. After graduating from high school, Lokumba toured with T-Bone Walker's band (1965-67). He attended North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) from 1967 to 1970, but dropped out and moved to New York City.

Lokumba worked with Rahsaan Roland Kirk in 1970, and during the 1970s played with the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Orchestra, Pharoah Sanders (1972), Gil Evans (1973-74, 1980), Roy Haynes, Elvin Jones, Archie Shepp, and many others. In 1974, he began leading the Sunrise Orchestra, a group that received a great deal of attention due to his compositions that combined jazz and classical styles. He also recorded with Frank Foster, Eric Kloss, Kip Hanrahan, Grachan Moncus III, and McCoy Tyner.

Lokumba became very interested in African history during the late 1970s. He traced his roots back to slavery and changed his name at that time. His compositions for symphony orchestra have drawn huge attention and have been performed or recorded by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra (African Portraits, conducted by Maestro Daniel Barenboim on Teldec), Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Philadelphia Orchestra, Cleveland Orchestra, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Houston Symphony Orchestra, and many others, totaling over two hundred performances. The Kronos Quartet and other leading chamber ensembles have performed other works by Lokumba. Among his best-known works are Diary of an African-American (based on the composer's life), Dear Mrs. Parks, and A Shepherd Among Us. Lokumba received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Hannibal Lokumba's trumpet recordings include The Angels of Atlanta (Enja), Visions of a New World (Atlantic), Children of the Fire (Sunrise), Hannibal (MPS), Naima (EMI), Hannibal in Antibes (Inner City), and Crossing (Ear-Rational). In 2009, he won the Fellow Award in Music from the United States Artists. Lokumba is a published poet who has written two books of poetry. Since 1993, Lokumba, his wife Sumai, and their children have lived in Bastrop, Texas.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Marvin 'Hannibal' Peterson" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Marvin 'Hannibal' Peterson" (www.answers.com); Hannibal Lokumba's official website: www.hanniballokumba.com.

London, Frank (b. New York, New York, May 29, 1958). American trumpeter, composer, and bandleader. London started to play the trumpet at age nine. He studied in New York City with Bob McCoy, Vincent Penzarella, and Laurie Frink, and earned a bachelor of arts degree in Afro-American music from the New England Conservatory in 1980. He also studied with John Coffey, William Fielder, Nat Adderley, John McNeil, and Carmine Caruso.

London is best known for his role as a trumpeter in the New York City-based klezmer band, The Klezmatics, that won a Grammy Award in the Contemporary World Music category. He is also a member of Hasidic New Wave, and leads his own Frank London's Klezmer Brass Allstars. He is cofounder of the Les Misérables Brass Band and the Klezmer Conservatory Band. He can be heard on over three hundred CDs, including his own recordings Invocations, Hazonos, and Scientist at Work. He has been featured on HBO's Sex and the City soundtracks, and has performed or recorded with Itzhak Perlman, LL Cool, Mel Tormé, Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy, John Zorn, Iggy Pop, and countless others.

As a composer for theater, dance, and film, London has received several Meet the Composer grants. Among his works are A Night in the Old Marketplace (folk opera), Davenen, The Memoirs of Gluckel of Hameln, Romance, The Brothers from Another Planet (film), Men With Guns (film), Murder and Murder (film), Golem (theater), The Debt (film), The Shvitz (film), Divan (film), and Ivye Project (theater).

London has appeared at the North Sea Jazz Festival and the Lincoln Center Summer Festival. He teaches klezmer music at various workshops including the KlezKanada of Montreal, and teaches Jewish music in several countries including the U.S., England, Canada, and Crimea. He is on the music faculty at the State University of New York-Purchase.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Frank London" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Frank_London); Frank London's official website: www.franklondon.com).

Longinotti, Paolo (b. Bellinzona, Ticino, Switzerland, Nov. 6, 1913; d. Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 31, 1963). Swiss trumpeter. Longinotti's early trumpet training was with his father. He also studied piano under Casagrande and violin with Bertoni. He studied with Alfred Dupont at the Geneva Conservatory, and won the first prize in trumpet with distinction in 1939. He also studied music theory with Jules Philippe Godard and Alexandre Dénéréaz in Lausanne, and Professor Müller in Zurich.

Longinotti played with the Radio Lausanne Orchestra, and from 1935 to 1938, was principal trumpet of the Orchestra of Radio Lausanne. He then became coprincipal trumpet of the Suisse Romande Orchestra and a member of the Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra. When Ernest Ansermet became conductor of the Suisse Romande Orchestra, he immediately appointed Longinotti as principal trumpet. He was the first trumpeter in Switzerland who could play Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto (on a long B-flat piccolo trumpet by V. Bach).

Longinotti taught trumpet at the Geneva Conservatory (1950-62), and conducted the official band of the State of Geneva: "Elite." He recorded Haydn's Concerto in E-flat with the Suisse Romande Orchestra under the baton of Ansermet, as well as composed music for various instruments, chamber ensembles, brass band, and wind band. His trumpet solo with piano, Scherzo Iberico, and his book of twelve etudes, Studies in the Modern and Classical Style, remain an important part of the trumpet repertoire.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Paolo Longinotti" (Editions BIM & The Brass Press Online Store: www.editions-bim.com).

López, Vicente (b. Navajas [near Valencia], Spain, July 4, 1948).

López began studies at the conservatory in Valencia when he was twelve, and at age seventeen began four years of study with Maurice André in Paris. After receiving his diploma, he played with the National Orchestra in Madrid (1976-81), followed by the National Orchestra and Opera in Barcelona for ten years (1987-97). Beginning in 1988, he has been professor at the conservatory in Valencia, and is currently principal trumpet of the Alicante Symphony Orchestra. López has released a CD with Matthias Beck titled Erschallet that includes concertos for two trumpets and organ.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lösch, Reinhold (b. Hofheim/Ried, Germany, May 19, 1924). German trumpeter. Lösch began by playing in a local Posaunenchor, and studied in Mannheim until 1942. He was drafted, and as a prisoner of war he performed with various prison bands. From 1947 to the end of 1949, he was a member of Kurt Edelhagen's dance orchestra, and in 1951 played with the SWF Baden-Baden. From 1952 to 1977, Lösch was a member of the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra, and principal of the National Theater Orchestra in Mannheim (since 1973). Since 1986, he has taught at the Musikhochschule in Mannheim. A few of his best-known students are Kurt Nagel, Wolfgang Basch, Walter Scholz, Albert Oesterle, and Joachim Pliquett.

Lösch is the brother-in-law of the famous German trumpeter, Walter Gleissle. He studied under Adam Zeyer, Franz Willy Neugebauer, and Adolf Scherbaum, among others, and recorded one of the early versions of Hindemith's Sonata.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Loughnane, Lee (b. Elmwood Park, Illinois, Oct. 21, 1946). American trumpeter. Loughnane grew up in North Chicago and attended Catholic High School. His father Philip was a freelance trumpeter who conducted an Army service band during World War II. Lee attended DePaul University as a music education student and studied trumpet with George Quinlan. His early influences were Maynard Ferguson, Doc Severinsen, Snooky Young, Clifford Brown, Marvin Stamm, John Audino, and Pete and Conte Candoli.

Some friends of Loughnane's were attempting to form a rock band with a horn section, and invited him to sit in at a rehearsal. In 1967, the group became known as The Big Thing, and in 1968 moved to Los Angeles, renaming itself The Chicago Transit Authority. The group recorded its first album (a double disc set) in 1969 that soon became a success. The group shortened its name to Chicago and its popularity soared, performing concerts for tens of thousands of fans each night and selling millions of recordings each year. Playing with a rock band was very tiring, and Loughnane was worried that he would soon ruin his embouchure and ability to play. He quit smoking and took lessons from Paul Witt, a long-time student of the late Claude Gordon. He developed a tremendous breathing technique and became one of the most powerful trumpeters in the world.

As a charter member of the group, Loughnane has performed with Chicago for over forty years, occasionally performing vocals, and has composed numerous tunes for it. The group sold over one hundred million records and has released thirty-two albums. Loughnane assumed responsibility for overseeing the remastering of its earlier recordings, resulting in the group's continuing popularity. Chicago remains a major headliner rock band today and is one of the top ten selling U.S. bands of all time.

Loughnane has been married four times and has five children.

Bibl.: LaBarbara, John. "Lee Loughnane—30 Years with Chicago" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1998); "Lee Loughnane" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Lowery, Perry G[eorge] (b. Topeka, Kansas, Oct. 11, 1870; d. Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 15, 1942). American cornetist. Lowery was an excellent cornet soloist and conductor who was said to be the equal of Herbert L. Clarke, Walter B. Rogers, and Bohumir Kryl. However, his main career importance comes from his efforts to raise the status of African-American musicians during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries in America.

Lowery began music studies as a child, and played drums and cornet in the family band in Eureka, Kansas. As a young man, he joined the band of Darkest America, a traveling Negro show with the Mallory Brothers Minstrels. After one year, he joined the Wallace Circus, where he played from 1893 to 1906. He then joined the Original Nashville Students musical group.

After winning a cornet solo contest in Hutchinson, Kansas, he went to Boston to study with Henry C. Brown. In 1898, he conducted the Richards and Pringle's Minstrels, and during that summer played solo cornet at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition. In the following year, he formed P.G. Lowery's Famous Concert Band, as well as the P.G. Lowery's Vaudeville Company. He is credited with being the first African-American musician to establish his own vaudeville act in a circus. It performed in many fine venues including Madison Square Garden in New York City. Prior to this, black musicians were only used in supporting bands and did not appear on stage.

In 1906, Lowery formed his own Progressive Musical Enterprise. He later started a group known as P.G. Lowery's Mighty Minstrels, which played for the Wallace & Hagerbeck Circus*,* touring to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition in 1909. In the following years, the P.G. Lowery & Morgan Minstrels toured the United States.

Lowery traveled and performed as a cornet soloist for thirty more years with his own groups that were part of various circuses. These included the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus (1919-31), Gorman Brothers Circus (1934), Cole Brothers Circus (1935-37 and 1940-42), Robbins Brothers Circus (1938), and Downie Brothers Circus (1939). Many noted musicians worked for him: trombonists John Mayfield, Harvey M. Lankford, and Zue Robertson; clarinetists Wilber Sweatman, Horace Eubanks, and William Blue; and cornetists H. Qualli Clark, William Bolden, Charlie Creath, Willie "Bunk" Johnson, and Roger Q. Dickerson.

The Boston Musical Instrument Company made a special cornet for Lowery—a gold- and silver-plated "3 Star" model with heavier than normal construction. He also played and endorsed Holton's "New Proportion" Cornet, and in appreciation for his help in advertising Holton instruments, Holton gave him an elaborately engraved, gold-plated instrument. Scott Joplin dedicated A Breeze from Alabama to him.

Lowery was a very kind man who always had a smile for his fellow musicians. He was a well-known cornet soloist and conductor, who also composed music, his best-known composition being his band gallop, Prince of Decora. He wrote an article, "The Cornet and Cornetists Today," for The Freeman magazine (Jan. 13, 1900), and is considered an important proponent of racial equality in the American musical scene. He died at the approximate age of seventy-two.

Bibl.: Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Watkins, Clifford Edwards, Showman, The Life and Music of Perry George Lowery (2003, Jacksonville); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lowrey, Alvin ("Al") Leon (b. Winfield, Kansas, Jan. 3, 1943). American trumpeter. While growing up in Winfield, Kansas, Lowrey began playing the trumpet at age ten, studying with Richard Brummett through high school. He attended the University of Kansas from 1961 to 1965, earning a bachelor of music education degree while studying with Kenneth Bloomquist. He continued his education with Haskell O. Sexton at the University of Illinois from 1965 to 1967, receiving a master of science degree in music education. When Sexton took a one-semester sabbatical leave in 1967, Lowrey (a graduate assistant) and Gordon Mathie (a doctoral student) were hired to teach the trumpet studio. Mathie taught the graduate students, and Lowrey the undergraduates. (Lowrey also studied with Mathie during this period.) In 1967, Lowrey studied briefly with Arnold Jacobs, tubist of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Lowrey taught at Colorado State College (now the University of Northern Colorado) from 1967 to 1971, and then became an assistant professor at Western Michigan University during the 1971-72 academic year. In 1971, he took lessons from Vincent Cichowicz in Chicago, and in 1972 enrolled as a doctoral student and teaching assistant at Michigan State University under Byron Autrey (1972-73; degree not completed). Concurrently, he also played principal trumpet in the Lansing, Grand Rapids, and Battle Creek Symphonies (1972-74), and taught privately. Additionally, he studied with Edward Tarr (European study tour, 1972) and Robert Nagel (Montreux, Switzerland, 1974).

Lowrey became principal of the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra in Canada in 1975, a position he held for thirty-three years until retiring with emeritus status in 2009. During his tenure, the orchestra made sixteen recordings for the CBC label, and was frequently featured in coast-to-coast recorded live broadcasts on the CBC network. He has been an adjunct professor at the University of Alberta since 1975, and among his many students are Canadians Jens Lindemann and Larry Knopp. Lowrey was a frequent soloist with the Edmonton Symphony and Alberta Baroque Ensemble, and in recitals with piano and organ. He has performed worldwide.

As a writer, Lowrey is well known for his monumental book, Lowrey's International Trumpet Discography (Vol. I: Albums; Vol. II: Index), commissioned by the International Trumpet Guild and published by Camden House in 1990. He had previously authored a less extensive Trumpet Discography (Vol. I: Maurice André; Vol. II: Individual Trumpet Performers; Vol. III: Brass Ensembles), published by the National Trumpet Symposium, University of Denver, in 1970. He was the contributing editor of "Record Reviews" for Brass World magazine (1969-74), and was editor of the Record Reviews column for the International Trumpet Guild Journal (1978-87). In addition, he enjoys arranging music as a hobby. His arrangement of Enesco's Légende for trumpet, strings, and harp was premiered by Manon Lafrance at the 2008 ITG Conference in Banff, Alberta, and was subsequently published by Hickman Music Editions.

Lowrey and Canadian pianist Judy (Judith) Loewen were married in 1976 and have two children, Tricia (b. 1977) and Alden (b. 1980). They were divorced in 1997. In addition to arranging music, Lowrey's other hobbies include record collecting, genealogy, gardening, and carpentry. He has volunteered for several Habitat for Humanity projects.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Alvin L. Lowrey" (www.music.ualberta.ca/en/Our_People/Wind_Percussion.aspx); personal interview, Feb. 24, 2011.

Lowther, [Thomas] Henry (b. Leicester, England, July 11, 1941). British trumpeter and composer. Lowther learned to play the cornet from his father, a cornetist with a Salvation Army band. He took an interest in classical music and began studying the violin, for a while studying at the Royal Academy of Music. When one of his friends introduced him to Indian music and jazz, Lowther turned his interests to jazz, particularly free improvisation.

Tracing Lowther's career as a jazz artist soon reveals a "Who's Who" of the British jazz scene. The musicians he has performed with are too numerous to list, but a sampling includes Mike Westbrook, Graham Collier (1967), John Warren (starting in 1968), New Jazz Orchestra, John Mayall (1968), John Dankworth (1967-68), Neil Ardley (1968), Bob Downes (1969), Mike Gibbs (1970-76), Alan Cohen (1972), Kenny Wheeler (on and off since 1972), Tony Coe (1976), Kurt Edelhagen (1974), Stan Tracey (since 1976), Gordon Beck (1978), Michael Garrick (1972-73), Keef Hartley, Charlie Watts Big Band (1986-87), London Jazz Orchestra (1989-96), Pete King (since 1983), John Surman's Brass Project, Berlin Contemporary Jazz Orchestra (1989-93), Buzzcock (1980), Talk Talk (1983-91), Gil Evans (1984), Dedication Orchestra (1994), Creation Jazz Orchestra (1996), and the George Russell Living Time Orchestra (since 1995).

Lowther is also a fine classical musician. He has performed with the London Brass Virtuosi, London Philharmonic Orchestra, City of Birmingham Orchestra, London Sinfonietta, Matrix Ensemble, and the BBC Radio Orchestra (five years). As a studio musician, he has backed artists such as Nelson Riddle, Bing Crosby, Henry Mancini, George Harrison, Paul McCartney, Van Morrison, Simon Rattle, and Elton John.

Lowther has led many of his own groups, including Still Waters (1987), Quaternity, and Jazzmoss. He is also a current member of Swingstrasse, and New Memories (from the Charlie Watts band). Lowther now devotes much of his energies to composing, and has received numerous classical and jazz commissions.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Henry Lowther" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Henry Lowther—Trumpet" (www.jazzwisemagazine.com); "Henry Lowther" (www.jazztrumpet.co.uk).

Lucas, William ("Bill") (b. c1960). American trumpeter. Lucas is a highly versatile trumpeter who began playing at age ten. While in high school, he studied with Jeff Drifmeyer, and was influenced by the recordings of Maynard Ferguson, Doc Severinsen, and Don Ellis. He attended the University of Michigan where he studied with Clifford Lillya in his freshman year, and with Armando Ghitalla in the remaining three. However, he did not complete his bachelor's degree, but instead joined the Toledo Symphony as third trumpet.

In May of 1988, Lucas joined the Detroit Symphony Orchestra as fourth trumpet. He also freelanced in the Detroit area as a jazz musician. He played jazz in Vail, Colorado, and at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland. He played lead and jazz trumpet with the J.C. Heard Orchestra during the 1980s, as well as leading his own jazz quartet. He has taught at Wayne State University and the Oberlin Conservatory, and is an adjunct professor of jazz at the University of Michigan.

Bibl.: Roberts, Steve. "Developing the Versatile Trumpeter: Interviews with Three Multi-Talented Musicians" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Luciano, Anor Jr. (b. São João da Boa Vista, São Paulo, Brazil, Dec. 21, 1959). Brazilian trumpeter. Since 1995, Luciano has been the trumpet professor at the Universidade Federal de Belo Horizonte, and is a former member of the well-known Brazilian brass quintet, Brassil.

He has served as principal trumpet of the orchestras of Campinas, Santo André, São Paulo, Tatui, Recife, and Paraiba, and has taught at numerous festivals throughout Brazil. As a soloist, he has performed premieres of several commissions from important Brazilian composers. The Brazilian government has supported his research in the form of various grants, and he is a past president of the Brazilian Association of Trumpeters. He has been an active clinician and design consultant for Weril instruments. Weril brought him to the U.S. in 2006 to demonstrate their instruments at the International Trumpet Guild Conference at Rowan University in New Jersey. Before attending the conference, he performed as a soloist with the US Naval Academy Band in their final concert of the season on June 2, playing Edmundo Villani Cortes's First Concerto for Trumpet and Band.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Weril presents Brazilian performer Anor Luciano in the United States" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/news06/577werilusa.htm).

Luening, Warren [Jr.] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, 1942; d. Mar. 18, 2012). American trumpeter. Luening grew up in New Orleans, and began playing the trumpet at age ten. When he was twelve, his father began taking him to various Dixieland recording sessions. At age thirteen, Luening began taking lessons from Al Hirt (one year). Luening moved to Los Angeles in 1956, and while still in high school, became a featured soloist on the television program, The Lawrence Welk Show. After graduating from high school (age seventeen), he started studies at the University of California-Los Angeles, but left school to play in the NORAD Jazz Band (1964-67).

After his military service, Luening returned to New Orleans in order to play with various small groups. He moved back to Los Angeles in 1970, worked with Burt Bacharach and Peter Matz, and played for seven years with The Carol Burnett Show on television. He also recorded with Burt Bacharach, Barbra Streisand, Andy Williams, and Glen Campbell. During the 1970s, '80s, and '90s, he recorded in the studios with celebrities such as Frank Sinatra, Willie Nelson, Barry Manilow, Paul Anka, Mel Tormé, Quincy Jones, and Natalie Cole.

Luening has recorded soundtracks for over 1,500 films including Love at First Bite, The In-Laws, High Anxiety, Silent Movie, Airport 1975, Funny Lady, The Muppet Movie, Cheap Detective, and A Star is Born. Television credits include Dancing with the Stars, Family Guy, American Dad, America's Got Talent, and the Academy Awards (twenty-five television specials). On the jazz side, Luening recorded with Tony Almerico (1956), Dave Pell (1970), and Bob Florence.

Bibl.: Hood, Boyde. "Ten Outstanding Trumpet Players in the Los Angeles Area" (Brass Bulletin, no. 41, 1983); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Luftman, Adam (b. Springfield, Massachusetts, July 9, 1979). American trumpeter. Luftman grew up in Longmeadow, Massachusetts. He began playing the trumpet at age nine, studying with Michael Mucci, Jim Simpson, and from 1995 to 1997, for the last two years of high school, with John Lindenau at the Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan.

Luftman attended the Cleveland Institute of Music from 1997 to 2001, studying with Michael Sachs. He joined the Civic Orchestra of Chicago in 2001-02 where he studied with Adolph Herseth of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Additionally, he studied with Raymond Mase and Mark Gould.

Luftman was a coprincipal trumpet of the New World Symphony in Miami from 2002 through 2005, and a member of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra from 2005 to 2007. He won his current position as principal of the San Francisco Opera Orchestra in 2007. He has also performed on occasion with the Cleveland Orchestra, Philadelphia Orchestra, Chicago Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Seattle Symphony, Saratoga Opera Orchestra, Bay Brass, New World Brass Quintet, and at summer festivals such as the Grand Teton Music Festival, Tanglewood Music Center, National Repertory Orchestra, National Orchestral Institute, Spoleto Festival, Music Academy of the West, and the Pacific Music Festival.

Luftman has been an adjunct faculty member at the University of California-Berkeley since 2010, San Francisco State University since 2009, and St. Mary's College of California since 2007. He has recorded for ESPN Television's Sunday Night Football, and for numerous film and video game soundtracks.

Luftman is married to his wife Reva, a merchandise planning and distribution manager at GAP, Inc. His hobbies include swimming, running, basketball, soccer, tennis, skiing, golf, disc golf, and hiking.

Bibl.: "Adam Luftman" (http://musicdance.sfsu.edu/lecturers/380/adam-luftman); personal interview, Feb. 15, 2011.

Lujan, Tony (b. Albuquerque, New Mexico, Oct. 3, 1956). American trumpeter. Lujan's ancestors have lived for generations in New Mexico; his is a diverse ethnic heritage including Pueblo Indian, Mexican, Spanish, and English. He first learned to play the trumpet at age nine under the guidance of his father and soon played in his mariachi band. While in Taft Junior High School, he studied with Kenny Anderson, and at Manzano High School in Albuquerque he took lessons from Fenton Katz and Ed Wolfe. He was a member of the Albuquerque Youth Orchestra, and graduated in 1974. It was during high school at the age of fourteen that he met Clark Terry, a lifelong mentor, who states: To say that Tony is gifted is an understatement.

Lujan attended New Mexico State University under Sam Trimble from 1974 to 1976, and completed his bachelor of music degree at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas (1978-80), studying with Walter Blanton, Tony Rodriguez, Carl Saunders, Woody Shaw, Freddie Hubbard, Tom Holden, Luis Valizan, and Dick Alber. He has performed with Clark Terry, Tito Puenté, Poncho Sanchez, Peter Herbolzheimer, Eddie Palmieri, Tony Bennett, Dizzy Gillespie All-Star Big Band, Gerald Wilson, Lester Bowie, Louie Bellson, Frank Sinatra, Jimmy Heath, Ray Charles, Luis Miguel, and others. He then lived and worked in Los Angeles where he did a great deal of studio work and was a member of the Bill Holman Band. His manager Liliana Scenna formed Bella Records in 1998, which featured his solo playing on many albums, including Tribute, You Don't Know What Love Is, Miles Away, Groovin' Low, Live in Cologne, and Live at the Biltmore. He also recorded the albums, Magic Circle and Zulu for Capri. Film credits include Mambo Kings, In the Line of Fire, War and Remembrance, Salsa with Celia Cruz, Mi Vida Loca, Chaplin, and The Marrying Man. Television shows include The Drew Carey Show and The Paul Rodriguez Show. Lujan taught harmony, sight-reading, and jazz improvisation at the Dick Grove School of Music, University of Southern California, Cal Arts, and California State University-Los Angeles as an adjunct faculty member.

Lujan suffered a severe automobile accident in 2001. For six weeks, he could not remember that he was a trumpet player, but seeing himself playing in a video helped him come around. The physical recovery was slow and difficult. He had TMJ (jaw) injuries that prevented him from playing for more than thirty seconds. Also, hand injuries made it difficult for him to hold the trumpet, and his fingers began to lose technique due to neurological problems. As part of his therapy, he had to place his hand in hot melted wax several times each day. When he tried to play the trumpet loudly, he often triggered brain seizures that caused him to collapse on the floor, gasping for air. Remembering his lessons with the great lead player Dick Alber, he began to develop his embouchure by practicing softly. Alber called this technique the "sympathetic vibration approach," which is a very singing style of playing. Alber said that he had learned this technique from Victor Kress of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Lujan practiced long tone exercises and chromatic passages from Herbert Clarke's Technical Studies. He also practiced pedal tone exercises, keeping the front of the tongue in a low position. Over the next year, range and volume increased to G above double high c'". Today, he still feels that he must not overblow the horn, or dizziness can occur.

In 1997, Tony moved to New York, but now resides in Cape Cod, Massachusetts. His children are Ambar (b. 1981), Tiana (b. 1991), and twin sons Mitchell and Miles (b. 1995). His hobbies include drawing, painting, swimming, and gardening.

Bibl.: "Tony Lujan" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Tony Lujan's official website: www.tonylujan.com; personal interview, Aug. 22, 2011.

Photo credit: Jim Warner.

Lukyanov, Herman [German Konstantinovich] (b. Leningrad, Russia, Aug. 23, 1936). Russian trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. Lukyanov's father was a seaman, and his mother a pianist, poet, and translator. He developed an interest in jazz from listening to recordings as early as age twelve, and by age seventeen entered a local music school. At age twenty, he studied music composition at the Leningrad Conservatory with Vadim Salmanov, and in 1957 transferred to the Moscow State Conservatory where he graduated in 1961, studying with Aram Khachaturian; his final project was composing a concerto for trumpet and orchestra. His development as a jazz musician during his years in school was mostly on flugelhorn. He formed a jazz trio consisting of flugelhorn, double bass, and piano that was considered to be at the forefront of Soviet jazz at the time. In 1962, he participated in a jam session in Moscow with several of Benny Goodman's musicians.

In 1965, Lukyanov formed a trio that consisted of flugelhorn, piano, and drums, that won awards at the Third Moscow Jazz Festival in 1966, and participated in the movie Seven Notes In The Silence. From 1969 to 1973, he was the lead singer with a pop All-Union Radio Big Band led by Vadim Lyudvikovsky, and from 1974 to 1976 he was a soloist and conductor of the orchestra of Soviet Azerbaijan under Muslim Magomayev. He formed the group Cadence (anagram for KAmerny Djazz ANSembl) in 1978, which was one of the most complex and sophisticated jazz ensembles in Soviet jazz during the 1980s. Cadence performed at numerous jazz festivals including the Warsaw Festival (1984) and the North Sea Jazz Festival (1984), and released four LP albums that have been reissued as CDs on the Boheme Music label. However, due to poor economics during the 1990s, Cadence gradually dissolved, and Lukyanov formed a new trio that included a large African drum as part of the percussion; beginning in 1998, a saxophone was added to the group.

In 1992, he played with Dizzy Gillespie in Moscow. He occupies the same position in Soviet jazz as Miles Davis in American music. In 1960, he wrote Sequences, exercises to develop the jazz mind and technique, which has been very successful.

Lukyanov is an award-winning poet who has published poetry in the Russian anthology, Time X.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Herman Lukyanov" (http://persona.rin.ru/eng/view/f/0/20917/Lukyanov-Herman).

Lukyanov, Yury Vasilyevich (b. Moscow, Russia, Mar. 21, 1934; d. Moscow, Dec. 11, 1980). Russian trumpeter. Lukyanov graduated from the Gnesin Music College in Moscow under Nikolay Nikolayevich Yavorsky in 1960. He studied composition at the Leningrad Conservatory, and continued trumpet study at the Moscow Conservatory. From 1957 to 1961, he played in a variety show orchestra and developed his abilities as a jazz trumpeter, and from 1961 to 1978 was principal trumpet of the All-Union Cinematography Committee Orchestra. Acording to Andrey Ikov, Yury Lukyanov was one of the main cinema Russian trumpeters, same as Hollywood studio musicians. [Note: Yury Lukyanov is not to be confused with Herman Lukyanov, a Russian jazz trumpeter and flugelhornist.]

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lyamin [Liamin], Pyotr Yakovlevich (b. Kazan, Russia, June 17, 1884; d. Moscow, Mar. 17, 1968). Russian trumpeter and cornetist. Lyamin graduated from the music school of the Moscow Philharmonic Society in 1906, and studied with Willy ("Vasily") Brandt at the Moscow Conservatory from 1906 to 1911. Beginning in 1909, while still a student, he played in Sergey Diaghilev's saisons russes in Paris. Igor Stravinsky composed the cornet solos in Petrouchka (1911) for him, which he premiered on June 13, 1911. Lyamin also participated in the premiere of Stravinsky's Le Sacre du printemps on May 29, 1913 under Pierre Monteux. In the Ballet Russe, Lyamin played trumpet, cornet, and E-flat alto horn. He was also a conductor of bands.

Upon Brandt's death in 1923, Lyamin was named his successor as professor at the conservatory in Saratov (until 1926). He later taught at the Moscow Music College (1933-45) and served as principal trumpet in several orchestras in Moscow including the Bolshoi Theater (1912-24 and 1931-48). He was the best source of information about Brandt, having been interviewed about him by Anatoly Selianin. He was considered to be a rather forgetful man who often left his trumpets lying around, which motivated him to have all of his instruments engraved with his name on them. His rotary-valve B-flat trumpet, rather light in weight and made by F.X. Hüller & Co. (Graslitz 1882-1945), a gift of Vadim A. Novikov (1991), is in the Bad Säckingen Trumpet Museum (Inv. No. 14116). He was also a practical joker. In his old age, he grew a long white beard. He died at the age of eighty-three.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Lynch, Brian (b. Urbana, Illinois, Sept. 12, 1956). American trumpeter and composer. Lynch grew up in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and began playing the trumpet at age nine, having been influenced by his parents' Louis Armstrong recordings. At age fifteen, he heard a concert by Miles Davis and John Coltrane, and decided to become a professional jazzman. He attended the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music and played in Milwaukee with Melvin Rhyne and Buddy Montgomery between 1975 and 1980. He then went to New York, where he studied trumpet under Doug Myers, William Vacchiano, Vincent Penzarella, Mark Gould, Peter Bond, and William Fielder.

In 1980, Lynch moved to San Diego where he joined Charles McPherson's group. In late 1981, he moved to New York City, performing with musicians such as George Russell, Junior Cook (1982), Angel Canales (1982-83), Horace Silver (1982-85), Toshiko Akiyoshi (1982-88), Hector La Voe (1983-87), Jim Snidero, Jack McDuff (1986-87), Mel Lewis, Eddie Palmieri (since 1987), Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (Dec. 1988 until Blakey's death in 1990), Barbarito Torres, Phil Woods (since 1992), Benny Golson, and Terell Stafford. Lynch is equally comfortable playing hard bop, post bop, and Latin jazz.

Lynch has released numerous albums, including Grammy Award-winning CDs such as Simpatico (ArtistShare), Spheres of Influence Suite (EWE), 24/7 (Nagel-Heyes), and ConClave (Criss Cross). Other albums include Peer Pressure (Criss Cross), Back Room Blues (Criss Cross), In Process (Ken Music), At the Main Event (Criss Cross), Keep Your Circle Small (Sharp Nine), Sphere of Influence (Sharp Nine), Tribute to the Trumpet Masters (Sharp Nine), One for All (A&M, with Jazz Messengers), Souvenirs (Evidence, with Phil Woods), La Perfecta II (Concord), Ritmo Caliente (Concord), The Latin Side of Miles Davis (Half Note), and Que Viva Coltrane (Criss Cross). He has also appeared as an actor in several movies, including Chasing Amy (1997), A Better Place (1997), Big Helium Dog (1999), and Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back (2001).

As a composer and arranger, Brian Lynch has received numerous commissions. He has also received composition grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, Meet the Composer, and other institutions. He has performed with pop artists Prince, Maxwell, and Sheila E.

Lynch is an active educator and clinician. He served on the faculty at New York University and North Netherlands Conservatory, and is now a professor of jazz at the Frost School of Music at the University of Miami. He continues to present clinics and workshops throughout the world.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Brian Lynch" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Brian Lynch's official website: http://brianlynchjazz.com.

Lyren, Delon ("Del") G. (b. Fort Collins, Colorado, May 18, 1966). American trumpeter. Lyren grew up in Brookings, South Dakota, and began playing trumpet at age ten. His first teachers were his mother, Erling Engstrom, Stan Hanson, and Keith Weigandt. From 1984 to 1988, he attended South Dakota State University in Brookings under Dr. John Colson, earning a bachelor of music degree. Graduate work was done at Arizona State University with David Hickman (master of music degree in 1990, and doctor of musical arts degree in 1994). His dissertation, Rafael Méndez: A Study of His Life and Influence in the Trumpet World, prompted the establishment of the Rafael Méndez Library at ASU in 1993. He also coauthored with Dr. Jane Hickman a biography of Rafael Méndez titled Magnificent Méndez that is published by Summit Records. He has presented lectures about Méndez in various countries, as well as at the 2006 International Trumpet Guild Conference at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

As a performer, Lyren has played with The Phoenix Symphony, Lake Charles Symphony, National Repertory Orchestra, Sun Cities Symphony, Phoenix Pops (Carl "Doc" Severinsen, conductor), Acadiana Symphony, Mesa Symphony, and Rapides

Symphony. He has been a soloist in Germany, England, Scotland, Sweden, Canada, Mexico, United States, and the Ukraine. He was a graduate trumpet teaching assistant at Arizona State University, and taught fulltime at the University of Southwestern Louisiana from 1992 to 1998. Since August of 1998, he has been on the faculty at Bemidji State University in Minnesota. He was the cohost of the 2011 ITG Conference in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Del has been married to Betsy Lyren since 1987. Their children are Alexandra (b. 1993) and Nicole (b. 1996). His hobbies include golf, fishing, hiking, and walking.

Bibl.: "Del Lyren" (www.bemidjistate.edu/academics/departments/music/faculty/dlyren); personal interview, Jan. 9, 2012.

Lyttelton, Humphrey ("Humph") Richard Adeane (b. Eton, Buckinghamshire, England, May 23, 1921; d. London, England, Apr.

25, 2008). Trumpeter, bandleader, journalist, broadcaster, and cartoonist. Lyttelton came from a prestigious family. He taught himself to play the trumpet at age fifteen by listening to radio broadcasts of jazz trumpeters such as Louis Armstrong, Muggsy Spanier, Henry "Red" Allen, Al Fairweather, Buck Clayton, and others. He attended Eton College where he formed a quartet. After graduating, he worked in a steel plate factory in South Wales. He joined the military during World War II, serving in the Grenadier Guards (1941-45). After the war, he attended Camberwall Art College (two years) where he learned to be a cartoonist.

Lyttelton became a member of George Webb's Dixielanders in 1947. He also took a day job as a journalist and cartoonist for the Daily Mail newspaper. He participated in the Nice International Jazz Festival with Derek Neville (1948), formed his own traditional band (1948-56), played with Sidney Bechet (1949), became a leading figure in the New Orleans revival movement in England, and appeared in the film, Rock Around the World (1957). In order to feature American jazz soloists such as Jimmy Rushing (1958-59), Marie Knight, Wild Bill Davison, Clara Ward, Buck Clayton (1963-66), and Eddie Condon, Lyttelton had to depart from the British musicians union that forbade working with American musicians. His band also switched to swing music to accommodate the visiting musicians. As his band became more and more popular, recording numerous albums along the way, Lyttelton quit his job at the newspaper in 1956 in order to become a fulltime musician.

Lyttleton began playing the clarinet (in addition to trumpet) during the 1960s. His band also returned to the Dixieland style. They frequently appeared on both radio and television, leading to Lyttelton's position as host of the Best of Jazz program on BBC Radio, a post he held from 1967 to 2008. He played with Matty Matlock (1972), Alex Welsh (1978), Marshall Royal (Nice, 1986), Kenny Davern, Lillian Boutté, John Chilton, and Acker Bilk (in the 1990's). He also hosted a comedy program for BBC Radio called I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue.

As a professional writer, Lyttelton authored several books, including his 1954 autobiography, I Play as I Please (Mac Gibbs and Kie, Ltd.), The Best of Jazz 1, The Best of Jazz 2, Basin Street to Harlem, Last Chorus: An Autobiographical Medley (JR Books), It Just Occurred to Me...: An Autobiographical Scrapbook (Robson Books, Ltd.), and Enter the Giants 1931-1944. He also wrote numerous articles about jazz and jazz musicians.

Lyttelton's albums include Jazz at Royal Festival Hall (Dormouse), Best of British Jazz from the BBC Jazz Club, Vols. 1-2 (Upbeat Jazz), Rent Party (Stomp Off), Delving Back and Forth with Humph (Stomp Off), Duke Ellington Classics (Black Lion), In Canada (Sackville), Scatterbrains (Stomp Off), Life in a Glasshouse, and Trouble in Mind.

Humph Lyttelton's hobbies included bird watching and calligraphy. He was elected president of The Society for Italic Handwriting, and named his own record label Calligraph. He was a popular musician and radio personality who reportedly turned down a knighthood in 1995. He married Pat Braithwaite with whom he had one daughter early in his career, but they divorced. In 1952, he married Jill Richardson and had three more children. Unfortunately, she predeceased him in 2006.

Humphrey Lyttelton died at the age of eighty-seven, just days after open-heart surgery. On July 23, 2008 he was posthumously named BBC Radio's "Jazz Artist of the Year." His friends established The Humph Trust that provides grants to deserving young jazz musicians. The Trust also gives the annual Humphrey Lyttelton Royal Academy of Music Jazz Award.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Humphrey Lyttelton" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Humphrey Lyttelton" (www.humphreylyttelton.com).

Photo: Lyttelton with Louis Armstrong.

M

Maalouf, Ibrahim (b. Beirut, Lebanon, Dec. 5, 1980). Lebanese trumpeter. When Maalouf was very young, his family fled Lebanon during the Lebanese Civil War. Locating in Paris, France, he took up the trumpet at age seven. He studied with his father Nassim, a professional trumpeter. Originally, Ibrahim's career path was that of a scientist and mathematician, but by age seventeen he had made the decision to devote himself completely to music. He studied with Gérard Boulanger and Guy Touvron at the Regional Conservatory in Paris (at age seventeen) and at age nineteen entered the trumpet class of Antoine Curé at the Paris Conservatory (for three years). He also received advice from Jon Faddis and Wynton Marsalis.

Maalouf become obsessed with entering solo competitions. Between 1999 and 2003 (ages nineteen to twenty-three), he won fifteen first prizes, including two international trumpet competitions, the Maurice André International Trumpet Solo Competition in 2001, the National Trumpet Competition in Fairfax, Virginia (2002), and the international competition in Pilisvörösvár, Hungary (2002).

Like his father, Maalouf often performs on the four-valve quarter-tone trumpet. A versatile musician, he plays classical and jazz styles, and has recorded with the pop singer, Sting. He teaches at the Aubervilliers-La Courneuve Conservatory.

In July 2010, Maalouf was awarded the Instrumental Revelation of the Year Victory Prize at the Victoires de Jazz competition in Juan-Les-Pins. His solo CDs include Diasporas and Diachronism, both on his own Mi'ster Productions label.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ibrahim Maalouf" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Maalouf, Nassim (b. Kafarakab, Lebanon, Feb. 21, 1941). Lebanese trumpeter. Maalouf studied classical music with Maurice André at the Paris Conservatory, graduating in 1970. After returning to Lebanon, he and his family fled to Paris during the Lebanese Civil War.

Maalouf made a living playing Western classical music, but wished for a way to integrate the music of his homeland with music he was performing. He developed a four-valve quarter-tone trumpet similar to that designed by Michel Wikrikaz for the Selmer Company in France. (The American jazz trumpeter, Don Ellis, used a quarter-tone trumpet made by the Holton Company during the 1960s.)

Maalouf appeared in Le Grand Echiquier a famous French television show with Maurice André (November 1980, playing Saman Baïa with an Arabic ensemble). He has also taught at the National Conservatory in Beirut. He released the solo CD, Improvisations Orientales on the Club Du Disques Arabe label. His son, Ibrahim Maadouf, has become a trumpeter of international fame.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nassim Maalouf" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

MacBeth, Carlton (b. Lancaster, California, Apr. 29, 1924; d. c2000). American trumpeter. MacBeth learned to play the trumpet at Bakersfield College and Westlake College of Music (Los Angeles), and from Louis Maggio (1878-1957) in Los Angeles. After five years of study, he became a top lead player, joining the big bands of Woody Herman, Charlie Barnet, The Dorsey Brothers, Harry James, Paul Whiteman, Hal McIntyre, Perez Prado, Stan Kenton, Skinnay Ennis, Jack Teagarden, Freddy Slack, Les Brown, Freddy Martin, Esquivel, Judy Garland, Nat King Cole, Carol Burnett, and Nancy Wilson. He also worked at the NBC, CBS, and ABC television studios, playing lead with the orchestras of Nelson Riddle, Marty Paich, Ralph Carmichael, Sonny Burke, Frank DeVol, Bill Holman, Shorty Rogers, Billy May, Sy Oliver, Leith Stevens, Roy Bargy, and others.

MacBeth is best known for compiling the Maggio exercises, and publishing them as The Maggio System for Brass (Maggio Music) after Maggio died. The book, first copyrighted in 1968, is one of several pedal tone methods popularized during the 1960s. This, along with the methods of Claude Gordon and Roger Spaulding (among others), are based on the teachings of Maggio who learned them from Rafael Méndez in 1937-38. [See biography on Louis Maggio for details.]

MacBeth presented a lecture-demonstration of the Maggio system during one of the National Trumpet Symposiums held at the University of Denver (c1970). He also gave master classes throughout the world.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

MacCluer, Joshua ("Josh") R. (b. c1977). American trumpeter. MacCluer comes from a musical family; his grandfather played bass in the Cleveland Orchestra, and his father was a jazz bassist and bluegrass fiddler. After growing up in Charlottesville, Virginia, MacCluer attended the Oberlin Conservatory, studying with William Lucas and graduating in 1998. He also studied with Charles Couch, George Vosburgh, Ramon Parcells, and Barbara Butler.

MacCluer began his orchestral career when he became a member of the Ann Arbor Symphony in 1998. He was also third and utility trumpet of the Grand Rapids Symphony (1998-99) and a member of the Florida West Coast Symphony (1999-2000). He became acting principal of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra (2000-01) and second trumpet of the Kennedy Center Opera House Orchestra (2000-01) before joining the Colorado Symphony Orchestra in Denver as principal trumpet (2001-03). Since 2003, he has been second trumpet in the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra.

A highly versatile performer, MacCluer plays jazz with the Josh MacCluer Trio and has been a member of the Kate Priestley Band, Los Estados Bandidos, Florida Brass Quintet, and Detroit Chamber Winds. He has taught as an adjunct faculty member at the Oberlin Conservatory, performed and taught at the Eastern Music Festival, and has served as a guest principal of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Malaysian Philharmonic, Singapore Symphony, Omaha Symphony, New Mexico Symphony Orchestra, Baltimore Chamber Orchestra, Los Angeles Philharmonic, Columbus Symphony Orchestra, and Florida Orchestra. He is currently teaching at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

MacCluer loves to travel and hike mountains. He has lived in Guatemala, Bulgaria, and the Czech Republic.

Bibl.: Joshua MacCluer's official website: http://joshuamaccluer.com.

MacDonald, [John] Roderick ("Rod") (b. Providence, Rhode Island, Feb. 12, 1959). American trumpeter and conductor. MacDonald began playing piano at age six, and took up the trumpet when twelve. His early trumpet teachers were Bruce Hopkins, Ronald Blaise, and William Vacchiano. After graduating from Ponaganset High School in 1980, he studied engineering at the University of Rhode Island (1980-85) and continued studying with Vacchiano in New York City on a monthly basis. After receiving his bachelor of music degree, he then spent a year as a mechanical engineer, simultaneously studying music at the New England Conservatory where he earned a master of music degree under Charles Schlueter in 1988. In 1982, he had received the Leonard Bernstein Fellowship at the Tanglewood Institute.

MacDonald was hired by Maestro Kurt Masur to be principal trumpet of the Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig (Sept. 1, 1988 to Apr. 30, 2005). He earned a master of music degree in conducting from him at the Leipzig Musikhochschule in 1994, and from 1989 to 2005 was also principal of the Orchestra of St. Thomas Church in Leipzig, as well as principal of the Leipzig Opera House Orchestra. He taught trumpet at the Gewandhaus Orchestral Academy (2002-05) and the Leipzig Conservatory (on and off between 1989 and 2005), and had additional study with Albrecht Eichberger. He returned to the United States in 2006 to accept his current teaching and conducting position at the State University of New York in Fredonia. He goes back to Germany each summer to lead Gewandhaus Orchestra members in a summer weekend residency at the Stelzen Music Festival, as he has done since 1993. He has conducted on several CDs, and is an active composer.

Roderick has been married to classical vocalist Alexandra MacDonald since 1998. She is currently the assistant to the music director of the Dresden Philharmonic. Their children are William and Flora.

Bibl.: Jung, Hans-Rainer. Das Gewandhaus Orchester: Seine Mitglieder und seine Geschichte seit 1743 (Faber & Faber); Roderick MacDonald's official website: http://roderickmacdonald.com; personal interview, Jan. 12, 2012.

MacFarlane, George (fl. Britain, 1833-60). British cornetist, bandmaster, and inventor. Not much is known about him, but he nevertheless made several significant contributions to brass instrument construction. According to Farmer, he is said to have introduced the cornopean to Britain in 1833, by adding two tubular valves or "Russian valves" to the natural cornet, writing several pieces and methods for it. His instruments were first made by Köhler of London. As a member of the Duke of Devonshire's private band, MacFarlane was a leading English cornetist between 1835 and 1850.

The first music published for brass band in 1836, by Robert Cocks, consisted of Eight Popular Airs arranged by MacFarlane for three keyed bugles, two trumpets, two horns, three trombones, and a serpent. In addition, he wrote ten such compositions between 1845 and 1860. Cocks & Co. were the leading publishers of wind music in their day; in the following four years they issued fifty methods, a journal for keyed bugle, and scales for sixteen wind instruments, as well as music for military band.

As an inventor/constructor, MacFarlane is said to have made improvements to the cornopean, the ophicleide, and the low brasses. His main contribution is "MacFarlane's clapper key," developed in 1845, a whole-tone trill key located on the bell section of cornopeans. Such an instrument is located in the Bad Säckingen Trumpet Museum, inventory no. 34306: a cornopean in B-flat made c1850 by Metzler & Co. of London.

Together with William Edward Newton and Richard Carte, MacFarlane had to do with another patent no. 2967 of December

3, 1860, for an extra so-called cut-off valve on brass instruments, transposing the harmonic series upwards by half a tone. "This arrangement facilitates the performance of chromatic passages and shakes, and almost entirely obviates the necessity for cross fingering."

Bibl.: Farmer, George. The Rise and Development of Military Music (London: Reeves, [1912]). Woodcroft, B. Patents for Inventions: Abridgement of Specifications Relating to Music and Musical Instruments AD 1694-1866 (second ed. 1871, Eyre & Spottiswoode), facsimile edition (Tony Bingham, London 1984); Scott, Jack L. The Evolution of the Brass Band and Its Repertoire in Northern England (PhD thesis, Sheffield University 1970); Newsome, Roy. Brass Roots (Aldershot et al.); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon).

Photo: Köhler B-flat cornet with disc valves and clapper key. Instrument includes crooks in A, A-flat, G, and F, plus two small tuning (mouthpiece) bits.

Mack, Rodney (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, October 11, 1968). American trumpeter. Mack began playing the trumpet at age six, and at age eleven took classical lessons from his cousin Wynton Marsalis. At age fifteen, he debuted as a soloist with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra, and at age nineteen also soloed with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Mack graduated from the Curtis Institute in 1991, and received the Seiji Ozawa Prize from the Tanglewood Music Festival. He has played with the San Diego Symphony (1991-94), Tenerife Symphony Orchestra (1994-97), and Barcelona Symphony Orchestra (1997-2004), during which time he was head of the brass department at the Escuela Superior de Música de Catalunya. It was in January 2002 that he was beaten by Spanish policemen who confused him with a fugitive auto thief. One of the policemen received a broken rib, but the injuries to Mack's lip prevented him from going on a U.S. tour with the Barcelona Symphony a few days later.

Mack is presently a member of the Chamber Orchestra of Philadelphia (principal trumpet). He has performed throughout the world, and has presented clinics and master classes at the National Trumpet Competition, International Trumpet Guild Conference, North Carolina School of the Arts, The Juilliard School, Eastern Music Festival, Eaxton Music Festival, and the Interlochen Music Academy. He has given world premieres of works by Adolphus Hailstork, Alvin Singleton, and Franz Waxman.

Mack is the founder and leader of the Rodney Mack Philadelphia Big Brass, and is a member of the Brass Band of Battle Creek. His CDs include Spirit of the Trumpeter (Albany), Dark Fires, Vol. 2 (Albany), and Get Ready.

Bibl.: Rodney Mack's official website: www.rodneymack.com; Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Mackintosh, Jack (b. Sunderland, England, Sept. 22, 1891; d. Epsom, England, Nov. 3, 1979) British cornetist and trumpeter. Known today as the "Cornet King," Mackintosh was born into a musical family, but was mostly self-taught on the cornet. As a boy, he was educated at the Barnes School of Sunderland and Scurry's College in Newcastle. His first professional engagement as a musician was at age fifteen, when he played evenings in a small band for silent movies at the Hamilton Picture House (later Palace Theater). During the day, he worked at a shipyard, where he contracted rheumatic fever from working outdoors in the rain. He was ill for some time; it took nearly a year for him to recover. Although his illness occurred at age fifteen, it affected his cornet playing for the rest of his life. Gradually, his hands became slightly deformed, and he needed to place a rubber tube between the third and fourth fingers of the right hand, so that his fingers were spaced properly for the valves of his cornet.

Mackintosh joined the Hetton Colliery Band at the Crystal Palace in 1912, and in the following year joined the St. Hilda's Band. In 1919, he became solo cornetist with the Harton Colliery Band and remained with them until 1930, when he left northern England to play in the newly-formed BBC Symphony Orchestra in London. He played in the orchestra until his retirement in 1952; his son, Ian, then took his father's position.

For many years, Mackintosh taught at the Royal Military School of Music, in Kneller Hall, where he was considered to be an excellent teacher. Although he mostly played trumpet in the BBC Orchestra, he played cornet during lessons. He recorded numerous cornet solos, some of which have been reissued on compact disc. They show him to be a spectacular player and include Alpine Echoes, Facilita, Silver Shower, Zelda-Caprice, I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby, O Dry Those Tears, Barcarolle, Il Trovatore, Una Voca Poca Fa, Lucille, Columbine, Showers of Gold, Sounds from the Hudson, Bride of the Waves, I Hear You Calling Me, Mac and Mort (with Harry Mortimer), Dot and Carrie, Until, I Know of Two Bright Eyes, Jack and Jill, Merry Mountaineers, Carnival of Venice (Arban), and Il Bacio.

Bibl.: Choice Recordings (www.choicerecordings.com/jack.htm); Keim, Friedel Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

MacMurray, John Stewart Wright ("Moose") (b. Canada, Dec. 30, 1958; d. Macclesfield, England, Aug. 20, 2006). Canadian trumpeter. MacMurray grew up in St. John, New Brunswick, Canada. He began playing the trumpet at the relatively late age of fifteen. He studied in America with William Vacchiano and Armando Ghitalla, and at the age of twenty-two, went to London to study at Goldsmiths College. In 1983, he became the coprincipal trumpet (with John Dickinson) of the Hallé Orchestra in England, and in 1986 became principal, holding this position until his death in 2006 at the age of forty-seven. He taught at Chetham's School of Music and the Royal Northern College of Music.

MacMurray was known for his sense of humor and wonderful trumpet playing. He struggled with cancer for years, and although he was in remission twice, the third relapse proved fatal. He was survived by his wife Susie and their two sons, Andrew and Matthew.

Bibl.: "John MacMurray" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Madeja, James T. (b. Joliet, Illinois, Feb. 12, 1956). American trumpeter. Madeja grew up in Lemont, Illinois. He began playing the trumpet at age ten; his early trumpet teachers were Robert Smelser and Peter Labella. After graduating from Lemont Township High School in 1974, he enrolled at the University of Illinois where he studied with Wayne Gorder and David Hickman, receiving a bachelor of science in music education degree in 1978. He then became director of bands at Elgin High School in Elgin, Illinois (1978-82), served as an adjunct trumpet instructor at Elgin Community College (1980-82), and was director of wind ensemble and brass at Judson College in Elgin. He earned a master of music education degree at the U. of I. during summers (1978-81), held a doctoral residency at the U. of I. (1982-84), and completed his Ed.D. degree in 1988.

Following one year as director of bands at Willowbrook High School in Villa Park, Illinois (1984-85), Madeja accepted his current position as trumpet professor at the Crane School of Music at the State University of New York at Potsdam. In 2007, he received the MENC Excellence in Teaching Award. He is a member of the Potsdam Brass Quintet, Orchestra of Northern New York, and Northern Symphonic Winds, and has toured as cornetist with Keith Brion's New Sousa Band. He served as Associate Editor of the International Trumpet Guild Journal (1990-2002). His research interests include the history of the American wind band, and in particular the contribution of Herbert L. Clarke. His written work has appeared in the Journal of Band Research, College Band Directors National Association (CBDNA) Journal, International Trumpet Guild Journal, The Instrumentalist, The Brass Player, New York State School Music News, Association for Recorded Sound Collections (ARSC) Journal, and Music Educators Journal (MEJ).

Madeja and wife Tammara (choral director at Potsdam High School) have been married since 1979, and have three children: Thomas (b. 1982), Steven (b. 1986), and Mary (b. 1987). His hobby is photography.

Bibl.: "James T. Madeja" (http://directory.potsdam.edu/?function=user=madejajt; personal interview, May 11, 2011.

Madeuf, Jean-François (b. Riom, France, Nov. 9, 1966). French trumpeter. Madeuf played the bugle horn (French clairon) at age six, flugelhorn at seven, and trumpet at eight. His younger brothers also play brass instruments: Laurent, a trombonist in a professional orchestra in France, and Pierre-Yves, a horn player specializing in Baroque and Classical music. Jean-François began playing in a Batterie-Fanfare on a natural (valveless) trumpet at age fourteen while attending the music conservatory in Clermont-Ferrand (1980-85). At age nineteen, he entered the Conservatoire National Supérieur de Musique in Lyons where he studied trumpet with Pierre Dutot (1986-89), and Baroque trumpet with Jean-Pierre Canihac (1989-92). While in school, he was solo cornet and trumpeter in the Philharmonic Orchestra of Nice (1989-92). After graduating in 1993, Madeuf developed his reputation as a performer on the natural trumpet (without use of vent holes) by performing with groups such as Baroque Ensemble of Nice, Baroque Ensemble of Limoges, Ensemble Anachronisme, Ensemble Philidor, Ensemble Ars Musica von Montpellier, and La Symphonie du Marais. He has taught the modern trumpet at the conservatory in Montpellier (1992-2001) and Baroque trumpet at the Conservatoire National Supérieur de Musique in Lyons (since 1992). Among his pupils is the famous David Guerrier.

Madeuf replaced Dr. Edward Tarr at the Basel Schola Cantorum Basiliensis in 2001, simultaneously continuing in his Lyons position. He manages the groups Les Trompettes de Plaisirs and Les Cuivres Romantiques (on nineteenth century period instruments), and regularly plays with the ensembles Les Arts Florissants (directed by William Christie), Le Concert Spirituel, La Petite Bande, and more recently, the Japan Bach Collegium. He has released several solo albums including Purcell's Trumpets: From Shore to Shore, Heroic Art of Trumpets and Timpani, and The Birckholtz Trumpet from 1650. In 2007, he recorded the Second Brandenburg Concerto with the Société de Musique Ancienne from Nice on a natural trumpet without vent holes, and in 2009 with La Petite Bande (as well as the First Brandenburg Concerto on horn with brother Pierre-Yves). Madeuf can be seen in videos with La Petite Bande (Leipzig 2004) and Le Concert

Spirituel conducted by Hervé Niquet (2010). He is considered to be the foremost player of the natural trumpet in modern times.

Madeuf has been married to Anne-Sophie Thérond since 2000.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Jean-François Madeuf: Breathing New Life Into The Historical Trumpet" (Brass Bulletin magazine, No. 122, 2003); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Whittome, Giles. "Jean-François Madeuf" (The Brass Herald magazine, Aug. 2010); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Madison, Louis ("Kid Shots") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 19, 1899; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Sept. 1948). American trumpeter. Like Louis Armstrong, Madison was a wild child who grew up on the streets of New Orleans and was placed in the Waif's Home for Boys where he played in the band led by David Jones. While Armstrong played cornet in the band, Madison played the drums, but later switched to the cornet, studying with Joe Howard and Louis Dumaine.

Madison's early professional experiences were on alto horn with the Zulu Band led by Punch Miller (c1921). He then played cornet with the Eagle Band, and from 1922 to 1925 with Oscar Celestin's Original Tuxedo Orchestra in which he took part in recording three tunes in 1925. He also played in the Tuxedo Brass Band.

Armstrong gave Madison a trumpet, which Madison played for the remainder of his career. During the late 1920s, Madison played with Frankie Dusen, Big Eye Louis Nelson, and Alphonse Picou.

Madison took a day job with the New Orleans Health Department and worked nights as a trumpeter at the Cadillac Café and the P & L Club on Lake Ponchartrain. Throughout the 1930s, he played with the Works Progress Administration Band, and during the late 1930s played with the Eureka Brass Band and then in the 1940s with George Lewis. He recorded with Lewis, as well as with Bunk Johnson's Brass Band.

Madison suffered a severe stroke in January of 1948 that ended his playing career. He died nine months later at the age of forty-nine. Some of his recordings have been reissued on a CD, George Lewis with Kid Shots Madison (American Music).

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books). Chadbourne, Eugene. "Louis kid shots Madison" (www.hurricanebrassband.nl); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Madrid, John R. (b. Maywood, California, Jan. 2, 1948; d. Los Angeles, California, Feb. 1, 1990). American trumpeter. Madrid grew up in southern California. He was fortunate to have excellent trumpet instructors including Conrad Gozzo, James Stamp, Donald S. Reinhardt, Bud Brisbois, John Clyman, Harold Mitchell, Jim Cronen, and Arthur Foster. He excelled rapidly, especially in his ability to play in the trumpet's upper register. During his senior year at Montebello High School (1966), he released a recording with the pop group The Outsiders called Time Won't Let Me that became a hit. He went on to perform with the Stan Kenton Orchestra (1967-69), Woody Herman Band (1969-70), Buddy Rich Band (Paris in Oct. 1971), Harry James Orchestra (late 1971-73; London, November 1971), Louie Bellson band (1973-74), Blood Sweat & Tears (1973-74), Toshiko Akiyoshi band (1974-76), Boz Scaggs (1975-79), Paul Cacia (1979-80), Donna Summers (1980), Elton John, Sonny & Cher, and Wayne Newton. He was mostly known for his remarkable power and accuracy in the high register, as well as his skill as a jazz improviser. He authored High Register and Practical Advice.

Madrid died of advanced HIV. His death at the young age of forty-two was a surprise to many who knew him.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "John Madrid" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_Madrid).

Maertens, Falk (b. Meppen, Germany, Dec. 28, 1972). German trumpeter. Maertens attended the Detmold Musikhochschule at the early age of fourteen because of his special ability, studying with Max Sommerhalder. After finishing his Abitur in 1992, he took up full studies there, and won several soloist prizes including first in the 1994 Ellsworth Smith International Trumpet Solo Competition. He has also studied with Bo Nilsson, Pierre Thibaud, and Maurice André. He has performed with orchestras in the United States, Russia, and throughout Europe including the Schleswig-Holstein Festival Orchester and the Radiophilharmonie Hannover.

Maertens has been principal trumpet of the Deutsches Sinfonie-Orchester in Berlin since 1995, and since 2005 has also been principal of the Mahler Chamber Orchestra led by maestros Claudio Abbado and Daniel Harding. He is also a member of the German Brass Quintet and Brasserie Berlin, and has been a guest trumpeter with the ensemble, German Brass. He is considered to be one of the foremost trumpeters of his generation in the world.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Falk Maertens" (http://home.mnet-online.de/trumpet/Biographie-FM_en.htm).

Mager, Georges [Emile-Charles-Désiré] (b. Tourcoing, France, Nov. 7, 1884; d. Housatonic, Massachusetts, Sept. 20, 1950). French trumpeter. Mager was born in France into a musical family. His father was a cornet student of Arban, and his brother played French horn. Mager studied violin and horn, and then attended the Paris Conservatory where he studied with Jean-Joseph Mellet beginning in 1904. He won the First Prize for cornet in 1906 and graduated in that year. He was also a fine viola player and prominent musician in Paris before World War I, and played in the Léon Deliance (1910), Concerts Touche (as a solo cornet), Concerts Lamoureux, and the Concerts of the Society of the Conservatory.

Mager was an excellent tenor, and hoped for a career as an opera singer. He often sang in concert with his wife Claire, a fine soprano. He was in the French Army during World War I, and toured the United States as a flugelhorn soloist with a French military band (1918). He was given a viola position in the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Maestro Sergey Koussevitzsky in 1918 (he shared a stand with Arthur Fiedler). In 1920, he moved to the principal trumpet chair (replacing Gustav Heim) where he remained until his death thirty years later.

Coming from France, Mager preferred the C trumpet over the B-flat instrument, and sparked a huge trend toward the use of the C trumpet as the standard orchestral instrument in America. He taught at the New England Conservatory, and instilled his style of playing and tonal concepts in students such as Adolph Herseth, Bernard Adelstein, Roger Voisin, and Renold Schilke, all of whom became highly influential orchestral trumpeters. He taught his pupils to sing on their instruments.

Mager brought with him to America many older French cornet and trumpet solos that later became out-of-print public domain works, many of which he edited and published in the United States. Some of his editions included music by Enesco, Balay, Gaubert, Thomé, Ropartz, and Senée. He also recorded under his own name.

Mager died at the age of sixty-five. He was replaced in the BSO by Roger Voisin who had been the third and assistant principal trumpet. After Mager's death, Serge Koussevitsky called him the golden voice of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For Herseth he was a wonderful gentleman of the old school.

Bibl.: Clarke, Keith C. "Beginnings of a Legend: The Young Mr. Harry Glantz and His Contemporaries" (New York Brass Conference For Scholarships Journal, 1978); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Georges C. Mager" (www.absoluteastronomy.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Maggio, Louis (b. Italy, Oct. 13, 1881; d. Los Angeles, California, Feb. 23, 1957). American trumpeter. Maggio emigrated from Italy to Detroit in 1906. He worked in several theater orchestras and played second next to the legendary trumpeter Rafael Méndez during the late 1920 and 1930s. Maggio then moved to Minneapolis to play in the Minneapolis Symphony (now the Minnesota Orchestra).

In 1937, Maggio had a disastrous accident when running to catch a trolley, and slipped on the icy street, fell onto the train tracks and severely injured his mouth. After the wounds healed, he was still unable to play for months. Having known that his old friend Méndez had sustained a similar lip accident a short time earlier, Maggio contacted Méndez, and asked him if he could teach Maggio how he had recovered. Méndez agreed to help, so Maggio traveled to Los Angeles to work with Méndez.

Méndez had learned to play pedal tones from his father, a well-known bandleader in Mexico. Méndez showed the pedal tone exercises to Maggio who was then able to improve greatly. Maggio decided to stay in Los Angeles and establish a teaching studio. Soon, Maggio was teaching pedal tone exercises to dozens of students, many of who were studio performers looking to increase their range and endurance—among them as early as 1938, the great Uan Rasey. When Méndez's twin sons were in high school, they also studied with Maggio, because their father was on tour most of the time.

After Maggio's death in 1957, several of his students wrote pedal tone method books based on his exercises. Carlton MacBeth was the first with Original Louis Maggio System for Brass. The second was Claude Gordon who titled his book Systematic Approach to Daily Practice. The third was Roger Spaulding who wrote Double High C in 37 Weeks.

A great deal of confusion exists about the teaching relationship of Maggio and Méndez, because Méndez did in fact seek Maggio's advice after Méndez's accident in Detroit. At that time, Maggio was unable to help Méndez. After seeking help from Maggio, Herbert Clarke, Walter M. Smith, Max Schlossberg, Joseph Gustat, and others, Méndez finally found success by following his father's teaching. An interview with Méndez in 1979 helps clear up the issue.

From the October 1979 International Trumpet Guild Journal:

H.M. Lewis: You said that you studied with Schlossberg, Clarke and Maggio?

Méndez: No, Maggio. I didn't study with Maggio. Maggio's style [of teaching], see, I gave Maggio, a long time ago in Detroit, Michigan when I was over there, a job. And he studied my playing and watched me when I was warming up with those pedal tones, and developed that way of teaching his system. From me, not me from him. It was my father's style [of teaching].

H.M. Lewis: That's fantastic. I did not realize that at all.

Méndez: As a matter of fact, when Mr. Maggio died, he left me all his material. I really didn't need it because he got that from my way of playing.

H.M. Lewis: He got it from you to begin with.

Méndez: That's right.

Bibl.: Hickman, Jane and Delon Lyren. Magnificent Méndez (Summit Records / Books); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lewis, H.M. "Rafael Méndez: Trumpeter Extraordinaire" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 1979); MacBeth, Carlton. Original Louis Maggio System for Brass (Maggio Music); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Magnarelli, Joseph ("Joe") [Anthony] ("Mag") (b. Syracuse, New York, Jan. 19, 1960). American trumpeter. Magnarelli began playing piano at the age of twelve, then the guitar and trumpet, and performed on piano in church each Sunday. He played varsity basketball during high school, and played two years of college basketball while attending Onondaga Community College. He finished his bachelor of music degree at the State University of New York in Fredonia just before going on the road with the Broadway musicals, Ain't Misbehavin' and A Chorus Line. He studied with Louis Mucci (Berklee College of Music, 1980).

Magnarelli moved to New York City in 1986. He took trumpet lessons from William Vacchiano of the New York Philharmonic, and also studied on various occasions with Jack Palmer, Sal Amico, Tommy Turrentine, James Moody, Garry Dial, and Arnold Jacobs. He played or recorded with Lionel Hampton (1987-89), Jack McDuff (1989-94), Toshiko Akiyoshi, the New York Hardbop Quintet, Jon Hendricks, John Swana, Harry Connick Jr., the Buddy Rich reunion band, Walt Weiskopf, Dado Moroni, Grant Stewart, the Glenn Miller Orchestra, Maria Schneider, Rosemary Clooney, Tom Harrell, Harry Whitaker, Don Sebesky, John Pizzarelli, Spike Wilner, Mark Sherman, Jane Monheit, Ray Barretto (2004, in Marciac), and many others.

A gifted hard bop soloist, Magnarelli was a semifinalist in the Thelonious Monk International Trumpet Competition in 1990. He has released many albums, including Why Not (Criss Cross), Always There (Criss Cross), The Clincher (TCB), Rokermotion (TCB), Philly: New York Junction (Criss Cross), New York-Philly Junction (Criss Cross), Song for My Mother (Criss Cross), Mr. Mags (Criss Cross), and Hoop Dreams (Criss Cross).

Magnarelli is an adjunct faculty member at the New School for Social Research in New York, and is also on the faculty of New Jersey City University. He is a member of Ray Barretto's New Sextet.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Joe Magnarelli" (www.jazztrumpetsolos.com/JoeMagnarelliBiography.asp); Joe Magnarelli's official website: www.joemagnarelli.com.

Mahillon, Victor [Charles] (b. Brussels, Belgium, Mar. 10, 1841; d. St. Jean Cap-Ferrat, Belgium, June 17, 1924). Belgian maker. His father was Charles Borromée Mahillon (1813-1887), a manufacturer of woodwind and brass instruments who supplied the Belgium army with musical instruments. Charles's eldest son, Victor Charles Mahillon, attended the Brussels Conservatory of Music, and later began working at his father's company in 1865 at the age of twenty-four. Victor founded the music journal, L'Echo musical, in 1869, a periodical that continued until 1886 when Victor became too busy with manufacturing to oversee it. This magazine earned a silver medal in Paris in 1878.

In 1879, Mahillon became the curator of the Brussels Conservatory Museum and expanded the collection to over 1,500 ancient, modern, and non-Western instruments. His catalog of the instruments in the museum is important in that it set the standard of classifications and design details that are used by many of the leading instrument collections of the world. Mahillon also created numerous replicas of early instruments that were too fragile to repair into working order, such as the lituus and the Roman buccina. He also produced a straight cornetto with flute keys to be played in Gluck's Orphée. Several of his replicas received a gold medal from the Executive Council of the 1885 Inventions Exhibition.

Victor Mahillon began manufacturing high D trumpets in 1870. In 1886, he patented a valve design known as the "compensating" system that automatically added lengths of tubing when the first and third valves were depressed simultaneously. By 1892, his D trumpet model with two valves (later three valves) replaced the so-called "Bach Trumpet" by Silvani & Smith.

Perhaps his most notable invention was his piccolo B-flat trumpet, which he introduced in 1905. A leading proponent of this instrument was the Belgian trumpeter Théo Charlier who had previously performed Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 (Liège, 1898 and Paris in 1902) on a Mahillon G piccolo. Charlier worked with Mahillon in designing the "Charlier-model" (mezzo-soprano) B-flat piston trumpet in 1909. Beginning in 1910, he produced a new "C. Mahillon" trumpet in D with a mouthpiece leadpipe that enters directly into the first valve. This model was highly successful and was used in the late 1950s everywhere in Europe. C. Mahillon and Company was the first maker to manufacture soprano and piccolo trumpets.

In 1873, Victor Mahillon published an important treatise titled Éléments d'Acoustique Musicale that formed the basis of design for other makers including Renold Schilke and R. Dale Olson. This important book also influenced Besson in France.

Although Victor Charles Mahillon died in 1924 at the age of eighty-two, his manufacturing firm continued to operate until 1935. In 1937, the company was taken over by Jean Smits and renamed Mahillon & Co. Succ. J. Smits, which is no longer in existence.

Bibl.: Cassone, Gabriele (Eng. trans. by Tom Dambly). The Trumpet Book (Zecchini Editore); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); "Victor Mahillon" (www.britannica.com); "Victor Mahillon" (www.rjmartz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mahoney, John E. ("Ned") (b. Aug., 1911; d. date unknown [2008 or later]). American cornetist from Sault Ste Marie, Michigan. Mahoney was one of America's greatest cornetists. He was a student of Ernest S. Williams in 1930-34 to whom he became an assistant. He graduated from the Ernest S. Williams School of Music in 1934 and began his professional career as cornet soloist of the 69th and 7th Regiment Bands of New York. He joined the famed Goldman Band in 1937, which featured him along with Leonard B. Smith and J. Frank Elsass as a member of the Goldman Cornet Trio (also known as The Three Aces). Raymond Crisara and James Burke (one of Mahoney's students) later joined him in the cornet trio.

Mahoney's time with the Goldman Band was interrupted when he was drafted into the Navy from 1942 to 1945. During his twenty-five year career with the Goldman Band, he performed 1,485 concerts on the Mall in Central Park and in Prospect Park, Brooklyn. He was also a member of the Kismet Temple Shrine Band for sixty years, twenty of which were as conductor. He retired from active performing in 1988.

Mahoney opened Ned Mahoney Music in 1946, a music store on Long Island. He retired completely at age ninety. He was inducted into the American Bandmasters Association, and in 2007 received its Edwin Franko Goldman Memorial Citation. His wife was Ann Mahoney (one of his former students) and his daughter is Barbara Mahoney.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ned Mahoney's 94th Birthday Celebration" (www.allstarbuglers.net/nedmahoneys94thbday.htm); Zajec, Victor William "The American Bandmasters Association Edwin Franko Goldman Memorial Citation" (American Bandmasters Association, 2005); personal interview with Byron Autrey, Apr. 25, 2011.

Maier, Toni (b. Bärnbach, Steiermark, Germany, Jan. 29, 1949). German trumpeter. Maier's incredible career began when he studied trumpet with his father. He attended a music conservatory in Graz, studying classical and jazz music, and became a member of the ORF Big Band for a year. From 1969 to 1971, Maier was solo trumpeter in Max Greger's orchestra in Munich. He also played with Fatty George, and was with the Vienna Symphony Orchestra for seven years. Subsequently, he founded his own thirteen-piece big band. Throughout his career, he made many recordings and appeared on television numerous times, performing virtuoso solos with the style and technique of Harry James. His solo albums include Isolamento (WM Produktion), Golden Trumpets, Trumpet A Go-Go (Polydor), Trompete Sensation, and Toni Maier and His Orchestra.

Maier taught at the Graz Conservatory, and since 1988 has been director of the music school in his hometown of Bärnbach, where he teaches trumpet, composition, arranging, and conducting.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Maisch, Michael (b. Karlsruhe, Germany, May 2, 1966). German trumpeter. Maisch earned a bachelor of music degree at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Karlsruhe, studying with Edward Tarr. He also studied with Bo Nilsson and Reinhold Friedrich. He studied with Horst-Dieter Bolz in Trossingen, receiving a master of music degree, and with Michael Laird, also in Trossingen, earning another master of music degree on the Baroque (valveless) trumpet. He was a member of the Stuttgart Youth Philharmonic Orchestra and the German Youth Philharmonic before joining the professional ranks of the Baden State Theater Orchestra, Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra, and Ludwigburg Festival Orchestra.

As one of the leading performers on the Baroque trumpet, Maisch has performed and recorded with the Karlsruhe Baroque Orchestra, Nuremberg Chamber Orchestra, L'Arpa Festante München, Die Trossinger Trompeten ensemble, the Collegium Aureum of Cologne, and an early music ensemble in Zurich, Switzerland, led by Michael Kobelt. He is a member of the large trumpet group, trumpetARTensemble, and is a top freelance musician in Karlsruhe (jazz, Baroque, Classical, etc.). Maisch became a member of the Heidelberg Symphony Orchestra in 1996, and was promoted to principal trumpet in 2001.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Majerski, Stanislaw (b. Nowy Saçz [Neusandez], Poland, Nov. 28, 1958). Polish trumpeter. Majerski began to play the trumpet at age fifteen and studied with Ludwig Lutak at the Music Academy in Kraków from 1979 to 1984. Since 1983, he has been a member of the Kraków Philharmonic Orchestra, and from 1993 to 1998 was also principal trumpet of the Sinfonia Varsovia chamber orchestra. He is a highly skilled player of the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, and has participated in numerous music festivals and recordings.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Baroque ensemble, Starck Compagnay. Tomasz Ślusarczyk, trumpet/director, Stanisław Majerski, trumpet (far right), Paweł Chulisz, trumpet, Michał Tyrański, trumpet, Ryszard Haba, timpani, and Marcin Świątkiewicz, organ.

Makedonsky, Angel Kirilov (b. Pazardžik, Bulgaria, Dec. 3, 1947). Bulgarian trumpeter. Makedonsky took up the trumpet at age fifteen, and studied in Sofia with Petr Karparov at the "Pancho Vladigerov" State Music Academy. He played in the Pazardžik and Plovdiv Symphony Orchestras and the Sofia Radio Symphony. In 1983, he began teaching at his alma mater, the State Music Academy in Sofia, and is a member of the Academic Brass Quintet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Malik, Raphé [Laurence Mazel] (b. Cambridge, Massachusetts, Nov. 1, 1948; d. Brattleboro, Vermont, Mar. 8, 2006). American trumpeter. Born as Laurence Mazel, Malik (who changed his name in 1974) grew up near Boston. He was a regional tennis champion, and studied Mandarin Chinese during high school through the US State Department's intensive language program. However, music was his passion, so he attended the University of Massachusetts in Amherst (1966-70), but left school to spend time in Paris, France. After returning to the U.S., Malik studied jazz at Antioch College in Ohio with Cecil Taylor, Jimmy Lyons, and Andrew Cyrille. His association with Taylor and Lyons became an important part of his career.

Malik moved to New York City around 1975, but continued performing with Taylor with whom he made his recording debut in 1976 on the Dark Unto Themselves album, and also began playing with Jimmy Lyons during the early 1980s. In order to supplement his income, Malik worked as a ceramic tile and marble setter. He also began leading his own quintet in the Boston area.

In 1992, Malik and Marguerite Serkin were married and moved to Brattleboro, Vermont, where Malik built a house and taught at Bennington College. He continued performing free-jazz on occasion with Taylor and Lyons, as well as with William Parker, Alan Silva, Sabir Mateen, Syd Straw, the Rova Saxophone Quartet, Full Metal Revolutionary Jazz Ensemble, Sun Ra, Andy Bey, Rashied McCarr, Syd Smart, Joe McPhee, Frank Wright, and many others. He was a respected composer and record producer, and recorded many albums as leader that include The Short Form (Eremite), ConSequences (Eremite), Companions (Eremite), Sirens Sweet and Low (Outsounds), 21st Century Texts (FMP), Storyline (Boxholder), Looking East (Boxholder), Sympathy (Boxholder), Last Set: Live at the 1369 Jazz Club (Boxholder), and Speak Easy (La Systeme).

Malik began having health problems during the 1990s. Unable to travel as much as when he was younger, he took a part-time job as a meat cutter in a local supermarket. He underwent a liver transplant about a year before he died at the age of fifty-seven. He is best known for his bold and lyrical trumpet playing, a refreshing contrast to Cecil Taylor's fiery piano technique.

Bibl.: Jenkins, Todd S. "Raphé Malik: Free jazz trumpeter with Taylor, Lyons" (www.jazzhouse.org); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Raphé Malik" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Malkov, Valentin Alexandrovich (b. Leningrad, Russia, Dec. 13, 1935). Russian trumpeter. Malkov studied with Jury Andreyevich Bolshiyanov at the Leningrad Conservatory, graduating in 1963. In 1962, he won second prize at the "Prague Spring" international solo competition, and in 1963 won first prize in the All-Union Competition of Performers.

Malkov became a member of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra in 1960, serving for a brief time as principal trumpet. He also taught at the Leningrad Conservatory from 1970 to 1979. He made recordings under his own name, and after Daniil Ilyich Ginetsinsky (1919-2010), was the first to use the piccolo trumpet in the USSR; he recorded Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto with the Leningrad Chamber Orchestra in 1971.

Malkov became romantically involved with violinist Nataliya Koloskova of the Leningrad Philharmonic, and the two defected from Russia to Japan, leaving behind Malkov's wife and children. A few months later, in 1979, the couple received asylum in the United States and moved to the San Francisco, California, area. For the past few years, they have been living in Australia where Valentin was an active private trumpet teacher (in Sydney during the 1980s). They are now retired in Tasmania.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Wascowicz, Lidia. "Soviet Musicians Get U. S. 'Parole'." (Schenectady Gazette, June 12, 1979).

Malone, Robert ("Bob") (b. Van Nuys, California, Dec. 23, 1954). American brass instrument designer. Malone grew up in the Ridgecrest area of the Mojave Desert east of Los Angeles. His first trumpet teachers were Alberta Kline and Charles Wood. Malone wanted to become an orchestral trumpeter, so in 1975 he attended the University of Southern California, studying with Walter Laursen. After a few years, Laursen left, and Thomas Stevens (coprincipal trumpet of the Los Angeles Philharmonic) was named his replacement. Malone learned a great deal from Stevens, and also had several lessons with James Stamp. Malone's later teachers include Anthony Plog and David Evans.

While at USC, one of Malone's roommates introduced him to Larry Minick, a local instrument repairman. Minick hired Malone as an apprentice and began teaching him the basics of repair and design of brass instruments. After graduating from USC in 1979, Malone began freelancing and performing at Disneyland, while continuing to work for Minick. It wasn't long before Malone began designing his own leadpipes and making various modifications to his own trumpets. Thomas Stevens encouraged him to experiment, and in 1983 Malone organized Bob Malone's Brass Technology, a business located in Minick's shop. In 1987, Malone purchased Minick's shop and equipment, and decided to devote all of his time to brass instrument design and repair. He made very successful and popular "Bachalone" trumpet conversions by modifying Bach trumpets, and "Yamalone" trumpets by modifying Yamaha trumpets.

In 1989, Malone began working as a design consultant for Yamaha, which led to associations with numerous Yamaha artists including Bobby Shew, Mike Vax, Boyde Hood, and Håkan Hardenberger. In 1990, Malone moved his shop from West Los Angeles to Van Nuys, California. In 2001, he became a fulltime designer for Yamaha of America and soon after, sold his shop and moved to the Yamaha headquarters in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Since 2001, he has collaborated with artists such as John Hagstrom, Robert Sullivan, Jens Lindemann, James Thompson, Alison Balsom, and Allen Vizzutti in designing new models of trumpets. He has also worked with other leading brass artists to develop Yamaha trombones.

Malone is a friendly and respectful man who enjoys cooking, photography, and fast sports cars. He is also a licensed private pilot. Malone and his wife raise Kuvasz dogs.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Bob Malone from Yamaha" (The Brass Herald, Feb. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); personal interview, July 26, 2011.

Mandler, Lutz (b. Gießen, Germany, June 27, 1967). German trumpeter. Mandler studied at the Peter Cornelius Conservatory in Mainz, and the Cologne Musikhochschule where he studied with Malte Burba. Since 1994, he has been teaching trumpet at the University of Mainz, and since 1996 has been teaching brass methodology at the Swiss Jazz School in Bern. Since 1997, he also teaches at the Academy of Music in Darmstadt.

Mandler has devoted his playing career to contemporary music, and has released his debut album of contemporary unaccompanied works, Atemwege. He has performed with the Basel Sinfonietta, Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, Mainz Chamber Orchestra, and The Newt Hinton Ensemble H Rotterdam/Paris. He is an avid performer of the Swiss alphorn and the Australian didgeridoo, besides his main instrument, the trumpet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Mangione, Charles ("Chuck") Frank (b. Rochester, New York, Nov. 29, 1940). American trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. Mangione's parents were close friends of numerous celebrity jazz musicians. After studying the piano at age eight, Mangione switched to trumpet two years later when Dizzy Gillespie visited his home for dinner and gave young Mangione one of his instruments. Mangione attended the Eastman School of Music's Preparatory Division, and at age eighteen formed and led The Jazz Brothers ensemble that included brother Gap (b. 1938), a pianist. From 1958 to 1963, Chuck earned a bachelor of music degree at the Eastman School of Music, and during his senior year, recorded his first album as leader, Recuerdo (now on Original Jazz Classics).

After graduating from Eastman, Mangione taught jazz in the public schools of Rochester, New York, from 1963 to 1965, after which he moved to New York City to "see what could happen." He played in the big bands of Woody Herman, Kai Winding, and Maynard Ferguson, playing jazz in the style of Dizzy Gillespie, Clifford Brown, and Lee Morgan, but his dream was fulfilled when he joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, replacing Morgan in 1965. In 1967, he left Blakey to become a member of The National Gallery band.

Mangione returned to Rochester in 1968, formed his own quartet, and moved away from bebop. He switched to the flugelhorn, an instrument he felt best suited his personality, and also began doubling on electric piano. Mangione's compositions were beginning to become noticed, and he was invited to be a guest conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra and soloist in a 1970 PBS Television broadcast that was devoted to his compositions. One particular tune, Hill Where The Lord Hides, was released on Mercury Records and became an instant hit, making Mangione well known on a national basis. A string of smaller hit compositions followed, and in 1977 he achieved the height of his fame in 1977 when he released the album Feels So Good on A&M Records. Although the album featured Mangione's flugelhorn in a pop style rather than a jazz style, his fame became undeniable. The album quickly rose to number two on the pop charts, sold over two million copies, and went double platinum. Despite Mangione's long list of Grammy Award-winning compositions since that album, he will forever be linked to Feels So Good. The song remains the longest running pop hit played by smooth jazz radio stations around the world.

Mangione's trumpet/flugelhorn career seemed to coast after 1977. He appeared in the "Paradise Blues" episode of television's Magnum PI, and as a guest on The Merv Griffin Show and the children's TV program, Sharon, Lois and Bram's Elephant Show. However, most of his later career has focused on composing. His Chase the Clouds Away was used as the theme song of the 1978 Summer Olympics in Montreal, Quebec, Canada, and his Give It All You Got was the theme of the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, New York. Mangione received a Grammy Award in 1977 for his composition, Bellavia. He also composed Children of Sanchez for a 1978 film that was released as a CD by A&M Records, earning him his second Grammy Award for "Best Pop Instrumental" in 1979.

Mangione taught at the Eastman School of Music as director of the Eastman Jazz Ensemble from 1968 to 1972, and also organized the jazz program at the Hochstein School of Music in Rochester. He was voted to the top of numerous jazz and pop polls in 1978 and 1979, including those of Playboy and Rolling Stone magazines. In 1986, he toured with the reformed Jazz Brothers group, and in 1997 began performing again with his Feels So Good band. Mangione's voice can be heard as the cartoon character spokesman for Mega Lo Mart in the television series, King of the Hill.

Mangione has been nominated for, or has received, dozens of Grammy Awards. Among his forty albums are The Jazz Brothers (Original Jazz Classics), Hey Baby (Original Jazz Classics), Spring Fever (Original Jazz Classics), Recuerdo (Original Jazz Classics), Chuck Mangione Quartet (Mercury), Feels So Good (A&M), Alive (Mercury), Tarantella (A&M), Love Notes (Columbia), Disguise (Columbia), Children of Sanchez (A&M), and Everything for Love (Checky). He can be seen in videos such as Monterey Jazz Festival '75 (Storyville) and Sarah Vaughan and Friends (A*Vision).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Chuck Mangione" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Chuck Mangione" (www.mangionemagic.com).

Maniero, Fabiano (b. Piove di Sacco [near Padua], Italy, Jan. 27, 1965). Italian trumpeter. He was eleven when he started to play the trumpet. Maniero graduated from the conservatory of music in Padua in 1984 where he studied with Cesare Michieli. He also studied with Armando Ghitalla, Stephens Burns, Pierre Thibaud, Giancarlo Parodi, and Rex Martin (tuba). He graduated with honors from the Zurich Conservatory in Switzerland (1997), studying with Claude Rippas.

Maniero has been a member of the Toscanini Orchestra in Parma, Tuscany Regional Orchestra, Haydn Orchestra of Bolzano, Veneto and Padua Orchestra, Pomeriggi Musicali Orchestra in Milan, Municipal Theatre of Treviso, and the Donizetti Orchestra in Bergamo and continues to work with them and other leading northern Italian orchestras. He received a stable position as principal trumpeter in the orchestra of the theatre "La Fenice" in Venice in 1998, and one year later became the trumpeter with I Solisti Veneti. He has also taught at the C. Pollini Conservatory of Music in Padova (2004-06).

Maniero is mostly known as a soloist with his trumpet/organ duo with Silvio Celeghin. He has recorded several CDs with Celeghin, guitarist Alessandro Modenese, vocalist Erika De Lorenzi, and others. He has also recorded music for film soundtracks. He is currently teaching at the conservatories in Udine and Vicenza.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Manley, Jim (b. Saint Louis, Missouri, Jan. 5, 1954). American trumpeter. Manley, now one of the finest high note players in the world, began playing trumpet at age thirteen. At age fourteen, he formed his first band, which performed for school and civic functions. He is mostly self-taught, although he did take a handful of lessons from Gordon Alt and Bobby Shew, and received advice from Lin Biviano, Cat Anderson, and Roger Ingram.

He attended Southeast Missouri State University and worked as a freelance musician. After he left school, he was a printing press operator at a brokerage firm for four years. He decided to quit his day job, and joined a band in Saint Louis called Fantasy, which he continues to play with now and then. He has also performed with The Charlie B Group, and The Wild, Cool & Swingin' Orchestra, and is also a fine bandleader, composer, and arranger. He developed an extraordinary upper register that has become his trademark.

Manley's solo albums include Some Assembly Required, Lip Trip, Horns in the House and Other Criminals, Christmas Unwrapped, Splendor in the Brass, Brass Poison, and Eight. He frequently gives courses at schools and universities.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Scream Trumpet Player Jim Manley of St. Louis" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/jimmanley.html).

Mann, Joseph F. (b. Prague, Czechoslovakia, Apr. 11, 1868; d. United States, 1953). Czech trumpeter. Mann was a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trumpet section from 1891 to 1937. After retiring from playing, he was an assistant librarian for the BSO until 1952. He served with the BSO a total of sixty-one years!

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Joseph F. Mann" (www.stokowski.org/Boston_Symphony_Musicians_List.htm).

Männel, Armin (b. Falkenstein, Vogtland, Germany, Feb. 17, 1933). German trumpeter. Männel began playing trumpet at age fourteen, studying with Ernst Röder. From 1947 to 1950, he studied at the music school in Radebeul with Oskar Kirchner, and from 1950 to 1954 at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik (now the Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy Conservatory) in Leipzig with Heinrich Teubig.

Upon graduation, Männel became a member of the Dresden Philharmonic (1954-57), and from 1957 to 1998 was principal of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig. He was also an active soloist who frequently performed and often recorded many of the trumpet cantatas of J.S. Bach. For over thirty years, he taught at the Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy Conservatory. Among his many students are Ludwig Güttler and Annette Männchen.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Manone, Joe ("Wingy") [Joseph Matthews Mannone] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 13, 1900; d. Las Vegas, Nevada, July 9, 1982). American trumpeter and singer. Manone lost his right arm in a streetcar accident in 1914. He used a prosthesis so easily that audiences could hardly tell that he had no arm. He began playing the trumpet, and by age twenty-one was playing professionally on riverboats with Charlie Straight (once alongside Bix Beiderbecke). He played with the Crescent City Jazzers in Mobile (1924), and when the band moved to St. Louis, the name was changed to the Arcadian Serenaders.

During the mid 1920s, Manone toured Texas with several territorial bands and with Jack Teagarden. In 1926, he led his own band in Biloxi, Mississippi. His first recording as a leader was in 1927. His composition, Tar Paper Stomp (recorded in 1930), became popular and led to a great deal of work with leading jazz artists such as Benny Goodman, Ray Miller (October 1927), and Speed Webb. He was a top New York freelance musician between 1934 and 1940, largely because of his hit recording, The Isle of Capri, in 1935.

In 1940, Manone moved to Los Angeles and appeared regularly on Bing Crosby's radio show. He also appeared in several Hollywood films including Rhythm on the River (with Bing Crosby, 1940), Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar (1940), Juke Box Jenny (1942), Hi'ya Sailor (1943), Tocadero (1944), Sarge Goes to College (1947), and Rhythm Inn (1951). Manone was popular for his trumpet playing and his humorous vocal solos and jive talking on stage.

Manone coauthored his autobiography, Trumpet on the Wing, in 1954. The same year, he took part in the Mae West Show in Las Vegas. He continued recording until 1960, making only one album in 1966 and two single tunes in 1975. He also toured Europe a few times during the 1960s. His best-known compositions include Tar Paper Stomp, There'll Come a Time, Tailgate Ramble, Stop the War, Trying to Stop My Crying, Downright Disgusted Blues, Swing Out, Nickel in the Slot, Jumpy Walkin' the Streets, and Fare Thee Well. Some of his best recordings include Up the Country Blues/Ringside Stomp (Columbia), Tar Paper Stomp/Tin Roof Blues (Champion), The Isle of Capri (Vocalion), The Broken Record (Vocalion), Memphis Blues (Brunswick), and Wingy Manone/Sidney Bechet—Together at Town Hall 1947 (Jazz Archives).

During Manone's career, he formed several groups including the Cellar Boys, Joe Manone's Harmony Kings, Barbecue Joe & His Hot Dogs, Joe "Wingy" Manone and His Hot Dogs, Joe "Wingy" Manone and His Club Royale Orchestra, Arcadia Serenaders, and Wingy Manone and His Orchestra. As a humorous gesture between friends, Joe Venuti used to send one cufflink to Manone each year as a birthday gift.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz; Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Wingy Manone" (http://wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Månsson, Michael (b. Lund, Sweden, Nov. 20, 1967). Swedish trumpeter. Månsson came to the trumpet at age nine. He studied with Pierre Thibaud at the Paris Conservatory from 1985 to 1989, and with Edward Tarr at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis in Basel, Switzerland from 1989 to 1993. He also had additional lessons in Sweden with Bo Nilsson and Roger Andersson. His career began as a member of the Basel Radio Symphony Orchestra (1993-97) and as principal of the Berne Symphony Orchestra (1999-2000). He was a section member of the Basel Symphony Orchestra during the 2000-01 season, and since 2001 has again been principal of the Berne Symphony Orchestra, and second trumpet of the Orchestergesellschaft Biel.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Mantler, Michael ("Mike") (b. Vienna, Austria, Aug. 10, 1943). Austrian trumpeter and composer. After beginning to play trumpet at the age of twelve, Mantler attended the Academy of Music at Vienna University, studying both trumpet and musicology. He then moved to the United States in 1962, studying at the Berklee College of Music in Boston. He studied trumpet with Helmut Wobisch, Franz Weiss (1955, Vienna), and John Coffey (Boston). In 1964, he moved to New York City where he started his jazz career by playing with Cecil Taylor and Lowell Davidson. Mantler was an early proponent of free jazz, and helped establish the Jazz Composer's Guild and orchestra in 1965.

Mantler met jazz pianist Carla Bley in New York during the mid 1960s, and she became his common-law spouse. They had a daughter, Karen Mantler (an organist), and toured with Steve Lacy's

Jazz Realities quintet during two European tours in 1965-66. During the 1970s, Mantler played in Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra, as well as with Gary Burton. In order to provide a vehicle for their avant-garde jazz recordings, Mantler and Bley formed the JCOA (Jazz Composer's Orchestra Alliance) label and established an indie label distribution company in 1972 called New Music Distribution Service, and a second record label in 1973, Watt Works. Mantler opened a recording studio near Woodstock, New York, in 1974 and played in Bley's big band from 1977 to 1985, but the two eventually separated, seeing each other only for occasional recording sessions or special events.

Mantler's recording output is impressive, even though he did not perform as a soloist all that often after separating from Bley. A small listing of his albums include Cerco Un Paese Innocente (ECM), Dinner Music (ECM, with Carla Bley), European Tour (ECM, with Bley), Social Studies (ECM, with Bley), Musique Mécanique (EZCM, with Bley), Movies (Watt), and More Movies (Watt). There are also dozens of albums by other artists that feature his compositions. His music is somewhat classical in nature, but leans toward the avant-garde.

In 1991, Mantler moved to Europe, living both in Copenhagen, Denmark, and the south of France. In 1993, he formed the Chamber Music and Song ensemble. In recognition of his life's work, he received Austria's State Prize for Improvisational Music, the Prandtauer Prize of the City of St. Pölten, and the Music Prize of the City of Vienna.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Michael Mantler" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Michael Mantler's official website: www.mantlermusic.com.

Marchal, André (b. Brussels, Belgium, July 14, 1920; d. Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 18, 2001). Belgian trumpeter. Marchal studied with Franz Wangermée at the Brussels Conservatory, and graduated after winning first prize in the annual trumpet competition in 1939. In 1947, he won second prize in the Geneva Competition. From 1939 until his retirement, he was principal trumpet of the National Orchestra of Belgium, and trumpet professor at the important music schools of his country. He authored the books, 16 Studies of Virtuosity (Schott) and Exercices journaliers (éd. Brogneaux). Marchal recorded the Haydn Concerto in E-flat, and Robert Darcy wrote a concerto dedicated to him. He premiered many contemporary works for trumpet and orchestra.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marchiando, John [Richard] (b. Stevens Point, Wisconsin, June 17, 1969). American trumpeter. John's father Richard Joseph is a retired orthopedic surgeon, and his mother Joan Ann, a former junior high school math teacher. John attended La Crosse Central High School in Wisconsin, and graduated in 1987. His musical mentors there were John Alexander, Alex Vaver, Richard Young, and Ron Fox.

Marchiando attended the University of Michigan where he earned a bachelor of music education and performance degree, studying with Armando Ghitalla (1987-89 and 1990-92) and Ramon Parcells (1989-90). He continued studies there from 1993 to 1995, studying with Charles Daval, and earning a master of music degree. He has also taken lessons from Raymond Mase and Chris Gekker. From 1995 to 1998, Marchiando freelanced in Cincinnati, and then taught at the University of Toledo in Ohio from 1998 to 2000. Marchiando then moved west to study with David Hickman and pursue a DMA degree at Arizona State University where he was a graduate trumpet teaching assistant. While at ASU, he was acting second trumpet of the Arizona Opera Orchestra (2001-02), performed with The Phoenix Symphony, Sonoran Brass Quintet, and was appointed to acting second trumpet of the PSO in 2003-04. He completed his doctorate in 2004 and freelanced and taught in the Phoenix area for two additional years. Marchiando was responsible for establishing the Rafael Méndez Library website (http://mendezlibrary.asu.edu) at ASU.

In January of 2006, Marchiando became the associate principal trumpet of the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra in Albuquerque. In September of that year, he was named the acting principal of the orchestra, and after two years in that capacity, won the permanent position of principal trumpet. Beginning in 2007, he was also an adjunct faculty member at the University of New Mexico. In addition, he has performed with the Santa Fe Opera during the summers of 2006, 2007, and 2008, and has been a member of the Summit Brass since 2008, teaching each summer at the annual Rafael Méndez Brass Institute. When the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra became insolvent in 2010, John was hired as principal of the newly-established New Mexico Philharmonic formed by many of the former members of the NMSO in 2011. He also won a fulltime professorship at UNM at that time.

John married trumpeter Jennifer Brynn Rector in 2012. His hobbies include golf, baseball, cooking, and hiking.

Bibl.: John Marchiando website (www.johnmarchiando.com); personal interview, Mar. 18, 2010.

Marcinkiewicz, Joseph ("Joe") W. (b. c1940). American trumpeter and designer. Marcinkiewicz started playing professionally at the age of sixteen. He attended the University of Washington, San Francisco State University, San Francisco Conservatory, and the US Naval School of Music in Norfolk, Virginia. His teachers include Bob Findley, Johnny Coppola, Donald Reinberg, Renold Schilke, Uan Rasey, Roy Stevens, and Carmine Caruso.

Marcinkiewicz toured with Stan Kenton, Arthur Fiedler, Don Ellis, Ray Charles, Roger Williams, The Portland Pops Orchestra, the Portland Symphony Orchestra, and the New York Trumpet Quintet (1986). He has directed the Marylhurst Jazz Arts Ensemble at Marylhurst College in Lake Oswego, Oregon, and leads his own band called the TV Jazz Orchestra. He has authored the book, The BuzzZzone.

Marcinkiewicz studied mouthpiece design under Burt Herrick (1973), and in 1965 opened a brass instrument repair shop located in Canby, Oregon, where he now produces custom trumpets, and since 1983, mouthpieces as well.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Joseph Marcinkiewicz's official website: www.marcinkiewicz.com.

Mares, Paul [Joseph] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, June 15, 1900; d. Chicago, Illinois, Aug. 18, 1949). American cornetist. Mares taught himself to play the cornet, even though he was unable to read music and his father played cornet. At age sixteen, he played with Leon Roppolo and with Tom Brown on the riverboat, Capitol.

In late 1919, Mares moved to Chicago to join Ragbaby Stevens's band. He formed a new band in August of 1921 that backed singer Bee Palmer at the Friar's Inn, and soon became the band's leader. After eighteen months, the band was renamed the New Orleans Rhythm Kings and became one of the top bands in Chicago. The band influenced many other bands and Mares's smooth style of playing inspired young cornetists including Bix Beiderbecke (who was able to sit in with the group on occasion), and Jimmy McPartland. In the use of mutes, Mares was influenced by King Oliver.

In 1922-23 the band recorded for Gennett Records in three separate sessions, one of which included Jelly Roll Morton on piano. It introduced many jazz standards including Farewell Blues, Bugle Call Blues, Panama, That's a-Plenty, Weary Blues, Tin Roof Blues, and Milenberg Joys. However, the owners of the Friar's Inn wanted the band to play newer music similar to that of Paul Whiteman's popular group, but the group refused to change styles and was let go; unable to find work elsewhere, it soon disbanded.

Mares was offered a job with Al Siegal's band in New York, and after playing in New York for a few months, was given the opportunity to replace Bix Beiderbecke in the Wolverines in Chicago, but instead decided to return to his hometown of New Orleans. He reorganized his New Orleans Rhythm Kings in 1925, but other than two recording sessions, the group broke up when a member of the band became mentally ill. Mares dropped out of music and worked for his family's fur business for the next nine years.

Mares moved to Chicago in 1934 and opened a barbeque restaurant. He reestablished his Friar's Inn band and began playing once more at his restaurant. In January of 1935, the group recorded four tunes, but eventually broke up. Mares played little after that, but continued to operate his restaurant and work for the War Department during World War II. He died at the age of forty-nine as one of the unsung heroes of early jazz. A CD titled New Orleans Rhythm Kings and Jelly Roll Morton (Milestone) contains his 1922-23 recordings.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Margolin, Veniamin [Savelyevich] (b. Petrograd [Leningrad, now St. Petersburg], Russia, Dec. 17, 1922; d. St. Petersburg, March 19, 2009). Russian trumpeter. Margolin studied piano as a boy, and began playing the trumpet at age eleven. He was considered a child prodigy when he successfully made his début at age twelve at the St. Petersburg Philharmonic Hall, playing Trognée's Valse lente in short pants with the composer in the audience. He studied with Ivan Mikhailovich Meshshanchuk-Chaban in the Music Studio of the Leningrad Pioneer House from 1938 to 1940. Margolin carried his trumpet in a violin case, causing his friends to nickname him "Busya" after the young virtuoso violinist, Busya Goldstein; Margolis retained this nickname his entire life.

As a boy, Margolin was rather small. When he asked his father if he could participate in sports, his father replied that he "had the height of a sitting dog," which gave the impressionable boy an inferiority complex. To compensate, Margolin became obsessed about working with barbells in order to physically bulk up. He also learned to play the trumpet very loudly, with a strong and bright tone.

Crooked teeth were a problem for young Margolin, so he was fitted with braces, but soon removed them with sugar tongs, upsetting his parents a great deal. At the age of fifteen during a storm, he was struck in the mouth by a window shutter that knocked out two of his front teeth. The teeth were replaced with peg teeth, and only temporarily interrupted his progress on the trumpet.

From 1940 to 1944, Margolin played in a military band, but during this period also served as a common soldier for two and a half years on the Finnish boarder. In 1944, Margolin he played in the Kirov Theater Orchestra (now the Mariinsky Theatre), performing with it until 1947. Dental problems occurred again when Margolin was involved in a street fight during which his front teeth were again knocked out. He was fitted with dentures, and again learned to play without too much difficulty.

In 1947, Margolin entered the Leningrad Conservatory of Music where he studied with Alexander Schmidt, the principal trumpeter of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra. That year, Schmidt retired from orchestral playing, and Margolin won the audition for his chair. While playing in the orchestra, Margolin continued studies at the conservatory with Mikhail Vetrov (finishing in 1953). He retired from the orchestra in 1974.

Margolin was thus principal trumpet of the Leningrad Philharmonic in 1947-74 during the height of the career of its renowned conductor, Yevgeny Mravinsky (1906-88). His recordings of the Tchaikovsky symphonies are considered to be among the best, and he was praised by Shostakovich, Stravinsky, Von Karajan, and Rostropovich for his playing of works by R. Strauss, Mahler, Wagner, Shostakovich, Skryabin, and Stravinsky. Maestro Mravinsky, said of Margolin, Brightness of sound marked Margolin among all other performers. He was not afraid to perform the most difficult trumpet solos, and he performed them with such ease that it gave the impression of a celebration, and of beauty. The domination of his trumpet above the orchestra only stressed the importance of an imaginative sound in music. Likewise, Sir Malcolm Sargent called him the world's greatest orchestral trumpet player. He also played under Gennady Rozhdestvensky.

Margolin was a professor at the Smolensk School of Music (1956-64) and the St. Petersburg Conservatory (1956-58 and 1986 until his death in 2009). He also taught at the Leningrad Institute of Culture (1974-86). Among his many students are Vladimir Aleshkov, Alexei Belyaev, Yuri Fokin, Oleg Grechner, Kirill Gusarov, Leonid Korkin, Vladislav Lavrik, Vyacheslav Panasyuk, Mikhail Romanov, Igor Shar-apov, and Dmitri Yermilov. Some of his teaching mottos were A trumpet player is first of all a proud person and Trumpet is not just a musical instrument. Trumpet is character!

The Russian government named Margolin an Honored Artist of the Russian Federation in 1963. In 1998, he was awarded the Gold Medal by The American Biographical Institute because of his being nominated for inclusion among the "Best Trumpet Players of the 20th Century." The International Trumpet Guild awarded him the Award of Merit in 2005.

Margolin was full of life and enthusiasm. He was a kind man with a gentle disposition. Always humble, he loved people and music. He was also a talented author of poetry.

Bibl.: Akhmadullin, Iskander. "Remembering Veniamin Savelyevich Margolin (1929-2009)" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2009); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Margulies, Peter (b. Palo Alto, California, Dec. 1, 1961). American trumpeter. While growing up in Sunnyvale, California, Margulies began playing trumpet at age nine; his first teachers were Fred Padden, Carl Leach, and Jay Rizetto. After graduating from Fremont High School in 1979, he studied with Charles Geyer at the Eastman School of Music, receiving a bachelor of music degree with honors in 1984, and with Mark Gould at The Juilliard School where he earned a master of music degree in 1987. Additional study was with Charles Schlueter at the Tanglewood Institute. He taught at the Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts (1986-87), played in the National Repertory Orchestra (summer 1986) the Glenn Miller Orchestra (1985), and later had an opportunity to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra (1989) and the New York Philharmonic.

Margulies became second trumpet of the Utah Symphony in 1989, and accepted a one-year position as principal of the San Antonio Symphony during the 1990-91 season. He returned to his former (and current) position with the Utah Symphony in 1992, and from 2009 to 2012 was acting associate principal. He has performed at the Grand Teton Music Festival (summers since 1993) and the Cabrillo Music Festival in California (2007). He is an adjunct professor at the University of Utah (since 1993). As a soloist, he helped commission and premiere Anthony Plog's Concerto for Two Trumpets and Orchestra with Nick Norton and the Utah Symphony in 2002.

Margulies has been married to Louise Vickerman, principal harp of the Utah Symphony, since 2003. His hobbies include cooking, jogging, bicycling, gardening, and wine collecting.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Peter Margulies" (www.rochester.edu/pr/Review/V66N2/cn-east.html); "Peter Margulies" (www.utahsymphony.org/about/the-orchestra/itemlist/category/25-trumpet); personal interviews, July 30 and 31, 2012.

Margulis, Charles ("Charlie") A. (b. Minneapolis, Minnesota, June 24, 1903; d. Little Falls, Minnesota, Apr. 24, 1967). American trumpeter. Margulis began playing trumpet under the guidance of someone he called "professor Heintzman;" he later studied with Tony Caffarelli, Benjamin Klatzkin, and (in 1932) Max Schlossberg. His career started in various territorial bands led by Eddie Elkins, Paul Specht, Sam Lanin, and others, and in the Liberty Theatre movie house orchestra in Minneapolis. His reputation grew considerably when he joined the Jean Goldkette Orchestra (1924) and the Paul Whiteman Orchestra (1927-30). He also played with the Ray Miller Band, Mason Dixon Band, the Dorsey Brothers, Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, and the Glenn Miller Orchestra (1938).

During the Great Depression of the 1930s and through the 1940s, Margulis worked a great deal in the New York City studios as a lead trumpet (mostly with Mannie Klein as second trumpet, 1930-34). However, he became extremely ill in the early 1930s and moved to southern California to regain his health before moving back to New York during the mid 1930s. In 1943, he played George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue under Paul Whiteman at Carnegie Hall. He recorded with Harry Belafonte, Eartha Kitt, Mel Tormé, the Dorsey Brothers, and many others. He was also a skilled composer and arranger, which added to his income. In order to supplement his income further, he purchased a chicken farm.

Margulis continued playing well into the 1960s, working mainly as a studio player. His one solo album is titled Marvelous Margulis, and is on the Carlton label. Despite his impressive career as a recording musician, his legacy is a result of his section and solo playing alongside Bix Beiderbecke and others in the Paul Whiteman Orchestra.

Bibl.: Holbrook, Dick. "A Conversation with Charlie Margulis" (http://bixography.com/margulis/Margulisinterview.html); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marković, Nenad (b. Novi Sad, Republic of Serbia, 1983). Serbian trumpeter. Beginning at age six, Nenad learned to play trumpet and horn from his father, Dubravko Marković. He won the Yugoslavian National Competition several times as well as winning a contest in France in 1995, and he finished third in the 1999 Pilisvörösvar International competition in Hungary. In 2000, Nenad won the audition for a position in the Youth World Orchestra that toured extensively.

Beginning in 2001, he studied with Reinhold Friedrich (trumpet), Edward Tarr (Baroque trumpet), and Gérard Buquet (chamber music) at the State Conservatory of Music in Karlsruhe, Germany. He won several solo competitions including First Prize and the Audience Prize at the Tromp Musiek Biennale in Eindhoven, the Netherlands (2002). Although Nenad is only nineteen years old, he is an unbelievable appearance on the trumpet horizon. He learned the entire program…in just six months, he is totally calm and plays anything! says Edward Tarr.

Marković specializes in contemporary, improvised, and electronic music, and performs with Ensemble Modern, Musikfabrik NRW, Ensemble Phoenix Basel, and Grenzenlos.

Bibl.: "Nenad Marković" (http://grenzenluschina.wordpress.com/concert-in-foshan-china); http://www.trumpetguild.org/news/news03/muziek.htm; "Nenad Marković" (www.edenhell.net/en/persons/detail/76508).

Markowitz, Irving ("Marky") (b. Washington, D.C., Dec. 11, 1923; d. New York, New York, Nov. 11, 1986). American trumpeter. Markowitz played with numerous big bands including those of Charlie Spivak (1942-43), Jimmy Dorsey (1943-44), Boyd Raeburn (1944-45), Woody Herman (First Herd in 1946 and Second Herd in 1948-49), and Buddy Rich (1946-47).

During the 1950s and until his death in 1986, Markowitz worked in New York City and Washington, D.C. as a freelance musician, performing and recording with such musicians as Gene Krupa, André Kostelanetz, Stan Rubin (1959), Bill Potts (1959-60), Carmen McRae, James Moody (1960), Buddy Rich (1960), Lalo Schifrin (1964), Dizzy Gillespie, Art Farmer, Paul Desmond, Al Cohn, Herbie Mann (1966), Bill Potts (1967), Marvin Stamm (1968), Doc Severinsen, Maynard Ferguson, George Russell, Bill Evans, Burt Bacharach, Grover Washington (1972), Joe Thomas (1975), and an All-Star Trumpet Spectacular. His own solo album for the Famous Door label is titled Marky Vibes (1976). He is also prominently featured on an album with Sonny Berman titled Beautiful Jewish Music (1946, Onyx). He was a good bop soloist; Bernie Glow said of him, he's the best section trumpet player I've ever played with.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marquardt [Marquart, Markvardt], August K. (fl. Moscow, 1881-1915). Russian cornetist, trumpeter, and conductor. Probably of German origin, Marquardt was a cornetist in the opera formation of the Bolshoi Theater Orchestra in Moscow from September 19, 1882 to 1895, and again in 1901 to 1903. He also played trumpet in the orchestra from 1895 to 1901, and then again from August 28, 1905 to 1911. He was conductor of the onstage band there from 1884 to 1906 or 1908. Together, with Franz Puttkammer in 1888, he formed the Bolshoi Theater Brass Quartet, perhaps the world's first chamber brass ensemble. (He left when Brandt took over, around 1895-1900.)

Marquardt temporarily retired from playing in 1903, but resumed playing in 1905. Between August 15, 1884 and c1906/08, he conducted the onstage band, a military ensemble. He taught at the Music School of the Moscow Philharmonic Society, and was considered to be an important teacher whose students included Max Schlossberg, Mikhail Adamov, Pyotr Eismont, and Ivan Mikhailovich Meshchanchuk [Chaban]. Willy ("Vasily") Brandt dedicated his Concert Piece No. 1, op. 11 to Marquardt.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Marquez, José Salvador ("Sal") Jr. (b. El Paso, Texas, Dec. 21, 1943). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Marquez grew up in Texas. He was influenced by the trumpet playing of Miles Davis and Freddie Hubbard. He studied music at Texas A&M University and North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas). Subsequently, he performed with the big bands of Woody Herman (1968), Buddy Rich (1969), Gerald Wilson (1970), Louie Bellson (1971), Dee Barton, and the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra (1971). He moved to Los Angeles in 1969 and played in various studios, performing on the soundtracks for films such as The Fabulous Baker Boys, Havana, and Hudson Hawk.

Marquez is best known for his association with the Beach Boys (1971-72), Frank Zappa, Gregg Allman, The Crusaders (1985-86), and other groups, all of which he recorded with (anonymously). He also performed and recorded with Dave Grusin of GRP Records, which produced one solo album with Marquez titled One for Dewey, and a video of the GRP All-Star Big Band with Marquez and Arturo Sandoval (1992). Marquez was also a member of Branford Marsalis's short-lived The Tonight Show band starring Jay Leno. Marquez is also a talented singer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marriott, Thomas (b. Seattle, Washington, Dec. 16, 1975). American trumpeter. Marriott grew up in Seattle and studied trumpet with his grandfather. He attended the University of Washington where he studied with Floyd Standifer, Jay Thomas, and Roy Cummings, and later received lessons from Laurie Frink. He began his career playing with the Seattle Repertory Jazz Orchestra, Maria Schneider's Orchestra, and the Wirewalkers.

In 1999, Marriott won first prize in the fourth Carmine Caruso International Jazz Solo Trumpet Competition, after which he moved to New York City. He has performed at the Jazz Showcase in Chicago, as well as with Joe Locke, Maynard Ferguson's Big Bop Nouveau, Les Brown, Kenny Kirkland, Tito Puente, Rosemary Clooney, the Manhattan Transfer, the Brian Lynch Big Band, and the Chico O'Farrill Orchestra. With his brother David he leads the Marriott Jazz Quintet, which has made three CDs and is regarded as one of the best jazz formations in the Big Apple. He has been given the Golden Ear Award seven times, and has released numerous CDs including Individuation (Origin), Both Sides of the Fence, Crazy: The Music of Willie Nelson, Flexicon (Origin), East-West Trumpet Summit (with Ray Vega), Constraints and Liberations, and his highly successful Human Spirit.

Marriott has served on the board of governors of the Pacific Northwest Chapter of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, as well the board of directors of Earshot Jazz.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Thomas Marriott's official website: http://thomasmarriott.net.

Marrs, Dale (b. Ravenna, Nebraska, Sept. 12, 1944). American trumpeter. Marrs studied with Adolph Herseth while being a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, and earned a master of music degree under Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University. He also studied with Otto Finke in Frankfurt. Marrs has taught at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, and has played with the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra. From December of 1969 until 2007, he was principal trumpet of the Stuttgart Philharmonic Orchestra. He was also a member of the Edward Tarr Brass Ensemble (1972-78), and currently plays with the Stuttgart Brass Quartet that has recorded several CDs. He has performed and recorded with the Pfeiffer-Trompeten-Consort of Heidelberg.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marsala, Mario Salvatore ("Marty") (b. Chicago, Illinois, Apr. 2, 1909; d. Chicago, Illinois, Apr. 27, 1975). American trumpeter. Marsala was the younger brother of clarinetist Joe Marsala. Mario started playing drums and played in bands led by Red Feilen and Joe Bananas. He switched to trumpet in the late 1920s, and freelanced in Chicago.

Marsala moved to New York in 1936 to join his brother's band (1936, 1938-41) with which he recorded, in addition to recording with Tempo King 1936-37 (reissued on Timeless CBC 1-002). He also recorded with Bob Howard and led a band at Nick's (1941). He later joined Will Hudson's orchestra and toured with Chico Marx-Ben Pollack's band from 1942 to 1943.

After service in the US Army from 1944 to 1945, he freelanced and played with Joe Marsala, Miff Mole (1946), Tony Parenti (late 1946), and others. He moved to San Francisco in 1955 and played and recorded with Earl Hines and Kid Ory (1958-59), as well as leading his own bands in San Francisco and Chicago.

Marsala became less active during the 1960s due to health problems. He retired in 1968, having never led a record date of his own. He can, however, be heard on recordings with Earl Hines (Storyville), Joe Marsala (Classics), and Eddie Condon (Commodore).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Marsalis, Wynton [Learson] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Oct. 18, 1961). American trumpeter and composer. With the exception of Louis Armstrong, no trumpeter in history has become more famous to the public than Wynton Marsalis. A brilliant technician in both classical music and jazz, he became a controversial figure due to his intolerance of the inability of classically trained white musicians to play jazz, and more recently for his criticism of avant-garde jazz, yet remains the undisputed genius of the trumpet.

Marsalis comes from a musical family. Born as the second of six sons to Delores Ferdinand and Ellis Marsalis, a prominent New Orleans jazz pianist, Wynton was named after pianist Wynton Kelly. His older brother Branford is a prominent jazz saxophonist, and younger brothers Delfeayo and Jason play trombone and drums, respectively. When Wynton was six years old, Ellis was playing with the famed trumpeter Al Hirt. Hirt gave Wynton his first trumpet, and by age eight Wynton was playing briefly in Danny Barker's Fairview Baptist Church Band. He improved rapidly on the trumpet, and from the age of twelve learned classical and/or jazz music under Ron Benko, John Longo (1973-75), John Fernandez, Norman Smith, Georges Jansen, and William Fielder.

Marsalis attended Benjamin Franklin High School in New Orleans and became a member of the New Orleans Symphony Brass Quintet and the New Orleans Community Concert Band as a teenager. He was selected to perform Haydn's Trumpet Concerto with the New Orleans Philharmonic at the age of fourteen, and two years later he played Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 with the Brooklyn Philharmonic. He also played in local R&B and funk groups, and later attended the New Orleans Center for the Performing Arts and the Tanglewood Music Center of the Boston Symphony Orchestra where he studied with Roger Voisin.

A full scholarship to The Juilliard School brought Marsalis to New York in 1979 where he studied with William Vacchiano, principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic. In the same year, he joined Art Blakey's big band and made his recording debut. From 1980 to 1981, and again in 1982, Marsalis was a member of Blakey's Jazz Messengers. He toured with Herbie Hancock, Ron Carter, and Tony Williams from 1980 to 1981 and soon left school because of his busy schedule, touring again with Hancock in 1983. That same year, Marsalis was featured on a nationally televised concert with the Boston Pops.

Marsalis's career took a gigantic jump forward in 1983. He released two recordings on the Columbia label, Classical Trumpet Concertos (music of Haydn, Hummel, and L. Mozart) and Think of One (his first solo jazz recording). Both LPs won Grammy Awards, making him the first artist in history to win a Grammy in both classical and jazz categories during the same year. Fame grew rapidly, and Columbia promoted the twenty-two-year-old trumpeter so much that Miles Davis, who had been with Columbia for decades, quit the label.

Wynton formed his jazz quintet with brother Branford and elected to disregard the current trend of electronically enhanced music, choosing acoustic music in the style of early jazz. The group toured extensively and Marsalis was signed with Columbia Artists Management as a classical and jazz artist. He was engaged as a soloist with numerous symphony orchestras, performing classical concertos on the first half of programs, and jazz on the second half. His frustration with classically trained musicians' attempts to play swing music, and the lack of black musicians in American symphony orchestras sometimes caused him to lash out during rehearsals, criticizing their lack of versatility. Within a few years, Marsalis stopped performing as a guest classical soloist and elected to perform jazz concerts exclusively.

By the mid 1980s, Marsalis was famous throughout the world. He continued to release several albums each year in both jazz and classical, earning several more Grammy Awards. His jazz playing was similar to that of Freddie Hubbard and Miles Davis, and he was often criticized for copying other artists. When Branford left the group in 1985 to join Sting, Wynton eventually formed (by 1988) a septet. It was then that he formed his own musical style based on older New Orleans music. He became engrossed in certain aspects of jazz history and was an outspoken critic against avant-garde jazz. When Miles Davis turned to a fusion-based jazz in the late 1970s, Marsalis openly criticized his performances, claiming that Davis did not play true jazz. When Marsalis attended one of Davis's concerts in New York, he came on stage uninvited and attempted to play. Davis became angry and threw Marsalis out of the building.

Wynton Marsalis became a cofounder of Jazz at Lincoln Center in 1987. It was at about this time that he began composing large-scale jazz works. His compositions were based on the style of Duke Ellington. His oratorio, Blood on the Fields (1994) won a Pulitzer Prize in 1997. It was followed in 1999 by All Rise. They embrace all kinds of musical elements, of which jazz is only one. Soon, commissions came from leading dance companies such as Garth Fagan Dance, New York City Ballet, American Ballet, and the American Dance Theater. His septet toured worldwide through 1995, and he became director of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra. However, his $866,686 annual LCJO salary caused a great deal of controversy from critics who felt that nonprofit organizations were sometimes overpaying celebrity figureheads. In recent years, Marsalis's works have become more politically involved, questioning the unfinished business of the civil rights movement.

Marsalis's awards are many. He has received eight Grammy Awards, the Grand Prix du Disque of the Charles Cros Academy, the Edison Award of the Netherlands, honorary doctorates from Harvard University and Northwestern University, and has been elected an honorary member of the Royal Academy of Music in Britain. He has sold over five million recordings, and is the subject of an upcoming movie for United Artists with Will Smith playing the title role. He made the cover of Time magazine on October 22, 1990 and is on the Advisory Committee of the Board of Directors of the Jazz Foundation of America.

After Hurricane Katrina, Marsalis became a national spokesman for New Orleans tourism. He helped raise over three million dollars for the Higher Ground Campaign. He also helped raise public awareness of human rights issues in Burma. Musical America magazine named him the 2004 "Musician of the Year."

Although he has never married, Marsalis has two sons with Candice Stanley, and one son with Victoria Rowell. He has released nearly one hundred albums, and is today's most visible trumpet artist. Among his many original compositions are Citi Movement, In This House On This Morning, At the Octoroon Balls, Jump Start, A Fiddler's Tale, and All Rise.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Wynton Marsalis" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom with an interview; Oct. 2008).

Color and black and white photos by Vera Olcott, courtesy of the International Trumpet Guild.

Marshall, John [Thomas] (b. Wantagh, New York, May 22, 1952). American trumpeter. Marshall's father was a grade school music teacher in Merrick, Long Island, New York. The family lived in Wantagh until John was eight, at which time they moved to Lloyd Harbor (Long Island, NY). John began playing the trumpet at age nine, and studied with Ned Mahoney beginning at age eleven. He graduated from Cold Spring Harbor High School in 1970 where he played in the school's big band under Clem DeRosa.

Marshall moved to New York City in 1971 and began performing in various rhythm and blues bands. Between 1971 and 1991, he performed, toured, and/or recorded with the bands of Buddy Rich (1976), Lionel Hampton (1979-82), Mel Lewis, Gerry Mulligan, Dizzy Gillespie, George Coleman, Ornette Coleman, Buck Clayton, Mario Bauzá, and many others. From 1988 to 1991, he led The Bopera House quintet. He also studied with Carmine Caruso, and took jazz lessons from Lonnie Hillyer.

Marshall moved to Cologne, Germany, in January of 1992 to join the renowned West German Broadcasting (WDR) Big Band as lead trumpet, and continues to be one of its most prominently featured soloists. He has a teaching position at the Musikhochschule there. He also leads a European quintet with the Dutch tenor saxophonist Ferdinand Povel, and returns regularly to New York to record and perform (often at Small's). He has released numerous CDs for the VSOP, Mons, Organic Music, Blue Jack Jazz, and Sunnyside/BHM labels, including The Bopera House, Keep On Keepin' On, Theme of No Repeat, Frisky, For All We Know, Blue Lights, Marshall Arts, Live At Le Pirate, Waltz For Worms, and Tail Wind. He is also active as a composer.

Marshall met his wife, Claudine, in 1982. His hobbies include swimming.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); John Marshall's official website: www.marshallbop.com; personal interview, Dec. 8, 2011.

Photos by Zbigniew Lewandowski

Marshall, Richard B[rian] (b. Doncaster, south Yorkshire, England, Feb. 23, 1976). British cornetist. Marshall's father played flugelhorn, and Richard began playing cornet at age nine; his teacher was Ken Johnson. He played third cornet with the Hatfield Colliery Band and Askern Colliery Band, and at age fifteen became principal cornet of the Wallace Arnold Band. In 1996, he was named principal cornet of the Grimethorpe Colliery RJB Band. After ten years with the Grimethorpe organization, he moved to the same position with the world-famous Black Dyke Band in January of 2006. As a cornet soloist, he has performed in England, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Hong Kong, Canada, the United States, and several European countries.

Marshall released his first solo CD in 1999, The Débutante. Other CDs followed: Blaze (2005), Eminence (2007), The Cornet Heritage Collection, Vol. 1 (2010), and Tribute. Of these, Blaze and Eminence were awarded the title "Solo CD of the Year." He teaches cornet at the Royal Welsh Northern College of Music, Birmingham Conservatory, and the Royal Welch College of Music and Drama. He also coaches young cornetists for the National Youth Brass Band of Great Britain, the National Children's Brass Band of Great Britain, the Yorkshire Youth Brass Band, and the International Brass Band Summer School. In 2006, the Mount Charles Youth Band of Cornwall, coached by him, won two national prizes.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Richard Marshall's official website: www.richardmarshall.info/about.php.

Marterie [Martire], Ralph (b. Accerra, Italy, Dec. 24, 1914; d. Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 8, 1978). Italian trumpeter. Having been born in Italy near Naples, Ralph moved with the Martire family moved to Chicago when he was a boy. His father joined the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, and Ralph took up the trumpet, playing with Dan Russo's Oride Orchestra while in his teens. After high school, he became a staff musician for NBC Radio in Chicago. When the United States became involved in World War II, he joined the navy and became the leader of a fleet band. After his service years, he returned to Chicago and worked as a staff musician for ABC Radio.

Ralph Americanized his name to Marterie in the mid 1940s and formed his own dance band in 1949. He signed a contract with Mercury Records and recorded nineteen albums. Although big band music was not in vogue during the 1950s, Marterie's Harry James-like ballads and novelty tunes were popular among audiences. He had twelve hit songs that kept his band working all sorts of dates, mainly throughout the Midwest states. He later recorded five albums for United Artists and two albums for Musicor. Marterie and his orchestra made short films for Universal Pictures between 1947 and 1951.

Marterie toured until his death in 1978 when one night he collapsed after a concert. He was not considered to be a true jazz player, but his popularity was something like that of Lawrence Welk, André Kostelanetz, and Percy Faith. His sweet playing style was reminiscent of Charlie Spivak. He died at the age of sixty-three.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Ralph Marterie" (www.spaceagepop.com); "Ralph Marterie Biography" (http://new.music.yahoo.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Martin, Bobby (b. Long Branch, New Jersey, May 15, 1903; d. Aug. 28, 2001). American trumpeter and bandleader. As a child, Bobby Martin played with trumpeter June Clark and Sonny Greer. From 1925-31, he was a member of Sam Wooding's orchestra that toured the U.S., Europe, and Russia. When the tour was over, Martin decided to stay in Europe, and soon played with Willie Lewis (1932-36). With Lewis, he was a featured soloist and recording artist. Being a good technician, he gave advice to Tommy Ladnier.

Towards the outbreak of World War II, Martin returned to the United States (1936), settling in New York City where he freelanced for a few years. He formed his own band and soon returned to Europe (1937-39). Unfortunately, the Bobby Martin Orchestra did not make many recordings during this period, but he can be seen in the film, L'Alibi, made in France (1937). Afterwards, he and his band returned to New York, only occasionally visiting Europe after that.

Martin opened his own nightclub around 1940. However, an unfortunate incident occurred when his orchestra was performing in the Netherlands a few years later. The building where they were performing burned to the ground, destroying all of his band arrangements. He managed to finish the tour, and struggled to keep his enthusiasm after they returned home. In 1944, Martin quit music for good and took over the family business.

Very little is known of Bobby Martin after he left music. He was married to Thelma Minor, a singer. He passed away at the age of ninety-seven.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Bobby Martin" (www.answers.com); "Bobby Martin" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Photo: Berlin, 1925 - Bobby Martin standing.

Martin, Christopher ("Chris") (b. Marietta, Georgia, July 17, 1975). American trumpeter. Martin grew up in Marietta, Georgia. He took his initial trumpet lessons from his father, Freddy Martin, a band director. His mother Lynda sings in the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Chorus. As a teen, Martin was involved in drum and bugle corps, and studied with Larry Black and James Thompson of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. Martin was selected to participate in the Atlanta Symphony Youth Orchestra.

Martin attended the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Barbara Butler and Charles Geyer, earning a bachelor's degree in 1997. He then pursued a graduate degree at Eastman, but his schooling was interrupted when he won the position of associate principal trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Martin, a male model in his spare time, had a humorous first meeting with principal trumpeter David Bilger. As told by Bilger, On the first day of rehearsal starting the 1998-99 season, I was having a bad day. My wife and I were arguing over money problems, and I hastily left the house for rehearsal. As luck would have it, my car broke down on the way to the hall. I arrived disheveled and in a bad mood. Then, Chris, who had been at a modeling photo shoot just prior to rehearsal, walked in and sat down next to me. He was wearing a very expensive designer suit (no time to change clothes before rehearsal) and was accompanied by his gorgeous girlfriend (a bikini model). I immediately hated him!

After three years in Philadelphia, Martin became the principal of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, replacing his former mentor James Thompson. Martin played with the ASO from 2001 until 2005 when he assumed duties as principal of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. He knew that replacing the legendary Adolph "Bud" Herseth (who was principal of the CSO for fifty-three years) would be a huge challenge, but he has been very successful meeting the many demands of the job.

Martin has taught as an adjunct professor at Temple University in Philadelphia, Emory University in Atlanta, and Northwestern University in Evanston. He has served as a guest principal with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Seattle Symphony, Grand Teton Music Festival, and the Saito Kinen Festival. He has presented recitals at conferences of the International Trumpet Guild, and is an active soloist with orchestras and wind ensembles.

Martin is an avid runner who has competed in several marathons. His younger brother Michael (b. c1986) is also a trumpeter who has performed as a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago and won a position in the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 2010.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Royal, Jason W. "The Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2006); "Christopher Martin" (http://cso.org).

Photos credit (also, see color section): Vera H. Olcott. Used by permission of the International Trumpet Guild.

Martínez [Villanueva], Isidro (b. near Juiquilpan, Michoacán, Mexico, Apr. 4, 1960). Mexican trumpeter. Beginning at age ten, Martínez studied with Manuel Morales at the Fray Miguel de Bolonia music school in Chapala, Jalisco. He also studied at the School of Music at the University of Guadalajara (1976-78) and the Instituto de Estudios Superiores del SUTM (1979-81).

Since 1976, Martnez has participated in many popular groups including Banda Sinfónica Municipal and Banda del Estado in Jalisco. From 1979 to 1981, he also formed popular music groups in Mexico City.

Martínez has done a great deal of studio playing in Mexico City since 1981, and has performed in Central America, South America, Europe, and Japan. He is director of the Penta Brass Quintet, and is a soloist with fantastic technical abilities. His solo CDs include Homenaje a Rafael Méndez (self-produced).

Bibl.: "Notes" to CD recording, Homenaje a Rafael Méndez (self-produced).

Martínez, José de Juan (fl. 1825-1885). Spanish trumpeter. He began his career in the Royal Guards' band, and played in the Madrid Opera orchestra. From 1848 to 1882, he was first an extra trumpeter, and then a valve cornetist in the orchestra of the Chapel Royal. When the Madrid Royal Conservatory was established in 1830, Martínez was appointed professor of trumpet, teaching the circular hand-stopped trumpet, E-flat fanfare trumpet, keyed trumpet, and later, even the cornet à pistons. In that same year, he completed his Metodo de Clarin (Method for Trumpet), basically a method for natural (valveless) trumpet that only on the last two pages includes instructions for hand-stopping techniques with the circular (natural) trumpet. The method is, to say the least, heavily indebted to David Buhl's Méthode de la trompette (Paris 1825).

Martínez also became the director of the Royal Alabardo Guards' band in 1842. He was one of the first important teachers of the nineteenth century, and taught at the conservatory for fifty-three years until his retirement in 1885.

Bibl.: Cassone, Gabriele (Eng. Trans Tom Dambly). The Trumpet Book (Zecchini Editore); Dudgeon, Ralph T. The Keyed Bugle (Second Edition) (Scarecrow Press); Kenyon de Pascual, Beryl. "José de Juan Martínez's tutor for the circular hand-stopped trumpet (1830)," Brass Bulletin 57 (1/1987), 50-65; Kenyon de Pascual, Beryl. José de Juan Martínez, Metodo de Clarin (1830), facsimile edition (Real Conservatorio Superior de Música de Madrid, 1990).

Martínez [Domínguez], Miguel (b. Celaya, Guanajuato, Mexico Sept. 29, 1921). Mexican trumpeter, composer, arranger, and bandleader. Martínez is considered to be one of the most important and influential of all mariachi musicians.

Martínez lived the first four years of his life in the small town of Celaya before his family moved permanently to urban Mexico City. He initially heard mariachi music on the radio as a child, at a time when the cornet or trumpet was a novel and controversial addition to what was traditionally a string genre. Those from Jalisco and the surrounding states in which this music originated tended to be traditionalists in this respect, and generally rejected the presence of brass instruments in a mariachi context. By contrast, Mexico City's cosmopolitan audience tended to be more open to such innovation, and thanks in great part to regular radio broadcasts over powerful station XEW by Mariachi Tapatío de José Marmolejo featuring the trumpet of Jesús Salazar, this instrument slowly gained a foothold in the mariachi tradition.

The first mariachi Martínez saw in person was a humble strolling ensemble that played in a cantina near his home. Noting the boy's inordinate fascination with the music, the leader half-jokingly suggested to young Miguel that he learn to play an instrument so he could join them. When the boy asked what instrument, the leader suggested he learn the trumpet, since that was the latest trend in mariachi music and their group did not have one. After convincing his mother to buy him a used trumpet at a pawnshop, Martínez learned the basic scales from a neighborhood saxophone player and proceeded to learn popular melodies off the radio on his own.

About six months later, young Martínez made what he describes as his "disastrous debut" with the same street band that played near his home. Of the eight songs I knew, only three were in the right key! he recalls. Nonetheless, he persevered and became a member of that group, which eventually moved its base to Plaza Garibaldi, the downtown square that had become Mexico City's center of mariachi activity. Of the five mariachi ensembles that worked outdoors in that plaza during the late 1930s, only two featured a trumpet, and those were the two that worked the least. Even when they were hired, it was common in those days for a mariachi customer to request that the trumpeter sit out and not play. Undiscouraged, the adolescent Martínez continued to practice incessantly, and slowly worked his way up to better ensembles.

In late 1942, Silvestre Vargas, leader of Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlán, an ensemble known today as the most influential group in the history of mariachi music, invited twenty-one-year-old Martínez to an audition at radio station XEW. Although Vargas did not want his mariachi to deviate from the traditional instrumentation, pressure from the radio station and the public compelled him to consider adding a trumpet player to his all-string band. Martínez passed the audition, and for the greater part of the next three decades remained with Mariachi Vargas, where he defined the standard for mariachi solo trumpet performance through thousands of recordings and over 130 films that have rarely, if ever, been equaled.

Early in his career, Martínez became famous for his magnificent tone, extraordinary expressiveness, flawless musicianship, and great versatility. His improvised solos and melodic counterpoint behind celebrity singers such as Jorge Negrete, Pedro Infante, Miguel Aceves Mejía, Lola Beltrán, Amalia Mendoza, and José Alfredo Jiménez became a trademark of what is often referred to today as the golden era of mariachi music.

In 1944, a young, classically trained violinist named Rubén Fuentes joined Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlán. Fuentes convinced Martínez he should learn to read music, and soon afterward the aspiring trumpeter enrolled in the Escuela Libre de Música, where he studied with Luis Fonseca, principal trumpet for the Orquesta Sinfónica Nacional. Martínez only stayed at that school for a year, but he continued studying privately with Fonseca for the better part of a decade. His teacher introduced him to the legendary Rafael Méndez, with whom he developed a lifelong friendship. Martínez thought Méndez was being excessively flattering when the virtuoso commented that he collected Martínez's recordings, but a subsequent visit to Méndez's Los Angeles home confirmed this to be true. Martínez dedicated his trumpet composition El Travieso Don Rafael to Méndez.

In a one-year hiatus from Mariachi Vargas in 1953, Martínez became a founding member of Mariachi México de Pepe Villa. In that group, he and second trumpeter Jesús Córdoba defined and popularized the trumpet duet that constitutes the standard mariachi instrumentation today. A year later, Martínez returned to Mariachi Vargas as solo trumpeter, where he continued to outdo his previous performances until he departed to form his own ensemble, Mariachi Tolteca de Miguel Martínez, which lasted from 1965 to 1970.

Martínez composed many instrumental pieces that are considered to be mariachi standards today, including polkas Café Colón, La Chuparrosa, Florecitas Mexicanas, Rosas de Mayo, Teatro Principal, and Las Cotorras; paso dobles Manuel Capetillo, Juan Silveti, and Curro Vénzor; and schottisches Azul Cielo and Tiempos

Aquellos. His rancheras, corridos, and boleros have been recorded by such popular singers as Antonio Aguilar, Charro Avitia, Emilio Gálvez, Pedro Infante, Amalia Mendoza, Lydia Mendoza, María de Lourdes, Gerardo Reyes, Javier Solís, Dora María, and Gilberto Valenzuela; as well as duets like Hermanas Huerta, Hermanas Padilla, Hermanos Záizar, Las Jilguerillas, Martín y Malena, and Los Dos Reales.

Although arranging was never more than a sideline for Martínez, the 1960 album Pasosdobles con el Mejor Mariachi del Mundo (RCA MKS-1294, CDM-3162), where he arranged eleven of the twelve selections, demonstrates his formidable arranging abilities. Although fewer than one hundred of Martínez's arrangements have been recorded, he has contributed a vast number of original trumpet parts to the arrangements of others. Furthermore, he recorded prolifically with trios, including Hermanos Martínez Gil, Trío Guayacán, and Los Panchos, and most of those recordings contain trumpet parts of his creation.

Since the mid 1940s, Martínez has toured the American continent and the Caribbean many times, and has performed in nearly twenty European countries as well as Indonesia, Japan, and Hong Kong. He has performed for innumerable celebrities and dignitaries around the world.

In 1947, Martínez married Virginia Estrada Córdoba (1927-99) with whom he had six children: Carmen (b. 1947), Miguel (1952-2000), Cecilia (b. 1955), Jesús (b. 1958), Alejandra (b. 1961), and Iván (b. 1969). In 2009, he married his second wife, María Guadalupe Vallejo, with whom he currently lives in Tlalnepantla, Estado de México, on the outskirts of Mexico City.

Since the 1990s, Martínez has been a frequent and popular guest at mariachi conferences, festivals, and workshops in the U.S. and Mexico, where he shares his knowledge and history with a new generation of mariachi musicians and enthusiasts. In 1994, he was inducted into the Mariachi Spectacular Hall of Fame in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and he has been the recipient of a large number of awards and distinctions. His recent autobiography, whose title translates to My Life, My Travels, My Adventures: Seven Decades in Mariachi Music, represents the first book-length biographical work to be published on a major mariachi figure.

Bibl.: Martínez, Miguel. Mi vida, mis viajes, mis vivencias: siete décadas en la música del mariachi. (México: Conaculta, 2012); personal communication with the book's author. Special thanks to Jonathan Clark for his help with this article.

Masacek, Edward (b. Chicago, Illinois, Nov. 15, 1895; d. Norridge, Illinois, Jan. 21, 1983). American trumpeter. Masacek began his career as cornet soloist with the US Army Band "Pershing's Own" in Washington, D.C. during and after World War I (1914-18). He joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1921, playing at times second and fourth trumpet, until he was dismissed in 1946 when Sidney Baker returned to his section position after serving in the military during World War II. In the summer of 1923, he had played principal trumpet in the Hollywood Bowl orchestra. Masacek then worked for NBC Radio in Chicago, earning nearly twice the salary as an announcer/disc jockey as he had in the CSO. He also taught band at Morton High School in Berwyn, Illinois, and gave private trumpet lessons. One of his students was Frank Kaderabek, who later became a member of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and Philadelphia Orchestra.

Bibl.: Crown, Thomas. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1902-1932" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete. (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mase, Raymond (b. Meriden, Connecticut, May 12, 1951). American trumpeter. Mase began learning to play the trumpet at age five from his father James, a self-employed businessman who was also a fine amateur trumpeter. As a teen, Raymond played in all sorts of groups including polka bands, orchestras, dance bands, and rock groups. During his high school years at Platt High School in Meriden, Connecticut, he studied with Roger Murtha (1966-69) and later with Armando Ghitalla at the New England Conservatory of Music (1969-73). While at NEC, he participated in a scholarship brass quintet, and learned to play the cornetto in an early music ensemble.

After graduating from NEC, Mase auditioned for, and joined the American Brass Quintet in New York City in 1973, with which he has been active ever since. He can be heard on over thirty-five albums with it, and is responsible for editing or arranging much of its early music repertoire. Many of his editions are published through Balquhidder Music, Medici Music Press, and Hickman Music Editions. Mase's early career included freelance work in Boston with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Opera, and in New York City, as a member of the American Symphony Orchestra, New York City Ballet Orchestra (1985), Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, Parnassus, Speculum Musicae, and the New York Cornet and Sacbut Ensemble.

Mase began teaching at The Juilliard School in 1987 and is now chairman of the brass department. He is a charter member of Summit Brass (since 1986) and has served on the board of directors of Chamber Music America. He taught at the North Carolina School of the Arts from 1977 to 2001, and has served on the faculties of the Manhattan School of Music, Hartt School of Music, and Brooklyn College Conservatory. He has performed and recorded with the New York Philharmonic, Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, Speculum Musicae, Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, Summit Brass, and Musica Sacra.

As a soloist, Mase has appeared with numerous orchestras including the Boston Pops, American Composers Orchestra, Aspen Festival Orchestra, Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, Waverly Consort, Czech Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra, Naumberg Orchestra, New York Virtuosi, Bethlehem Bach Orchestra, Denver Municipal Band, and the Moscow Soloists. He has released two solo CDs on Summit Records, Trumpet in Our Time and Trumpet Vocalise, as well as appearing as soloist on many other recordings of works by Hindemith, Sachse, Lazarof, Copland, Sampson, and others. He has recorded as soloist for DGG, Summit, Koch, Albany, Cambria, MHS, and Furious Artisans.

Mase began his association with the Aspen Music Festival in 1973 when he joined the American Brass Quintet, and began teaching students there in 1974. He has also taught at the Keystone Brass Institute and the Rafael Méndez Brass Institute as a member of Summit Brass. He and his wife Diana reside in Closter, New Jersey.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Morton, Paul. "Raymond Mase: Trumpet in Our Time" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2003); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Mar. 7, 2010.

Masekela, Hugh Ramapolo (b. Witbank, South Africa, Apr. 4, 1939). South African trumpeter, flugelhornist, composer, and vocalist. Although best known in South Africa, Masekela is a worldwide figure in music, especially for African jazz. His father was a health inspector and famous sculptor who personally knew many famous musicians. Raised primarily by his grandmother, Hugh learned to play the piano and sing at an early age. At age thirteen, he saw the Kirk Douglas movie, Young Man With A Horn (soundtrack played by Harry James), and was instantly attracted to the trumpet. A year later, the chaplain at his secondary school gave him two trumpets, one donated by Archbishop Trevor Huddleson, the other by Louis Armstrong (1955). Masekela soon played in the school's Huddleson Jazz Band. As a young professional in South Africa, Masekela performed with and cofounded the Merry Makers of Spring, Alfred Herbert's Jazz Revue, and Jazz Epistle, as well as accompanying singers in various jazz bands. In 1958, he toured Africa with the Manhattan Brothers.

Masekela and his future wife, folk singer Miriam Makeba, left South Africa in 1959 due to the deplorable political conditions of black citizens in their country. They emigrated to England where Masekela studied at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. Through some of Miriam's connections in America, Masekela was accepted into the Manhattan School of Music in New York (1960). He studied jazz there, graduating in 1964. Miriam and Hugh were married in 1964, but divorced in 1966.

Masekela toured with singer Harry Belafonte during the mid 1960s. He decided to shift his playing style towards pop music, and his 1968 hit recording of his composition, Grazing in the Grass, sold over four million copies. Now a popular African-jazz performer, Masekela toured with Paul Simon and other leading pop stars.

Masekela formed his own record label, Chisa, in 1970. The label merged with Blue Thumb Records in 1972. Some of Hugh Masekela's albums are Home (Columbia), Black to the Future (Columbia), Sixty (Columbia), Lasting Impressions of Ooga Booga (Polygram), Beaten' Around the Bush (Novus), Hope (World Triloka), Home is Where the Music Is (Blue Thumb), Trumpet Africaine (Mercury), Reconstruction (Chisa), Hugh Masekela and the Union of South Africa (Chisa), I Am Not Afraid (Chisa), Uptownship (Novus/RCA), Waiting for the Rain (Jive Africa), and Technobush (Jive Africa).

In the early 1970s, Masekela moved to Guinea, then Liberia, then Ghanda. He teamed up with the Ghandian band, Hedzoleh Soundz, performing a steady stream of concerts for five years. In 1975, he moved back to the U.S. where he recorded four albums for Casablanca Records. His unique blend of pop, disco, and soul prompted Herb Alpert to record two albums with him. He and his former wife (Miriam Makeba) performed a Christmas concert in 1980 at a stadium filled with 75,000 people.

In 1981, Masekela moved to Botswana, South Africa. He started the Botswana International School of Music with Dr. Khebi Mngoma. He also formed a band called Kalahari that toured England during the late 1980s. When he tried to return home a few months later, politics in South Africa caused him to be denied entrance into his home country because he had once lived in the United States. It wasn't until 1990 that President Nelson Mandela was able to lift Masekela's entrance restrictions, allowing the trumpeter to return home.

Masekela toured South Africa, becoming a superstar by the early 1990s. He signed with Columbia Records in 1995, and became colleagues with playwright, Mbongemi Ngema. Together, they produced a musical titled Sarafina! that was a huge hit when it was premiered in 1987. The musical toured South Africa, played at Lincoln Center in New York, was given a long run on Broadway, and toured Europe. It was nominated for a Tony Award in 1988. Other awards given to Masekela include a 2007 African Music Legend award and the International Award of the Year from the BBC Radio Jazz Awards (2002), and the South Africa National Order gave Masekela the Order of Ikhamange in 2010.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Hugh Masekela" (www.answers.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Hugh Masekela" (www.dougpayne.com/hmbio/htm).

Mason, David (b. London, England, Apr. 2, 1926; d. London, England, Apr. 29, 2011). British trumpeter. Mason, who began to play the trumpet at age eleven, was educated at the Christ's Hospital and Royal College of Music in London where he studied with Ernest Hall. From the age of sixteen to twenty-one, he had many playing opportunities when older trumpeters went into military service at the outset of World War II. At the time, he was the youngest member of the National Symphony Orchestra. When he reached the age of military service, his education at the Royal College was interrupted, and he joined the Scots Guards as a member of their band.

In July 1944, after military service, Mason received his diploma in trumpet. He then entered the Royal Opera House orchestra, later playing with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (seven years) where he eventually became principal trumpet. He then moved to the Philharmonia, where he remained for most of the rest of his orchestral career. He also played with the Covent Garden Orchestra. He was active as a studio musician, and played on several movie soundtracks including The Big Country starring Gregory Peck.

Mason is perhaps best known for his piccolo trumpet playing in the hit recording, Penny Lane, made by The Beatles on January 17, 1967. He was invited to participate in this recording after a member of the group (Paul McCartney) heard one of his performances of Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 with the English Chamber Orchestra. Mason later played on other hit songs by The Beatles, including All You Need Is Love.

Mason was a marvelous oratorio player and soloist. He recorded Handel's The Trumpet Shall Sound, as well as other similar works many times. He played the solo flugelhorn part in the premiere of Ralph Vaughan Williams's Symphony No. 9 in 1958. He taught at the Royal College of Music in London from 1970 to 1998. There, a David Mason Prize for orchestral trumpet playing has been established.

David Mason passed away at the age of eighty-five after a brief struggle with leukemia. He left behind his wife Rachel, son Nigel, and daughter Susan.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "David Mason" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "David Mason" (obituary, The London Times, May 7, 2011).

Mason, Philip ("Phil") Anthony (b. Kentish Town [near London], England, Apr. 10, 1940). British cornetist and trumpeter. Mason began playing trumpet at age sixteen, and cornet a few years later; this has remained his principal instrument. He is self-taught. He toured and recorded with various bands in Dublin, Ireland, between 1960 and 1964, the New Sedalia Jazz Band, Eric Silk's Southern Jazz Band (London, 1965-70), Max Collie's Rhythm Aces (1970-83 and 1985-92), and Pete Allen's Jazz band (1983-85).

A great early New Orleans-style cornet and trumpet player, Mason founded Phil Mason's New Orleans All-Stars in 1992, a group that has gained world popularity and released several recordings including Here's To You (Lake), You Do Something To Me (GHB), Phil Mason's New Orleans All-Stars with Christine Tyrell (Lake), Phil Mason's New Orleans All-Stars: West Indies Blues (Lake), and On the Road Again (Lake).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mason, Rod (b. Plymouth, England, Sept. 28, 1940). British cornetist and bandleader. Mason's first professional playing experience was with his father, Frank "Pops" Mason, a drummer, and with Cy Laurie. A skilled traditional jazz player who was influenced by the early recordings of Louis Armstrong and King Oliver, Mason eventually worked with musicians such as Monty Sunshine (1962-66), Acker Bilk (1970-71), Dutch Swing College Band (early to mid 1980s), Chris Barber, Trummy Young, and Teddy Wilson.

Mason formed his own group, Rod Mason and His Hot Five, during the early 1970s. He also co-led the Rod Mason-Ian Wheeler Band, and in 1988 re-established the Savannah Orchestra, with which his father had performed in 1928-31. Among his many albums are Good Companions (Black Lion), After Hours (Black Lion), Rod Mason and His Hot Five (Timeless), and Rod Mason's Hot Music (Timeless). His wife Ingrid serves as his manager.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Rod Mason's official website: www.rod.mason.com.

Masseurs, Peter (b. Halsteren, West Brabant, Holland, July 24, 1944). Dutch trumpeter. Masseurs entered the local fanfare group at age twelve, playing flugelhorn and cornet and also learning to play the violin. From the age of fifteen, he played with a dance band every weekend. Two years later, he attended the Academy of Music in Antwerp, Belgium, and while still a student joined the Dutch Band of the Marine in 1963. After his six-year contract in the military, he became principal trumpet of the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orch-estra in 1970. He was named principal of the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra in 1982, but is now retired.

Masseurs taught since 1972 at the Conservatory of Den Haag, then of Rotterdam, and finally at the Conservatory of Amsterdam until 2005. He has been an active soloist, and has released the CDs, Soloists of the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra and Three Concertos for a New Century, the latter including a live performance of the Concerto for Flugelhorn by Willem Jeths (commissioned and premiered by the Concertgebouw orchestra). Masseurs has also been a member of the ASKO-Schönberg Ensemble, Viotta Ensemble, Amsterdam Bach Soloists, Ebony Band, Netherlands Wind Ensemble, RCO Brass Ensemble (with Frits Damrow, trumpet), Brassband Vinkeveen conducted by Danny Oosterman, and the Hepworth Brass Band.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Peter Masseurs" (http://procustom.yamaha-europe.com/trumpet/en/artists.php?id=8).

Massey, Cal[vin] ("Folks") (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Jan. 11, 1928; d. Brooklyn, New York, Oct. 25, 1972). American trumpeter, composer, and arranger. As a boy, Massey loved his trumpet so much that he slept next to it in bed at night. His trumpet teacher was Freddie Webster. He developed a knack for arranging and composing jazz charts during his teens, and was soon arranging and writing for several name big bands. As a trumpeter, he played with the big bands of Jay McShann (c1944), Jimmy Heath, and Billie Holiday (1952). He made his first recording in 1953 and one LP album as leader in 1961. From 1970 to 1972, he was director of the ROMAS Big Band in New York City.

As a composer, Massey's hits include Fiesta, The Damned Don't Cry, Bakai, Assunta Father and Son, Message from Trane, and Cry of My People, compositions that were often performed and recorded by jazz greats such as Billie Holiday, B.B. King, Lee Morgan, Philly Joe Jones, Archie Shepp, Charlie Parker, Freddie Hubbard, George Shearing, Eddie Vinson, John Coltrane, McCoy Tyner, and Jackie McLean. His last composition was the musical, Lady Day: A Musical Tragedy.

Massey was an important musician in the New York-Philadelphia area. He became friends with many of the leading jazz musicians, whom he introduced to others to form significant artistic relationships. During the 1960s, he held several benefit concerts for the Black Panthers.

Massey died of a heart attack at age forty-four. He left behind a wife and three children. One of his sons, Zane Massey, is a gifted sax player.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Cal Massey" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cal_Massey).

Masters, Edward L. (b. Charleston, South Carolina, Nov. 29, 1915; d. Sun City West, Arizona, June 8, 1999). American cornetist. Masters began studying the piano at the age of five, and at age eleven began playing the cornet and trumpet. Masters studied the cornet with Carl H. Metz in Charleston, South Carolina, as well as with Herbert L. Clarke. He also studied the trumpet at Catholic University of America (1946 to 1953), the Peabody Conservatory, and the Eastman School of Music. He enlisted in the US Marine Corps on September 13, 1933 and played in the Parris Island Marine Corps Band. After auditioning for "The President's Own" Marine Band in 1937, he was accepted on March 15, 1938. His first solo performance with the band was two weeks later, performing on live radio for NBC.

Masters became principal cornet of the Marine Band in 1940, and held that position until his retirement as a Master Sergeant in 1954. It is estimated that he soloed with the band more than 1,500 times. From 1954 to 1955, Masters briefly taught in the public schools of Charleston, South Carolina, and from 1955 to 1957 was professor of trumpet and assistant conductor of the band and orchestra at the University of Kansas. From 1957 to 1968, he worked as director of bands and orchestras at Kent State University in Ohio, and served as chair of the school of music during his last three years there. In 1962, he recorded one LP album of cornet contest solos for the Selmer Company. In 1968, Masters accepted positions as chairman of the Division of Fine Arts, and director of the Alexander Center for the Creative Arts at Concord College in Athens, West Virginia. He held these positions for five years.

In 1979, Masters retired to Sun City West, Arizona (near Phoenix), where he died on June 8, 1999.

Bibl.: "Edward L. Masters." US Marine Band (www.marineband.usmc.mil); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mastroleo, Patrick ("Pat") (b. May 17, 1931; d. May 23, 2010). American trumpeter and bugler. Mastroleo was a Sgt. Major in the US Army Band "Pershing's Own" from 1956 to 1991. In February of 1968, he became chief bugler at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D.C. where he performed Taps hundreds of times, including for the funerals of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, and Johnson. He also sounded Taps on May 28, 1984 for the interment of the Vietnam Unknown, President Reagan presiding.

Mastroleo was an early teacher of Jon Lewis.

Mastroleo is buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

Bibl.: "Patrick Mastroleo" (http://tapsbugler.com/buglers-of-arlington-national-cemetery).

Matheny, Dmitri (b. Nashville, Tennessee, Dec. 25, 1965). American trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. Matheny grew up in Columbus, Georgia and began playing the piano at age five and switched to trumpet at age nine. He and his family moved to Tucson, Arizona when he was twelve, and at age sixteen he started his own jazz group sponsored by the Tucson Jazz Society. This early appreciation of nonprofit educational organizations led to his later involvement with numerous arts groups in San Francisco and Phoenix.

Matheny graduated from the Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan in 1984, and from the Berklee College of Music in Boston in 1989. In Boston, he played with the True Colors Big Band (1987-88), the Jazz Composers Alliance orchestra in 1989, and led the New Voice Jazz Sextet from 1985 to 1989. He studied trumpet in New York City with Carmine Caruso, and in 1988 with Art Farmer. It was at about this time that he made the decision to switch permanently to the flugelhorn, and to focus more on composing.

Matheny moved to San Francisco in 1989 where he formed the Dmitri Matheny Group, and worked as an administrator for the San Francisco Jazz Festival. Over the next twenty years, he worked with many top name artists and groups, including Frankie Avalon, James Moody, the Temptations, Max Roach, Billy Taylor, Bud Shank, the Four Tops, Wycliffe Gordon, Fabian, and The O'Jays. He appeared at dozens of national and international jazz festivals, and was a guest soloist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra and the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. In 1995, he signed with Monarch Records, releasing Red Reflections, Penumbra: The Moon Sessions, and Starlight Café. He switched to Papillon Records in 2000, releasing a successful string of CDs such as Santa's Got a Brand New Bag, Nocturne, The Snowcat, The Best of Dmitri Matheny, Grant & Matheny

(with pianist Darrell Grant), and Spiritu Sancto (his most ambitious composition). His compositions and recordings are on the soundtracks of several films, including Shade, Mary Paradox & Grace, Greenhorn Creek, and Trapped Ashes. He can also be heard as a sideman on over sixty CDs.

Matheny's contribution to jazz education has been outstanding. He has organized over five hundred free children's concerts, served as Director of Education, Director of Development, and Director of Corporate Sponsorships for SFJazz, a nonprofit organization. He was also the Assistant Education Director for the Thelonious Monk Institute Jazz Colony at Jazz Aspen Snowmass, and a former president of the Berklee College of Music Alumni Association. He is a former governor of the National Association of Recording Arts and Sciences (NARAS), and a former trustee of the San Francisco Jazz Organization.

Matheny is a former teacher at the Boston Center for the Arts, San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, and the Stanford Jazz Workshop, and was named Best New Artist in 1999 by Jazziz Magazine, and given the Outstanding Service to Jazz award by the International Association of Jazz Educators in 2000.

Matheny moved to Chandler, Arizona in metro Phoenix in 2009 where he is currently on the board of directors of Jazz in Arizona, a leading educational organization.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Dmitri Matheny" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dmitri_Matheny); Dmitri Matheny's official website: www.dmitrimatheny.com/fr_news.cfm).

Mathez, Jean-Pierre (b. Biel-Bienne, Switzerland, Mar. 3, 1938). Swiss trumpeter, author, and publisher. Mathez's father played cornet and violin. Jean-Pierre studied piano, then the trumpet (from 1949). He studied with Ernest Hall in London (1954) and with Paolo Longinotti in Geneva where he graduated from the Geneva Conservatory (1961). Mathez was attracted to the Tommy Ladnier-Mezz Mezzrow recordings, and began to play Dixieland music with the Swim Boys and the Chattanooga Jazz Band (both in 1953). He also played with Bruce Turner in London (1954) and his own quintet in 1956. He performed in theaters in Biel (1956-60) and with the Bern Symphony Orchestra (1960-61), and was principal trumpet of the Niedersächsiches Sinfonie-Orchester in Hanover (1961-62) and the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra (1962-67). He was also a teacher at the Lausanne Conservatory (1962) and the Fribourg Conservatory (1971) in Switzerland. Mathez was a founding member of the Edward Tarr Brass Ensemble in 1967, and a member of the Edward Tarr Trumpet Ensemble (1971-73). He premiered several avant-garde works for trumpet between 1971 and 1973 in his solo performances, "The Demilitarisation of the Trumpet," and with it was a featured artist at the Denver Trumpet Symposium (1973).

In 1969, Mathez founded the Bureau d'Information Musicale (BIM), which in 1971 began publishing (in three languages, later five) Brass Bulletin, a quarterly magazine for brass players. It had a substantial worldwide distribution until it ceased publication with No. 124 in 2003. He also established Editions BIM, a publishing company of music for all instruments. Mathez partnered with the Paris publisher, Alphonse Leduc in 1993 to form Diffusion BIM, which gained significant international distribution. He also purchased the American publisher, The Brass Press, from Stephen L. Glover in 1999.

Mathez has authored hundreds of articles, commissioned dozens of works, and published a complete biography of the great French cornetist, Jean-Baptiste [Laurent] Arban (1974). He also wrote his own Trumpet Method (1976, Universal). He has served as a judge at numerous international solo and ensemble competitions, and remains one of the world's champions of brass music.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mathie, Gordon (b. Toronto, Canada, July 9, 1924). American trumpeter. Mathie grew up in River Rouge, Michigan, and began playing the trumpet in seventh grade. After graduating from River Rouge High School, he attended the University of Michigan for one year, where he studied with William Revelli. He was drafted into the Navy during World War II, and was stationed in Beeville, Texas, where he played in a band; he was transferred to the Navy School of Music and shipped to Japan for a year. After military service, Mathie moved back to Michigan, but was not able to afford the tuition at the university. He decided to enroll at Wayne State University in Detroit to complete his bachelor of music education degree. He studied with Leonard B. Smith and Otto Kurt Schmeißer. He also met his wife at this time.

After graduation, Mathie taught in the public schools for two years, played with Sam Donahue in Detroit, and later joined the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (1951-53). Because the orchestra only had a twenty-six-week season, Mathie spent much of his time playing freelance, teaching at a Catholic school, and working towards graduate degrees and eventually earning an Ed.D. from the University of Illinois. He also performed and toured with the St. Louis Sinfonietta. Other ensembles with which he played include the Detroit Concert Band, Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, and Glenn Miller Orchestra.

Mathie taught high school band in Oxford, Michigan, for six years before accepting an instrumental music education and tuba/euphonium position (!) at the State University of New York in Potsdam. When Willard Musser retired from the trumpet position there, Mathie became his replacement and served as trumpet professor for twenty-three years (1959-82). He also taught at the Interlochen summer music camp in Michigan, where he worked with Gerard Schwarz and Mark Gould, two talented high school students at the time.

Mathie was on the Interim Steering Committee of the International Trumpet Guild in 1975. He became the first Treasurer of the ITG (1975-81) and later served as Vice President (1981-83) and board member (1989-97). He was among the first persons to receive the ITG's Award of Merit for outstanding lifetime achievement and service to the trumpet community. Other awards include the Arts Achievement Award from Wayne State University, SUNY Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching, and the Phi Mu Alpha Orphem Award. Mathie has performed with the Potsdam Brass Quintet (faculty) and the Brass Band of Columbus in Ohio. Since retiring, he has served as a guest professor, replacing six sabbatical leave positions (one semester each). His publications include The Trumpet Teacher's Guide (Manduca Press), Drudgeries (a series of five fundamentals books for all wind instruments published by Giardinelli) and numerous arrangements and transcriptions for trumpet ensemble and brass quintet. A tall and humorous man with a grandfatherly personality, Mathie was a personable teacher and colleague.

Bibl.: Irish, John. "Gordon Mathie: Trumpetus Emeritus" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2005); Keim, Friedel, Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Matthes, Alfred (b. Stössen, Kreis Weißenfels, Germany, Sept. 21, 1871; d. Berlin, Germany, Feb. 26, 1940). German trumpeter. Matthes was trained under the musicians of the Berlin Philharmonic. He became a "Chamber Virtuoso" of the Berlin Opera Orchestra, and taught at the Berlin Musikhochschule (replacing Carl Höhne) from 1923 to 1938 (receiving the title of professor in 1924); he was the teacher of Hans Bode and Paul Spörri. From 1910, he played in the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra. He recorded several trumpet solos, beginning as early as 1908, making him a pioneer in the recording industry. He also published a set of Richard Strauss orchestral excerpt books through Boosey & Hawkes of London. Although he was previously thought to have been the teacher of the famed pop trumpeter, Eddie Rosner, it is now known that Rosner attended the Berlin conservatory to study the violin, taking no lessons from Matthes.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. "European Cornet and Trumpet Soloists" (Notes to CD recording published by the International Trumpet Guild, 2004); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Maur, Mauro (b. Trieste, Italy, Aug. 8, 1958). Italian trumpeter and composer. Maur graduated from high school in the city of Trieste at age seventeen, and attended the Paris Conservatory where he studied with Pierre Thibaud. While a student, he won an audition to become principal trumpet of the Toulouse National "Capitole" Orchestra. He also developed a solo career by performing recitals with organ, chamber orchestra, and piano, and by winning a solo competition in Toulon (1981) and a trumpet prize at the Paris Conservatory (1982), as well as playing in Lille, Rome, and Naples. He also studied with Albert Calvayrac in Toulouse, and with Adolph Herseth, Vincent Cichowicz, and Arnold Jacobs in Chicago.

Maur was principal trumpet of the Orchestra of the Rome Opera House from 1985 to 2009. He has appeared on several popular television shows including the Maurizio Costanzo Show, Tappeto Volante, and La Notte di Marzullo, and has played radio programs. His playing can be heard on over one hundred film soundtracks, and on recordings for BMG Ariola, RCA, Sony/Columbia, and Denon. Dozens of composers have written works for, or dedicated to him.

Maur serves as trumpet coach of the Youth Orchestra of the Americas, has given master classes worldwide, and is a professor at the Santa Cecilia Conservatory in Rome. He received the Price Oder in 2008 for superior career achievement, and the "Sigillo Trecentesco," the city of Trieste's highest distinction. At the request of the President of the Council of Ministers, he was given the honorary distinction of Cavaliere dell'Ordine di Merito della Repubblica Italiana (2008).

Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Mauro Maur" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mauro_Maur).

Maury, [Jacques-] Hippolyte [Henri] (b. Saint-Mihiel, France, Jan. 2, 1834; d. Paris, France, Oct. 14, 1881). French cornetist. He won first prize for valve horn at the Paris Conservatoire in 1849, and later became famous as a cornet soloist. He was solo cornet first at the Théâtre Lyrique, then at the Opéra in Paris (1855 to 1880), and played solo flugelhorn in the Garde Republicaine, a noted band where he became coconductor.

Maury taught the military students at the Paris Conservatory (saxhorn, then cornet, from 1868 to 1870), and was Arban's assistant at the Paris Conservatory (1869-1873). He then succeeded him as a cornet teacher from May 1, 1874 to October 1, 1880. (Upon Maury's death, Arban again assumed duties as cornet professor at the conservatory.)

Maury's four Concertinos were written in 1875-78 as solos de concours for the annual cornet competitions at the conservatory while he taught there, and are still performed today. They require a high degree of playing ability, certainly equal in technical and musical difficulty to Arban's solos. His two most prominent students were Merri Franquin (1st Prize 1877) and Alexandre Petit (2nd Prize 1881).

Bibl.: Pierre, Constant. Le Conservatoire national de musique et declamation: Documents historiques et administratfs (Paris, Imprimerie Nationale 1900); Maury, Hippolyte. Concertinos 1—4 (A. O'Kelly; facsimile editions by Tromba Publications); Tarr, Edward H. "Arban (Joseph) Jean-Baptiste (Laurent)" (Oxford Music Online); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Maxwell, James Kenderick ("Jimmy") (b. Stockton, California, Jan. 9, 1917; d. Great Neck, New York, July 20, 2002). American trumpeter. Maxwell came from a musical family; his great grandfather was a cornetist and French horn player during the Spanish-American War, and his father was a trumpet player with the Paul Whiteman Orchestra. Maxwell began teaching himself to play the cornet at the age of four (on his great grandfather's old Buescher instrument). He played bassoon, and then trumpet in his high school band, and by age fifteen performed with Gil Evans and Vido Musso in the Briggs-Evans Orchestra. At age nineteen, he toured as lead trumpeter with Jimmy Dorsey's band (1936-37). His teachers were Herbert Clarke (1935-37), Lloyd Reese (1937-39), and Benny Baker (1940-48). He also received advice from Bunny Berigan.

Maxwell played lead with Jimmy Dorsey (1936), Eddie Barefield, Maxine Sullivan (1937), and caught the attention of Benny Goodman, who hired him from 1939 to 1943. Maxwell worked in the New York City studios from 1943. He also joined CBS (1943), played the Paul Whiteman Show, Perry Como Show (1945-63), and was an NBC staff member beginning in 1948: NBC Show (as lead trumpet with Ray Crisara), NBC Symphony (as fourth trumpet, 1948-49), and Band of America conducted by Paul Lavalle. Maxwell played with the Great Neck Symphony Orchestra (1953-55), and even substituted for Willie Cook in the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1956).

In 1961, Maxwell replaced Cat Anderson in the Duke Ellington Orchestra, and was asked by Goodman to participate in a tour of Russia (1962). Not wishing to go to Russia, Maxwell declined, but Goodman persuaded the US State Department to threaten to investigate his income tax returns. Maxwell eventually gave in, and agreed to go, as long as his son David could go with him. Goodman suggested that David set up the music stands and equipment for the orchestra's performances. However, after six weeks into the tour, Goodman presented a bill for David's expenses totaling $37 per day. Maxwell reminded Goodman of their agreement that his son could travel for free, but Goodman denied any such understanding. Outraged, Maxwell called his wife and asked her to send a telegram stating that there was a family emergency, and that he and David needed to return home immediately. The telegram read, Please come home right away. Cat died. Dog died. Everyone died.

After leaving the Goodman band, Maxwell became a CBS staff musician in New York. He played live television shows for Johnny Carson's Tonight Show (1963-73), and recorded the trumpet solos for the movie, The Godfather (1972). Suddenly, Jimmy Maxwell became a much sought-after lead trumpeter for Skinny Ennis, Lionel Hampton, Gerry Mulligan, Count Basie, Woody Herman, Oliver Nelson, Quincy Jones, and Duke Ellington. He also played in the NBC Symphony (1945-49) and the Great Neck (NY) Symphony (1952-55). Later, he was a member of the New York Repertoire Company and Chuck Israel's National Jazz Ensemble.

Maxwell did studio work for the rest of his career. He was also a fine bagpipes player, who occasionally played the instrument in studio work and in the annual St. Patrick's Day Parade in New York City. He began to play Dixieland music in his later years, and performed in Dick Sudhalter's New California Ramblers and other groups.

Heart problems around the age of eighty-two ended his career, although he managed to teach a few private lessons out of his home. His book, The First Trumpet (Charles Colin Publications, 1982) is highly regarded.

Bibl.: Davidson, Louis. Trumpet Profiles (self-published, 1975); Keepnews, Peter, "Jimmy Maxwell, 85, Lead Trumpeter with the Top Bands" (Obituary, The New York Times, July 25, 2002); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

May, William ("Billy") Edward (b. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Nov. 10, 1916; d. San Juan Capistrano, California, Jan. 22, 2004). American trumpeter, bandleader, composer, and arranger. May is considered to have been one of the very best arrangers during the big band era. He became interested in music as a child when his doctor recommended that he play the tuba to help his asthma, but he switched to trumpet a short time later. He made his professional debut in 1933 with Gene Olsen's Polish-American Orchestra, and also worked with the bands led by Al Howard, Lee River, and Barron Elliot until joining the Charlie Barnet organization in 1938. In addition to playing trumpet in the band, he wrote numerous arrangements including Barnet hits such as Cherokee, Lumby, and Leapin' at the Lincoln. When the Palomar Ballroom burned in October of 1939, destroying the complete library of the Barnet band, May recreated all the arrangements for the band.

May left Barnet in 1940 to join Glenn Miller's band. Miller also performed and recorded several hit arrangements of May's, including Take the "A" Train and Serenade in Blue. May's best known trumpet solo recordings with Miller were I Dreamt I Dwelt in Harlem (1941) and American Patrol (1942). As a Dixieland and swing trumpeter, he recorded with the Capitol Jazz Men (1943, with Jimmie Noone), Jack Teagarden & His Chicagoans (1943), Dave Barbour, Charles LaVere's Chicago Loopers (1944), and Willie Smith (1945). He can be heard on the Orchestra Wives film soundtrack (1942, dubbing George Montgomery on the screen).

May became famous for his arrangements for other bandleaders such as Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby, Peggy Lee, Hal McIntyre, Ella Fitzgerald, and Anita O'Day. When Miller joined the military and dissolved his civilian band in 1942, May wrote many of the arrangements for Miller's American Band of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, including the popular Jeep Jockey Jump. During the 1940s, May worked as a staff musician for NBC Studios in Hollywood, and later for Capitol Records. He also continued to write for several big bands, such as those of Les Brown, Alvino Rey, Woody Herman, and Nat "King" Cole (including Walkin', Walkin' My Baby Back Home, and Lean Baby). He formed his own big band in 1951. During the 1950s and '60s, May wrote for Vic Damone, Peggy Lee, Bobby Darin, George Shearing, Bing Crosby, Al Hirt, Louis Armstrong, Keely Smith, Jack Jones, Ella Fitzgerald, Hoagy Carmichael, Nancy Wilson, and Johnny Mercer. His most commercially viable collaborations, however, were with Frank Sinatra; Come Fly With Me, Come Dance With Me, Come Swing With Me, Swing Along With Me, and Softly As I Leave You are among their recorded hits.

In 1969, May was approached by Time-Life to produce a series of albums that resulted in The Swing Era (in fourteen volumes). He began spending most of his time writing for television jingles, TV shows, and films. He composed the themes for the television shows, Naked City, Red Skelton Show, Ozzie and Harriet, The Mod Squad, Emergency, Batman, Batgirl, Kraft Music Hall, and The Green Hornet (performed by Al Hirt). Movie scores included Johnny Cool, Tony Rome, Sergeants Three, Pennies from Heaven, Cocoon, and Cocoon: The Return. May also appeared in two films: Sun Valley Serenade (1941) and Orchestra Wives (1942).

Despite May's popularity as a writer and trumpeter, he was one of the heaviest drinkers in Hollywood. As a prank, he would often conduct his band by giving them a downbeat as he chugged from a vodka bottle. His fellow musicians were always surprised that his drinking never seemed to affect his work—on or off the stage. He also had a twenty-five-year smoking habit, but a heart operation in 1963 led him to give up smoking and drinking permanently. He gradually became less and less active during the 1980s and '90s.

May was inducted into the Big Band Hall of Fame and the Jazz Hall of Fame in 1988. He died from a heart attack in 2004 at the age of eighty-seven. He was survived by his second wife Doris, and daughters Cynthia, Laureen, Joannie, and Sandra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Billy May" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Billy May" (www.swingmusic.net/Big_Band_Jazz_History_Biography_Billy_May.html).

Mayfield, Irvin Jr. (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Sept. 7, 1977). American trumpeter. His father, Irvin Mayfield Sr., was an Army drill sergeant, boxer, and amateur trumpeter who drowned during Hurricane Katrina. His mother, Joyce Alsanders, was a schoolteacher. Mayfield began playing the trumpet at age nine and received his first lessons from his father. By age twelve, he was playing with the Algiers Brass Band in New Orleans. During high school, he attended the high school of the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, studying jazz under Clyde Kerr Jr. He also took classical lessons from Ronald Benko. He turned down a scholarship to The Juilliard School and attended New Orleans University under Ellis Marsalis, but after three semesters left for New York City to share an apartment with Wynton Marsalis and begin his career.

Through the inspiration of Marsalis, Terence Blanchard (from whom he received advice), and Nicholas Payton, Mayfield developed a blazing technique on the trumpet and a fine élan in his style of playing. He was introduced to Afro-Cuban jazz and formed his own group, Los Hombres Calientes, that made several excellent recordings for the Basin Street label. The group was named the 1998 Best New Latin Band by Offbeat Magazine. Since 1996, he has also been the director of the Kermit Ruffins Big Band.

In 2002, Mayfield founded and directed the New Orleans Jazz Orchestra that held an association with his Institute of Jazz Culture at Dillard University until 2006 when it became associated with Tulane University. The group's album, Strange Fruit (Basin Street), has received wide acclaim. In 2005, Mayfield joined Wynton Marsalis and other musicians in the Higher Ground Hurricane Relief Benefit Concert. He has also performed at the Newport Jazz Festival, Atlanta Jazz Festival, Clifford Brown Jazz Festival, French Quarter Festival, New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival, and at various Mardi Gras celebrations in New Orleans. On June 26, 2006 he performed at The White House with jazz artist Ronald Markham.

In 2008, Mayfield held a one-year appointment as artistic director of Jazz at Orchestra Hall with the Minnesota Orchestra. He has also served on the Louisiana Rebirth Advisory Board, Bring New Orleans Back Commission Cultural Sub-Committee, New Orleans Public Library Board, Hyatt New Orleans Rebirth Advisory Board, and was made a Cultural Ambassador of the City of New Orleans in 2003. In 2009, President Obama appointed him to the National Endowment for the Arts. Mayfield also won a Grammy Award in 2009 for his New Orleans Jazz Orchestra's CD, Book One. He has also recorded with Ani DiFranco, Jaz Sauyer, and Wessell Anderson. He is a funny, honest, and humble man who is considered by many to be one of the most influential jazz artists of his generation. His CDs include Irvin Mayfield (Basin Street), Live at the Blue Note (Half Note), How Passion Falls (Basin Street), and Half Past Autumn Suite (Basin Street).

Bibl.: Erdmann, Tom. "An Interview with Irvin Mayfield" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2002); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Irvin Mayfield" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mayfield, Nathaniel ("Nate") [Bryant] (b. Austin, Texas, Mar. 29, 1976). American trumpeter. Mayfield grew up in Austin, Texas. He began playing the trumpet at age eleven, and during middle school studied with James Shortell. At age sixteen, he attended the Tanglewood Music Festival (Empire Brass Seminar) and graduated from the Interlochen Arts Academy in 1994 after four years of study with John Lindenau. Mayfield was named a Presidential Scholar in 1994, appearing for President Clinton in the White House, attended Columbia University from 1994 to 1997, earning a bachelor of arts degree in history while also studying with Raymond Mase at The Juilliard School, and was a Fulbright Scholar from 1998 to 1999, studying with Reinhold Friedrich in Karlsruhe, Germany. A talented student, Mayfield won first prize in the 1994 National Trumpet Competition, was winner of the Aspen Brass Concerto Competition in 1995, and won the 1998 International Trumpet Guild solo competition. He was a member of the National Repertory Orchestra, World Youth Orchestra, and a participant in the Pacific Music Festival in Japan. He was a guest first trumpeter in the orchestras of Tenerife and Singapore, after which he occupied that chair in the Metro-Opera Orchestra in Des Moines, Iowa.

Mayfield became the director of music for the Austin School for the Performing and Visual Arts in 2006, and is also the executive director of the Austin Brass Center. Since 2009, he has been teaching at Concordia University and Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas. Along with trumpeters Rex Richardson and Paul Merkelo, he is a member of the NEXT Ensemble, which incorporates baroque, jazz, classical, contemporary, and experimental music styles.

Mayfield and his wife Ulrike have been married since 2001, and have a daughter, Elizabeth (b. 2009). His hobbies include running, physics and electricity, microbiology, home brewing, and collecting antique bricks.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nathaniel Mayfield" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Nathaniel Mayfield's official website: www.natemayfield.com; personal interview, Aug. 17, 2011.

Mazurek, Rob (b. Jersey City, New Jersey, July 8, 1965). American cornetist. Mazurek attended high school in Naperville, Illinois (near Chicago), and attended the Bloom School of Jazz in Chicago. He got his start as a jazz musician playing with various groups in the Chicago area during the early 1990s. He formed his first hard bop quartet that performed a great deal in Edinburgh, Scotland, and released three albums on the Scottish label, Hep Records. In 1996, he founded a workshop at the Chicago jazz club, The Green Mill, called Chicago Underground for the performance of avant-garde, improvisatory jazz. From this, the Chicago Underground Orchestra (in formations with two to four players!) was born in 1998, releasing several albums on Chicago's Delmark Records label.

Mazurek collaborated with a number of jazz and experimental rock artists, performing on albums with groups and artists such as Tortoise, Gastr del Sol, Stereolab, Brokeback, and Sam Prekop. He was also a key performer and founder of Isotope 217 and his lap-top project, Orton Socket. His discography includes Man Facing East (Hep), Badlands (Hep), Green & Blue (Hep), Playground (Delmark), 12 Degrees of Freedom (Thrill Jockey), Possible Cube (Delmark), Synesthesia (Thrill Jockey), Flamethrower (Delmark), Chicago Underground Quartet (Thrill Jockey), Amorphic Winged (Walking Road), Axis and Alignment (Thrill Jockey), Silver Spines (Delmark), Slon (Thrill Jockey), Sweet and Vicious Like Frankenstein (Mega), Mandarin Movie (Aesthetics), In Praise of Shadows (Thrill Jockey), Sauna: Um, Dois, Tres (Aesthetics), Chronicle (Delmark), Exploding Star Orchestra: We are all from somewhere else (Thrill Jockey), Bill Dixon with Exploding Star Orchestra (Thrill Jockey), Rob Mazurek Quintet: Sound Is (Delmark), Boca Negra (Thrill Jockey), Calma Gente (Submarine), Exploding Star Orchestra: Stars Have Shapes (Delmark), and Starlicker: Double Demon (Delmark).

In August 2005, Mazurek organized the Exploding Star Orchestra to present concerts in Chicago's Millennium Park. The following year he went to Brazil and founded the São Paolo Underground ensemble, touring with it worldwide. Various DVDs and CD followed with his Chicago Underground Trio.

Mazurek paints and experiments with multimedia art. He has exhibited at art galleries in Chicago, New York, Paris, Copenhagen, Brussels, Rome, Toronto, Barcelona, Helsinki, Palermo, and other cities around the world. He now resides and works in São Paulo, Brazil.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Rob Mazurek's official website: www.robmazurek.com.

McAneney, Anne (b. Belfast, Ireland, c1961). Irish trumpeter. McAneney's early training was playing cornet in the Agnes Street Brass Band; she also played trumpet in several local orchestras. From 1979 to 1982, she studied at Goldsmiths College in London, where she earned a bachelor of music degree. She did post graduate work for a while with Maurice Murphy and Ray Simmonds at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, and won the Principal's Prize.

McAneney freelanced in London until being named principal of the Royal Ballet Orchestra in 1985, earning the distinction of becoming the first female principal trumpeter in the United Kingdom. During the following year, she was also invited to join the London Brass ensemble as its flugelhorn specialist; she eventually became the director of the group. She left the Royal Ballet in 1989, and continued her career as a freelance artist with all the leading London orchestras and chamber groups, also performing as a soloist. In 1994, she took part in a documentary by Olivier Mille titled London Brass. She completed a master of music degree in 1994 at Reading University, and began teaching at the Guildhall School in 1995. McAneney coaches the trumpet section of the National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain. Since 2000, she has been the assistant principal trumpet of the London Philharmonic Orchestra.

Bibl.: Mortenson, Gary. "The Trumpet Section of the London Philharmonic Orchestra" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2005); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

McCandless, Andrew William (b. Louisville, Kentucky, Nov. 23, 1970). American trumpeter. McCandless began playing trumpet at age nine, and studied (age thirteen to fifteen) with Robert Jarrett and (age sixteen to eighteen) with Jerome Amend. During his last two years of high school, he attended the Youth Performing Arts School in Louisville. He then studied with Roger Voisin at Boston University for one year (1988-89), but transferred to the Eastman School of Music (1989-91) where he studied with Barbara Butler. While at Eastman, he performed as coprincipal trumpet of the Savannah Symphony Orchestra (Jan.-May 1992). During the first few weeks of his senior year in college, he won an audition for a one-year position as principal of the Buffalo Philharmonic (1992-93). He then became associate principal of the Kansas City Symphony (1993-95), but returned to the Buffalo Philharmonic (1995-96 season).

McCandless served as associate principal of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra (1996-99). He won the position of principal of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in 1999, playing with that orchestra until 2002 when he became principal of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. He returned to his former position in Toronto in 2005. He also performs as principal of the Sun Valley Summer Symphony. He is an active soloist who premiered Bramwell Tovey's trumpet concerto, Songs of the Paradise Saloon, in 2010.

McCandless has taught at the Glenn Gould School of Music (the collegiate wing of Toronto's Royal Conservatory) since 2002. Even while playing with the Dallas Symphony, he continued his teaching there by commuting. He was also on the faculty of the National Youth Orchestra of Canada (2004-06).

McCandless has been married to Danielle Louise McCandless, an administrator at a midwife clinic, since 2007. Their son, Jarrett (named after Andrew's first trumpet instructor), was born in November of 2010. McCandless's hobbies include rock climbing, golf, and tennis.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Andrew McCandless's official website: www.andrewmccandless.ca; personal interview, Mar. 20, 2011.

McCann, Phillip (b. Bo'ness, Scotland, Mar. 25, 1955). Scottish cornetist. At age eight, McCann was a member of the Kinneil Colliery Band, and was principal cornet of the National Youth Brass Band of Great Britain (for five years). His career began in 1973 when he became principal cornet of the famed Black Dyke Mills Band, a position he held until 1988 when he became a fulltime soloist. He also played with the Fairy Band, and from 1988 with the Leyland DAF Band. He was a featured artist during the 1993 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Akron, Ohio.

McCann's tonal quality utilizes more vibrato than most British soloists, giving him a very distinctive sound. He was selected to perform solos on soundtracks for films such as Anna of the Five Towns and Women of Substance, as well as the popular BBC Television series, Hetty Wainthropp Investigates—the latter receiving an Ivor Novello Award in the category of Best Music commissioned for a Broadcast Production.

McCann has toured the world as soloist and clinician, giving hundreds of master classes and concerts at leading universities and other venues. He assists the Yamaha Corporation in developing their range of brass instruments. He is currently Head of Brass and Woodwind at the University of Huddersfield, where he teaches cornet, as well as conducting skills, scoring and arranging for brass band and wind orchestra. He is also the founder and music director of the Sellers Engineering Band, which contains a number of students from the university, albeit independent of the university. In 2003, McCann was awarded both the Mortimer Medal of the Worshipful Company of Musicians and the Master's Dedicated Service Award.

McCann's popularity has increased in recent years due to his solo playing on five volumes of CDs titled The Golden Cornet of Phillip McCann: The World's Most Beautiful Melodies released on the Chandos label.

Bibl . Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Phillip McCann" (www2.hud.ac.uk/staffprofiles/staffcv.php?staffid=19); information provided by Phillip McCann to Edward H. Tarr (email of Feb. 25, 2013).

McCoy, Clyde (b. Ashland, Kentucky, Dec. 29, 1903; d. Memphis, Tennessee, June 11, 1990). American trumpeter. A member of the McCoy family famous for the Hatfield and McCoy feud, Clyde moved to Portsmouth, Ohio, with his family in 1912. He took up the trombone, and later the trumpet as a child, and by age fourteen was performing on riverboats and in local theaters. He founded his own band at age sixteen and performed with them at a resort in Knoxville, Tennessee. He moved the group to New York but found little success there. In 1924, the group moved to Los Angeles and began to tour a few years later.

In 1930 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, McCoy played Sugar Blues. Featuring growling and a plunger mute for "wa-wa" effects, the solo was an instant hit and became the signature tune for his entire career. Radio broadcasts brought national approval, and McCoy signed with the Columbia label in 1931. His recording of Sugar Blues sold over one million copies. For the next five years, the McCoy band stayed at the Drake Hotel in Chicago and worked other engagements in vaudeville shows and at the Terrace Gardens. In 1935, they signed with Decca Records and remained popular throughout the decade. In 1936, he added the Bennett Sisters as vocalists to his band. He cofounded Downbeat magazine in 1935.

In 1942, the entire McCoy band enlisted in the navy, touring naval bases and hospitals as a musical group. Upon discharge in 1945, he married Maxine Means, one of the Bennett Sisters. He reorganized the band and they remained popular until the mid 1950s when big bands everywhere lost the public's interest. He dismantled the band in 1955, and he and Maxine opened a supper club in Denver, Colorado. The club was not financially successful, so he and his wife began touring again, only this time with a septet.

The McCoys retired to Memphis, Tennessee, in the late 1970s. He taught music and continued to perform until the mid 1980s, working mainly with small Dixieland bands. He stopped performing in 1985 and developed Alzheimer's disease in the late 1980s. He died in 1990 at the age of eighty-seven.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Clyde McCoy" (Solid!: www.parabrisas.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

McCoy, Robert ("Bob") (b. 1929; d. Mar. 5, 2011). American trumpeter. Relatively little is known about the life of trumpeter Bob McCoy, most likely due to his modest and humble nature. He grew up in West Virginia, and graduated from West Virginia University. A remarkable lead player, he played with the NBC Symphony and many big bands including those of Maynard Ferguson (on tours), André Kostelanetz, Jimmy Dorsey, Buddy Morrow, New York Jazz Repertory Company (1976), Woody Herman, Mel Lewis, Stan Kenton, Horace Heidt, and Gato Barbieri. He played first trumpet in the NBC Tonight Show Band (New York) led by Carl "Doc" Severinsen during the 1960s and '70s, and was a top studio player in New York City for over forty years. He also played lead trumpet in numerous Broadway show orchestras. As a chief clinician for Yamaha, he designed a custom trumpet and line of mouthpieces. For many years, he was an adjunct faculty member of West Virginia University and at several other area colleges and universities.

McCoy spent his last years in Boston where he taught private lessons. He died at the age of eighty-one.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, incl. mp3; Oct. 2008); Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford); "Bob McCoy" (www.local802afm.org/publication_entry.cfm?xEntry=59206948); News Item in Allegro, the musicians' Local 802 magazine.

McElroy, John (b. c1951). American trumpeter. McElroy is the current principal trumpet of the Alabama Symphony Orchestra, having joined the orchestra in 1974. He has toured and recorded with the Philadelphia Orchestra and Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, and has performed as principal trumpet with the Grand Teton Music Festival in Wyoming, and the Eastern Music Festival in North Carolina. Since 2005, he has been principal trumpet of the New Hampshire Music Festival. He is also a member of the Birmingham-based Ambassador Brass Quintet, which has performed concerts throughout the south including a residency at the Spoleto Music Festival in Charleston, South Carolina. Since 2002, McElroy has traveled to Romania five times where he performed as a soloist with the Filarmonica De Stat Sibiu and the Filarmonica De Stat "Transilvania" in Cluj. As part of the American-Romanian Music Festival, he performed as recitalist and conducted master classes at the "Gheorghe Dima" Music Academy in Cluj-Napoca. He has also played with Tromba Felix in Romania.

McElroy is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He has been a member of the Philadelphia Concerto Soloists and the Rittenhouse Brass Quintet, and has taught at Samford University, University of Montevallo, Alabama School of Fine Arts, and the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa. In May 2000, he was honored by being inducted into the Alabama Jazz Hall of Fame, along with his friend and former student of four years, Wynton Marsalis, for whom he played a huge role in preparing him for his audition at The Juilliard School.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "John McElroy" (www.alabamasymphony.org/jmcelroy.htm)

McGaw, Laurie Anson (b. Alameda, California, June 10, 1937). American trumpeter. McGaw studied with Victor Kress and Charles Bubb Jr. at the University of California-Berkeley, receiving his bachelor of music degree. He then earned a master's degree at Rutgers University in New Jersey (majoring in geology) while also studying with Armando Ghitalla and Gerard Schwarz. He joined the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Seiji Ozawa as associate principal trumpet in 1970, and was moved to principal in 1979 by Maestro Edo de Waart. When Glenn Fischthal was hired as principal in 1980, McGaw moved to second trumpet.

McGaw retired from the San Francisco Symphony in 1995. He is currently teaching at the University of California-Berkeley.

Bibl.: "Laurie Anson McGaw" (www.stokowski.org/Principal_Musicians_ San_Francisco_Symphony.htm.).

McGhee, Howard [B.] ("Maggie") (b. Tulsa, Oklahoma, Mar. 6, 1918; d. New York, New York, July 17, 1987). American trumpeter and composer. In his prime, McGhee was one of the most important early beboppers, second only to Dizzy Gillespie. He began on clarinet and tenor sax but switched to the trumpet when he was seventeen. Raised in Detroit, McGhee started performing in several Midwest touring bands such as those of Kelly Martin and Leonard Gray (1939), as well as Jimmy Rachel's Congo Club Orchestra (1940). He then joined Lionel Hampton's Septet in 1941. He was with Andy Kirk's band from 1941-42 and was featured on the solo, McGhee Special (July 1942). McGhee briefly joined Charlie Barnet's band in New York in 1942-43, and played again with Andy Kirk (when Fats Navarro joined the trumpet section).

McGhee played with Georgie Auld, Count Basie, and Billy Eckstine (1944). By this time, McGhee was one of the top modern jazz trumpeters in the country. His early influences were from Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, and Roy Eldridge. He played and recorded with the Coleman Hawkins Quintet and appeared with Hawkins in the 1945 film, The Crimson Canary. While on a West Coast tour with Hawkins, McGhee decided to stay in Los Angeles. He thus helped introduce bebop to the West Coast. During his two years there, he played with Charlie Parker (1946-47) and with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1947, 1948). He was one of the stars for the progressive Dial label. He returned to New York in 1947 and played with Machito (1949), and appeared at the Paris Jazz Festival (1949).

"Maggie" McGhee was voted "Best Trumpeter" in 1949 by Downbeat magazine. It is ironic that this was also the year that he began using heroin, a drug that greatly eroded his playing ability and career for much of the remainder of his life. From 1951 to 1952, he embarked on a USO tour to the Far East to entertain US troops during the Korean War. After that, he made a few recordings for the Bethlehem label but did little else of importance for the remainder of the decade.

During the early 1960s, McGhee temporarily kicked his drug habit and made a strong comeback. He soon went back on heroin, however, and began to fade from the jazz scene. He made several recordings between 1976 and 1979, but by then other jazz trumpeters including Miles Davis, Lee Morgan, Freddy Hubbard, and Clifford Brown had stolen the limelight from him. From that point on, he mostly taught music in the classroom and in his Manhattan apartment. He died at the age of sixty-nine, and was survived by his wife Tina, sons Howard and David, and daughters Dru Ann and Joylin.

Jazz historians remember Maggie McGhee as one of the true pioneers of bebop. His influence on Fats Navarro is significant because Navarro in turn influenced many other leading jazz trumpeters including Clifford Brown. McGhee's compositions were many, including Dorothy, Night Mist, Cheers, Carvin' the Bird, and Stupendous. Among his many recordings are Howard McGhee on Dial (Spotlite), The Bop Master (Affinity), The Howard McGhee Sextet with Milt Jackson (Savoy), Together Again! (Contemporary), and Cookin' Time (Zim). More recent CD compilations include Home Run (Storyville), Wise in Time (Storyville), Trumpet at Tempo (Jazz Classics), 1945-1946 (Classics), 1948 (Classics), Maggie: The Savoy Sessions (Savoy), Maggie's Back in Town (Original Jazz Classics), Sharp Edge (Black Lion), Hollywood Stampede with Coleman Hawkins (Capitol), and Just Be There (Steeplechase).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Palmer, Robert. "Howard McGhee, 69, Is Dead; A Trumpeter and Composer" (The New York Times, July 18, 1987); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Howard "McGhee" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

McGregor, Rob Roy [Jr.] (b. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Oct. 29, 1943). American trumpeter. Both of McGregor's parents, Rob Roy McGregor Sr. and Eva Goff McGregor were chemists. Rob Roy Jr. began playing the piano at age ten, and the trumpet at age thirteen. He graduated from Midland High School in Midland, Michigan, in 1961, and attended the University of Michigan where he studied with Clifford Lillya (1961-67). He has also studied briefly with Theodore Weis, James Stamp, and James Thompson. After graduation, he joined the Army, and served in the West Point Band from 1967 to 1970.

McGregor became the assistant principal of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra in the fall of 1970 where he remained until accepting a position in the Los Angeles Philharmonic in 1981, performing mostly as second trumpet next to Thomas Stevens; he retired from the orchestra in September of 2005. He has been managing his publishing company Balquhidder Music since 1991. McGregor is an active clinician, and has taught at the University of Southern California, California State University-Long Beach, and Azusa Pacific University. He teaches privately, and substitutes occasionally with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. He presented a lecture at the 2004 conference of the International Trumpet Guild.

McGregor and his wife Kazue Asawa McGregor, Music Librarian of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, have a son Isamu (b. 1989) who is attending New York University, and a daughter Misao (b. 1996) who is in junior high school. McGregor's hobbies include cooking, woodworking, and gardening.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Newton, Michael. "It Begins with Passion: Rob Roy McGregor" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2006); personal interview, Mar. 16, 2010.

McGuffey, Patrick E. (b. c1945). American trumpeter. McGuffey studied with Leon Rapier, and was principal trumpet of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra from 1967 to 1991. He wrote a text titled A Trumpeter's Guide to the Orchestra (B&M Publications), and released the LP album, McGuffey's Reader (B&M Records). Since retiring from the orchestra, he has taught on a part-time basis at Volunteer State Community College in Gallatin, Tennessee. He has three children: Michael Patrick, David Christopher, and Karen Elizabeth.

Bibl.: L.P. album: McGuffey's Reader (B&M Records).

McGuire, Jesse Robert Sr. (b. Ann Arbor, Michigan, Aug. 29, 1958). American trumpeter. McGuire began playing trumpet at age nine. By the time he graduated from Willow Run High School in Ypsilanti, Michigan, he had won several soloist prizes, and was offered music scholarships to numerous universities. He attended Washtenaw College in Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he studied with Dr. Morris J. Lawrence. McGuire holds degrees in the field of religion, including a bachelor of theology, master of divinity, and doctor of ministry from Freedom College and Seminary.

Although McGuire is best known for dozens of performances of the Star Spangled Banner at nationally broadcast sporting events (including several of the 2001 World Series of baseball games), he has toured the world several times as a jazz and gospel musician (often lead trumpeter) with Ernie Wilkins, Tower of Power, Wynton Marsalis, Esteban, Pat Boone, James Brown, The Clark Sisters, Paul Simon, Stevie Wonder, The Dells, Phil Driscoll, Billy Preston, The Winans, Eddie Mitchell, the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, and many others. He is also an active composer, author, and studio player. He has performed for three American presidents: Ronald Reagan, William Clinton, and George W. Bush.

McGuire's albums include It Took A Miracle, Glory to His Name, Hymns, and Twice As Good—For Half As Much. He has received many awards including the 2009 National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences Emmy Award and the 2010 Copper Sword Award from the Arizona Veterans Hall of Fame Society.

McGuire lives in Phoenix, Arizona, with his wife, Donna. He is president of PowerTrump, Inc. and is a founding member of the Afromusicology Society.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jesse McGuire" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Jesse McGuire's official website: www.jessemcguire.com.

McLaughlin, Clint ("Pops") (b. Tyler, Texas, Oct. 21, 1957). American trumpeter. McLaughlin began playing trumpet at age fourteen. He attended Lee High School in Tyler, Texas, during his sophomore year, and Longview High School where he graduated in 1976. His early teachers were Arthur Ford, Jack Smith, and Ken Muckelroy. He enrolled at Stephen F. Austin University, but soon studied at Tyler Junior College. He continued his music education at Texas Tech University, graduating with a music education degree in 1980. While in school, he played in several touring big bands, the East Texas Symphony, and the Longview Symphony. After he read a difficult trumpet passage in a friend's theory class, the instructor exclaimed, "...Pops has some serious chops." The nickname stayed with him.

McLaughlin began his teaching career while in high school, giving private lessons. He credits Don "Jake" Jacoby with providing many insights into teaching. He told Jacoby that he had a real interest in teaching, so Jacoby allowed him to sit in and watch other students take lessons. According to McLaughlin, It was like a loveable chef Ramsay. A lot of great insights mixed with a good dose of cursing.

Disliking the travel involved with big bands of the time, McLaughlin decided to quit the road in 1982 and become a full-time teacher when he married his wife Jan, who currently works for Pepsico. Working out of his private studio, he has helped thousands of trumpeters with embouchure improvement and range. Among his publications (self-published) are Trumpet FAQs, How the Chops Work, Chop Builder, 30 Minutes a Day to Better Playing, The Trumpet Player's Guide, The No Nonsense Trumpet Book from A – Z, More Power – More Range, The Pros Talk about Trumpet Embouchure, The Next Level, and Air on the Move. He has also released Cure Stage Fright with Sleep Learning, a sleep-therapy CD. He has recently recorded videos on general trumpet performance, the Stevens Embouchure method, gigging, and improvisation. McLaughlin has made custom trumpet mouthpieces since 1977, as well as customizing trumpets since 1980.

McLaughlin and Jan have three children: David (b. 1982), Robert (b. 1986), and Rebekka (b. 1989). He has studied martial arts since age ten, has taught self-defense at his own private school and at Yoder's American Taekwondo Association, and published a book on self-defense in the mid 1980s. He also became an Ordained Minister in 2008, has done counseling, and has written a book on marriage problems.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Clint "Pops" McLaughlin's official website: www.bbtrumpet.com; personal interview, May 14, 2011.

McLevy, John [H.] (b. Dundee, Scotland, Jan. 2, 1927; d. Dundee, Scotland, Nov. 27, 2002). Scottish trumpeter and flugelhornist. John's father was a semipro jazz drummer who led his own band. As a boy, John worked as a roadie for his father, transporting his drum set from gig to gig. He took up the trumpet during his teens, and was considered by those who heard him to be a "boy wonder." He also played in the Black Watch Regiment. His first professional playing experience was with Joe Gibson's band.

In 1948, McLevy joined Les Ayling's group at the Lyceum Theater in London, and later with a casino band in Glasgow led by Bert Tobias (1950). From 1952 to 1954, he was a member of the BBC Show Band, and for the following ten years played in the house band of the Savoy Hotel in London. In 1965, he played in the big bands of Kenny Baker, Bobby Lamb, and much later with Bob Wilber. However, much of his fame as a musician came from joining Benny Goodman's British-based band that toured England and Europe during the mid and late 1960s. He recorded with Max Bygraves, and performed with Ella Fitzgerald, as well as with jazz accordionist Jack Emblow during the 1970s. At the Nice Parade in France, he was member of the New York Jazz Repertory Company (1977). During the 1980s, he formed a duo with trumpeter Tommy McQuater that toured England, and did studio work.

McLevy played through most of the 1990s, but suffered from Alzheimer's disease. He passed away in a nursing home at the age of seventy-five.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "John McLevy" (http://retrodundee.blogspot.com/2009/12/john-mclevy-on-trumpet.html).

McMahan, Clinton O. ("Mickey") (b. Dallas, Texas, Aug. 23, 1930; d. Van Nuys, California, June 11, 2008). American trumpeter. While a young boy, McMahan moved with his family to Phoenix, Arizona. He learned to play the trumpet from his mother, who had played the trumpet while growing up in an orphanage. After high school, McMahan joined the Army, and after his military obligations worked as a studio player in Los Angeles, joining Les Brown's band, which played for the Steve Allen Show. He also participated in several USO tours with the Brown organization when it accompanied Bob Hope around the world. McMahan's first wife was Jo Ann Greer, vocalist with the Les Brown Band.

McMahan played with the bands of Freddy Martin, Tex Beneke, and Stan Kenton before joining the Lawrence Welk Orchestra in 1966. For the next sixteen years, he served as Welk's first trumpeter, retiring in 1982 when the Lawrence Welk Show ended due to Welk's retirement.

McMahan died at age seventy-seven due to kidney problems and an unrelated blood disease. He was survived by his second wife Betty, children Jayme, Brian, Patrick, and stepson Steve Land.

Bibl.: "Mickey McMahan" (www.allaboutjazz.com); "Mickey McMahan" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

McMillion, Dan K. (b. Mount Hope, West Virginia, Jan. 21, 1938). American trumpeter, flugelhornist, and valve trombonist. McMillion began playing the trumpet at age thirteen. He played in several territorial bands in Michigan that backed such artists as Joe Williams, Peggy Lee, and Carmen McRae. During the 1960s, he played with the big bands of Woody Herman and Buddy Rich, developing solo skills in the style of Maynard Ferguson.

McMillion moved to Florida where in 1955 he formed his own big band called the Dan McMillion Jazz Orchestra, which has released several albums, and received two nominations for Grammy awards. Albums (on the Sea Breeze label) include Got the Spirit, Nice N' Juicy, Up Your Brass, High Octane, and Give It One. A recent album is dedicated to Dan's former wife, Lillian, who died in 2009. Dan also makes frequent teaching appearances at conservatories, colleges, and universities in the Southeast. Although McMillion's band concerts are excellent tributes to the Ferguson band of the 1960s, McMillion's fame has not spread much beyond the Florida area because he does not tour very much.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Dan McMillion Jazz Orchestra" (www.allaboutjazz.com).

McNab, Malcolm [Boyd] (b. Cleveland, Ohio, Mar. 25, 1943). American trumpeter. McNab was raised in the city of San Gabriel Valley, California. It is doubtful, when his father began teaching him to play the trumpet at age nine, that he would have thought that young Malcolm would eventually become one of the most frequently heard trumpeters in the world!

While attending Mark Keppel High School in Alhambra, McNab took lessons from Walter Laursen. He played in the Pasadena Symphony Orchestra at age sixteen, and at age nineteen toured with the San Francisco Ballet Orchestra. He studied with James Stamp, then joined the Army, and served in the West Point Academy Band. While at the academy, McNab studied privately with William Vacchiano and John Ware, both of the New York Philharmonic.

Following his military service, in 1969 McNab moved to Los Angeles, and began working as a studio session player, as well as playing with various orchestras including the California Chamber Symphony Orchestra, Los Angeles Pops Orchestra, Hollywood Bowl Orchestra, San Diego Symphony, and Pasadena Pops Orchestra. He also performed as guest soloists with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. He recorded with numerous celebrity artists including The Carpenters, Dionne Warwick, Frank Zappa, and Peggy Lee, the famous groups Chicago, Singers Unlimited, and the John Philip Sousa Society Concert Band under Ollie Mitchell. He also played music for television shows such as Star Trek, Highway to Heaven, Deep Space Nine, and Dr. Quinn—Medicine Woman.

McNab is one of the leading studio trumpeters in the world. To date, he has recorded nearly two thousand movie soundtracks, resulting in his trumpet playing having been heard by hundreds of millions of people throughout the planet. A small sampling of his movie credits include Jaws, 10, Indiana Jones, 1941, Jurassic Park, Toys, Amistad, Contact, Air Force One, Rocky, Home Alone, Spiderman, Wall-E, L. A. Confidential, Planet of the Apes, Night at the Museum, Meet the Fockers, Speed Racer, War of the Worlds, The Terminal, Starship Troopers, The Scorpion King, Seabiscuit, Shooter, Signs, Monsters Inc., National Treasure, Stripes, Dances with Wolves, Twister, Rudy, Meet Dave, Leatherheads, Hoffa, World's Fastest Indian, Renaissance Man, Blades of Glory, Independence Day, 101 Dalmations, Hercules, and Capricorn One. He has twice received the "Most Valuable Player Award" from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences. His two solo CDs are Exquisite and The Infinite Trumpet, both on his own Kinnell House label.

In October of 2006, McNab was the featured soloist in two performances of Concierto para Méndez, a one-act opera commissioned by the Los Angeles Opera through a private grant. The fifty-minute work was written by film composer Lee Holdridge, and includes several stage characters representing the life of the famed Hollywood trumpeter, Rafael Méndez (1906-1981). A tour-de-force solo work, the "concerto" is made up of original music by Holdridge, as well as selections from Méndez's vast solo repertoire.

McNab utilizes a Schilke E-flat trumpet for the majority of his work. However, his 2006 solo CD, Exquisite, features many different types of trumpets including flugelhorn and piccolo B-flat. McNab has taught as an adjunct faculty member at the University of California-Los Angeles (UCLA), Pomona College, and various other branches of the University of California system.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Malcolm McNab" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008); personal interview, April 12, 2010.

McNeil, John [Patrick] (b. Yreka, California, Mar. 23, 1948). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Beginning at age eight, McNeil taught himself to play the trumpet. He grew up in Louisville, Kentucky, and graduated from high school in 1966. He turned professional during his senior year of high school.

McNeil moved to New York City around 1975 and, furthered by Clark Terry, soon began playing with Dave Liebman and Horace Silver. He later played with the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra, Dave Berger (1982), Slide Hampton, John Abercrombie, and Terry. In 1972, he toured Denmark with a group of his own. He also worked as a composer, arranger, record producer, and jazz educator.

John McNeil's playing has always been considered to be cutting edge and experimental. His many recordings for the Steeplechase, Brownstone, and OmniTone labels include Rediscovery, East Coast Cool, Sleep Won't Come, This Way Out, Fortuity, Brooklyn Ritual, Hip Deep, and I've Got the World on a String. He taught improvisation at the New England Conservatory, and wrote Jazz Trumpet Techniques (ed. Studio), The Art of Jazz Trumpet Playing, vo1. 2, Flexus (with Laurie Frink), and Trumpet Calisthenics for the Modern Improviser (OmniTone). Concerning McNeil's playing, the Chicago Tribune wrote: He has focused on one of [Miles] Davis's richest periods, the mid 1960's, absorbed that style completely, and came out on the other side. His sound, rich and mellow, is his own.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); John McNeil's official website (www.mcneiljazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

McPartland, James ("Jimmy") [Dugald] (b. Chicago, Illinois, Mar. 15, 1907; d. Port Washington, New York, Mar. 13, 1991). American cornetist. McPartland began his music studies on the violin at the age of five, and took up the cornet ten years later after being inspired by hearing Bix Beiderbecke. He was taught by his father and by Paul Held. He played in a small band with his friends, the Austin High Gang. The band learned to imitate various Dixieland groups such as the New Orleans Rhythm Kings and the Original Dixieland Jazz Band by listening to recordings.

In 1923, McPartland played with groups led by Al Haid, Frisco Haase, and Charles "Murph" Podolsky. He also played with the Maroon Five. Two years later, at age seventeen, he replaced Bix Beiderbecke in the Wolverines and made his recording debut. He played with Art Kassel in 1926 and recorded with the McKenzie-Condon Chicagoans in 1927. He moved to New York and joined Ben Pollack's orchestra in 1927, becoming an important soloist with the band.

During the Depression, McPartland made a living by working in various Broadway pit orchestras and as a sideman with the bands of Horace Heidt, Smith Ballew, and Harry Reser (1933-35). He moved back to Chicago in the mid-1930s, and led his own small groups and played briefly with Jack Teagarden's big band (1942). He joined the Army in 1942 and was sent to Normandy Beach on D-Day. While in the service, he met jazz pianist Marian Turner and they were soon married.

After being discharged from the Army in 1945, the McPartlands became Dixieland players in various groups in Chicago and New York. In 1949, they took part in the historical Paris Jazz Festival. After a while, they formed their own Dixieland group and worked in this capacity for the remainder of their marriage that ended in divorce in 1970. They recorded many albums for labels such as Decca, Harmony, Prestige, Grand Award, Jazzology, Halcyon (Marian's own label), Camden, Design, Brunswick, Epic, Mercury, MGM, and Riff.

McPartland made TV shows with Eddie Condon (1961) and Art Hodes (1968, Jazz Alley), played with Tony Parenti (1969), paid a tribute to Pee Wee Russell at Rutgers University (1972), played with Roy Eldridge at Ryan's (1972), played a Remembering Bix Beiderbecke concert with Joe Venuti (1976), and took part in the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice (1974 and 1985).

Jimmy McPartland's health began to fail him in the early 1980s, and his playing became less and less frequent throughout the remainder of his life. He and Marian remained close friends and remarried just two weeks before his death, only two days shy of his eighty-fourth birthday.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Sudhalter, Richard. Lost Chords (Oxford University Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

McPhee, Joe (b. Miami, Florida, Nov. 3, 1939). American trumpeter. McPhee began playing the trumpet at eight, and later played in an Army band in Germany (1964-65). After being discharged, he performed with Clifford Thornton, making his recording debut in 1967. He also played with Matt Jordan's orchestra, and taught himself to play the saxophone during the late 1960s. During the early 1970s, MePhee worked with Don Cherry, the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (McPhee is also a composer), and other groups.

Since the early 1980s, McPhee's style has become more avant-garde than traditional. He now doubles on trumpet, sax, and trombone, and has released many recordings as leader for the CjR label, including Underground Railroad, Nation Time, and Trinity. More recently, he has recorded for Hat Hut, releasing albums such as Black Magic Man, The Willgan Concert, and Tenor. His most recent albums are As Serious as Your Life (Hatology) and A Meeting in Chicago (Okkadisk). In addition, McPhee, along with Dominic Duval and Jay Rosen, formed Trio X, a group that has recorded several albums. McPhee can be heard on over sixty recordings for Hat Hut, Deep Listening, CjR, Third World, Cadence, Okkadisk, Boxholder, CIMP, and Atavistic.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Joe McPhee's official website: www.joemcphee.com; "Joe McPhee" (http://barnesandnoble.com).

McQuater, Thomas ("Tommy") Mossie Sr. (b. Maybole, Ayshire, Scotland, Sept. 4, 1914; d. London, England, Jan. 20, 2008). Scottish cornetist and trumpeter. McQuater was one of Great Britain's most important jazz trumpeters. He taught himself to play the cornet at the age of eleven, and participated in the Maybole Brass Band. His career started when he worked with Louis Freeman's band on ocean liners. He later played with the bands of Jack Payne (1934-35), Lew Stone (1935-36), Bert Ambrose (1936-38, 1939), Benny Carter (1936-37), Danny Pole (1937), and George Chisholm (1938, 1944-45, 1961). He was a founding member of the short-lived Heralds of Swing (1939).

McQuater joined the Royal Air Force (1940), and for almost a decade, performed with the Squadronaires. Returning to civilian life, he played in a pit orchestra called the Skyrockets (1952-53). He spent the next few years working for radio and television as part of Cyril Stapleton's BBC Showband, and as a staff musician for Jack Parnell. He also played in the bands of Jack Dankworth (1955, 1961) and Benny Goodman (1969). He backed numerous celebrity vocalists including Frank Sinatra, Nat "King" Cole, Jimmy Durante, Cliff Richard, and Vera Lynn. Although he never led a recording session, he can be heard on numerous recordings on the Parlophone, Timeless, ASV, Bethlehem, and Pickwick labels.

During the 1970s and '80s, McQuater worked as a freelance musician. He was a member of The Muppet Show television house orchestra (1976-81), ghosting the trumpet playing of Lips, a trumpet-playing Muppet. During a gig in 1988, one of the musicians accidently bumped the bell of his trumpet, knocking out several of his front teeth. The band took up a collection to help him repair the damage, but his former playing ability never returned.

McQuater was known for his leftist political views and membership in the Communist Party. He was also known for his quick wit and caustic remarks. He and Winifred "Twinkle" McQuater (who preceded him in death) were married for sixty years and had two sons: Tommy and David, both professional musicians. McQuater died at the age of ninety-three.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Tommy McQuater" (www.answers.com); "Tommy McQuater: illustrious jazz musician" (Obituary, The Independent, Apr. 8, 2000).

McWhorter, Brian J. (b. Portland, Oregon, Mar. 18, 1975). American trumpeter. While growing up in Portland, Oregon, McWhorter began playing the trumpet at age ten. His early teachers were Jim O'Banion and Paul Mazzio. After graduating from David Douglas High School in 1993, McWhorter attended the University of Oregon where he studied with George Recker and received a bachelor of music degree in 1998. He then attended The Juilliard School where he studied with Raymond Mase and earned a master of music degree in 2000. Other teachers include Chris Gekker, Anthony Plog, Mark Gould, and Laurie Frink.

During his early career, McWhorter performed with the After Quartet, Sequitur, Endy Emby, Bliggity Blam, Extension Ensemble, Renwicke, and the Meridian Arts Ensemble (2001-10). He has recorded and performed a great deal of contemporary and popular music, and is a member of the X-rated pop group, Mark Gould & Pink Baby Monster. He has also taught at the Manhattan School of Music, East Carolina University, Princeton University, Louisiana State University, and has played on over thirty-five recordings.

McWhorter is currently a professor at the University of Oregon, and a member of the Oregon Brass Quintet. He is also co-artistic director of Beta Collide, a new music ensemble. He has served as assistant principal of the Eugene Symphony Orchestra (2008-09), and has played with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, American Sinfonietta, American Brass Quintet, and the Oregon Bach Festival. He and his wife Lisa, a violinist and assistant concertmaster of the Eugene Symphony Orchestra, have two children, Oakley (b. 2007) and Kyla (b. 2010).

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "Jon Nelson & Brian McWhorter of the Meridian Arts Ensemble" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2007). "Brian McWhorter" (www.uoregon.edu); personal interview, May 11, 2010.

McWilliams, Larry N. (b. c1945). American trumpeter and bandleader. McWilliams is a native of Madison County, Florida. His early career was spent freelancing in New York City and Las Vegas, as well as touring with Johnny Mathis, Henry Mancini, Pia Zadora, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gormé, Perry Como, Tony Bennett, Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra Jr., the Spinners, the Temptations, Red Skelton, Tommy Dorsey, Glenn Miller, and many others. He was featured at several international jazz festivals, including the Umbra Jazz Festival (Italy) and the North Sea Jazz Festival (Holland).

A devoted educator, McWilliams taught at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana, from 1970 to 2007, where he was professor of trumpet and director of jazz studies. He also played in the DaCamera Brass Quintet, was principal trumpet of the Muncie Symphony Orchestra, and established the Indiana All-State Jazz Band program. He remains an active bandleader and jazz soloist.

Bibl.: "Larry McWilliams Retires" (http://cms.bsu.edu/Academics/CollegesandDepartments/CFA/AlumniFriends/NewsletterHome/NewsletterArchive/LarryMcWilliams.aspx); "Larry McWilliams" (http://madisonfloridavoice.net/?p=12766).

Mear, Sidney ("Sid") (b. Flint, Michigan, June 23, 1918). American trumpeter. Mear began playing the cornet in second grade. His father, Samuel Edgar "Eddie" Mear, was a cornetist and band director in Whitewater, Wisconsin, where Sidney grew up. Sidney studied with his father, and while he was in high school in Madison, Wisconsin, took some lessons from Herbert Clarke and Bohumir Kryl, who were friends of his father. He later studied with Ernest Williams and Vladimir Drucker.

At age nineteen, Mear became a member of the famed Horace Heidt dance band, which gave many concerts and radio broadcasts. A year later, Mear enrolled in the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Pattee Evenson. During his senior year at Eastman, he was one of the adjunct teachers, and also played in the Rochester Philharmonic. He also played with the Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico and the Bethlehem Bach Festival from 1940-42. Edwin Franko Goldman invited him to play in his band during the 1938 Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco, where Mear played second cornet next to Leonard B. Smith. He received his bachelor of music degree in 1941.

In 1945, Mear joined the Army and was assigned to the 184th Army Ground Band, and was later transferred to the 1st Combat Infantry Band. After his Army service, he returned to the Eastman School and the Rochester Philharmonic, but was invited to play with the Philadelphia Orchestra during a nine-week transcontinental tour. He also performed during the summers with the Bethlehem Bach Festival Orchestra. Mear completed his master of music degree at Eastman in 1949.

Mear recorded numerous albums with the Eastman Orchestra, Wind Ensemble, and the Rochester Philharmonic. He is best known for his outstanding recordings of the Capricorn Concerto by Barber, Quiet City by Copland, and A Trumpeter's Lullaby by Anderson, all on the Mercury label. The latter recording, conducted by Frederick Fennell, was done in one take and without any rehearsal.

Mear is a legendary teacher who produced many professional students. He taught at the Eastman School from 1940 until his retirement in 1980, and received an Alumni Mentor Tribute from the Eastman School. He and his wife Bette moved to Florida, and although retired, he continued to teach part-time for a while at Manatee County Community College. He has four children—David, Karen, Robert, and Peter, and a deceased daughter (Linda).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Picher, William. "A Life of Excellence in Playing and Teaching: An Interview with Sidney Mear" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2004); "Sidney Mear" (Eastman School of Music website: www.esm.rochester.edu/iml/alumni/SydneyMear.htm); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Meichelt, Albert [Sr.] (b. Löbejün [near Halle], Germany, July 8, 1850, d. probably Munich, Jan. 18, 1914). German trumpeter. He was first a member of the famous orchestra of Benjamin Bilse in Berlin, and then from 1885 to 1912 principal trumpeter in the Munich Court Theater Orchestra. Meichelt was one of the very first to play on the short D trumpet. After a performance of Bach's B Minor Mass on April 14, 1889, the Musikalische Wochenschau reported: Among the instrumental soli ... the original instruments that were specially built after the indications of the court musician Mr. Meichelt for overcoming the abnormally high register of the three trumpet parts must be emphasized. Splendidly played, they were eminently suited for the special task of lending an intense, clear color to the choir sound in which they occasionally participated.

Meichelt is known to have played on instruments built by Schediwy (B-flat and C trumpets and a cornet) of Ludwigsburg. On March 18, 1891 he wrote a testimonial for Schediwy confirming the highest expectations on intonation and solid craftsmanship. His colleague Paul Handke, principal trumpeter in the Imperial Court Opera Orchestra of Vienna (and later a member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra), also performed on Schediwy's instruments, recommended to him by Meichelt. In 1892, Meichelt was named Chamber Musician. Oskar Böhme dedicated his Scherzo für zwei Cornets à pistons und Pianoforte, Op. 10 (1897), to him.

His son, Albert Meichelt Jr. (d. July 4, 1925), was principal trumpeter in the Munich Court Theater Orchestra from 1905 to 1925 (in waiting status in 1904). In 1911, he was named Chamber Musician and in 1920 Chamber Virtuoso.

Bibl.: Nösselt, Hans-Joachim. Ein ältest Orchester (Munich, Bruckmann 1980); Schediwy catalogue (1901).

Meinberg, Stephan (b. Celle, Germany, May 27, 1966). German trumpeter and composer. After being influenced by the recordings of Louis Armstrong and Maurice André, Meinberg began playing trumpet at age nine. He progressed quickly, and won prizes in young artists solo competitions in 1982 and 1983. He studied classical trumpet with Hannes Läubin at the Lübeck Music School, and later jazz trumpet with Manfred Schoof at the Cologne Musikhochschule. He included compositions of his own in the two final exams at those institutions. He received grants from the German Academic Exchange Service in 1999 and 2000 to study in New York City at the New School, where he learned jazz composition with Reggie Workman, and jazz trumpet with Cecil Bridgewater, John McNeil, and Ralph Alessi.

A specialist in contemporary jazz, Meinberg has played with groups such as Helium, Large 2, Groove Galaxy, and his own quintet, ViTAMiNE, that released his debut CD titled horizontally. He has performed on radio and television, and has toured Russia, India, and Scandinavia. He currently resides in Cologne and Hamburg, and since January of 2009 has taught trumpet and jazz at the Municipal School of Music in Brunswick.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Stephan Meinberg" (www.mold.nu/content/flash/content_text/stephan.swf).

Meinl, Eckhardt (b. Teplitz-Schönau, Bohemia, Germany, Mar. 5, 1938). German trumpeter. Meinl began playing trumpet at age fifteen in a school orchestra in Pirna, Saxony. He studied privately with Erwin Wolf, and from 1956 to 1960 took lessons from Erich Kühne at the Hanns Eisler Musikhochschule in Berlin. He was acting principal trumpet of the Berlin Radio Orchestra before being named principal in 1961. Meinl later played with the Berlin Symphony Orchestra and the Dresden Philharmonic, but returned to the Berlin Radio Orchestra as principal in 1981. In addition to his orchestral duties, he was a leading chamber musician in Berlin, and taught at the Hanns Eisler Musikhochschule. Meinl retired in 2002.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Meissner, Marc (b. Strasbourg, France, Jan. 4, 1954). French trumpeter. Meissner's early ensemble training was in a local Posaunenchor. He studied trumpet in Haguenau and at the Strasbourg Conservatory. He began to specialize on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, and studied this instrument, as well as Jägerhorn and Zink, with Dr. Edward H. Tarr in Basel, Switzerland, and in a summer course in Innsbruck, Austria.

In 1973, Meissner founded an early music ensemble, Alta Musica, which has become a leading French group during the past forty years. He also formed a trumpet and organ duo, and in 1989 a brass quartet. He is currently teaching at the Niederbronn-Les-Bains in France, and has published several music editions through Spaeth & Schmid Music in Nagold, Germany.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Meister, Hans (b. Fürstenfeld, Steiermark, Austria, Dec. 30, 1930; d. Jan. 2011). Austrian trumpeter. Meister began to play the trumpet at age eleven and later studied with Frans Brügger at the Academy of Music and Performing Arts in Graz, graduating at age twenty-four. At age sixteen, he played in various dance orchestras and jazz groups, and at age nineteen was selected to play in youth orchestras. Upon graduation from the Academy, he toured Germany, France, Austria, and Switzerland with a youth brass ensemble. He later played with the Budapest Symphony, Vienna Soloist Orchestra, Szombathely Symphony, Vienna Capella Academica, Oberschützen Kammerorchester, Innsbruck Städtisches Sinfonieorchester, Graz Philharmonic Orchestra, Graz Pro Arte, and Graz Mozart Ensemble.

In 1956, Meister became director of a private music school in his hometown of Fürstenfeld, where he also played in the local symphony orchestra and directed the highly successful Fürstenfeld Youth Band. In October of 1965, he began working at the Academy of Music and Performing Arts in Graz, forming a large (thirty-eight piece) brass ensemble. He was appointed professor of trumpet there in 1975, and also performed from 1975 to 1988 with his own Austrian Baroque Trio, a chamber group consisting of trumpet, organ, and double bass. As a soloist he specializes not only in the Haydn and Hummel concertos, but also in the taxing concerto by Michael Haydn and J. S. Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2. Among his many successful students were Hans Peter Schuh (Vienna Philharmonic), Franz Mandl (Graz Philharmonic), and Werner Steinmetz (Bruckner Orchestra in Linz). Meister is now a retired Professor Emeritus.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mellaerts, Manu (b. Tielt-Winge, Belgium, Oct. 8, 1961). Belgian trumpeter. Mellaerts began his music studies at the Tiener Music Academy before earning degrees in trumpet and chamber music at the Lemmens Institute in Leuven, and the Brussels Conservatory. He later studied with Pierre Thibaud in Paris, Roger Delmotte in Versailles, and Edward Tarr in Basel. In 1985, he won the Belgian Flemish Radio and Television (VRT) "Tenuto" competition, and in 1987 was a prizewinner in the Toulon International Trumpet Competition in France.

Mellaerts was principal trumpet of the Flemish Radio Orchestra from 1984 to 1986. In 1986, he accepted a professorship at the Brussels Conservatory, and a position as principal of the National Opera "Le Monnaie" Orchestra in Brussels. He is a guest conductor of youth orchestras, an active chamber musician, and artistic director and trumpeter for the large brass ensemble, Belgian Brass. He has released three solo CDs of Baroque and Classical trumpet concertos on the Aurophon and Euphoda labels, and has presented trumpet seminars in Spain, France, Holland, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Norway, and the United Kingdom.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Manu Mellaerts" (www.belgianbrass.be/en/node/123).

Mellet, Jean-Joseph (b. Pont-St.-Esprit, France, Nov. 24, 1843; d. 1910). French cornetist. Mellet first received a First Prize in natural horn from Prof. Jean-Baptiste-Victor Mohr at the Paris Conservatory in 1868, and then was a cornet à pistons student of Joseph Jean-Baptiste Laurent Arban there, with a First Prize the very next year. He succeeded Arban as the cornet professor there in 1889 when Arban passed away. Mellet's notable students include Pierre-Joseph Vignal and Eugene Foveau. He was decorated by the state in 1881 and 1899.

Bibl.: Pierre, Constant. Le Conservatoire national de musique et du declamation: Documents historiques et administratifs (Paris, Impreimerie Nationale, 1900); Tarr. Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Meltzer, Yigal Binyamin (b. Tel Aviv, Israel, May 2, 1969). Israeli trumpeter. Meltzer's father Colin was an accountant, and his mother Miriam a professional singer and teacher. His older sister Nurit was born in 1965, and his younger sister Efrat in 1972. Yigal grew up in Neve Ilan, Israel, and began playing the piano at age seven until he began playing trumpet at age eleven. His early trumpet teachers were Rick Berlin and Rob Frear, and later in the U.S., Philip Smith and James Pandolfi.

After graduating from Givat Brener High School in 1987, Meltzer joined the Israeli Army (1988-91), and played in an army band in Tel Aviv. After his release from the military, he became a member of the Israel Philharmonic as utility trumpet; he was named principal trumpet in 2001. He also performs with the Israel Philharmonic Brass Quintet, Israel Philharmonic Brass Octet, and Musica Nova. Considered to be one of the world's most talented trumpeters, Meltzer has performed recitals, and appeared as guest soloist with orchestras around the world. He performed at the 2010 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Sydney, Australia, where his recital was considered to be among the best of any ITG conference. He has recorded two recitals for Israel Radio, and has released a solo CD on Summit Records titled Buzz Sweat and Tears. He serves on the faculty at Tel Aviv University.

Meltzer and his wife Chen have four children: sons Haran (b. 1994) and Idan (b. 1998), and daughters, Hallel (b. 1999) and Goni (b. 2009). Meltzer enjoys running, exercising, reading, and juggling.

Bibl.: "Yigal Meltzer" (2010 ITG Conference program book biography); "Yigal Meltzer" (www.italianbrass.com); personal interview, July 5, 2010.

Menardi, Louis (b. Seyne-sur-Mer, France, May 4, 1915; d. Chartres, France, Mar. 11, 2000). French trumpeter. Menardi learned to play the trumpet from his father, an amateur musician and trumpeter. He then studied at the conservatory in Toulon, and won prizes in cornet and trumpet (1928-30). For two years, he played in a casino music hall orchestra in Toulon (1930-32), and then freelanced in Paris beginning in1932. He attended the Paris Conservatory as a student of Pierre Vignal (1932-39), then of Eugène Foveau, and won a first prize in cornet in 1942.

Menardi was the son-in-law of trumpeter Raymond Sabarich, and like him, frequently played in dance and jazz bands, as well as in the studios producing records and film music soundtracks. Menardi played with Alex Renard, and in 1936 joined the Air Army Band. Along with singer Charles Trenet and conductor Richard Blareau, he was a member of the Théâtre des Ailes during World War II (1939). Beginning in 1940, he was the usual substitute for Sabarich in Parisian orchestras. Menardi played at the Moulin Rouge with Hubert Rostaing (1945-48 as lead trumpet), Guy Paquinet on the radio, Aimé Barelli in 1947, and played recording sessions for the American label, Capitol (1948-49). He also worked on the radio with Jean Wiener. For nearly twenty years, he played at the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire as coprincipal to Sabarich, then as principal trumpet (October 1948 to June 1967). Menardi joined the Opéra-Comique in 1949 as a principal trumpet alongside Sabarich. He stayed in that orchestra (which merged with the Opéra National de Paris) until 1982. Menardi played under Charles Münch, Georges Prêtre, André Cluytens, and Pierre Monteux, to name but a few conductors.

Menardi taught at the Conservatory of Music in Chartres, and made many recordings, including some with Django Reinhardt and Duke Ellington. He is best known for the Études of Raymond Sabarich (Decca) and an educational disc for the Selmer company. He helped design several trumpet models—and often tested trumpets—for Selmer. Along with Raymond Sabarich, Ludovic Vaillant, and Pierre Pollin, Menardi is among the greatest French orchestral trumpet players of the twentieth century.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Louis Menardi" (World News, Brass Bulletin Journal, no. 111, Mar. 2000); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Mendelow, Daniel B. (b. New York, New York, Nov. 17, 1954). American trumpeter with dual citizenship in Australia. Mendelow began studying the piano at age seven, the trumpet at age ten, and while in junior high school, learned to play all of the brass instruments. At age thirteen, he was a member of the Pittsburgh (PA) Youth Symphony Orchestra. His first trumpet teacher was Frank Ostrowski of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. From 1972 to 1976, Mendelow attended the Oberlin Conservatory of Music where he studied with Eugene Young (first three years) and Louis Davidson (senior year). During the summer of 1976, he participated in the Tanglewood Music Festival, where he studied with Armando Ghitalla and Roger Voisin.

Mendelow became a member of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra in 1976, and the following season was invited by Maestro Zubin Mehta to join the Israel Philharmonic. While on an orchestra tour of Australia, Mendelow accepted an offer to be the principal trumpet with the Sydney Symphony Orchestra, a position he has held since 1978. He has also served as a guest soloist and guest principal trumpet of the Melbourne Symphony, West Australian Symphony, Queensland Orchestra, Tasmanian Symphony, and the Canberra Symphony. He has recorded a solo CD titled Prevailing Winds. He has conducted guest workshops and master classes at the Hong Kong Academy of Performing Arts and the Munich Hochschule in Germany. In addition, he has taught at the Sydney Conservatorium (1979-91) and the Australian National University (1991-2010). A few of Mendelow's best known students are Paul Goodchild, Anthony Heindrichs, John Foster, Jeffrey Segal, Tristam Williams, David Elton, Greg Flynn, Joshua Clark, and Andrew Evans.

Mendelow has been married to Helen Kindness since 2010. His children from two former marriages are Elliott (b. 1984), Jason (b. 1986), and Naomi (b. 1992). His hobbies include photography, wine tasting, watch collecting, and weightlifting.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Sydney Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2010); "Daniel Mendelow" (www.sydneysymphony.com); personal interview, Aug. 14, 2010.

Méndez, Rafael Gutiérrez [Arceo] (b. Jiquilpan, Michoacán, Mexico, Mar. 26, 1906; d. Encino, California, Sept. 15, 1981). Mexican trumpeter, composer, and arranger. Born as Rafael Gutiérrez Méndez Arceo, Méndez was the fourth of fifteen children of Maximino Méndez Gutiérrez and Irene Arceo Galvez. He grew up in the village of Jiquilpan, about three hundred miles west of Mexico City. He began playing the cornet at age five in order to play in the family orchestra, and according to Méndez, This was the only instrument I could reach, so I drew the cornet.

Rafael loved to practice and enjoyed playing his cornet outdoors. He improved quickly, except for an unusually slow single-tongue articulation. To remedy this, his father taught him to double-tongue, which he practiced aloud as he walked about the town; his nickname soon became "Tu-Ku." Méndez credited his amazing technique to his early use of double-tonguing.

Since 1910, Pancho Villa's troops had been leading a revolution against the Mexican dictatorship. In 1916, his troops camped in Jiquilpan, and the Méndez orchestra provided musical entertainment. When Villa was ready to leave the village, he "asked" the orchestra to accompany his army, so at age ten Rafael and family traveled with Villa for several months. When the war intensified, Villa dismissed the orchestra, save little Rafael. Because Villa had lost his wife Adelita in battle, he loved to hear Rafael play the song of the same name, and required him to stay. Six months later, when the revolution was drawing to a successful conclusion, Rafael was escorted home by two of Villa's soldiers.

Upon his return to Jiquilpan in 1918, Rafael joined the Mexico City Police Band and also played with several traveling circuses, but soon tired of the low pay and horrible living conditions. He returned home again and joined the Mexican Army in 1921, and was stationed in Acapulco for a year. After leaving the army, he played in various bands and orchestras and even performed for President Cárdenas in the Fine Arts Palace in Mexico City.

Rafael persuaded a wealthy landowner in Jiquilpan to fund his trip to the United States, so on June 26, 1926 at the age of twenty, he passed through the U.S. border and traveled to Gary, Indiana, where he had heard that he could find work. He worked shoveling coal in a steel mill for twelve hours each day and after a few weeks, moved to Flint, Michigan, taking a job in a Buick auto factory. The factory had an amateur band, which Méndez enjoyed playing in, but he was not prepared for the harsh Michigan winters, and had to pawn his trumpet in order to afford a heavy coat. Without a trumpet to practice with, Méndez often visited a music store in nearby Detroit so that he could "test" the trumpets for sale.

One day while playing in the store, a prominent bandleader named Russ Morgan came in and heard Méndez practicing, and asked him if that was his trumpet. Méndez responded, I can play it, but I can't buy it. Morgan offered Méndez a job as first trumpet in his band, which was playing at the Capitol Theater. It paid $125 per week, several times more than the factory job, and Morgan offered to purchase the trumpet for Méndez if he would take the job, which he did.

Méndez's reputation grew, and he was soon also performing at the Ford Theater and the Fox Theater. In order to Americanize his name, he asked people to call him "Ralph," but his friends preferred the nickname, "Mex." Within a year, Méndez was earning enough money to send some of it home each month. He also purchased the latest fashionable clothing and two cars, a LaSalle and a Cadillac. At the Cadillac dealership, he met the owner's girlfriend, Ann Amor Rodriguez Fernandez. The two had an instant attraction to each other, and Méndez managed to persuade her to leave her boyfriend. He gave her the nickname, "Nena." They were married in Detroit on October 9, 1930 and celebrated another marriage ceremony for Méndez's family in Mexico a few weeks later.

Méndez suffered a horrible lip accident in 1932 when a swinging door to the orchestra pit was suddenly flung open by a tardy musician, hitting Méndez's bell and knocking out several of his teeth and severely lacerating his upper lip. Méndez finished the show anyway, which may have been the cause of a bad infection in his lip. Several days later, a doctor burned out the infected lip tissue, leaving a large hole in the center of Méndez's upper lip. Méndez said, The doctor held a mirror to my face to show me the hole before he was to sew it up. It was so large that you could place a cigarette in it! The tissue was sutured and healed within a few weeks, but the resulting large amount of scar tissue in the upper lip, at exactly the place where the lip was to vibrate when playing the trumpet, left Méndez unable to produce a tone for weeks. His wife encouraged him to grow a moustache in order to hide the scar.

Méndez sought the help of several leading teachers, including Max Schlossberg (New York), Joseph Gustat (St. Louis), Walter M. Smith (Boston), and Herbert Clarke (Long Beach), but none of them were able to help him, and most of them told him that it was doubtful that he could ever play again. Clarke gave him an autographed copy of his Characteristic Studies with the inscription, "Hoping to someday hear you play the contents of this book." Undaunted, Méndez returned to Mexico to begin all over again with the help of his father, Maximino.

Maximino encouraged Rafael to practice pedal tones so that the scar tissue would loosen up enough to vibrate, and after several months, Rafael played even better than he had before the accident. Upon returning to the U.S., Méndez went to Clarke once more and played several pages of the Characteristic Studies, as well as some of his own solos. Needless to say, Clarke was stunned and stated in a letter to his friend Edwin Franko Goldman, Dearest Ed, Have you heard the young Mexican, Rafael Méndez? Such tone, such range, such velocity. A hundred years from now they will have forgotten about us, but the name Rafael Méndez will always be remembered.

Méndez returned to Detroit and resumed his theater work. One of the many celebrities appearing with the orchestra was Rudy Vallee, a popular singer and saxophonist, and upon hearing Méndez play, offered him a job as first trumpet in his New York show band. So, in 1933, Méndez moved to New York City, but was immediately informed by the musicians' union that New York rules stated that all NYC union members were required to have a minimum of one year's residency before they could begin union work. This obstacle was unforeseen by Vallee, so he was required to pay Méndez's salary, even though Méndez could not play for him for a year. After the residency requirement was satisfied, Méndez played for two years in Vallee's nationally broadcasted concerts from Steel Pier.

During the year fulfilling his residency, Méndez met several prominent musicians including Xavier Cugat, Carlos Molina, and David Rose. They sometimes toured across the country, playing shows at clubs and theaters. During a California trip in 1937, Méndez and David Rose were offered positions with KHJ Radio of the Mutual Broadcasting System in Los Angeles. They accepted, and began working as leaders, arrangers, and staff musicians. Méndez was given his own radio show to host, something he enjoyed doing for years.

Soon after moving to Los Angeles, Méndez received a call from his old theater colleague, Louis Maggio, who, although much older than Méndez, had played second to him in one of the Detroit theaters. Maggio had moved to Minnesota to join the Minneapolis Symphony (now the Minnesota Orchestra), and while crossing a street, slipped on the ice and hit his mouth on a trolley track spike, injuring his mouth in a way similar to Méndez's earlier accident. Maggio agreed to move to Los Angeles and learn to play the pedal tone routines Maximino had taught Méndez, and while the method helped a great deal, Maggio was not able to play as well as he once had. He decided to stay in California and teach, and over the years, became the master of teaching pedal tones. Later, several of his students wrote methods based on his teaching, including Claude Gordon, Carlton MacBeth, and Roger Spaulding.

In 1937, the Méndezs had twin sons, Rafael Jr. and Robert. Méndez was getting quite a bit of work in Los Angeles by performing in the Al Pierce Camel Show and Union Oil Show orchestras, thus providing a comfortable living for his family. He began substituting in the MGM studios during the late 1930s, and joined the MGM Studio Orchestra as a staff musician in 1939, replacing Harold Mitchell as second trumpet with Mannie Klein as first. Méndez was paid an excellent salary at MGM. He became a U.S. citizen on July 20, 1940.

Méndez began recording some of his trumpet solo compositions and arrangements during the early 1940s for various labels including Azteca, Pan American, and Exclusive. Charles Washburn, owner of Coast Records, was also interested, so Méndez recorded eight discs for Coast, sold as two 78-rpm album sets of four discs each. Selections include La Virgen de la Macarena, Carmen—Gypsy Dance, Czardas, Farewell My Granada, Lakme Bell Song, Mendelssohn Concerto, and Zigeunerweisen.

When the United States entered World War II in 1941, Mannie Klein was drafted, and Méndez moved to first chair at MGM with Uan Rasey replacing him as second. Although Méndez was registered for the draft, he was ineligible because he was too old. Méndez recorded many soundtracks as first trumpet, including Holiday in Mexico (in which he also had an on-screen role as a bandleader), Fiesta, The Bullfighter and the Lady, Hondo, The Music Man, The Matador, and For Whom the Bulls Toil. His most famous movie, in which he also had a screen role as a trumpet soloist, was Cowboy (1958) starring Glenn Ford and Jack Lemmon.

Méndez was friends with dozens of Hollywood celebrities, one of his closest being John Wayne, the famous western actor. Méndez's hobby was restoring Model A Ford automobiles, and after completing one of them, gave it to Wayne as a gift. Other famous friends included Red Skelton, Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Xavier Cugat, David Rose, Harry James, Ricardo Montalbán, and Bing Crosby.

The MGM orchestra played many concerts at the Hollywood Bowl, featuring various stars of screen, television, and radio. Many times, Méndez would be a soloist during the band numbers, which caught the attention of an executive for Decca Records who signed him to a twelve-record contract. These recordings brought worldwide attention to Méndez.

In 1949, the trumpet section of the MGM orchestra was criticized because the players "did not match sounds or vibratos." Méndez was singled out, which resulted in a heated argument between him and the conductor, who fired Méndez on the spot. Méndez was devastated by the incident and was uncertain about how he would make a living, but a possible solution arose when he discussed his problem with close friends Caroll and Mae Camburn. Mae, who was the harpist in the MGM orchestra and not always needed at the studio, agreed to serve as Méndez's booking agent, and work out of the Méndez home. Caroll, who was the West Coast representative for the publisher, Carl Fischer, Inc., arranged for Méndez to publish many of his solos and trios, which added greatly to Mendez's income.

During the years 1950 to 1975, Méndez made thousands of concert appearances with high school and college bands and orchestras. He was also the first classical trumpet soloist to perform with several major orchestras, including the Denver Symphony, Salt Lake City Symphony, and the New York Philharmonic. He appeared on several television programs, including the Loretta Young Show, Kraft Music Hour, Red Skelton Show, Dinah Shore Show, Pinky Lee Show, Art Linkletter's House Party, and the Ed Sullivan Show. Méndez became a household name in America, and his fame spread worldwide.

Méndez's favorite trumpet was his French Besson "Meha," which he used for all of his recordings. In 1950, Méndez was approached by both the Besson and the F. E. Olds & Son firms, about becoming a consultant and clinician. Besson offered him a signing bonus of five thousand dollars, but before signing the contract, Méndez wanted to surprise his wife Amor by showing her the large check. When he arrived home that afternoon, Amor greeted him wearing a full-length mink stole, offered to her by an Olds company representative as a signing bonus. Rafael explained that he could buy her several mink coats with the Besson check, but she would not depart with the stole. So, Méndez signed a contract with the Olds company with the proviso that they manufacture a Méndez-model trumpet to his specifications; Méndez was to receive an annual salary of six thousand dollars.

When sons Rafael Jr. and Robert were in their teens, their years of trumpet practice paid off; they spent several summers touring with their father, playing trios on each concert. Some of Méndez's trio compositions include Encino Polka, Nena, Chunka, The Brave Matador, Gallito, Tre-Méndez Polka, Kiko, Anniversary Polka, Jumping Bean, and Por la España Cañi. They recorded several of these trios for Decca.

Méndez's success on the concert stage made him rich. He purchased a five hundred-acre ranch near Escondido, California, where he grew olives, tomatoes, and avocadoes for a large chain of grocery stores. He also bought a five hundred-acre parcel of land in Mexico, as well as homes in Jiquilpan, Cuernavaca, and Mexico City. During his spare time, he enjoyed swimming, fishing, chess, and solving math problems with his slide rule. Although he only had a third grade education, he possessed a phenomenal mind for math and playing cards.

Méndez spent many summers during the 1950s and '60s touring state fairs as bandleader and featured soloist for celebrities such as Red Skelton, Roy Rogers, and Dale Evans. He also recorded an album for Decca almost every summer. In 1956, Méndez was featured in a film titled The Trumpet for a series of educational films released by the Mills Picture Corporation. This "Concerts on Film" series also included internationally known artists such as Jascha Heifetz (violin), Gregor Piatigorsky (cello), Arthur Rubenstein (piano), Andres Segovia (guitar), and Pablo Casals (cello). In this thirty-minute film, Méndez demonstrates his uncanny breath control by playing Mexican Hat Dance triple-tongued for forty seconds in one breath. He also uses circular breathing techniques in his performance of Flight of the Bumble Bee.

In 1956, Méndez developed severe allergies that sometimes required him to postpone performances or find substitutes for tours. In some cases during the late 1960s, Carl "Doc" Severinsen was called to fill in for last-minute tour cancellations. The allergies developed into allergic bronchitis and asthma, at times necessitating hospitalization.

Because his conditions were starting to affect his playing, Méndez allowed doctors to prescribe steroid medications in hopes of improving his health, but the therapy caused side effects such as facial bloating, "buffalo hump" shoulders, weight gain, vertebrae collapses, and osteoporosis. He was advised to temporarily discontinue touring, so he reduced the number of concerts each year from one hundred-fifty to thirty or thirty-five. In 1966, his lungs improved for a while, and he returned to his normal schedule of concerts.

In the late 1960s, Méndez's asthma worsened, making it difficult for him to perform some of his more demanding solos. Fortunately, technological advancements in recording techniques allowed him to overdub his last two LP albums for Decca. Rafael Méndez and Laurindo Almeida Together (his biggest selling album) and Concerto for Méndez were recorded in this manner.

Méndez experienced another accident in 1967 while on vacation in Jiquilpan. He was attending a Little League baseball game for a team he had recently outfitted with uniforms and equipment, and sitting behind home plate, was struck in the right cheek by a flying bat that had slipped from the batter's hands, which fractured five of his teeth and broke his lower jaw in three places; he was unable to play for an entire year. He resumed concerts in 1968, but the asthma caused him to struggle through each concert. He gradually reduced the number of performances, and generally restricted them to the West Coast. He ceased concertizing altogether in 1975, and enjoyed traveling with Amor during his retirement.

Méndez died on September 15, 1981 in his home in Encino, California. The cause of death was cardiac arrest due to a severe asthma attack in the middle of the night. He was seventy-four.

Méndez is still considered by many to be the "world's greatest trumpeter," a title used by the Decca company that he found slightly embarrassing. His reputation and memory are kept alive in many ways, mostly due to the efforts and support of his sons, Ralph Jr. and Robert. Two years after his death, Méndez was honored with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. The Rafael Méndez Library was established at Arizona State University by professor David Hickman in 1993, and the Summit Brass renamed its summer workshop the Rafael Méndez Brass Institute (formerly the Keystone Brass Institute) in his honor. All of Méndez's recordings were reissued on compact disc through the Summit Records label. The International Trumpet Guild posthumously awarded him its prestigious Honorary Award.

Méndez composed or arranged over three hundred works, most of them trumpet solos with band and orchestra accompaniments. In 2007, the Los Angeles Opera commissioned the well-known film composer Lee Holdridge to write an operetta based on the life and music of Méndez. This fifty-minute work is titled Conceirto para Méndez and was premiered by the Los Angeles Opera with Malcolm McNab as the trumpet soloist.

Méndez's widow Amor died on December 23, 1993, having developed Parkinson's disease. Sons Ralph Jr. and Robert became famed urologists in Los Angeles, and are avid arts supporters. They are on the Executive Board of Summit Brass, Inc.

Bibl.: personal interviews with Drs. Rafael Jr. and Robert Méndez, 1992; memorabilia research in the Rafael Méndez Library; Hickman, Jane and Delon Lyren. Magnificent Méndez (Summit Records/Books); Lewis, H. M. "Rafael Méndez: Trumpeter Extraordinaire" (International Trumpet Guild Newsletter, May 1979).

Mendonça, Paulo (b. Brazil, c1956). Brazilian trumpeter. Mendonça began his musical studies in Nova Friburgo in the state of Rio de Janeiro with Joaquim Naegele and Prudêncio Miranda. In 1974, he moved to the city of Rio de Janeiro where he continued his studies with Arthur Terry and Sebastião Gonçalves. In that same year, he was selected to join the Orquesta Sinfônica Brasileira. During his twelve years with the orchestra, he toured Europe and North America, as well as recording one album each for the Philips and CBS labels. From 1986 to 1989, he was principal trumpet of the Municipal Theatre in Rio de Janeiro.

Mendonça has formed several brass ensembles, including Quinteto Brasileiro de Metais. He has been a soloist with symphony, chamber, and pop orchestras throughout Brazil, and has participated in several film and television projects. He recorded a solo CD with piano in 2005, O Trompete na Musica Brasileira, for the ABM Digital label, and is an active recitalist and new music performer.

Mendonça is a graduate of the Brazilian Conservatory of Music/CEU, and is professor of trumpet there. He has been a guest teacher at the Universidade de Barra Mansa (2008) and for the Project Banda Larga (2009) sponsored by the Secretary of Culture of Rio de Janeiro.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Paulo Mendonça's official website: www.paulomendonca-rj.com.br/biography.php?id-1.

Menke, Werner (b. Diepholz, Hanover, Germany, Jan. 10, 1907; d. Müllheim, Baden, Germany, Aug. 9, 1993). German trumpeter and musicologist. Menke studied at the Humanistisches Gymnasium in Verden/Aller and at the Leipzig Conservatory (with a trumpet diploma in 1933), and later at Friedrich Alexander University of Erlangen-Nuremberg. There he received his Ph.D. in 1940 on Telemann's vocal works; a year later his dissertation, a catalogue of Telemann's works in three volumes, appeared in print in a limited number of copies. He began his trumpet-playing career at the opera house in Hanover (1930-32). After that he was active, not only as a Bach trumpeter, but also as a concert and oratorio singer (tenor), and as a singing teacher and musicologist, in Leipzig (1933-38), Nürnberg (1938-53), and Frankfurt am Main and Bad Hamburg (1953-64). Many of the most noted German opera singers were his students.

Menke is best known for his attempt to improve the old Baroque (natural) trumpets by adding two valves in order to correct the out-of-tune partials. However, his so-called "Bach" trumpets (in F and D), manufactured by the firm Alexander Brothers of Mainz, had little success, and were quickly abandoned. In order to explain the playing and advantages of this instrument, Menke published a book in German and English in 1934, The History of the Trumpet of Bach and Handel, which has become a much studied text to this day because of its insightful information concerning the writing for and playing of trumpets during the Baroque period. Menke's other contribution was his two-volume cataloging of G.P. Telemann's vocal works (in 1982-83), which in 1984-99 was supplemented with a third by Martin Ruhnke on the instrumental works.

Menke became a choir director and teacher of opera music starting in 1945, and his career gradually shifted from trumpet to choral activities until the end of his life. He was rector of the music school of the Taunus area and also was an instructor in the Kaiserin-Friedrich-Gymnasium of Bad Homburg.

Bibl.: Gatti, Guido M. and Alberto Basso. La Musica—Dizionario (Part II, 1968); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Menth, Gottfried (b. Kirchberg [near Mattighofen], Upper Austria, May 6, 1957). Austrian trumpeter. Menth started the trumpet at age eleven in the local band. He studied with Fritz Krammer at the Mozarteum in Salzburg from 1972 to 1981, graduating with honors and receiving the honorary prize from the Federal Minister for Science and Research. Since 1982, he has been serving as coprincipal of the Mozarteum Orchestra Salzburg. From 1983 to 1992, he additionally was principal trumpet of the Camerata Academica in Salzburg. He also performs on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet and posthorn with the Salzburg Baroque Soloists and the Salzburg Baroque Orchestra. Since 1982, he has taught at a university in Salzburg, and from about that time has been serving as principal trumpet of the Mozarteum Orchestra Salzburg. He has also performed with the Bayrisches Staatsorchester, Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, Vienna Philharmonic, and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, as well as with jazz musicians such as Gerry Mulligan, Dave Brubeck, and Bobby McFerrin. He was appointed an instructor at the Salzburg Mozarteum in 1982, professor in 2000.

An active soloist on modern and Baroque instruments, Menth has toured and recorded throughout Austria, Germany, and Italy with a trumpet and organ duo. He has also recorded Mozart's "Posthorn" Serenade No. 9 on the natural posthorn with the Camerata Academica under Sandor Vegh (Philips). Additionally, he was a member of the Mozarteum Orchestra Brass Quintet (1983-92).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Meredith, Henry [Morgan] (b. Douglas, Arizona, Oct. 10, 1946). American trumpeter. Meredith studied with William Adam at Indiana University, earning a bachelor of music education degree (with high distinction) in 1968. He continued his studies at IU where he also received a master of music education degree and a Specialists Certificate in Multiple Arts (both with high honors) in 1970. He taught at the University of Wisconsin-Superior from 1971 to 1974, and the University of Northern Colorado as a graduate assistant, studying with William Pfund from 1974 to 1975, and completing his doctor of arts degree in 1984. His dissertation on Girolamo Fantini received the UNC citation for excellence. He joined the faculty at the University of Western Ontario (Canada) in 1975, where he teaches brass pedagogy and music history, and has directed bands and brass ensembles. Known to his students as "Dr. Hank," he has also taught at the University of Windsor in Canada (1987-88), and was on the faculty of the Sommer-Akademie in Ebenthal, Germany, during the summer of 1978.

A specialist in the history and performance practices of the trumpet, keyed bugle, and cornet, Meredith has amassed a collection of over six thousand instruments. A frequent instrument consultant for the movie industry, he has had many of his instruments used in films, including Disney's recent remake of The Music Man starring Matthew Broderick, and The Patriot starring Mel Gibson. He has performed as soloist with dozens of period music groups including the Dodworth Saxhorn Band, The Queen's Quadrille & Quickstep Society Orchestra, Tafelmusik, and The Yankee Brass Band, and has been principal trumpet of the orchestras of Toronto, Hamilton, Waterloo, London (Ontario), Bloomington (Indiana), and Duluth (Minnesota). He is also a published composer whose works have been performed and recorded by various groups across North America.

Meredith is the artistic director of the historical concerts by L'Harmonie Universelle Ancienne (since 1987), and also leads the Plumbing Factory Brass Band, founded in 1995. He has published dozens of editions of original brass music for cornet and trumpet ensemble. Meredith is married to soprano Dr. Victoria Meredith, a well-known vocal and choral specialist and university administrator.

Bibl.: Norman, Barbara. "Henry Meredith" (The Canadian Encyclopedia); personal interview, Aug. 22, 2011.

Meretta, Leonard V. (b. Marion Heights, Pennsylvania, Sept. 5, 1915; d. Kalamazoo, Michigan, July 23, 2007). American trumpeter and conductor. Meretta enrolled in the Ernest Williams School of Music in New York where he was a classmate of Don Jacoby and other future greats of the trumpet. He interrupted his study at Williams in 1935-36 to tour as trumpet soloist with The Major Bowes Show, part of the Original Amateur Hour, which for a while, was the number one radio show on NBC. He was an active performer, playing in the bands of Edwin Franko Goldman, Percy Grainger, Frank Simon, Earl Moore, Thor Johnson, Ernest Williams, and George Howard. He received his bachelor and master of music degrees from the University of Michigan.

Meretta began his long teaching career as assistant band director at Lenoir High School in North Carolina. After four years there, director of bands Dr. William Revelli created a faculty position for Meretta to become his assistant at the University of Michigan where Meretta led the marching band. In 1945, Meretta became the trumpet teacher at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo where he established a band program, and was director of bands for twenty-seven years (until 1972). He continued as a full-time trumpet teacher and chair of the brass, winds and percussion division at WMU until his retirement in 1981.

Meretta was a published composer, member of the American Bandmasters Association, and church organist. He was active in the International Trumpet Guild, and was vice president of the Michigan chapter. Along with Donald Bullock and Stephen Jones, he cohosted the 1987 ITG Conference at Western Michigan University. He was conductor of the Kalamazoo Male Chorus from 1951 to 1963, and was a frequent guest conductor with high school, college, and professional bands including the Detroit Concert Band, Goldman Band, and the US Army Band. Meretta was an excellent educator who had a warm and unassuming character.

Bibl.: "Leonard V. Meretta" (WMU News: www.wmich.edu/wmu/news/2007/07/030.html); "Leonard V. Meretta" (American Bandmasters Association).

Merian [Megerdichian], Leon (b. South Braintree, Massachusetts, Sept. 17, 1923; d. Bradenton, Florida, Aug. 15, 2007). American trumpeter. Born to Armenian emigrants, Vahan Leon Megerdichian (whose name was later shortened by a record producer) began studying the trumpet at the age of ten near Boston. His first teacher was Georges Mager, principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He also studied with Walter M. Smith. His interest in jazz styles was influenced by recordings of Bunny Berigan, Louis Armstrong, and Roy Eldridge.

When he graduated from high school, Merian was offered a scholarship in physics to the University of Wisconsin, but turned it down in order to pursue a career in music. He began playing in various local club orchestras and joined Lucky Millinder's band in 1942. While touring with the all-black band, Merian was often not allowed to stay in black hotels, but when he looked for a room at a nearby white hotel, he was often turned away because he was a member of a black band, so he slept many nights in the bus. In 1947, he left Millinder and returned to New York City where he worked with various show bands. He eventually became a staff musician for NBC, ABC, and CBS television, performing in the orchestras for programs such as The Jimmy Durante Show, The Alan Freed Show, The Jackie Gleason Show, Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, The Jerry Lewis Telethon, American Bandstand, and The David Susskind Show. He also performed in Broadway pit orchestras for The Danny Kaye Show, The Judy Garland Show, Silk Stockings, and Wonderful Town.

Merian's New York days were full of good times, but he began to drink too much and often stayed out all night. While on a tour to Florida, he drank a great deal of wine one night before falling asleep in his hotel room. The next morning, he decided to go for a swim in the ocean, but was carried out to sea by the tides. He struggled to swim to shore and nearly drowned after becoming exhausted. After being hospitalized from the ordeal, he credited Jesus for saving his life and became a very religious man from then on.

As rock-and-roll bands began to replace the show bands in the studios, Merian decided to go to college in order to support his family. He earned a bachelor's and master's degree in 1961 and 1963, respectively, in French from Columbia University. He also studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and at the Boston University College of Music. He taught in the Milton public schools, substituted at Iona College, and later taught fulltime at Endicott College in Boston. However, he continued playing the trumpet during this time and eventually resumed his trumpet career in New York.

Merian became one of the world's finest lead trumpeters, known for his beautifully lyric solos. During his illustrious career, he performed and recorded with Jackie Gleason, Lucky Millinder, Elliot Lawrence, Tadd Dameron, Xavier Cugat, Jerry Vale, Elvis Presley, Johnny Mathis, Wayne Newton, Jerry Lewis, Patti Page, David Susskind, Caterina Valente, Diana Ross, Frankie Lane, Chubby Checker, Pete Rugolo, Boyd Raeburn, Machito, Chico Alvarez, Richard Himber, Specs Powell, Aldemaro Romero, Frank Sinatra, Nat "King" Cole, Sarah Vaughan, Murray Laws and Gigi Hallmark, Gene Krupa, Tony Bennett, Jimmy Durante, Bob Hope, Lena Horne, Tom Jones, Robert Goulet, The Mills Brothers, Sammy Davis Jr., The Supremes, Jack Jones, Ella Fitzgerald, Pat Boone, Harry Simeone, Pearl Bailey, Vic Damone, Paul Anka, Tito Rodriguez, Chico O'Farrill, Hugo Montenegro, Noro Morales, Dean Martin, Charlie Barnet, Gladys Bruce, Sabby Lewis, and others.

Merian's solo albums include The Real Thing (Diem), This Time the Swing's on Me (Mahorn), Magic Carpet (Mahorn), Cleopatra (Seeco), Fiorello (Seeco), Two Trumpets in Hi Fi (Melba), The Magic Horn (Decca), and The Many Moods of Merian (20th Century Fox). He also published a book of exercises titled Trumpet Isometrics (distributed by The Woodwind & Brasswind) and an autobiography with Bill Bridges titled Leon Merian, The Man Behind the Horn (Diem Publishing Co.).

Merian was married three times: first to Anne Najarian (married in 1947 and divorced in 1964), second to Carole Zawaski (married in 1968 and divorced in 1978), and third to Elizabeth Biantiano (married in 1994, but she died in 2003). He had one son. After retiring to Florida, Merian died at the age of eighty-four due to complications from diabetes.

Bibl.: Edgett, Brian. "The Man Behind the Horn: An Interview with Leon Merian" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2004); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Merian, Leon with Bill Bridges. Leon Merian, The Man Behind the Horn (Diem Pub. Co.); Muse, Daniel J. "Leon Merian, 84, noted jazz trumpeter was also French teacher" (The Boston Globe, Aug. 22, 2007); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Merkelo, Paul (b. Champaign-Urbana, Illinois, May 1, 1968). American trumpeter. Merkelo started on trumpet at eleven. His first lessons were with Jerry Loyet and Raymond Sasaki. He attended the Eastman School of Music, studying with Charles Geyer; he also studied for a while with Philip Smith of the New York Philharmonic. He attended the Tanglewood Institute during the summer of 1990 where he took lessons from Charles Schlueter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Merkelo was principal trumpet of the New Orleans Philharmonic during the 1991-92 season. He then played as principal of the Rochester Philharmonic from 1993 to 1995 before accepting his current position in 1995 as principal of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra in Canada. He has also performed on occasion with the New York Philharmonic and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Merkelo is an active soloist who debuted in New York at Lincoln Center with the New World Symphony under the baton of Maestro Michael Tilson Thomas (1998). He has given recitals at the conferences of the International Trumpet Guild, released two solo albums titled A Simple Song? and Baroque Transcriptions for the Amberola label, and commissioned several works for trumpet. He is a highly virtuosic and versatile performer who has been called "the trumpeter of the twenty-first century." His solo works range from J.S. Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 to a trumpet concerto written for him by David Liptak that he premiered in 1995 with the Rochester orchestra.

Merkelo teaches at McGill University in Montreal, and since 2005 has also taught each summer at the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara, California.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Paul Merkelo" (www.allegrachambermusic.com/musicians/merkelo.html); Paul Merkelo's official website: www.paulmerkelo.com.

Mertens, Théo (b. Boechout [near Antwerp], Belgium, Feb. 10, 1932; d. Edegem, Belgium [near Antwerp], Mar. 31, 2003). Belgian trumpeter. Mertens began playing the cavalry trumpet at the age of four. At age six, he began to take lessons from his father, an amateur trombonist, before studying with Steylaerts and Emile Maes. He played in the school band, and soon showed a prodigious talent. Then he studied with Emiel Maes at the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp; directly after graduation he received a teaching position there that he retained for the rest of his life. By age fourteen, he was a member of the Antwerp orchestra (now the Antwerp Philharmonic), and by age seventeen was named its principal trumpet. His solo career developed rapidly from age eighteen.

In 1950, Mertens played with Adolf Scherbaum. He then joined the BRT Symphony Orchestra (1951-64). At the age of twenty-three he entered the 1955 Geneva Competition, tying Maurice André for first prize. However, André's solo career developed very quickly due to his many recordings, and it was another decade before Mertens had the opportunity to produce albums (with Telefunken) with international distribution. But, like André, Mertens played popular music with bandleaders such as Henri Segers and Francis Bay, and was a featured soloist at the Belgium Radio-Television (BRT) playing works by Brenta, Loucheur, Jolivet, Tomasi, and Haydn. Mertens organized the Théo Mertens Brass Quintet, and in 1958 soon expanded it for the Brussels World's Fair to become the seventeen-piece Théo Mertens Brass Ensemble. Both groups were very active, and produced over a dozen record albums for the Eufoda label. These albums consisted mostly of pop versions of classical music arranged by Mertens, and failed to compete with the popularity of the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble in England, so Mertens remained an overshadowed performer throughout his life, despite the joie de vivre he constantly exuded.

Mertens also released a dozen or so albums of pop arrangements with his brother Albert, a trombonist, before Albert was suddenly and tragically killed in an automobile accident. Théo began to concentrate on teaching, and held two positions as a professor, one at the Rotterdam (Holland) Conservatory, and another at the Royal Flemish Music Conservatory in Antwerp. He continued recording for the Telefunken and Eufoda labels. He died at the age of seventy-one.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lowrey, Alvin. "Spotlight on Théo Mertens" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1985); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3 & video clip; Oct. 2008).

Mestrini, Freek (b. Heerlen, Holland, Sept. 12, 1946). Dutch trumpeter, flugelhornist, arranger, and composer. Mestrini began playing flugelhorn at age six, and later studied trumpet and music theory at the Music Conservatories of The Haag and Antwerp (finishing in 1969). At age twenty-two, he auditioned for and won a position as principal trumpet with the Royal Holland Marine Orchestra, and soon held a similar chair with the Rotterdam Opera House Orchestra.

Mestrini moved to Bavaria in 1973, where he joined Ernst Mosch and His Original Egerländer Musicians (a polka-band) as a flugelhorn player and arranger, and stayed with the group until 1994. He has directed the Stadtkapelle Kaufbeuren since 1988, and has composed and arranged over five hundred works.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Metcalf, Louis [Jr.] (b. Webster Groves, Missouri, Feb. 28, 1905; d. New York, New York, Oct. 27, 1981). American trumpeter. Metcalf began playing drums, but soon switched to cornet; he studied with P.G. Lankford. His early playing experiences were with Charlie Creath in St. Louis (1918-23). He moved to New York in 1923 and played in Jimmie Cooper's Black & White Revue, as well as in clubs; he also first played on recordings as a sideman on trumpet.

Between 1924 and 1926, Metcalf played with Willie "the Lion" Smith and Andrew Preer's Cotton Club Syncopators. He also played with Sidney Bechet (1924), Elmer Snowden (1925), Charlie Johnson (1926), and Sam Wooding (1927). The zenith of his fame occurred during his years with Duke Ellington's Cotton Club Orchestra (1926-28). Ellington let him go in 1928, but Metcalf joined Jelly Roll Morton's group where he continued to record (1928-29).

Metcalf freelanced a great deal during the late 1920s, backing singers on recordings with Mary Dixon, Josie Miles, Lizzie Miles, Helen Gross, Rosa Henderson, Martha Copeland, Butterbeans & Susie, Hazel Meyers, Sara Martin, Mamie Smith, and Viola McCoy. During the Depression, Metcalf worked with Connie's Inn Revue and Vernon Andrade. He made few or no recordings during this time, but managed to play with the Cotton Club Orchestra, Clarence Williams, Jasper Davis, Gulf Coast Seven, Jungle Town Stompers, James P. Johnson, the Musical Stevedores, Harry's Happy Four, the Original Jazz Hounds, Kansas City Five, and Wabash Trio, and substitute for King Oliver in Oliver's band (1929). Metcalf's wide range, bright tone, crisp articulation, and muted effects made him a popular soloist and sideman.

In early 1929, Metcalf played in Luis Russell's band, but after several months the two had a falling out, so Metcalf moved to Montreal for three years where he worked as a singer and dancer in vaudeville shows. In March of 1935, he played with the Fletcher Henderson orchestra and recorded two tunes with Richard M. Jones's big band, his only recordings during the 1930s. He also played on riverboats in the St. Louis area with Dewey Jackson, and spent some time in Chicago with Dave Peyton before returning to New York to lead a band at the Heatwave Club. After several years, he went back to Montreal (1944) and organized the International Band that played a wide range of repertoire, from Dixieland to bebop.

Metcalf led small groups in New York from 1951 through the early 1970s. He was an advocate for Music Dial, a magazine dedicated to civil rights. His fifty-year career gradually slowed down until his death at the age of seventy-six.

Metcalf is remembered mostly for his early days with Duke Ellington. He recorded many discs as a sideman and one as a leader: Louis Metcalf at the Alibaba (Spivey, 1966).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Metheny, Mike (b. Kansas City, Missouri, 1949). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Metheny grew up in Lee's Summit near Kansas City. His father and maternal grandfather were good amateur trumpet players. Metheny began playing trumpet at age ten, taking lessons from his band director Keith House. He attended the University of Missouri where he studied with John Alexander and graduated with a bachelor of music education degree in 1971. He then joined the US Army Field Band, serving from 1971 to 1974. After military obligations, Metheny earned a master of music education degree in two years at Northeast Missouri State University, at which time his musical focus switched from classical to jazz music. His early classical influences were recordings of Rafael Méndez and Don Jacoby, while his jazz influences were recordings of Clark Terry, Art Farmer, and Freddie Hubbard.

Metheny joined the Berklee College of Music faculty in 1976. His jazz mentors were Jeff Stout and Greg Hopkins. Because his tone on the trumpet was very bright, Metheny began using flugelhorn a great deal in his performances. He formed his own jazz quartet, and in 1982 released his first album, Blue Jay Sessions, on Headfirst. He continued teaching until 1983 when he moved back to the Kansas City area.

Metheny's other albums include Day In—Day Out (MCA/Impulse), Kaleidoscope (MCA/Impulse), and Street of Dreams (Altenburgh). More recent CDs include KC Potpourri, Back to Basics, and Close Enough for Love, each on his own label (3 Valve Music). He worked as a freelance writer for various jazz magazines and was an editor of Jazz Ambassador Magazine from 1994 to 2003.

Today, Metheny performs regularly in Kansas City, and is known for his light and smooth style of trumpet and flugelhorn playing. He has also regularly utilized the EVI (Electronic Valve Instrument), which is a trumpet synthesizer with a seven-octave range. (Unfortunately, it is no longer available for purchase.) He has received the Outstanding Brass Player award from the Boston Music Awards.

Bibl.: Tomashefsky, Paul. "Tomorrow is a New Day: An Interview with Mike Metheny" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2006); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Métrailler, Gérard (b. Chalais, Switzerland, Oct. 5, 1961). Swiss trumpeter. Métrailler started playing the saxophone at the age of nine, but switched to the cornet at the age of sixteen. He began his formal music studies at the Harmonie de Chalais, and then played in the Treize Etoiles Brass Band. He attended the Geneva Conservatory, where he studied with Mario Alberti, and later with Michel Cuvit, graduating with honors in 1985. After his studies at the conservatory he became the assistant principal trumpet of the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande at the age of twenty-five. He received the First Prize of Virtuosity from the conservatory in 1988. He continued his Conservatory studies and received its First Prize of Virtuosity in 1988.

Métrailler won Second Prize in the Concours International de Geneva in 1987, Second Prize at the Concours Maurice André in 1988, and the Bronze Medal at the Festival International de Jeunes Soloistes de Bordeaux. He is currently the assistant principal trumpet of the Suisse Romande, first trumpet of the contemporary ensemble, Contrechamps, and a member of the Quintette des Rhône. He is also professor of trumpet at the Geneva Conservatory. Métrailler made a recording with organist François Margot on the GMS label.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Orchestra de la Suisse Romande Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mettome, Doug[las Voll] (b. Salt Lake City, Utah, Mar. 19, 1925; d. Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 17, 1964). American trumpeter. Mettome began playing piano, but soon switched to trumpet. He led a band in Salt Lake City until he joined the military for three years, after which, he moved to New York and freelanced. He joined Billy Eckstine's orchestra (1946-47), Neal Hefti (1948), and Benny Goodman's band and sextet (1948-49). He also played with Herbie Fields and recorded with Allen Eager. His early influences were Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie, and Fats Navarro.

During the 1950s, Mettome played with Woody Herman's Third Herd (1950-52) and the bands of Tommy Dorsey (1953), Pete Rugolo, and Johnny Richards (1957). He recorded with Sam Most (1953) and Urbie Green (1953, 1955), but never led his own recording session. He had his own swing quartet in the early 1960s, but moved back to his hometown of Salt Lake City after a couple of years. He died one month before his thirty-ninth birthday.

Mettome's recordings for Capitol, Bethlehem, and Prestige represent his best. In particular, solos on tunes such as Undercurrent Blues and The Huckle-buck (recorded with the Benny Goodman Orchestra on Capitol) plus Bedlam and Blue Lou (recorded with Goodman's sextet) feature him at his best.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Metzdorff [Metsdorf], [Johann] Gustav (b. Wehlau [near Köthen], Germany, May 16, 1822; d. St. Petersburg, Russia, May 4, 1884). German-born Russian cornetist, trumpeter, and conductor. Little is known about Metzdorff's life growing up in Germany. Perhaps he studied in the Berlin Conservatory, since the cellist H. Metzdorff, who was presumably his brother, studied there. He moved to Russia in 1847 to conduct the St. Petersburg Military Band (1847-48), and was the cornet soloist in the Italian opera orchestra (1849-68). He was the first professor of brass at the newly established St. Petersburg Conservatory of Music (1862-68), and was vice director of the military bands for the Imperial Theaters.

Metzdorff was a successful teacher who was proud of his German roots. He was a vociferous partisan of composer Richard Wagner, and when Wagner visited the St. Petersburg Conservatory in 1863 to conduct portions of his Ring cycle, Metzdorff would literally physically attack any person who dared criticize Wagner or his music.

Metzdorff wrote a method for cornet (not published) as well as several compositions and arrangements for cornet or trumpet with piano, including Variations for trumpet and piano. Among his best-known students were August Vasilevich Johanson (1853-1916) and Ilya Yepifanovich Solovyov (1840-90).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Metzger, Richard ("Rick") (b. c1945). American trumpeter. Metzger was principal trumpet of the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra from 1967 to 1997. He also served as an adjunct faculty member at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. Among his former students are Edward Hoffman, Steve Huefner, and Donald Buell.

Bibl.: "Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra Principal Trumpet Players" (www.trumpetherald.com / forum/viewtopic.php?topic=19117 &forum=4&4).

Michel, Andreas (b. Baden-Baden, Germany, Dec. 27, 1962). German trumpeter. Michel's father Werner Michel played principal trombone in the SWF Symphony Orchestra in Baden-Baden. Andreas's early teachers were Walter Scholz, Baldur Höhe, Wolfgang Basch, and Karl Nagel. Beginning in 1982, Andreas studied trumpet with Reinhold Lösch at the Heidelberg-Mannheim Music School. He also studied for a while in Berlin with Konradin Groth.

Michel's career includes orchestral appointments with the National Theater Orchestra of Mannheim, State Theater of Karlsruhe, Court Chamber Orchestra of Baden-Württemberg, Philharmonic Baden-Baden, Jena Philharmonic, and Württemberg Philharmonic of Reutlingen. He founded the ARTA trumpet ensemble, and is a member of the Ludwigsburger Brass Quintet and the Atlantis Brass.

Since 1988, Michel has been teaching trumpet at the Trossinger Musikhochschule, and is a guest clinician at many institutions and jury member at international competitions. His two CDs are Rhapsody for Two, and Fireworks (with ARTA, that is, three trumpets plus organ). He plays all of the regular trumpets, plus performs on a modern so-called corno da caccia pf his own development. He has also produced a series of music editions for Spaeth & Schmid.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Andreas Michel's official website: www.andreas-michel-musiker.de).

Photo: Andreas Michel and pianist Nicola Hollenbach.

Michel, Jean-François (b. Fribourg, Switzerland, Mar. 6, 1957). Swiss trumpeter. Michel's first musical education was at the Fribourg conservatory. At age eighteen, he won a bronze medal at the Munich solo competition, and a year later became principal trumpet of the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra (1976-86). He then returned to Switzerland to assume a professorship at the Fribourg, Sion, and Lausanne Conservatories through the professional organization HEMU (Haute-Ecole de Musique); he added Geneva in 1997. He toured the world as a soloist and chamber music performer, and has played with the Nov'ars brass quintet, Buccinatoris, Collegium Novum Zürich, Slokar Trio, Swiss Brass Consort, Fribourg Brass Quartet, and the Munich Bach Orchestra conducted by Maestro Karl Richter.

A prolific composer and arranger for brass, Michel has written over thirty works, and over one hundred arrangements. He has released the album Trumpet Recital (Audite) and other recordings. Among his best known students are Roland Doldt (b. 1969), André Schüpbach (b. 1963), Laurent Tinguely (b. 1967), Stephan Geiser (b. 1968), Rudi Scheck (b. 1958), and Jean-Christophe Dobrzelewski (b. 1978).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bks. 1 & 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mikkelborg, Palle (b. Copenhagen, Denmark, Mar. 6, 1941). Danish trumpeter and composer. Mikkelborg began playing trumpet at the age of fifteen and was completely self-taught. He began playing professionally by the age of nineteen. He studied composition at the Royal Music Conservatory in Copenhagen before joining the Danish Radio Jazz Group in 1964, which he led from 1966 to 1972. He also played in the Danish Radio Big Band from 1965 to 1971, co-led a jazz quintet with Alex Riel, and played in Peter Herbolzheimer's big band from 1970 until 1975. Already in 1968 he was elected Denmark's Jazzer No. 1. He led a group called Entrance from 1975 to 1985, and a trio from 1983 to 1985.

Mikkelborg has written many of his own jazz tunes, has composed numerous film and television scores, and is a skilled arranger. He is most famous as a composer for his album with Miles Davis (1984) titled Aura.

During Mikkelborg's long career, he has worked with many leading jazz musicians, including Joachim Kuhn, Eje Thelin, Jan Garbarek, Terje Rypdal, Abdullah Ibrahim, Philip Catherine, Maynard Ferguson, Don Cherry, Ben Webster, Johnny Dyani, Dexter Gordon, Gil Evans, George Gruntz, Charlie Mariano, Karin Krog (1974), George Russell, and Yusef Lateef. He has played on over one hundred recordings, and has released his own albums that include Hommage / Once Upon A Time (Sonet), Imagine (Storyville), Aura (Columbia, with Miles Davis), Entrance (Metronome), Anything But Grey (Columbia), The Garden Is a Woman (Replay), Crystal Bridge (Danacord), The Voice of Silence, Song...Tread Lightly, and Gabor Juhasz & Palle Mikkelborg—60/40.

Mikkelborg is a well-known record producer in Denmark. He performs in a jazz group with his wife, harpist Helen Davies, and often uses electronic trumpet. He has received the Nordic Council Music Prize (2001) and the Sonning Music Prize (1984). He describes his musical philosophy by stating, My personal sound and my ideas for concerts are naturally inspired by my deep interest in spiritual matters. I have never had a musical ambition in my life, only a spiritual one. My life-long journey in music and its magic has only even had one aim—to find peace in mind.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Palle Mikkelborg" (www.allaboutjazz.com); "Palle Mikkelborg" (www.damu.dk/dk.asp?pallemikkelborg).

Miles, Ronald ("Ron") [Glen] (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, May 9, 1963). American trumpeter. Miles moved with his family to Denver when he was eleven, the same year he began playing the trumpet. He became interested in jazz when his junior high jazz band director Dale Hamilton introduced him to recordings of Miles Davis, Maynard Ferguson, and Dizzy Gillespie. Miles attended the University of Denver (1981-85), earning a bachelor of music degree studying with Gerald Endsley. He enrolled in the Manhattan School of Music in New York (1985-86), and then the University of Colorado in Boulder (1986-91), studying with Terry Sawchuk. He performed with the Boulder Creative Music Ensemble (1984-88), Jazz Worms (1985-88), Bruce Odland Big Band, and Kim Stone (1987-88).

Miles began teaching at Denver Metropolitan State College in 1991, serving on their jazz faculty. He toured for two years with the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1992-93) under the direction of Mercer Ellington, and has played on and off with Bill Frisell since 1994. Miles's solo albums include Witness (Capri), Ron Miles Trio (Capri), My Cruel Heart (Gramavision), Woman's Day (Gramavision), Distance for Safety (Prolific), Heaven (Ster-ling Circle), and Laughing Barrel (Sterling Circle).

Miles is married to flutist Kari Miles. He is a modest person, considered to be one of the finest jazz performers, composers, and arrangers of his generation.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Ron Miles" (www.enotes.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Miley, James Wesley ("Bubber") (Aiken, South Carolina, Apr. 3, 1903; d. New York, New York, May 20, 1932). American trumpeter. Miley's father was an amateur guitarist, and his three sisters became professional singers. The family moved to New York when Miley was six years old. He began playing trombone, then cornet, and finally trumpet. He served in the navy from 1918 to 1919, after which he worked as a professional musician with the Carolina Five, Willie Gant's Band, and Mamie Smith's Jazz Hounds from 1921 to 1922 with which he made his first recordings.

Miley mostly freelanced from 1922 to 1923, but also joined Thomas Morris's Past Jazz Masters in 1923, recording extensively through 1924. During 1924, he also played with the Kansas City Five and the Six Black Diamonds. In 1923, he played with Elmer Snowden's Washingtonians, which was taken over during the next year by Duke Ellington and renamed the Duke Ellington Orchestra. The group recorded several tunes that featured Miley, two of which, Choo Choo and Rainy Nights, resulted in great notoriety for Miley. He played with Ellington intermittently through 1929.

Some of Miley's compositions were arranged by Ellington and made the band famous. These include Black and Tan Fantasy, East St. Louis Toodle-oo, Doin' the Voom-Voom, and Creole Love Song. Miley was heavily influenced by the playing styles of King Oliver and Johnny Dunn, but he developed his own unique style of playing with a plunger mute over a regular straight mute. He often combined this with a growl to create a "jungle sound" that became the trademark of the Ellington band. Some of Miley's best feature solo recordings include Jubilee Stomp, The Mooche, Hot and Bothered, Bandanna Babies, Diga Diga Do, and Tiger Rag. Many jazz trumpeters including Sidney De Paris, Cootie Williams, and Ray Nance later imitated his growl and plunger work.

Without doubt, Miley was Ellington's favorite soloist in the band. Despite his reputation for never firing anyone from the band, Ellington made the difficult decision to release Miley because of his excessive drinking and a growing unreliability. (Miley's replacement was Cootie Williams in 1929.) Miley joined Noble Sissle's orchestra in May of 1929, touring France with it, and played for a while with Zutty Singleton and Allie Ross.

In 1930, Miley played with an all-white band led by Leo Reisman, but was hidden from the audience by a screen. His recording with Reisman, What Is This Thing Called Love, received wide acclaim. He also made four recordings with Jelly Roll Morton and one (St. James Infirmary) with King Oliver. For several months in 1931, Miley backed the famous dancer Roger Pryor Dodge at the Sweet and Low Revue. He also formed his own band that managed to record six songs before he died, two of the most popular being, I Lost My Gal from Memphis and Black Maria.

The effects of alcoholism weakened Miley, and he died after having contracted tuberculosis three months earlier. He was only twenty-nine years old.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Miller, Charlie (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Mar. 14, 1938). American trumpeter. Miller grew up in New Orleans. He began playing trumpet at age twelve, and also learned to play the piano, flute, and tuba. He played with the Skyliners during the 1950s (with Mac Rebennack, later known as Dr. John) and in the Newport Youth Band (1959). During the early 1960s, he accepted a full scholarship to the Manhattan School of Music where he studied with William Vacchiano. He enjoyed a successful career in New York for nearly three decades, performing in Broadway show pit orchestras, the New York Ballet Theater Orchestra, the Saturday Night Live house band, The Tonight Show with Jay Leno band, the Conan O'Brien Show band, and with many leading artists. Miller appeared in a Carnegie Hall concert with Thelonius Monk. He has recorded with many jazz greats including Johnny Adams, B.B. King, Bill Watrous, Al Hirt, Dr. John (a boyhood friend, for whose New York band he functioned as musical director and arranger, besides playing the trumpet), Lou Rawls, Jimmy Witherspoon, and many others. A duet song Miller wrote for Lou Rawls and Denise Williams won a Grammy award. His solo CDs include Peace Horn, Fonk Horn, and Christmas in New Orleans.

Miller moved back to New Orleans in 1989, and continued to perform and record jazz. After Hurricane Katrina, he was forced to move to Arkansas, then Mississippi, and briefly, France. He said, I was lost for four years. I didn't know where I belonged, or what to do... there was a lot of confusion with the storm, the anger, disappointment and sadness of it all, and a bit of denial of emotions along the way. While he was in France, the Minister of Culture presented him with a new trumpet during a national television broadcast.

Miller now resides in Kenner, near New Orleans, and teaches jazz at Loyola University.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Charlie Miller" (www.nola.com/music/index.ssf/2009/12/trumpeter_charlie_miller_retur.html); Charlie Miller's official website: www.charliemiller.us.

Miller, Dan (b. Waukegan, Illinois, May 31, 1969). American trumpeter. Miller's father John encouraged him to appreciate good jazz trumpet playing by listening to recordings. Dan took lessons in Chicago from Nick Drozdoff and Gary Slavo, and in 1984 met Bobby Shew and Tom Harrell, both of whom inspired him to attend North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) where he studied with Don Jacoby and John Haynie (1987-89). However, he dropped out of school in order to join Woody Herman's orchestra.

A long association began between Miller and Harry Connick Jr. in 1990 when Connick invited Miller to play lead in his newly formed band. Since then, he has toured and recorded with Connick on and off again, as well as with the band of Maynard Ferguson. He has also played with Wynton Marsalis and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, and can be heard on the soundtrack for the film, Marsalis on Music (1994).

Miller moved to New York City with his brother and trombonist, David Miller, in November of 1991. Between tours with Connick, Tom Jones, and other artists, he is an active freelance musician and educational clinician. Since 2004, he has been splitting his time between New York and Florida, where he is a member of the Danny Sinoff Quartet. In 2010, he became a member of the Naples (Florida) Philharmonic Jazz Orchestra.

Miller cites Fats Navarro, Dizzy Gillespie, Freddie Hubbard, Kenny Dorham, Charlie Parker, Sonny Rollins, Thelonious Monk, and Curtis Fuller as his main musical influences.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Dan Miller's official website: www.danmillerjazz.com.

Miller, Ernest Burden ("Punch" "Kid Punch") (b. Raceland, Louisiana, May 10, 1894; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 2, 1971). American trumpeter. Although The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz lists June 10, 1894 as Miller's date of birth, and his social security card incorrectly dates it as December 24, 1897, his death certificate (Social Security Index 340-12-3943) states May 10, 1894. Miller's father abandoned his family when he was a boy, and so Ernest adopted his mother's maiden name of Miller. He played bass drum, baritone horn, and trombone before playing the cornet. He began playing in a local Baptist church boys' band with his father-in-law William Ivery, and took lessons from Paul Rosier, Jim Humphrey, Louis "Chief" Matthews, Earl Humphrey, and Joe Howard. Miller was always interested in technical subjects about music, and exchanged information with Kid Rena, Buddy Petit, and Sam Morgan.

Miller played in a few local groups, such as the Paul Rosier Band and the Spencer Taylor Brass Band, or in duet with Lonnie Johnson (in Bayou Lafourche) before joining the Army during World War I, continuing his music with the 419th Labor Battalion (in Beauregard, during 1918-19 as principal bugler). After this service, he moved to New Orleans where he joined Jack Carey (1919-20). Miller led his own bands (1919-24), the most famous of which was the Zulu Band, including Louis Armstrong and Kid Rena on cornets, and introducing up-tempo blues in the streets of New Orleans.

Miller became one of the leading jazz musicians in New Orleans during the early 1920s. He worked with many of the best musicians including Kid Ory (1919) and Fate Marable (1920-22), as well as leading his own band. He worked for a while in Dallas with Mack's Merrymakers and toured for years with a vaudeville revue as a trumpeter and singer (1923-26). He also played with Chris Kelly (1914), Buddy Petit (1924), and played duets with Manuel Manetta on piano at the Anders's Tea Room.

Miller (nicknamed "Punch" because his sister's middle name was Judy, after the popular puppet show, Punch and Judy), settled in Chicago in 1926 where he played intermittently with, or recorded with many artists including Albert Wynn (1928), Jelly Roll Morton (1927), Omer Simeon, Chippie Hill, Freddie Keppard (spring 1928), Tiny Parham (1928-30), François Moseley (1929-1930), Frankie Franko (1929-35), Erskine Tate, Zilner Randoph, Walter Barnes (1935-39), and Jimmy Bertrand. During the 1930s, he worked with Big Bill Broonzy and Tampa Red, making several excellent recordings. He also played in the WPA Band conducted by Zilner Randolph. Miller first recorded under his own name in 1941.

Although Miller continued to work in Chicago with Jasper Taylor (1945), he went to New York City in 1947 where he recorded thirteen tunes for Savoy, and broadcasted for Rudi Blesh. He toured with a rock and roll revue (1954-55) and in November of 1955, returned to New Orleans and became a part-time performer. He played at Larry Borenstein's gallery in 1957. Miller became seriously ill in 1959-60, but made a fine comeback the following year. From 1960 to 1967, he made numerous recordings for such labels as Icon, Atlantic, Southland, GHB, Imperial, and Jazz Crusade. He toured Japan with George Lewis (1963-64), and was well known for his technical ability and blues solos.

After his death in 1971, Miller became part of the 1971 documentary film, New Orleans: 'Til the Butcher Cuts Him Down (Rhapsody Films). Some of the recordings he led are The Wild Horns (Paramount), Preservation Hall (Atlantic), and The River's in Mourning (Icon).

Bibl.: Hillman, Christopher and Roy Middleton. New Orleans Trumpet in Chicago (Cagnet Publications, 2009); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Miller, John (b. Markinch [near Fife], Scotland, Dec. 26, 1951). Scottish trumpeter. Miller began playing the cornet at the age of seven, and soon joined a local brass band. During his teens, he was a member of the National Youth Brass Band of Scotland and then the National Youth Orchestra, where he was selected to perform the Hummel concerto, and studied with Ernest Hall. Miller attended King's College, Cambridge University (1970-74), where he studied academic music, and took trumpet lessons on the side from Philip Jones, Edgar Howarth, and Howard Snell. He then received scholarships enabling him to study in America with William Vac-chiano (six months) and Vincent Cichowicz (six months).

Miller freelanced until 1977 when he joined the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble and the London Sinfonietta, and briefly played in the London Symphony Orchestra. He was a member of the Philharmonia Orchestra (1977-94), performing mostly as second trumpet, but occasionally as first. In addition to all of the various standard trumpets, he performed in orchestras with a (valveless) Baroque trumpet made by Egger. Beginning in 1986, he also performed and recorded with The Wallace Collection, until the group disbanded when John Wallace retired from performing to become a school administrator.

An active teacher, Miller has taught at the Junior Guildhall music school as well as the Guildhall School of Music (1980-2000). Since 1991, he has been trumpet tutor for The National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain, and from 1996 with the European Union Youth Orchestra. In 1993, he was elected a Fellow of the Guildhall School. He is currently director of brass at the Royal Northern College of Music in Manchester, England (since 1999), where the 2002 International Trumpet Guild Conference was held. He has published Trumpet Basics, The Baroque Trumpets, The Good Brass Guide, Circuit Training for Trumpet, and Going Solo Trumpet.

Bibl.: Irish, John. "Putting Music First: An Interview with John Miller" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2005); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Miller, Michael (b. c1972). American trumpeter. Miller grew up in Cleveland Heights, Ohio. As a boy, he enjoyed playing his grandfather's old bugle; he began playing the trumpet in his elementary school band, and at age sixteen, was inspired by a concert given by the great French trumpeter, Maurice André. During high school, Miller worked as an usher at Severance Hall, home of the Cleveland Orchestra, and decided to pursue a career in music. He earned a bachelor of music degree from Baldwin-Wallace College studying with James Darling, and a master of music degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory studying with Philip Collins. He also studied with Eugene Blee, James Thompson, and Larry Black.

After college, Miller joined the Peace Corps and served in war-torn Liberia. He returned home a short time later, but moved to the Dominican Republic where he joined the Orquesta Sinfonica National. After one year, he returned to the United States and won an audition in the now-defunct Savannah Symphony Orchestra. He then became second trumpet of the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra (1994-2002), and principal (2002-06), where he met his wife, Evelyn. He won a position as fourth trumpet in the Cleveland Orchestra in 2005, effective in the summer of 2006, and replacing his former teacher James Darling. Miller continues in this position today, as well as serving on the faculty of the Cleveland Institute of Music. He has also performed with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Cincinnati Opera orchestra, and the Stuttgart Ballet orchestra, and has taught at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, Queen's University of Charlotte, and the University of South Carolina. As a Fulbright grantee, he also performed and taught with the National Symphony Orchestra in Quito, Ecuador.

Bibl.: Lewis, Zachary. "Solos: Hard work and humility landed trumpeter in Cleveland Orchestra" (www.cleveland.com/musicdance/index.ssf/2010/08/post_77.html); "Michael Miller" (www.cim.edu/conservatory/bios.php?id=270); "Michael Miller" (www.clevelandorchestra.com/about/miller-michael.aspx).

Miller, Samuel (b. Russia, Dec. 16, 1891; d. after 1933). Russian trumpeter. Miller served as principal trumpet of the New York Symphony (1918-19) under Maestro Walter Damrosch. He later held the same position with the San Francisco Symphony (1919-20), Cleveland Orchestra (1920-21), and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (1921-22). He also played with the Goldman Band (1920, 1927-29, and 1931). When composer Carlos Chavez premiered several of his chamber works on April 2, 1933, Miller was listed as the trumpeter.

Bibl.: Clark, Keith C. "The Beginning of a Legend: The Young Mr. Glantz and His Contemporaries" (New York Brass Conference for Scholarships, 1978); "Samuel Miller" (www.stokowski.org/Principal_Musicians_Cleveland_Orchestra.htm).

Millikan, Robert ("Bob") C. (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, Nov. 12, 1945). American trumpeter. Millikan grew up in McCordsville, Indiana. He began playing trumpet at age six; his first teachers were Bob Meyers and Jim Edison. He improved rapidly, and began playing professionally at age twelve when he became a member of the Indianapolis Symphonic Band. After graduating from Vernon Township High School in 1963, he toured with the Warren Covington Band for one year, and moved to New York City (in 1963) where he studied trumpet with Clyde Riesinger, Murray Karpaloski, Carmine Caruso, and Harold Liebermann, as well as arranging with Frank Fields.

Since age eighteen, Millikan has been a vital part of the New York music scene. He has played in pit orchestras for numerous Broadway musicals including Nice Work If You Can Get It, Hair, The Full Monty, 9 to 5, Dream, A Chorus Line, Over Here, Jesus Christ Superstar, High Society, Side Show, and Show Boat. He has recorded countless jingles, film scores, television and radio shows such as the Kennedy Center Honors, The Tony Awards (both for twenty years), The Grammy Awards, The Essence Awards, The Muppets Christmas, Saturday Night Live, The David Letterman Show, The Rosie O'Donnell Show, and The Wizard of Oz/Avery Fischer Hall. He has recorded with Jimmy Heath, Chick Corea, Buddy Rich, Clark Terry, Gerry Mulligan, Mel Tormé, Stan Kenton, Nancy Wilson, and over time with dozens of other artists and groups including the American Jazz Orchestra, Bob Mintzer Big Band (thirty years), Dave Berger Jazz Band (thirty-five years), Ken Peplowski Big Band (fifteen years), The Dave Liebman Big Band (five years), and especially the bands of Louie Bellson (over forty years). In addition, he has played lead trumpet with the bands of Peggy Lee, Tony Bennett, Sammy Davis Jr., Billy Eckstine, Ella Fitzgerald, Nancy Wilson, Diana Ross, and Barbra Streisand.

Recent tours have taken Millikan to Japan with the Ken Peplowski/Benny Goodman Orchestra, Vanguard Jazz Orchestra, and the Bob Mintzer Big Band. He has been the lead trumpet on the "Jazz Cruise" for the past three years, and continues to perform at leading jazz festivals around the world.

Millikan and actress Ann Ingrid Millikan have been married since 1983 and reside in Harrington Park, New Jersey. His hobbies include sailing, boating, and softball.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford Publishing); "Bob Millikan" (www.allmusic.com/artist/bob-millikan-mn0000012081); personal interviews, Aug. 3 and 9, 2012.

Millman, Jack [Maurice] (aka Johnny Kitchen) (b. Detroit, Michigan, Nov. 21, 1930). American trumpeter, composer, and arranger. Millman's trumpet teachers were the legendary Rafael Méndez, jazz great Shorty Rogers, and James Stamp (at Los Angeles City College). He also studied violin (1939), and composition and arranging with Alexander Laslo and Eric Zeisl. At age seventeen, he had an opportunity to sit in with Lionel Hampton's jazz band, and was subsequently offered a six-week position with the band at the Paramount Theatre in Los Angeles. At age eighteen, he was drafted into the Army and played with the 6th Army Band at the Presidio Inn of San Francisco, as well as touring the West Coast with the Stan Kenton Orchestra. During the 1950s after his service years, he formed and managed his own jazz groups. He rejoined Kenton's band from 1951 to 1954, and in 1955 briefly toured with Perez Prado's band.

Millman assembled an all-star band that recorded many of his compositions and arrangements with major labels, and during the late 1950s, his works became well known throughout southern California. He also led such groups as Jan & Dean, The Beach Boys, and Dick Dale's band at the Rendezvous Ballroom in Balboa, California.

In 1962 after fifteen years of touring and recording, Millman stopped playing trumpet, and moved to Big Sur, California, where he became a self-described hermit. In 1964, he opened a business called Music Industries in Hollywood that represented various film composers and well-known artists. During this time, Billy Elder, his friend and musician, gave him the nickname Johnny Kitchen, by which he became known, so Millman had it legally registered as a business name. He worked as a record producer and formed another company called Condor Records that held a large library of songs, jingles, and legal rights to copyrighted tunes; his former wife, Ludmila Millman, appears on several album covers. During the late 1970s, Millman invented the Startime Video Jukebox, a device that joined music videos with random advertisements, an invention for which he was honored by the Smithsonian Museum of American History.

Millman moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico, during the mid 1980s where he worked as a composer and teacher at the College of Santa Fe and as a music critic. He produced and recorded two live broadcasts for National Public Radio, and founded High Desert Beat Productions. In 1995, he moved to Sedona, Arizona, to work on his sixth symphony. Finally, in 2002, he moved to Palm Beach, Florida, to work with the Florida Philharmonic Orchestra. He continues to work as a composer. Around 1976, he married his second wife, Joy Millman.

Millman's trumpet albums include Jazz Studio 4/Jack Millman (Decca), Shades of Things to Come (Liberty), The Golden Era of Jack Millman, Hollywood All-Star Jazz (Catbone), and Blowing Up A Storm.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jack Millman is Johnny Kitchen" (https://www.ubiquityrecords.com/shop/products/AFRODESIA-%252d-THE-AFRO%252dSOULTET.html); "Jack Millman, Jazz musician, trumpet. '50s & '60s is he still alive?" (http://answers.yahoo.com/question/index?qid=20071171900236AAX5z9U).

Mills, Fred[erick W.] (b. Guelph, Ontario, Canada, Mar. 15, 1935; d. near Atlanta, Georgia, Sept. 7, 2009). Canadian trumpeter. Mills started playing the cornet as a boy when his father purchased a used instrument from a traveling salesman. At age twelve he joined the Police Boys Band, a group founded by the police to combat juvenile delinquency; he received his first lessons from the band director, Ted Denver. In high school he changed to trumpet and also studied piano, theory, and counterpoint. In 1953, he began trumpet study with Willard Musser at Hartwick College, New York. Mills demonstrated an unusual talent for music, and later attended The Juilliard School (1955-58) where he studied trumpet with William Vacchiano. It was a portent of the future that in 1956 he obtained engagements with a brass quintet, the other four members of which were members of the New York City Opera Orchestra. Just after graduation, he was invited by Maestro Leopold Stokowski to become principal trumpet of the Houston Symphony Orchestra (1958-61).

When Stokowski formed the American Symphony Orchestra in New York (1961), Mills was invited to serve as principal. While in New York, he also played with the Symphony of the Air, New York City Opera (six years), Musica Aeterna Orchestra at the Metropolitan Museum, Marlboro Festival Orchestra, the Casals Festival Orchestra in Puerto Rico, and American Ballet Theater. He recorded with Morton Gould, Robert Shaw, Igor Stravinsky, E. Power Biggs, and others. He recorded Sonata Da Chiesa by Virgil Thomson, and Dark Upon the Harp by Druckman with Robert Nagel.

Mills returned to Canada in 1968 to contract for, and play principal trumpet with the National Ballet of Canada in Toronto. In 1969, he was named principal with the newly formed National Arts Centre Orchestra in Ottawa. In 1972, he became a founding member of the Canadian Brass, and during his twenty-four years with this famed group he performed over 3,500 concerts in North America, Asia, and Europe, with more than twenty European and ten Asian concert tours. The group recorded over forty CDs for RCA, Sony, Philips, and BMG. Mills contributed over fifty arrangements of brass music to the group's repertoire, including his landmark arrangement of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor. He appeared in dozens of television programs with Canadian Brass, which was nominated for a Grammy Award in 1992.

Mills retired from the Canadian Brass in 1996, although he occasionally performed with it during the early years of the 21st century. He became the first Prokasy Professor of trumpet and brass chamber music at the University of Georgia in Athens, and coached the graduate brass quintet, The Bulldog Brass Society. He was an active soloist and conductor with brass ensembles around the world, and recorded CDs with the German brass quintet, Rennquintett, and the Italian Pentabrass Quintet. Mills performed for a few seasons with the Summit Brass, and received Honorary Doctorate of Music degrees from Hartwick College and the New England Conservatory.

On September 7, 2009 Mills had just returned from performances in Italy. He arrived at the Atlanta airport and was driving to his home in Athens, Georgia, when he suffered a stroke and lost control of his vehicle, which hit an embankment and rolled over several times. He was rushed to a nearby hospital, but died within an hour of the accident. He was seventy-four years old.

Bibl.: Mathez, Jean-Pierre, "Fred Mills exit Canadian Brass" (Brass Bulletin*, No. 94, II/1996); "Frederick Mills" (www.canbrass.com/FredMills); Michel, Laplace. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Canadian Brass Trumpeter Fred Mills Dies at 74" (CBC News, Sept. 8, 2009).

Photo credit (color): Vera H. Olcott, courtesy of the International Trumpet Guild.

Mills, John E. (b. Lincoln, Nebraska, July 14, 1940). American trumpeter. Mills's father Roy was a lineman for a telephone company, and his mother Genevieve was a homemaker. His older sister, Delores, was born in 1935. John began playing the piano at age eight, and the trumpet at age twelve; his first trumpet teacher was John Schildneck. After graduating from Lincoln High School in 1958, Mills attended the University of Nebraska, studying with Jack R. Snider and earning a bachelor of music education degree in 1963. He taught grades K-12 music in Ceresco, Nebraska from 1962 to 1963, and was a high school band director in Superior, Nebraska, from 1964 to 1966. He then returned to the University of Nebraska (1966-68), earning a master of music degree studying with Dennis L. Schneider. In the fall of 1968, he resumed his position in Superior, and during that same year, was selected as the "Outstanding Composer and Arranger" at the Kansas City Jazz Festival.

While at the University of Nebraska, Mills became a freelance musician in the Lincoln and Omaha areas, performing with the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra, Lincoln Municipal Band, and numerous jazz and dance groups, as well as working as an instrument repairman at Dietze Music in Lincoln. In 1970, he was responsible for the Instrumental Music program in Seward, Nebraska. He was professor of trumpet at Hastings College in Nebraska from 1974 to 1980, but left this position to become a district sales representative for Yamaha of America in eight Midwestern states from 1980 to 1993. From 1993 to 1995, Mills served as a consultant in Yamaha's "Music in Education" program, presenting brass clinics and workshops on hundreds of university campuses. From 1984 to 1989, he taught at the Clark Terry and Rich Matteson jazz camps. Unfortunately, in 1990, Mills was stricken with Bell's palsy, a nerve condition that left many of the muscles of his face paralyzed, so that he was unable to play the trumpet for a year. Through rest and controlled practice, he was able to regain full use of his embouchure.

Mills has performed and recorded with his own John Mills Orchestra, producing an album titled Just Another Saturday Night (private label), and has performed with the Dean Bushnell Orchestra in Denver. He has published several compositions including Brief Journey for concert band (Hal Leonard) and was also commissioned to compose Stan for jazz band, a tribute to Stan Kenton.

In 2003, Mills established Trumpet Trader, a company that buys and sells used trumpets. He and his wife Charlotte were married in 1966. His hobbies include composing and arranging music, playing golf, and collecting trumpet recordings.

Bibl.: personal interview, Aug. 7, 2010.

Minafra, Pino (b. Ruvo di Puglia [near Bari], Italy, July 21, 1951). Italian trumpeter. Since he was a boy, Minafra has been interested in many styles of music, from opera to jazz. He earned a degree at the N. Piccinni Music Conservatory in Bari, and since 1977 has formed several successful jazz groups: Praxis, Pino Minafra Quintet, Italian Instabile Orchestra (since 1980), Sud Ensemble (his current group), Meridiana Multijazz Orchestra, and Canto General & the United Front.

He has recorded over sixty albums with his groups for labels including Splasc(H) Records, ECM, Victo, Enja, Soul Note, Leo, Red, Rai-Audiobox, Leo Lab, Musicalmmagine, Modern Times, Ava, Alpharecord, Imprint, and Ethnoworld.

Minafra has performed at jazz festivals throughout Europe. He and his son Livio also formed a group called the MinAfric Orchestra that has been very successful. With poet Vittorino Curci, he founded the Europa Jazz Festival in 1989 and directed it until 1993, when he founded the Talos Festival in his hometown of Ruvo di Puglia. Minafra is currently serving as trumpet professor at the N. Piccinni Music Conservatory in Bari. In his performances, he utilizes circular breathing to create long improvisatory lines.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Pino Minafra's official website: www.minafrasprod.com/pinominafra/.

Minger, George Allen ("Pete") (b. Orangeburg, South Carolina, Jan. 22, 1943; d. Pompano Beach, Florida, Apr. 14, 2000). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Minger grew up in a musical family. His grandmother and mother played piano at church, and his brother Jimmy became a professional jazz pianist. Pete taught himself to play the saxophone and then the trumpet. From 1967 to 1969, he played in an Army band stationed in Japan. After his service, he attended the Berklee School of Music in Boston for one year (1969-70), but dropped out to join Count Basie's band in which he played until 1980; Basie featured him as one of his leading soloists alongside Clark Terry. He also played intermittently with Al Grey, Curtis Fuller, and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis.

While on break during a Basie tour, Minger decided to stay in Florida where he and his wife Delores were married. He attended the University of Miami from 1981 to 1985, receiving a degree in music education. He then taught music in Florida and continued to play with local bands including the Tropic Breeze Band. He also recorded with Hilton Ruiz, Melton Mustafa, Turk Mauro, and Mel Tormé. In 1989, he toured with the Philip Morris Superband, and in 1990 worked with Frank Wess's band, in addition to leading his own combo on an album for the Concord Jazz label.

In Minger's latter years, he became a Christian and a licensed and ordained minister of New Generation Ministries, leading his jazz colleagues to call him "The Prime Minister of Gospel Jazz." Minger was a fine bebop player whose best solo album was originally released on LP as Straight from the Source (Spinster) and later released on CD as Minger Paintings (Jazz Alliance). He died from cancer at the age of fifty-seven.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Pete Minger" (www.jazzhouse.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mirabal [Vazquez], Manuel ("El Guajiro") (b. Melena del Sur, Cuba, May 5, 1933). Cuban trumpeter. Mirabal began playing the trumpet at age eleven, guided by his father, a local municipal band director. By age eighteen, he was playing professionally with Conjunto Universal, a traditional Cuban band. In 1953, he played with the Swing Casino band and the Orquesta Casino Parisien, located in the Hotel Nacional, and in 1956 founded Conjunto Rumbavana, a group that became very popular.

Mirabal joined the Riverside Orchestra of the Tropicana Club in 1960, and in 1967 was a founding member of Orquesta Cubana de Música Moderna. During his twenty-three years with this group, he became famous as a leading proponent of traditional Cuban jazz. (Trumpeter Arturo Sandoval also performed with this band.) From 1973 until 2003, Mirabal returned to the Tropicana Club, performing with its orchestra, as well as playing in the National Revolutionary Militia's ceremonial band and the General Staff band of the Cuban army. He has been a key figure in Cuban music for over fifty years, and was recently selected to perform in Washington, D.C. for the Diplomatic Mission of the United Nations. His fame stemmed from his many years with the Buena Vista Social Club, a group that toured the world.

El Guajiro (Spanish for "a man or boy from the countryside," "country bumpkin") provides free lessons for talented young Cuban musicians. He has received an award from the Union of Writers and Artists in Cuba, and is featured on three albums for the World Circuit/ Nonesuch label: Buena Vista Social Club, A Toda Cuba Le Gusta, and Introducing...Rubén González.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Manuel 'Guajiro' Mirabal" (www.nonesuch.com/artists/manuel-guajiro-mirabal).

Mitchell. George ("Little Mitch") (b. Louisville, Kentucky, Mar. 8, 1899; d. Chicago, Illinois, May 27, 1972). American cornetist. Mitchell learned to play the cornet at age twelve, taking lessons from Mr. Fields. Mitchell later worked with the Louisville Musical Club Brass Band alongside Bobby Williams (until 1917), the L.M.C. Band, and the Rabbit's Foot Minstrel Show in Mississippi. He got advice from Bobby Williams (1919) and played with him in the John Embry Band. He moved to Chicago in late 1919 where he led his own quartet and briefly associated with Irvin Miller's Brown Skin Models, Arthur Sims, Tony Jackson (1920), Clarence Miller (Canadian tour in 1921-22), Doc Holly's Band, John Wickliffe (1923), Carroll Dickerson (1923-24) and Doc Cooke (fall 1924 to fall 1925).

Mitchell played for a while in Milwaukee, but most all of his career was in Chicago. In 1926, he recorded two tunes with Luis Russell and backed singer Ada Brown. He also played with Jimmie Noone, Lil Armstrong-Hardin's band (1925), and King Oliver for a while, and was later back with Doc Cooke (late 1927 to 1929). He recorded four titles with the New Orleans Wanderers (1926), and four with the New Orleans Bootblacks. The last two groups were actually Louis Armstrong's Hot Five, with Mitchell instead of Armstrong and with an added alto sax. His best recordings were made with Jelly Roll Morton for the Victor Company (1926-27), which included tunes such as Black Bottom Stomp, The Chant, Sidewalk Blues, Doctor Jazz, and The Pearls. He also recorded with Johnny Dodds (1927), Doc Cooke, Jimmie Noone (1928-29), and the Dixie Rhythm Kings.

While still in his prime, Mitchell worked with Dave Peyton (1927), Earl Hines's first big band (1929 and 1930-31), and banjoist Jack Ellis (summer 1931). However, during the Depression, Mitchell all but dropped out of music and worked as a bank messenger. His last performances were on recordings with Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon (1933) and in concerts with the Works Progress Administration Band (from 1935) and Elgar's Federal Concert Orchestra during the late 1930s.

Mitchell had a beautiful, warm cornet sound, and on recordings, he was easily mistaken for Louis Armstrong or King Oliver. He died at the age of seventy-three.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mitchell, Gilbert [Henry] [Jr.] (b. Lykens, Pennsylvania, Apr. 4, 1925). American trumpeter. He began playing the cornet at age five and took lessons from Harry McCall and later with C. Eugene Erb from Harrisburg. Mitchell attended Lykens High School (graduated in 1943) and played in several local bands. While in tenth grade, he began taking lessons from Ernest Williams in New York City by traveling four hours each direction by car. After graduating, he enrolled in the Ernest S. Williams School of Music where his roommate was the famed cornetist James Burke. Through Burke, he began subbing at Radio City Music Hall (1943).

At age eighteen, Mitchell auditioned for the newly formed New York City Symphony under Leopold Stokowski, and won the second trumpet position. A year later, he became principal trumpet of the New Orleans Symphony. Because the orchestra's season was only twenty weeks, he spent much of his time freelancing in New York where he played for a while with Les Brown's orchestra, and with the Copacabana Nightclub orchestra.

At the end of his second season in New Orleans, Gilbert Mitchell was drafted into military service. Because it was his desire to return to the orchestra as quickly as possible, he elected to join the Army because it only required a two-year enlistment. However, during his boot camp period he was invited to audition for the US Army Band near Washington, D.C. He accepted a position with the band, and was given a special assignment for two years. This band normally has an enlistment requirement of at least three years but, at the end of his two-year period, he decided to re-enlist because of the stable salary, benefits, and excellent musical opportunities. He was immediately promoted to Master Sergeant. Then, in 1960, he became a commissioned Captain and was made an assistant leader of the band.

During the late 1950s, Mitchell was asked to form a brass ensemble from the Army Band. He played with and conducted this group, but the Army gave it little attention. He decided to supply the group with various sized herald trumpets, and rename it the US Army Herald Trumpets. Because of its ceremonial nature, the Army began using the group for all types of official occasions including presidential ceremonies normally reserved only for the Marine Band. Among the numerous performances he oversaw, Mitchell was assigned music coordinator duties over President John F. Kennedy's funeral in 1963. He also became an assistant conductor of the US Army Band and the conductor of the US Department of Agricultural Symphony Orchestra (1961-65). Outside of his military life, he was music director at the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in Falls Church, Virginia (1952-60).

Mitchell retired from the military in 1970 as a Lieutenant Colonel. As a civilian, he conducted the Fairfax (County) Symphony Orchestra (1970) and the Northern Virginia Chamber Orchestra (1971-81). He also taught trumpet and the brass instruments class at George Mason University. Later, he and wife Joyce, with whom he had married in 1963, moved to Camp Hill, Pennsylvania. He taught for a while at Messiah College and Dickinson College. Gilbert and Joyce have four grown children.

During his career, Mitchell received many awards including a Citation of Honor from the American School Band Directors Association, the A. Austin Harding Award, a Citation of Excellence from the National Band Association, the John Philip Sousa Foundation's Sudler Silver Scroll, honorary member of the Women's National Band Association, and membership into the American Bandmasters Association in 1964. In that same year, he also received the Army Commendation Medal (First Oak Leaf Cluster). He served as a judge for the Miss America Pageant in 1974, 1975, and 1985. More recently, he has received the Award of Merit from the International Trumpet Guild, of which he had been a member from Day One.

Bibl.: Eisensmith, Kevin. "Gilbert Mitchell: A Musician Merely" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2006); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mitchell, Harold E. ("Pappy") (b. Jan. 5, 1898; d. Aug. 21, 1985). American trumpeter. Mitchell began playing cornet as a child, but later switched to trumpet. His early teachers were several giants of the cornet world: Herbert Clarke, Alfred Weldon, Richard Shuebruk, William Thieck, Ernest Williams, and possibly Del Staigers.

Mitchell was drafted into the military during World War I. Afterwards, he began playing in minstrel shows throughout the United States (1919) and vaudeville theaters in Los Angeles, where he grew up. He was one of the first trumpet players to work for motion picture studios, and recorded the soundtrack for The Jazz Singer (1927), the first film with music. Other films for MGM and RKO include King Kong, The Wizard of Oz, Bird of Paradise, and Gone With The Wind (1939). He also worked with cartoonist Walt Disney (who played percussion) on soundtracks for early Steam Boat Willie cartoons (1929). It was during his early days as a studio player that he met Louis Armstrong, who was amused that Mitchell carried his trumpet in an old doctor's leather bag, and nicknamed him "Doc."

Mitchell worked as a studio player until 1948. He worked as a consultant for the F.E. Olds & Son firm in Fullerton, California, and published a series of trumpet method books titled Mitchell on Trumpet that are still popular today. He taught many students privately at his home including his son Oliver ("Ollie") Mitchell, and was known for his rather salty attitude and dry wit (which sometimes landed him in trouble in the music studios). His former students, among them Herb Alpert, Eldon Benge, and Robert DiVall, often joked about the numerous Playboy magazine centerfolds posted on the walls of the garage next to his home teaching studio.

Bibl.: "Harold Mitchell" (www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=97567684559).

Mitchell, Oliver ("Ollie") E. (b. Los Angeles, California, Apr. 8, 1927). American trumpeter. From the age of five, Mitchell studied trumpet with his father Harold "Pappy" Mitchell, a legendary studio player in Los Angeles from the 1920s through the 1940s. Ollie turned professional at age seventeen when he joined The Teenagers Band that played on the Hoagy Carmichael Radio Show in Los Angeles. After military service in the navy, he later played (mostly as lead trumpet) in the bands of Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich, Harry James, Alvino Rey, David Rose/ Fred Astaire (NBC, 1960), Gerald Wilson, Shorty Rogers, Perez Prado, Horace Heidt, Charlie Barnet, Sonny Burke, Les Brown, and Glenn Miller (led by Tex Beneke). He also recorded with Billy May, Shelly Manne, Onzy Matthews, Bob Thiele, Gene Estes, Irene Kral, Jimmy Witherspoon, and B.B. King.

Mitchell was a studio musician in Los Angeles for most of his career. He recorded thousands of television and radio commercials and jingles, plus dozens of television shows including *The Flintstones, I Love Lucy, Hawaii Five-O, Carol Burnet Show, Red Skelton Show, The Tonight Show, M*A*S*H*, Mork and Mindy, The Smurfs, The Partridge Family*, and Love Boat. He played on hundreds of Hollywood film soundtracks such as Austin Powers, Blast from the Past, The Music Man, Patton, Shaft, When Harry Met Sally, Will and Grace, Caddyshack, Hud, Flight of the Phoenix, Author Author, Hopper, Hang 'em High, and Waiting to Exhale. He backed hundreds of celebrity performers, and was one of the original members of Herb Alpert's Tijuana Brass touring group (1964). (He also gave trumpet lessons to Alpert.)

Mitchell cofounded (with trombonist Bob Edmondson) Swing, Inc., a school to develop young big band musicians (1961-64). During his illustrious career, he formed eleven bands, recording numerous albums with them. One of them was the twenty-piece Sunday Band, developed from Swing, Inc. He retired from studio playing in 1982, and in 1985 he and wife Nancy moved to Oahu Island, Hawaii. There he founded the Island Sunday Band. In late 1991, they moved back to southern California to be with his ailing mother. Then, during the spring of 1995, they returned to Hawaii but settled in Kohala. They enjoy playing with Mitchell's ten-to-twelve-piece band, The Olliephonic Horns. He also plays with the Kona Brass.

Mitchell has authored an autobiography titled Olliewood Lost, But Making Good Time, published by ONM Publishing. He is also the subject of the DVD, Skyline Films Presents an Interview with Ollie Mitchell (ONM Publishing).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Ollie Mitchell's official website: http://olliem.com.

Mitchell, Richard Allen ("Blue") (b. Miami, Florida, Mar. 13, 1930; d. Los Angeles, California, May 21, 1979). American trumpeter. Mitchell received his nickname while in high school when he began playing the trumpet. His early performances were rhythm and blues dates with Paul "Hucklebuck" Williams (1951-52), Earl Bostic (1952-55), and Chuck Willis. Afterwards, he freelanced for a while in Miami where he was discovered by Cannonball Adderley who connected him with Orrin Keepnews of Riverside Records in New York. Soon, Mitchell was recording with the Horace Silver Quintet (1958-64), drawing much attention as a lyrical player with a beautiful tone; there is a video showing Blue Mitchell playing with Horace Silver (1959).

Mitchell moved to the Blue Note label in 1963 and can be heard on recordings with Sonny Stitt & the Top Brass (1962), Tina Brooks, Harold Vick, Freddy Roach, Dexter Gordon, Jimmy Smith, Lou Donaldson, and Stanley Turrentine. In March of 1964, the Silver Quintet broke up, so Mitchell formed a new group, Fungii Mama, whose recording of the tune The Thing to Do became a standard. The new group recorded three albums with Blue Note, but lasted only a few years.

Mitchell toured and recorded with Ray Charles (1969-71), and also played with John Mayall (1971-73), mixing blues and bop styles in a highly effective way. Mitchell moved to Los Angeles in 1974 where he worked with Louie Bellson, Richie Kamuca, Harold Land, and Bill Berry's big band, and was co-leader of a quintet with Harold Land (1975-78). He recorded for Mainstream, RCA, Jam, and Impulse, and was the principal soloist with Tony Bennett and Lena Horne. His last recordings (1975-77) were in the disco-jazz style, but with Louie Bellson he recorded a jazz album on Concord, Raincheck (1978).

Mitchell was an admired man who brought something special to each performance and recording. He influenced Bobby Shew, and his style is considered a model of bop trumpet playing.

Although he lived a healthy lifestyle, he died of cancer at the age of forty-nine.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Nolan, H. "Blue Mitchell: Able to Leap all Genres in a Single Blast" (Downbeat, Oct. 1976); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Miyashiro, Eric (b. Honolulu, Hawaii, July 13, 1963). American trumpeter and bandleader. Miyashiro was born to Japanese parents; his father was a professional trumpeter who played with the Royal Hawaiian Band, and his mother was a professional dancer from Tokyo. Miyashiro began playing the trumpet at an early age, and by fourteen was performing professionally with Sammy Davis Jr., Engelbert Humperdinck, The Temptations, The Four Tops, Tom Jones, and Henry Mancini. At age eighteen, he was selected to play with the All American High School All Stars, and soon attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1982) where he began working as a studio player.

Miyashiro moved to Japan in 1989, and has become a top studio player there. He formed two bands, the EM Band and Z Force. His CDs include Kick Up, City of Brass, Times Square, Pleiades—A Tribute to Maynard Ferguson, and Skydance. He has performed with the Maynard Ferguson Tribute Band, CHASE Revisited, Woody Herman's Thundering Herd, Buddy Rich Band, Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Band, and the Count Basie Orchestra. He has also worked with Dizzy Gillespie, Paul Anka, Clark Terry, John Williams, Freddie Hubbard, Tower of Power, Frank Sinatra, Mel Tormé, Natalie Cole, Sarah Vaughan, Tony Bennett, and Stevie Wonder. He has been a guest soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Rochester Philharmonic, and the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra. Strongly influenced by Maynard Ferguson and Bill Chase, Miyashiro, whose nickname is "StratosphEric," is one of the world's leading high note soloists. In 2002, he published Eric's Technique Guide.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Eric Miyashiro" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/ericmiyashiro.html); Eric Miyashiro's official website: www.ericmiyashiro.com/international.html.

Mobley, Joseph William ("Bill") (b. Memphis, Tennessee, Apr. 7, 1953). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Mobley has been mostly a self-taught trumpet player since he was five. He was inspired by Marvin Stamm who encouraged him to attend North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), where he enrolled for one year (1971-72) before returning to Memphis to earn a degree in biology from Southwestern College. While in school, Mobley played jazz at night to support himself. During this period he developed his own distinctive harmonic approach to improvisation, with long lines interrupted by surprising leaps.

Mobley was not very active as a trumpeter during the 1970s, but in 1981 he decided to devote the majority of his time to jazz. He played with the Greg Hopkins-Wayne Naus big band in Boston (1981-82), occasionally appeared with Bill Pierce (1981-85), and worked with Artie Shaw's orchestra (1985-86), Donald Brown (1985-88), and Geoff Keezer's band (1988-94). He also attended the Berklee College of Music (1982-86) and moved to New York City and earned a master of music degree (1987).

Mobley has had an active career, performing and recording with artists such as Marvin "Smitty" Smith's sextet (1991-94), Clifford Jordan's big band (1992), George Coleman Octet, James Williams Group, Bill Easley, Mingus Dynasty, T.S. Monk, Maria Schneider, Toshiko Akiyoshi Orchestra, and his own groups called Space Time, Mobscene Quintet, The Bill Mobley Jazz Orchestra, and Nu Yorkestra. He also continues to work with the Pete McGuiness Big Band and the Chuck Braman Quintet. One of his own groups, the Smoke Big Band, performs every Monday night at the highly-regarded jazz club Smoke on 106th and Broadway in New York City.

Mobley formed his own record label, Space Time, which has produced several of his albums including The Bill Mobley Jazz Orchestra, Vols. 1 and 2, Mean What You Say, New Light, and Moodscape. Previously, Mobley released an album entitled Triple Bill for Evidence Records. Mobley has taught at City College in New York City, starting in 1990, and is currently on the faculty at William Paterson University in New Jersey. Also a fine composer, Mobley is a talented musician who has been underrated by the general public.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yahow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Bill Mobley official website: www.billmobley.net; Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moch, Manfred ("Manni") (b. Hirschberg im Riesengebirge, Germany, May 16, 1930 [NB. Hirschberg, Lower Silesia, passed to Poland in 1945, receiving the name Jelenia Góra]; d. May 28, 2011). German trumpeter. Moch started playing the piano at age five, and trumpet at age ten. Among his early jobs was playing with the Viktor Reschke orchestra and doing studio work. During his career, he also played with Ladi Geisler, Karl-Heinz Grewe, and Rolf Ahrens. His main fame, however, came from playing as soloist with the orchestras of Bert Kaempfert and James Last. In 1966, he composed the song, Monte Carlo, which Kaempfert recorded as a hit. He left the Kaempfert band in 1968 due to a pay dispute, but rejoined the group (not as a soloist) during the late 1970s.

Moch was a member of the North German Radio Big Band in Hamburg from 1960 to 1990. In 1965, he also formed a duo with his longtime friend and trumpeter, Heinz Habermann, called The Tattoos, which recorded several popular dance LPs between 1965 and 1975.

After retiring sometime during the 1990s, Moch lived on the Spanish island of Mallorca. He died a few days after his eighty-first birthday.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Manfred Moch" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Manfred_Moch).

Photo: Manfred Moch (on right) with Heinz Habermann.

Modell, Ron[ald] ("Mode") (b. New York, New York, Nov. 11, 1934). American trumpeter. Modell's uncles, Louis Davidson and Milton Davidson, were professional trumpeters. Modell started playing the trumpet at age seven, studied with his grandfather David Davidson, as well as with Bert Pennino, and began taking lessons from James Smith of the New York Philharmonic at age eleven. Modell then studied with Sol Lubalin, Harry Glantz, Joe Rescigno, and Murray Karpilovsky.

Modell's first important job was touring for eight months with Cornelia Otis Skinner's one-woman show, Paris 90. He joined the Tulsa Philharmonic as principal trumpet (1953-57), and simultaneously earned his bachelor's degree in music education at Tulsa University (1957). He moved to New York City in 1957 to join the Afro-Cuban bands led by Joe Cuba (1957), Machito (1958) and others. He also performed as lead trumpet with Vic Damone, Tony Bennett, Della Reese, Buddy Greco, Julius LaRosa, Billy Eckstine, Phil Collins, and others. In 1958-60, he earned his master's degree.

In 1960, Modell joined the Dallas Civic Opera for nine seasons, and the Dallas Symphony Orchestra as principal trumpet, with which he played until 1967. In 1964, he began teaching as an adjunct faculty member at Southern Methodist University where he taught trumpet, jazz ensemble, marching band, and played in the faculty brass quintet. After being offered a fulltime position as professor of trumpet and jazz ensembles at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Modell decided to study with John Haynie at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) during his last season with the DSO (1968) in order to expand his knowledge of teaching repertoire and methods.

Modell's career at NIU from 1969 to 1997 established him as one of the leading jazz educators in the country. His award-winning jazz ensemble served as a training ground for many of the nation's leading musicians. Among Modell's hundreds of trumpet students are John Carroll, Alan Hood, Jason Johnson, and Randy Grabowski.

After retiring, Modell was called by Quincy Jones to participate in a big band project with the London Metropolitan Orchestra, as well as to organize a big band for pop artist Phil Collins, with whom he made a world tour in 1998. Modell is an active clinician, and owns Modell Music publishing company. He considers his greatest trumpet influences to be Rafael Méndez, Timofei Dokshitser, Louis Davidson (his uncle), Adolph Herseth, and Maynard Ferguson. He states that much of his musicianship stems from studying recordings of great singers such as Giuseppe de Stefano and Mel Tormé, and from listening to the Count Basie Orchestra. Modell has been active with the International Trumpet Guild. He is married to Kathy Modell, and is an outgoing and affable man, known for his ability to tell jokes and humorous stories.

Bibl.: Hood, Al. "What a Wonderful World! Reflections of Ron Modell" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2005); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Mölder [Melder], Richard Mikhkelevich (b. Saaremaa Island, Estonia, Jan. 30, 1922; d. Tallinn, Estonia, July 6, 1975). Estonian trumpeter. Mölder graduated from the Tallinn Conservatory in 1941, studying with Julius Gustav Wachs. From 1942 to 1944, he was principal trumpet of the Estonian Music Ensemble, and from 1944 to 1947 was principal of the variety orchestra of the Estonian Philharmonic. He was principal of a variety radio orchestra in 1949-50, and from 1950 to 1952 was a pupil of the famous Mikhail Tabakov at the Gnesin Institute of Music in Moscow. For the next two years, Mölder worked as a teacher in music schools.

In 1954, Mölder returned to his position with the variety orchestra of the Estonian Philharmonic, and sometimes served as the orchestra's conductor. In 1964, he became principal trumpet of the Estonian Philharmonic, a position he held until his death in 1975. He was honored by the State in 1970.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Molina, Al [Jr.] (b. San Francisco, California, Dec. 18, 1935). American trumpeter. Molina's father, Al Sr., was a professional musician and Al Jr.'s first trumpet teacher. Al Jr. began playing the piano at age eight, and the trumpet at age twelve. He was mostly influenced by Harry James, but later became interested in bebop music. By age sixteen, he was performing in local clubs.

Molina attended San Mateo Junior College from 1960 to 1962. He then performed and recorded professionally in the San Francisco Bay area with such artists as Pat Britt (1966), the Sir Douglas Quintet (1968), George Cables, Jessica Williams, Tom Harrell, Red Holloway, Eddie Marshall, Johnny Griffin, Flip Nuñez, Al Plank, Eddie Henderson, Pete Escovedo, Bill Watrous, Jack Sheldon, Al Porcino, Eddie Moore, Merv Griffin, Mark Isham, and many others.

Over the years, Molina has been involved in jazz education, in addition to doing a great deal of studio work. He can be heard on dozens of recordings, and has led sessions for his own albums that include The Gift, Straight from the Heart, and Amigos Todos, all on his own Jazzer label.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Al Molina" (www.almolina.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompete, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Molnár, Zoltán (b. Nagykörös, Hungary, June 13, 1965). Hungarian trumpeter. From 1979 to 1984, Molnár studied with László Szabó and Jenő Kuesera at the Budapest Music School, and then from 1984 to 1989 with Zoltán Szűcs at the Franz Liszt Music Academy, graduating with honors and a M.A. degree. He has also studied with Jerome Callet. In 1984, he performed with the Academic Brass Quintet that toured Belgium, Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, France, Spain, Italy, China, Russia, Hungary, and the Czech Republic.

Molnár began his orchestral career as an apprentice (1987-89) with the National Philharmonic Orchestra in Hungary, and later became a coprincipal trumpet (with László Tóth). During the 1980s and early 1990s, he successfully competed in several international solo and chamber music competitions. Since 2000, he has been the director of the Trumpet Camp in Balmazújváros, Hungary, where Jerome Callet was a guest professor in 2004. Since 2005, he is a faculty member at the Franz Liszt Music High School in Debrecen. A highly versatile performer, he has recorded classical, jazz, and rock albums.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Photo: Molnár on left.

Molvær, Nils Petter (b. Sula, Norway, Sept. 18, 1960). Norwegian trumpeter and composer. Molvær was introduced to jazz at a young age by his father, a clarinetist and saxophone player. At age nineteen, Nils studied at the Trondheim Conservatory for two years, and then freelanced in the city of Oslo. In 1983 he joined the group, Masqualero, which recorded three albums for the ECM label. Molvær recorded with other musicians including Manfred Eicher, Marilyn Mazur, Robyn Schulkowsky, Jon Balke's Oslo 13, Bill Laswell, Jan Wobble, Hector Zazou, Arild Andersen, and Sidsel Endresen.

Molvær released his first album as leader, Khmer, on ECM in 1997, which received the German Record Critics Award, and a Norwegian Grammy. Later albums include Solid Ether, np3, Molvær Live, Streamer (his first live album), ER (won a Norwegian Grammy), Hamada, Remakes, and Recoloured—all on the ECM label. In 2003, Molvær received the Buddy Award, Norway's highest jazz prize. Known for his versatility, Molvær is comfortable playing jazz, pop, rock, fusion, and avant-garde music in both acoustic and electric mediums.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nils Petter Molvær" Molvær's official website: www.nilspettermolvær.info; "Nils Petter Molvær" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Monette, David ("Dave") G. (b. 1956). American designer. Monette studied trumpet with Charles Gorham at Indiana University, and the writings of acoustics expert Arthur Benade. With Gorham's encouragement, Monette began making trumpet leadpipes (1981). He then worked at the Conn Company (with Doc Severinsen), and soon started producing his first trumpets out of his rented home in Bloomington, Indiana (1983). After dropping out of school, he started his own trumpet manufacturing company, the David G. Monette Corporation, in Chicago (1984). His instruments attracted many players including Adolph Herseth, Charles Schlueter, Wynton Marsalis, Thomas Stevens, and Art Farmer. His trumpets include numerous new design characteristics that have revolutionized the industry.

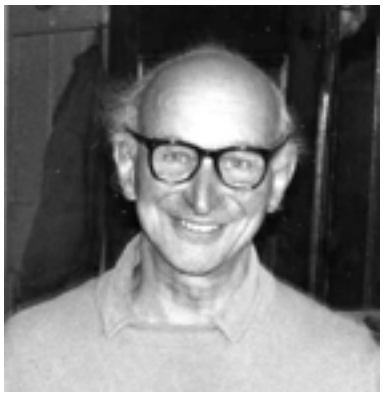
Monette stated in a newspaper interview that the inspiration for designing trumpet mouthpieces came to him in 1984 while he was taking a relaxing bath in his Albuquerque hotel room after a long day of exhibiting trumpets at a convention. He told of his mentally telepathic conversation with his pet cat, Sheldon, in Chicago, and how Sheldon gave him the idea of a new design—the "STC" (Sheldon The Cat) model mouthpieces.

The David G. Monette Corporation is now located in Portland, Oregon, and is one of the world's leading custom trumpet manufacturers.

Monette enjoys teaching Yoga classes.

Bibl.: "Foyston, John. "Horn of Plenty (of ideas)" (Newhouse News Service, Nov. 25, 1993); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "David Monette" (http://en.wikipedia.org); David G. Monette Corp. website: www.monette.net.

Monk, Christopher [William] (b. Delhi, British India, Dec. 28, 1921; d. Farnham, England, July 17, 1991). British instrument maker. Monk studied history at Lincoln College in Oxford (1940-44), and trumpet with George Eskdale from 1942 to 1945. He was a player and maker of historical brass instruments, most notably cornettos and serpents.



In 1955, Monk was a preparatory school teacher, first at Pocklington in the East Riding, then at St. Edmunds, Hindhead. Tom Stoppard and Jonathan Dimbleby were among his pupils. The radio program he and Brian Baker made for the BBC in 1958 was the first broadcast using his instruments. He was a pioneer player of the virtuoso parts in Monteverdi's Vespers, taking part in performances conducted by the student John Eliot Gardiner, and organized by members of the Galpin Society in Cambridge in 1964. (During one of these performances, his seventeenth century cornetto broke into two halves, but the performance continued with the instrument held together with postage stamps.) He began producing wooden cornettos in 1955, his first cornettino a year later, and in 1968 developed inexpensive cornettos made of epoxy, which became very popular. He soon became the foremost producer of these fifteenth and sixteenth century instrument replicas.

Together with Andrew van der Beek and Alan Lumsden, Monk cofounded the London Serpent Trio in 1976, and began producing natural trumpets and historical slide trombones in Farnham, England, in 1980. Following his sudden death in 1991 at the age of sixty-nine, the instrument making concern was taken over by Jeremy West, and the workshops relocated from rural England to new premises in London, in partnership with craftsman Keith Rogers, where instrument manufacture continues today.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Bottom photo: Monk cornetto.

Monke, Josef (b. Elberfeld, Germany, Feb. 18, 1882; d. Cologne, West Germany, Nov. 22, 1965). German manufacturer. Monke became an instrument-making apprentice to Leopold Mitsching in Elberfeld in 1896-1900, simultaneously studying trumpet with Willi Liebe there. His journeyman period extended from 1900 to 1921 with a sequence of employment as follows: Kurnoth (aka Knoth) Company in Danzig (1900), C.W. Moritz in Berlin (1901-02), Max Enders in Mainz (1902-04), Leopold August Schmidt in Cologne (1904-11), Fritz Werner in Wiesbaden (1911-12), and again Leopold August Schmidt in Cologne (1912-21).

Monke set up his own shop in Cologne on February 28, 1922. For various reasons, his shop moved three times in Cologne between 1922 and 1958. His instruments, particularly rotary valve trumpets, became quite popular and are used by orchestras worldwide including the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Monke is said to be the inventor of the screw-rim mouthpiece (1908).

Josef Monke's son Wilhelm (1913-86) learned the instrument-making trade from his father in 1928-37 and continued to work for him until 1945, when he opened an independent shop in Cologne, which he greatly expanded to include all kinds of instrument and music sales. Since his death, the business was run by his son Friedrich Wilhelm (Friedhelm) Monke (b. 1943), who had learned instrument-making from his grandfather in 1957-60 and became a master in 1966. The firm ceased to exist in 1994.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Dullat, Günter. Verzeichnis der Holz- und Metallblasinstrumenmacher auf deutschprachigem Gebiet (Schneider); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Monke Company official website: www.josef.monke.de/english/wir.htm.

Mönkediek, Peter (b. Ahaus, Westphalia, Germany, June 2, 1964). German trumpeter. Mönkediek's first trumpet teachers at age ten were Jos van Haaren and Johnann Hondebrink. He then studied with Edmund Buschinger at the Robert Schumann Hochschule in Düsseldorf (1984-85) and with Max Sommerhalder at the Musikhochschule in Detmold (1986-92). His orchestral career began as principal trumpet (1991-2002) of the Westphalian Symphony Orchestra Recklinghausen (now the New Philharmonic Orchestra of Westphalia), followed by the Symphony Orchestra of Münster (2001-02) and WDR-Cologne

Symphony Orchestra (principal since 2002). Since 2004, he has also spent his summers as a member of the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra.

An active chamber musician, Mönkediek has been a guest performer with the German Brass, Bach Blech & Blues, and is a regular member of the brass ensembles Embrassy and Brass Consort Köln. He is also an active soloist with orchestras in Germany and Hungary. From 1994 till 2002, Mönkediek taught trumpet at the Westphalian Wilhelms-University in Münster. In 2007, he taught at the Robert Schumann Hochschule.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Photo: Peter Mönkediek (left) and Peter Roth.

Montz, Richard ("Dick") Dennis (b. Mar. 31, 1942; d. Sydney, Australia, Dec. 27, 2005). American trumpeter. Montz began playing trumpet early in life and later attended the University of Illinois, studying with Haskell O. Sexton and graduating in 1965. While in school, he toured with Les Elgart (1963), Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra (1964), and Si Zentner (1965). He joined the Air Force in 1966 and performed with the Airmen of Note until 1970 when he moved to Las Vegas to work with various show bands as a lead trumpet player. Between 1970 and 1976, he worked with dozens of top musicians including Nancy Wilson, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gormé, Shelly Manne, George Shearing, Carl Fontana, Joe Williams, Carmen MacRae, Debbie Reynolds, Shirley Bassey, Lou Rawls, Juliet Prowse, Bobbie Gentry, Stan Kenton, Conte Candoli, and Johnny Richards. In Las Vegas, he met his wife of thirty-one years, Louise, with whom he had two children, Beth and Joe.

The Montz family moved to Sydney, Australia, in 1976 where Montz performed with various jazz groups as well as the Opera Australia and the Australian Ballet. He joined the jazz faculty at the Sydney Conservatorium and eventually became the chair of the jazz department. He recorded hundreds of jingles and soundtracks, and earned a master of music degree in trumpet performance at the conservatory in 1987, studying with Gordon Webb.

Around 1995, Montz suffered an accident that caused him to have to completely rebuild his embouchure. For a while, he played the valve trombone, but eventually returned successfully to the trumpet. His courage was again evident when he developed pancreatic cancer; after a long and difficult battle against the disease, he died at the age of sixty-three. He was a very well liked and respected man who possessed a positive attitude on life and a good sense of humor.

Bibl.: Evans, Brian. "In Memoriam: Richard 'Dick' Montz 1942-2005" (News Item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2006); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moore, Bobby (b. New York, New York, 1919). American trumpeter. Little is known about Moore, especially about his later life when he was institutionalized in the 1940s. Despite his short career as a big band trumpeter, he is considered to be one of the best soloists of all time.

Moore debuted at age sixteen when he entered a talent contest at the Apollo Theater (summer 1935), accompanied by Willie Bryant's band. He then freelanced in New York for a few years, and joined Count Basie's orchestra (March to October 1937). During this time, he made a few recordings with Basie and was featured on some sensational solos. Moore left the band to play and record with Hot Lips Page's big band in 1938; he was replaced by Harry "Sweets" Edison. Moore also played with Jimmy Mundy and Benny Carter in 1939.

Moore lived a fast-paced life as a musician, as well as in his personal life. However, in early 1940 he suffered a complete nervous breakdown and spent time in Bellevue Hospital. Sometime thereafter, he was committed to the Matteawan State Hospital. Nothing is known of him after that.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moore, Christopher ("Chris") R. (b. Gainesville, Florida, Dec. 10, 1965). American trumpeter. Moore grew up in Sarasota, Florida, and began playing the trumpet at age ten, studying with Joseph Powell until graduating from Riverside High School and Booker High School (Arts School) in 1983. He attended Florida State University under Bryan Goff from 1983 to 1987, earning a bachelor of music degree, and accepted a graduate trumpet teaching assistantship at the University of New Mexico under Jeffrey Piper from 1987 to 1989, where he earned a master of music degree.

Moore taught trumpet at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa, from 1989 to 1993. He then studied with Barbara Butler at the Eastman School of Music from 1993 to 1994, establishing his residency for a doctor of musical arts degree. He toured with the Chestnut Brass Company from 1994 to 1996, and completed his doctoral studies at Eastman with Douglas Prosser and James Thompson during the summers of 1994 to 2002. He taught at the University of Kansas and was a member of the Kansas Brass Quintet from 1996 to 2003, and became an assistant professor at Florida State University in 2003 where he continues to teach, and has released the solo CD, Trumpeting the Stone, on the Mark Masters label. He also received a Grammy Award in 2000 for the Chestnut Brass Company's recording of Hornsmoke by Peter Schickele. He has performed with the Jeunesses Musicales World Orchestra, New Mexico Brass Quintet, Kansas City Symphony Orchestra, Tallahassee Symphony Orchestra, New Mexico Symphony Orchestra, and the Santa Fe Symphony. He has won several prizes in music competitions, notably one in the Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild Solo Competition and another for the Music Teachers National Association.

Chris is married to Barbara Butler-Moore, a government analyst with Florida's Agency for Health Care Administration (not the same person as trumpet player Barbara Butler). They have a daughter, Grace (b. 1999). His hobbies include cooking, golf, running, and movies.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Christopher Moore" (www.music.fsu.edu/Faculty-and-Staff/Faculty/Christopher-Moore); personal interview, Jan. 26, 2012.

Moore, Daniel ("Danny") William (b. Waycross, Georgia, Jan. 6, 1941; d. New York, New York, Feb. 14, 2005). American trumpeter. Moore grew up in Waycross, Georgia. He may not have been one of the most famous trumpeters in the world, but he was certainly one of the most admired. He began playing gigs at age fourteen, and during high school, played area juke joints. He later attended Florida A&M University on a music scholarship funded by Cannonball and Nat Adderley (Moore's grandfather had adopted Quintin Adderley, the older brother of Cannonball and Nat). Moore later dropped out of college in order to play professionally. His career began when he joined Paul Williams's Hucklebuckers in 1962.

During the 1960s, Moore played with Ruth Brown, Quincy Jones, the house band at the Apollo Theatre, Aretha Franklin, Marvin Gaye, Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1964), Oliver Nelson (1964), Count Basie's big band (1966), and the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra (1968-72). He then played with Aretha Franklin again (with King Curtis in 1971), the George Coleman Octet (1972 to early 1980s), Dizzy Gillespie's big band (1975), Wes Montgomery, and his own groups. Moore was also an active studio player in New York, and can be heard on the soundtrack of the Paul Newman movie, The Last Chance. Although Moore kept a low profile, he performed with hundreds of leading jazz musicians. He recorded many times, and released one CD as leader—The Party.

Moore was a warm-hearted person who often participated in benefit concerts for charities and musician friends, and during the last few years of his life, played each week at local retirement homes and hospitals. He was a good basketball player who loved to challenge others to a game, including friend Wynton Marsalis. He died of natural causes at the age of sixty-four, having performed a fundraising concert just three days earlier. Funeral and burial services were conducted in his hometown of Waycross, Georgia, but a memorial service was also held in New York City shortly after his death, at which Clark Terry (in a wheelchair) played My Buddy, and Jon Faddis performed A Child is Born, a tender ballad arranged by Thad Jones. Moore once said that his greatest honor was when the mayor of Waycross declared May 25, 2001 as "Danny Moore Day."

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Scott, Ron. "Danny Moore, trumpeter, dies at 64" (New York Amsterdam News, Mar. 2, 2005); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Tribute to Danny Moore" (www.jerryjazzmusician.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moore, Melvin ("Mel") (b. Chicago, Illinois, June 15, 1923; d. Los Angeles, California, Feb. 26, 1989). American trumpeter. Moore played trumpet and violin in Jimmy Lunceford's band from 1943 to 1946. In 1948, he was a trumpeter in Lucky Millinder's band, and between 1948 and 1950 with the Duke Ellington Orchestra. During the 1950s and '60s, after an episode with pop music, he performed and recorded with a host of jazz artists that included Dizzy Gillespie, T-Bone Walker, Gerald Wilson, Charles Mingus, Jimmie Lunceford, Thelonious Monk, and Gil Fuller.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moore, Scott (b. 1960s). American trumpeter. Moore earned a bachelor of music degree at McNeese State University, studying with Michael Ewald, and a master of music degree at the New England Conservatory, studying with Charles Schlueter. He also studied with Arnold Jacobs.

Moore has been a member of the Memphis Symphony Orchestra since the fall of 1988, and is the orchestra's current principal trumpeter. He has performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra, National Symphony Orchestra, and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and has recorded with the Nashville Chamber Orchestra and I Fiamminghi, the Orchestra of Flanders. He has served on the faculty of the Hot Springs Music Festival, Sewanee Summer Music Center, and the Tennessee Governor's School for the Arts, and is an active freelance performer.

Moore was a featured artist during the 1994 International Trumpet Guild Conference at the University of Illinois (hosted by Michael Ewald), and in 2009 performed the world premiere of Eric Ewazen's Trumpet Concerto, a new orchestration of the composer's popular Trumpet Sonata.

Bibl.: "Scott Moore" (www.memphissymphony.org/musicians).

Moore, William ("Bill") Henry (b. Brooklyn, New York, July 25, 1901; d. New York, New York, June 17, 1964). American cornetist and trumpeter. Moore's parents were of mixed race and his skin color was light enough for him to pass as a white. He called himself "The Hot Hawaiian," which allowed him to be hired by numerous white bands throughout his career. He began playing on recordings during the 1920s with the California Ramblers (which also recorded under the names Five Birmingham Babies, Goofus Five, and the Lumberjacks), and played on and off between 1925 and 1929 with Ben Bernie's group.

Moore's prominent jazz period was during the 1920s when he also played with Don Voorhees, Bert Lown, and Lester Lanin. He recorded with Jack Pettis (1926-29), Irving Mills's Hotsy Totsy Gang (1929-30), the Whoopee Makers, Mississippi Maulers, New Orleans Black Birds, the Vagabonds, Varsity Eight, Bailey's Dixie Dudes, Broadway Broadcasters, Al Goering's Collegians, Kentucky Blowers, Little Ramblers, Fred Rich (1930), Boswell Sisters (1931), and the Dorsey Brothers (1931).

In 1930, Moore became a studio performer, and for the remainder of his career, played anonymously on radio, backing other jazz artists on recordings. His recordings with Irving Mills have been released on CD, titled The Hotsy Totsy Gang, Vols, 1 & 2 (Retrieval).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Bill Moore with the Little Ramblers.

Moorehead-Libs, Jean (b. Toronto, Ontario, Canada, Aug. 25, 1956). Canadian trumpeter. Moorehead-Libs grew up in Burlington, Ontario, until age ten when she and her family moved to Plymouth, Michigan. She began playing the trumpet at age twelve, and took lessons from her middle school band director, Darrel Walters. During high school, she studied with Stephen Carlson. After graduating from Plymouth Salem High School in 1973, she studied with Clifford Lillya at the University of Michigan, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1978 and a master of music degree in 1980 while also teaching at Olivet College.

From 1980 to 1983, Moorehead-Libs taught at The United World College of Southeast Asia, and from 1980 to 1982 performed as principal trumpet of the Singapore Symphony Orchestra. She returned to the University of Michigan to study with Armando Ghitalla, earning a doctor of musical arts degree in 1985. She then taught at Northern Michigan University from 1985 to 1989, and at the Oberlin College-Conservatory from 1989 to 1996. She also taught as an adjunct faculty member at Wayne State University in Detroit during the 1989-90 academic year. She was the trumpet instructor of the University of Michigan's All-State Program at Interlochen from 1983 through 1998.

Moorehead-Libs has been the trumpet teacher at Concordia University since 2000. She also taught at the University of Michigan during the 2005-06 year. She performs with the Today's Brass Quintet, Michigan Sinfonietta, Ann Arbor Symphony, Michigan Opera Theater Orchestra, and the Michigan Chamber Brass. She is a former editor of the "Pedagogical Topics" column of the International Trumpet Guild Journal.

Moorehead-Libs and James R. Libs, an insurance executive, were married in 1988, and have two sons: Andrew (b. 1990) and William (b. 1996). Her hobbies include cooking, gardening, and doing volunteer work at her sons' schools.

Bibl.: "Jean Moorehead-Libs" (www.cuaa.edu); personal interview, Mar. 20, 2011.

Mora, Rafael ("El Chino") Jaime (b. Parácuaro, Acámbaro, Mexico, 1931). Mexican trumpeter and composer. Mora learned to play the trumpet under his father, Francisco Jaime Cervantes, who also taught him music theory, harmony, and composition. His career began in 1950 when he joined the group led by Juan Garcia Esquivel (until 1960), as well as the Police Band of Mexico City (1951) and the orchestra of Damaso Perez Prado (beginning in 1953). His recording of Cherry Pink with Prado made him well known.

Throughout his illustrious career, Mora has performed with many leading musicians and ensembles including Benny Moré, Alberto Beltran, Daniel Santos, Bienvenido Granda, Pedro Vargas, Chelo y su Conjunto, Mike Laure, Sonia López, Vicente Fernández, Eddie Fisher, Johnny Mathis, Vicky Carr, Liza Minelli, Sara Vaughan, Chico O'Farrill, and dozens of others. He formed his own orchestra in 1983 that made a recording and two films. As a composer, his works include Symphony of Love (Bolero), The Mirel, My Plea, Insomnia, My Soft Cha, Prado Mambo, Lying, So Close Yet So Far, and Rafael.

Recently, Rafael "El Chino" Jaime Mora has received several awards. He was recognized by his hometown of Parácuaro in September of 2012 when the mayor of the city named the House of Culture after him, and the fifth annual Rafael Méndez Trumpet Festival in Mexico City was dedicated to him in 2012. Additional honors include several Silver Disc prizes and the Golden Lyre, Golden Palm, and Golden Sun awards.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); www.correo-gto.com.mx.

Morán, Cecilio ("Chilo") (b. Concordia, Sinaloa, Mexico, Nov. 19, 1930; d. April 8, 1999). Mexican trumpeter, composer, and bandleader. Morán began playing in his father's (Don Genaro Morán) brass band at age twelve. At age eighteen, he moved to Mexico City to study music, forming his first orchestra three years later. He made his first recordings with Perez Prado in 1950, and with Leo Acosta and Gloria Rios in 1956. He soon formed a big band that became very popular when his composition, Pianola, became a hit. He toured Europe and Asia, and was a soloist with the bands of Arturo Nunez, Ismael Diaz, Luis Arcaraz, Damaso Perez Prado (1954), Tommy Rodriguez, Hector Hallal, Pablo Beltran Ruiz, Paul Mauriat, Ray Anthony, Clare Fisher, Agustin Lara, Chico O'Farrill, Henry Mancini, Sergio Méndez, Frank Sinatra, Dizzy Gillespie, Harry Edison, Sarah Vaughan, Clark Terry, Sonny Rollins, and others.

According to trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, Morán was one of the best jazz trumpet players of all time. He recorded numerous LP albums including Trumpet Psicodelica (Maya), Los 5 Megatones (Tlaloc), and Rock en Mexico (Dimga).

Morán had a son named Pepe, who is also a fine jazz musician.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Chilo Moran" (http://latalacha.com.mx/2010/06/cecilio-"chilo"-moran-arroyo/).

Morand, Herb (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, 1905; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 23, 1952). American trumpeter and vocalist. Morand grew up in New Orleans. He began playing trumpet at the age of thirteen and by the age of eighteen, was playing professionally with Nat Towles's Harmony Kings. He went to New York for a while and joined Cliff Jackson's Krazy Cats (1926), but returned to New Orleans where he played with Chris Kelly and also a band of his own.

Morand moved to Chicago during the late 1920s. He recorded with the Beale Street Washboard Band and performed with J. Frank Terry's Chicago Nightingales, as well as with a few other groups. His main fame, however, came from playing with the Harlem Hamfats during the second half of the 1930s, serving as the group's manager and trumpeter, and recording numerous times with it between 1936 and 1938. He was also a spirited jive singer with the group. In 1941, Morand played with Meade Lux Lewis, Jimmy Bertrand, and the Curtis Jones trio.

Morand returned permanently to New Orleans in the early 1940s. He formed his own group and also played with bands led by Joe Watkins and George Lewis. He recorded as leader from 1949 to 1950 (eleven recordings were issued). However, he gained over three hundred pounds, and his health soon declined. He was forced to retire around the age of forty-six. Morand died on February 23, 1952 at the age of forty-seven.

Today, CDs of some of Morand's playing can be heard on the albums New Orleans Harlem (Jazz Crusade) and Herb Morand 1949 (American Music).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Moreno, Benjamín (b. Málaga, Spain, Dec. 5, 1964). Spanish trumpeter. Moreno began playing the trumpet at age nine, and was a member of the Spanish National Youth Orchestra. He later graduated from the Royal Conservatory of Madrid where he studied with José Orti, and received a Special Superior Honor Award. He also participated in master classes given by Maurice André, Pierre Thibaud, and Håkan Hardenberger.

Moreno is principal trumpet of the Orquesta Sinfónica de la Radio Televisión Española. He has also played in the Malaga Symphony Orchestra and with the Virtuoses de Moscou, launched his solo career with a debut recital at the Theater of Champs Elysées in Paris, and has been a guest soloist with many orchestras in Spain and other European countries. He served as a member of the jury during the Toulon International Trumpet Solo Competition when he struck up a friendship with Alexander Arutunian who invited him to perform his trumpet concerto with the Armenian Philharmonic Orchestra as part of a celebration of the composer's eightieth birthday. For many years, Moreno was active with his group, Imperial Ensemble, consisting of trumpet, organ, and percussion.

Moreno coaches several youth orchestra brass sections in Spain, and has taught at the Community Conservatory in Madrid since 1990. He became the trumpet professor at the Royal Conservatory in Madrid in 2006.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "A Flirt with Madrid" (Brass Bulletin, no. 111, Mar. 2000); "Benjamin Moreno" (http://europe.yamaha.com/en/artists/brass_woodwinds/benjamin_moreno/); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Morgan, Lee (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 10, 1938; d. New York, New York, Feb. 19, 1972). American trumpeter. Morgan began playing trumpet when his older sister Ernestine gave him a used instrument for his thirteenth birthday. He progressed very quickly and became a professional trumpeter in the following year. He developed a strong hard bop style through the influences of, and lessons with, Clifford Brown and Ted Curson. Morgan also studied at the Jules E.

Mastbaum Area Vocational School (1953-56) and at The Juilliard School (1958). His main teacher in Philadelphia was Tony Marchione.

Morgan played alto horn in a college band, and then turned to bop in Philadelphia where he played at a jazz workshop with Benny Golson, John Coltrane, Ray Bryant, and Miles Davis. At the age of eighteen, Morgan replaced Joe Gordon in Dizzy Gillespie's band in New York City, but the band ran into financial difficulty in 1958, and disbanded. However, Morgan's performances with Dizzy were not unnoticed; the press labeled him "the new Clifford Brown." Morgan began recording albums for Blue Note records as the leader of his own group. He recorded six albums during the late 1950s including Lee Morgan Indeed! (1956), The Cooker (1957), Candy (1957), Lee Morgan Sextet (1957), Lee Morgan Vol. 3 (1957), and City Lights (1957). He also recorded the album, Introducing Lee Morgan, in 1956 for the Savoy label.

In August 1958 at the age of twenty, Morgan joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers and was prominent on the albums Moanin', The Big Beat, Like Someone in Love, and The Freedom Riders. He also recorded with John Coltrane, Jimmy Smith, and Hank Mobley. Morgan's drug addiction resulted in his being kicked out of Blakey's group in 1961, which seems ironic considering that it was Blakey who introduced Morgan to heroin, but Morgan's lateness and unreliability became untenable. Morgan returned to his hometown of Philadelphia and managed to curb his addiction.

In 1963, Morgan returned to New York and began recording with his own group. His album, The Sidewinder (1963), became his biggest commercial hit, which stayed at the top of the jazz charts for months and was used as background music for Chrysler television commercials during the 1964 Baseball World Series. The album was used without the consent of Morgan or Blue Note Records and was later withdrawn when the label's attorneys demanded payment. Nonetheless, the popularity of Morgan's crossover jazz-pop album encouraged the label to produce other similar recordings including the albums, Cornbread (1965), and The Gigolo (1965).

Morgan briefly rejoined Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1964-65), replacing Freddie Hubbard who had taken Morgan's spot in 1961. Morgan was at the top of his popularity and recording output during the second half of the 1960s, recording an additional twenty albums with many of the leading musicians of the time. He used his influence for political reasons, often protesting that jazz artists were not featured enough as guests on television talk shows and musical variety shows.

Morgan's longtime girlfriend during the 1960s and early 1970s, Helen More, was fourteen years older than he was and had helped him kick his drug habit in 1962. But Morgan betrayed her in favor of a younger woman, so More shot and killed him in a passionate rage at Slug's jazz club in New York City's East Village where his band was performing; he died at the age of thirty-three. Today he is considered to have been a very influential model in the art of bop trumpet playing.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); McMillan, Jeff. DelightfuLee: The Life and Music of Lee Morgan (Univ. of Michigan Press); Perchard, Tom. Lee Morgan: His Life, Music and Culture (Equinox); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Morganelli, Mark Christopher (b. Chincoteague, Virginia, May 15, 1955). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Morganelli began playing the trumpet at age nine. While in high school, he led a group called The Moonlighters, then attended Bucknell University in Pennsylvania from 1973 to 1977. He led the Bucknell Jazz and Rock Ensemble that toured Pennsylvania and Florida before moving to New York City in 1978.

During his early days in New York, Morganelli rented a loft that he used as a jam space for himself and friends. He formed a nonprofit organization called Jazz Form Arts, which created the Riverside Park Arts Festival (1985-97). He found his calling as a jazz arts promoter and organizer, and eventually arranged for dozens of important concerts in New York City, including fundraisers for breast cancer, and Dizzy Gillespie's 75th birthday concert at Carnegie Hall. He worked as the concert coordinator for Birdland from 1988 to 1993, and produced over fifty albums for the Candid label (since 1989).

As a trumpet and flugelhorn performer, Morganelli has performed in Japan, Europe, Brazil, and the Caribbean. He has appeared at many top jazz festivals including the Montreux Jazz Festival, Du Maurier Downtown Toronto Jazz Festival, Syracuse Jazz Festival, Saratoga Jazz Festival, and Freihofer's Jazz Festival. He has performed and recorded with a host of leading artists including David Amram (1985), Paquito D'Rivera (1991), Tiny Grimes (1989), Bill Heid, Urbie Green, Mike Vax, Bob January, Bobby Watson, Donald Harrison, David "Fathead" Newman, Gary Bartz, John Hicks, and Harold Ousley. His albums as leader include Five is Bliss (Jazz Forum), Speak Low (Candid), and My Romance (Jazz Forum). Morganelli is also a fine composer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Greats (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Morgera, Fabio (b. Naples, Italy, Apr. 24, 1963). Italian trumpeter and flugelhornist. Despite losing his left hand in an accident at age four, Morgera learned to play (left-handed) the guitar and electric bass as a child. He started playing trumpet at age fifteen, and studied from 1980 to 1984 at a music school in Fiesole with Tolmino Marianini. His career began in his native Italy when he played with the Eurojazz Orchestra (1982-85) and with Giorgio Gaslini (1983-85). He won second prize in the 1982 Leverkusen Jazz Competition for Newcomers. Morgera immigrated to the United States in 1985 and attended the Dick Grove School of Music in Los Angeles (1987), studying music composition. From 1987 to 1989, he attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston. In 1988, he was playing with Igor Butman and in the same year, won second prize in the Barga Big Band Arranging Competition.

Morgera moved to New York City in 1990 and began taking trumpet lessons from Vincent Penzerella of the New York Philharmonic. He also briefly studied with Uan Rasey, Allen Vizzutti, and Jens Lindemann. He cofounded the Groove Collective during the mid 1990s, and led several other groups of his own. Over the years, Morgera has performed with the Mingus Big Band, Nublu Orchestra, Village Vanguard Orchestra, Roy Hargrove's Big Band, John Tchicai, Jerry Bergonzi, Chico O'Farrill's Afro-Cuban Jazz Orchestra, Valery Ponomarev, Alvin Queen, J.D. Allen, Jason Lindner, and pop star Jovanotti.

Morgera is a top post-bop trumpeter and vocalist. His many albums include Groove Collection (nominated for a Grammy Award, on Reprise), The Pursuit (Ken Music), Be Hip (Red), Slick (Red), Colors (Red), New Hopes (Red), Take One (Red), Red Stars (Red), The Voice Within (Kufala), Neapolitan Heart (EmArcy/Universal), Need for Peace (Smalls), Jungle Jazz, and Black Satin.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Fabio Morgera" (www.allaboutjazz.com); "Fabio Morgera" (www.myspace.com/fabiomorgera).

Morris, Craig (b. Odessa, Texas, July 8, 1968). American trumpeter. Morris's father Cecil was a band director and trumpeter in Texas. Craig grew up in San Antonio, and began playing the cornet at age ten. His early teachers were Larry Schmidt and John Goodwin. While in high school, he played in a drum and bugle corps called the Crossmen, an experience that he feels gave him a good foundation for embouchure stamina. Morris attended the University of Texas in Austin where he studied with Raymond Crisara. In 1991, he graduated with a master's degree from the San Francisco Conservatory where he studied with Glenn Fischthal.

Morris returned to Austin, and began freelancing and teaching privately. He was a member of the Pinnacle Brass Quintet from 1991 to 1994. He took a few orchestra auditions, but didn't do particularly well. He decided to study with James Wilt, the associate principal of the Houston Symphony Orchestra at that time. Wilt coached him on audition preparation, enabling Morris to win an audition as principal trumpet of the Sacramento Symphony in California in 1994. Unfortunately, the orchestra went bankrupt in 1996, so he turned to teaching at two area colleges to make a living.

Morris moved to Dallas in 1997 in order to join the Dallas Brass. There, he took a few lessons with Don Jacoby. After five months, he won an audition for the fourth chair in the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, which he joined in February of 1998. Soon after beginning this position, Glenn Fischthal encouraged him to audition for the associate principal trumpet position with the San Francisco Symphony. Morris's desire to play principal parts was strong, and with the encouragement of his colleagues in Chicago, he took the audition and won; he began playing with the SFSO during the fall of 1998.

Two years later, Adolph Herseth retired as principal of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Auditions were held in 2000, but no successor to Herseth could be named. The following year, Morris decided to audition for the position and won; he became principal trumpet of the CSO in the fall of 2001. However, his tenure was short-lived when Maestro Barenboim terminated Morris's contract during his second season for reasons unrelated to his playing. In the fall of 2003, Morris accepted a professorship at the University of Miami where he replaced Gilbert Johnson (who had passed away).

Since moving to Florida, Morris has been developing a solo career. He has performed with numerous orchestras, and has performed world premieres of new works for trumpet including Concerto for Trumpet by Thom Sleeper (2003) and Desolation Wilderness, a concerto by English composer Joby Talbot. Morris has also released a solo CD titled Permit Me Voyage. Since 2007, he has spent his summers as principal trumpet at the Cabrillo Festival of Contemporary Music in California. He also teaches at the Beijing Modern Music Festival in China. In the spring of 2012, he won an audition for, and was offered, the position of principal trumpet with the Saint Louis Symphony, but turned it down.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Winking, Keith. "The Long Road to the Chicago Symphony Orchestra: An Interview with Craig Morris" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2002); Craig Morris's official website: http: craigmorristrumpet.com; Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Morris, Joe (b. Montgomery, Alabama, 1922; d. Phoenix, Arizona, Nov. 21, 1958). American trumpeter. Little is known about Morris's early life. He studied music with his brother Gene, a saxophonist, and began to play in the Alabama State Collegians (1939-40). His first documented playing as a professional is with Lionel Hampton's band (1942-46). He then played for a short while with Buddy Rich and then formed his own swing band in 1946 that by the late 1940s became more of a rhythm and blues group. He also played at various times with Laurie Tate (1950), Earl Bostic, Milt Buckner, Arnett Cobb, Dizzy Gillespie, Johnny Griffin, Elmo Hope, Percy Faith, and Philly Joe Jones.

Morris's group recorded Anytime, Anyplace, Anywhere (Boston Records) in 1950, which became a hit, climbing to number one on the record charts, followed by another hit recording, Shake a Hand (his own composition on Herald Records), a vocal solo featuring Faye Adams. His third number one hit was I Had a Notion (Herald Records), featuring vocalist Al Savage. His band became the unofficial house band for Atlantic during the early 1950s, and backed singers such as Wynonie Harris, Big Joe Turner, and Dinah Washington. The band also released an LP album, Fly, Mister, Fly, on the Saxophonograph label.

Morris was a fine trumpet soloist, but was perhaps best known as a bandleader. He was on the way to becoming one of the greatest jazz musicians of all time, but his life was cut short by a stroke when he was only thirty-six.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Joe Morris" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Morris, Lawrence Douglas ("Butch") (b. Long Beach, California, Feb. 10, 1947; d. New York, New York, Jan. 29, 2013). American cornetist, composer, and conductor/bandleader. Morris comes from a musical family. Before starting his music career, he served as an Army medic in Vietnam during the Vietnam War. He returned to Los Angeles and the San Francisco area, playing cornet with Horace Tapscott, Bobby Bradford, Frank Lowe (1976), Arthur Blythe, and others. He moved to New York City in 1976, but later that year moved to Paris (1976-77) where he performed with Steve Lacy, Frank Wright, and Jef Gilson. He also taught in the South of France, Holland, and Belgium.

Morris returned to New York in 1978, joining groups led by Charles Tyler (1978), Hamiet Bluiett (1978), Billy Bang (1979-80) and David Murray (1978). He also conducted several big bands and led his own jazz octet. A prolific recording artist, Morris has released albums such as Dust to Dust (New World), Home (Black Saint, with David Murray), Murray's Steps (Black Saint, with David Murray), In Touch... But Out of Reach (Karma), Trios (Dossier), Burning Clouds (FMP), Testament (New World), Homing (Sound Aspects), The Rite (Burnt Sugar), Conductions 70: Tit for Tat (For Four Ears), When the Sun is Out You Don't See Stars (FMP), 3+2=XXXX (Dimensional Sound Studio), and Current Trends in Racism (Sound Aspects).

Morris is best known for his unique and innovative style of conducting known as "conductions," in which various hand gestures are used to indicate certain types of improvisations. He credits jazz musicians Sun Ra and Charles Moffett with bringing the style to his attention during the 1970s, which he has developed into an effective and much copied art form.

Morris is currently a major figure in New Music. He is a fine composer and has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Flagler Cary Trust. He continues to lead his own group called Orchestra SLANG.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Butch Morris" (www.allaboutjazz.com); "Butch Morris" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Morris, Thomas [Brother Pierre] (b. New York, New York, Aug. 30, 1897; d. California, 1945). American cornetist. Little is known of Morris's early life. He was the uncle of Marlowe Morris, a swing pianist during the 1940s. Thomas's first professional work as a jazz cornetist was with Clarence Williams with whom he recorded numerous discs in 1923. He also recorded with Sidney Bechet at about the same time. Morris played in the so-called "primitive" jazz style that preceded that of Louis Armstrong.

Morris performed and recorded during the 1920s as a backup player for singers such as Fannie Mae Goosby, Helen Gross, Rosa Henderson, Jane Richardson, Elizabeth Smith, Laura Smith, Mamie Smith, Eva Taylor, Sippie Wallace, and Edna Winston. He also worked with instrumental groups, including Buddy Christian's Jazz Rippers, the Get-Happy Band, George McClennon's Jazz Devils, The Dixie Jazzers Washboard Band, Five Musical Blackbirds, the Nashville Jazzers, the New Orleans Blue Five, and groups led by Clarence Williams. With his own Seven Hot Babies band, he recorded eight tunes in 1923, and ten tunes in 1926.

Morris's last recording session was with Fats Waller in 1927, after which he began to fade from the music scene. He appeared in three early films, St. Louis Blues (with Bessie Smith), The Bull Blues, and Just Blues That's All. He left the music business by 1929, and during the 1930s, was a porter at Grand Central Station in New York. Late in life, Morris joined Father Divine's religious cult, and changed his name to Brother Pierre.

CDs of Morris are Thomas Morris (cornet): The Alternate Takes, Vol. 1 (Neatwork), Thomas Morris 1923-1927 (Classics), and Thomas Morris (Frog).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books).

Morrison, James [Lloyd] (b. Boorowa, Australia, Nov. 11, 1962). Australian trumpeter, trombonist, saxophonist, pianist, and composer.

Morrison's parents were both musicians. He was a true musical prodigy; at age seven he began playing the cornet in a school band, and at age eight also began playing the tuba, euphonium, and trombone. By age nine, he was leading a Dixieland band, and by age thirteen was performing four nights per week at local nightclubs. Morrison learned to play all of the various saxophones during his teens, and became a multitalented jazz artist by the time he entered the New South Wales Conservatorium of Music, graduating in 1980. While a student, he was hired to teach jazz.

Morrison joined Don Burrows's quintet (1978-82). He and his brother John (a drummer) formed the Morrison Brothers Big Bad Band in 1983 and recorded for ABC in the following year. James presented concerts in Indonesia and China in 1983, and then played in the United States for five months with Red Rodney in 1987. He played with his Tuba Jazz Consort, Lester Bowie, Anita O'Day, Art Pepper, George Cables, Ray Brown, Herb Ellis, Monty Alexander, performed in August 1988 in the Monterey Jazz Festival, and also played a world tour with Gene Harris's Philip Morris Superband in 1989-90. His 1990 album, Snappy Doo (Atlantic), features Morrison as practically a one-man band; he composed all of the music for the album, and overdubbed himself on all trumpet, trombone, saxophone, and piano parts! In 1992 and 1993, he made two world tours with the Ray Brown Trio and performed at the most important jazz festivals worldwide.

Morrison has performed with hundreds of leading jazz musicians, including B.B. King, Dizzy Gillespie, Ray Charles, Cab Calloway, Ray Brown, Woody Shaw, and Wynton Marsalis. He has toured as soloist with the London Philharmonic Orchestra, and has given Command Performances for Queen Elizabeth II (four times), President George H. Bush and President Bill Clinton. He was selected as the "Australian Performer of the Year" in 1990, and in 1998 received the medal of The Order of Australia.

Morrison's albums include Snappy Doo (Atlantic*), Swiss Encounter* (East West*), Postcards from Down Under* (Atlantic), Live in Paris, This is Christmas, Scream Machine, The Gospel According to Groove, James Morrison and the Idea of North, Deni Hines and James Morrison, James Morrison Gospel Collection, and Three Minds. He has authored a book titled Blowing My Own Horn (Murdoch Books), and is a design consultant for Schagerl Trumpets.

A strong believer in music education, Morrison is an active clinician and has raised scholarship money for talented musicians. He supports several youth orchestras, and heads his own record label (Morrison Records) that assists young jazz artists. He has performed at all of the world's leading jazz festivals. He also composed and performed the opening fanfare (for two hundred trumpets!) for the Sydney Olympic Games in 2000.

Morrison's hobbies include flying his own plane, climbing mountains, running triathlons, and driving racecars. His love of fast cars led to his hosting two Australian television programs, Behind the Wheel and Top Gear Australia.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); James Morrison's official website: www.jamesmorrison.com.au; "James Morrison" (www.woodlandsmedia.com).

Morrison, Timothy ("Tim") (b. Dalles, Oregon, Nov. 29, 1955). American trumpeter. Morrison grew up in Portland, Oregon, where he studied trumpet with Fred Sautter. He continued his studies at the New England Conservatory with Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla.

Morrison joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra trumpet section in 1980. He left in 1984 to join the touring quintet, Empire Brass, and performed hundreds of concerts with it as well as recorded four CDs. He returned to the BSO in 1987 as associate principal trumpet and also performed as principal trumpet of the Boston Pops under Maestro John Williams (both orchestras until 1997). When Williams moved to Los Angeles in order to conduct many of his film scores, he enticed Morrison to move there as well so that he could serve as first trumpet in his studio orchestra. Subsequently, Morrison recorded prominent trumpet solos for such films as Born on the 4th of July, Panther, Saving Private Ryan, Amistad, Apollo 13, Nixon, and JFK. He also works as a freelance musician.

Morrison's orchestral career includes guest appearances with the Boston Classical Orchestra, Oregon Symphony, New Japan Philharmonic, Rotterdam Philharmonic, Great Woods Festival Orchestra, Sapei Sinfonietta, and the Orquesta Sinfonica del Estado de Mexico. He has toured with the Summit Brass and taught at the Rafael Méndez Brass Institute, New England Conservatory, Boston Conservatory, and Boston University. He is currently on the faculty at California State University-Long Beach. He is a recipient of the Outstanding Alumnus Award from the New England Conservatory.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Timothy Morrison's website: www.timothymorrison.net.

Morrow, Walter (b. Liverpool, England, June 15, 1850; d. Wimbledon, England, Dec. 21, 1937). English trumpeter. Morrow was one of the leading trumpet players in London during the last part of the nineteenth and the early twentieth centuries. In 1885, he succeeded Thomas Harper Jr. as the principal player in all of the leading orchestras and festivals. He slowly withdrew from active playing around 1910.

When Kosleck was invited to London to perform as first trumpet in a bicentennial performance of Bach's B-Minor Mass, Morrow played second trumpet, and John Solomon played third. Kosleck's so-called "Bach trumpet" greatly interested Morrow, and he set out to reproduce it. He introduced his new trumpet at the Leeds festival in 1886, one year after Kosleck's visit. Like Kosleck's trumpet, Morrow's long, straight, two-valve design in alto A caught on until being replaced by the modern soprano D trumpet (which at first was built in a straight form like the earlier one in A). Morrow was skilled at playing in the clarino manner on the natural trumpet, and often did so to demonstrate how favorably his new trumpet compared to the old style of playing.

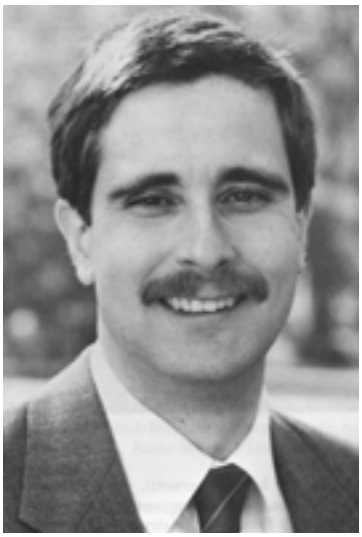
Morrow was a professor at the Royal College of Music from 1894 to 1920, and also taught at the Guildhall School. He was a highly regarded teacher. He disliked the cornet, claiming that it seduced young players into neglecting exercises needed to build a good tone, and he insistently advocated the use of the valve trumpet in F. His most successful student, Ernest Hall, nevertheless became the first advocate of the modern B-flat trumpet that has today become standard in all English orchestras.

Morrow's translation of Kosleck's F trumpet method appeared in London around 1907. His F trumpet and slide trumpet survive in the Horniman Museum, London.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W.W. Norton & Co.); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Mortenson, Gary C[urtiss] (b. Fort Meade, Maryland, Aug. 17, 1956). American trumpeter. Mortenson grew up in Itasca, Illinois, just outside of Chicago. He began playing trumpet at age nine under the guidance of his father Glenn Mortenson, and later with Renold Schilke. After graduating from Lake Park High School in 1974, he attended Augustana College in Rock Island, Illinois (1974-78), earning a bachelor of music education degree under George Opheim. From 1980 to 1981, he attended Ithaca College and earned a master of music degree while studying with James Ode and Herbert Mueller. He then studied for three years with Raymond Crisara at the University of Texas, earning a doctor of musical arts degree in 1984.



Mortenson's professional career includes playing with the Ithaca College Faculty Brass Quintet (1980-81), University of Texas Faculty Brass Quintet (1981-83), University of Louisiana Faculty Brass Quintet (1984-89), Kansas State University Faculty Brass Quintet (1989-2007), and Blue Lake Festival Orchestra, Band, and Faculty Brass Quintet (summers, 1986 to present). He has taught at Augusta State University (1983-84), University of Louisiana (1984-89), and Kansas State University (1989 to present). He was well known as the editor of the International Trumpet Guild Journal, stepping down in the fall of 2013 after having begun in October 2001, and he has been a board member of the ITG. In addition to his teaching duties at KSU (since 1989), Dr. Mortenson has served as head of the department since 2007.

Gary married violinist Kristin Oppenheim Mortenson, an instructor of theory at KSU, in 1984. They have two daughters: Leah Marie (b. 1988) and Sarah Grace (b. 1995). His hobbies include reading, walking, and traveling.

Bibl.: "Gary C. Mortenson" (www.k-state.edu/music/mortenson); personal interview, Jan. 9, 2012.

Mortimer, Harry (b. Hebden Bridge, Yorkshire, England, Apr. 10, 1902; d. London, England, Jan. 23, 1992). British cornetist, trumpeter, and conductor. Mortimer was a star among English cornetists and British brass bands. His father Fred (1880-1953) was a well-known conductor of brass bands who gave music lessons to Harry and his other sons Rex and Alex. Harry took up the cornet at age nine and improved rapidly. He became soloist of the Luton Red Cross Junior Band at age eleven, and began conducting in the same year. In 1923, the band won the prestigious national championship at Crystal Palace. Harry stayed with the Luton Band until 1924. He was considered to be a child prodigy, and won some 350 medals and trophies as a cornetist during his teens. Mortimer and his two brothers then played with the Fodens Motor Works Band, which his father conducted (1924 to 1942).

Mortimer's early professional years were spent performing as soloist, and conducting numerous brass bands throughout England. His brothers also became excellent conductors. Among the three of them, they won twenty first places in the twenty-eight years of brass band competitions between 1930 and 1963. Harry won nine of these with groups such as the Black Dyke Mills Band, Fairey Aviation Band, Foden's Motor Works Band, Munn and Felton's Band, Bickershaw Colliery Band, and the Brighouse & Rastrick Brass Band.

In 1926, Mortimer joined the Hallé Orchestra in Manchester as third trumpet, and moved to principal the following year; he played with it until 1930. He also played principal trumpet in the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra (1930 to 1934) and the BBC Northern Orchestra (1935 to 1942). In 1945, Mortimer played in the Philharmonia, and in 1949 recorded the complete Concerto by Haydn with the Philharmonia under George Weldon on the Columbia label (the fourth side of these two 78-rpm recordings included a version of the Trumpet Voluntary arranged by H.J. Wood).

From 1936 to 1940, Mortimer was a lecturer in trumpet at the Royal Northern College of Music. In 1942, he gave up his solo career to take charge of wind ensembles and brass bands with the BBC, and continued in this capacity until 1964.

Mortimer made many recordings with his various brass bands. In 1945, he became Musical Director of the Morris Concert Band, with which he also had numerous successes in competitions, took part in radio broadcasts, and made many long-playing records. In the period of 1935 to 1970, he was conductor of the Fairey Aviation Band. He also conducted the Black Dyke Mills Band and the Grimethorpe Colliery Band at the Promenade Concerts in Albert Hall in London. He was given the title of Sir Harry Mortimer when he received the Order of the British Empire. He also received the distinction of Commander of the British Order for service to music and for achievements as a soloist and conductor. He was generally referred to as the "Man of Brass."

Mortimer's cornet playing was second to none. His technique was unsurpassed, and his distinctive singing quality on the instrument became his trademark. He is best known for renditions of solos such as Alpine Echoes by Basil Windsor on the echo-cornet, Shylock by Thomas Lear, Zelda by Percy Code, Hail-storm by William Rimmer (one of his former teachers), and Il Bacio arranged by Arban. His duet compositions included Mac and Mort (written for himself and Jack Mackintosh) and The Swallow's Serenade.

In 1978, a television program titled Harry Mortimer's World of Music was aired in his honor. For his eightieth birthday in 1982, the BBC broadcasted a special program recognizing his many years as a radio host. In addition, EMI released a compact disc titled "Man of Brass" that included many of Mortimer's best band recordings made between 1926 and 1950.

Mortimer was appointed president of the National Youth Brass of Great Britain. He loved this position and arranged for a great deal of his money to go to the organization after his death. He died in 1992. Today, numerous scholarships and prizes are awarded in his name. He set a postwar record for his eighteen wins in fourteen years at the British Open and National Championships.

Bibl.: "Man of Brass—The Best of Harry Mortimer, O.B.E." (Forgotten Albums: http://forgottenalbums.com/albums/?p=47); "Harry Mortimer." (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Mosello, Joe (b. Mt. Carmel, Pennsylvania, Nov. 14, 1949). American trumpeter. Mosello earned bachelor of music and bachelor of music education degrees at the Eastman School of Music between 1967 and 1971. After graduating, he joined the US Army Field Band. From 1975 to 1980, he was lead trumpet with the Maynard Ferguson Orchestra, and afterwards played lead with The Village Vanguard Jazz Orchestra (the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Orchestra). During his long and impressive career, he has played lead in the bands of Chuck Mangione, Frank Sinatra, Johnny Mathis, Julie Andrews, Ray Charles, Louie Bellson, B.B. King, Rosemary Clooney, Sammy Davis Jr., Shirley Bassey, Bob Mintzer, and has also played with The Temptations, Blood Sweat and Tears (2000-02), Lew Anderson Big Band, Toshiko Akiyoshi Big Band, The Four Tops, and the Philip Morris/Gene Harris Superband.

Mosello can be heard on over one hundred recordings with such artists as Benny Goodman, Maynard Ferguson, B.B. King, Lew Anderson, Mel Lewis, Louie Bellson, Gene Harris, and others. He has also played lead trumpet in numerous Broadway musicals. He has been an active private teacher since 1985, and from 1995 to 2000 taught at New Jersey City University.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Moskvin, Konstantin Petrovich (b. Ulyanovsk, Russia, Jan. 29, 1959). Russian trumpeter. Moskvin began his studies with Dmitry Davydovich Shapiro at the Ulyanovsk Music College in 1974, graduating in 1978. He continued his studies with Georgy Orvid, Yury Filippovich Krivosheyev, and Lew Volodin at the Moscow Conservatory where he graduated in 1983. At the age of seventeen, he began his orchestral career as a member of the Ulyanovsk Symphony Orchestra (1976-78), and then became first or second trumpet in the All-Union Ministry of Culture Soviet Symphony Orchestra (1981-91). In 1991-2002, he served as second trumpet of the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra. His further positions were as a member of the State Symphony Orchestra of Russia (2001-04) and second trumpet in the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra (from December 2004 to the present).

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Photo: Moskvin appears in the photo of the Bolshoi Orchestra trumpet section found in the color photo pages.

Mossman, Michael ("Mike") Philip (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Oct. 12, 1959). American trumpeter, trombonist, and composer. Mossman grew up in Ridley, Pennsylvania (near Philadelphia). He began playing the trumpet in third grade at age eight, but found trumpet lessons boring, so he quit them and learned to play by ear by listening to recordings. At age fifteen, he was encouraged by Marvin Stamm to learn to read music. He studied with Don Ramos and soon joined the American Youth Jazz Orchestra, which toured Europe; he also toured Europe in 1978 with Anthony Braxton's jazz group.

Mossman earned the distinction of National Merit Scholar while in high school, and attended Oberlin College as a student in sociology/anthropology (1977-81). While there, he auditioned for the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and was accepted. He received bachelor's degrees in sociology/anthropology, trumpet performance, and jazz composition. His teachers were Eugene Young, Byron Pearson, and Wendell Logan.

Mossman moved to Chicago in 1982 where he studied with Vincent Cichowicz and Timothy Kent. He played with the Jazz Members big band (1982-83), Bill Russo, and Rosco Mitchell. He moved to New York City in 1984 where he played with Machito's band (1984-85), Out of the Blue (which he led during 1985-90), and Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (occasionally, between 1984-89). He received a scholarship to study jazz at Rutgers University with William Fielder who was able to help him through some embouchure difficulties, a process that took five years; Mossman received his master of music degree there. He played in Lionel Hampton's big band, Gerry Mulligan's band (1985-86), Horace Silver's quintet (1989-91), and the Count Basie Orchestra, and performed with artists such as Michel Camilo, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Eddie Palmieri, Tito Puente, McCoy Tyner, Mario Bauzá, Dizzy Gillespie's United Nations Orchestra, Jack McDuff, George Gruntz (1989-91), Gil Evans, Slide Hampton, the Carnegie Hall Jazz Band, Chico O'Farrill, Mingus Big Band, Benny Carter, Ray Barretto, Bob Mintzer, Lincoln Center's Afro-Latin Jazz Orchestra, Jimmy Heath, and many others. He credits trumpeter Lew Soloff with being a mentor during his early years in New York, and Jon Faddis for showing him valuable exercises for strengthening his playing.

Mossman formed his own band, Rebirth of the Cool, in 1992 and also leads a new group, Metaphysical Mambo. In 1985 when he won an audition for the Young Lions Band, he formed an association with Blue Note Records that has led to albums such as Contact!, Out of the Blue, Inside Track, Live at Mt. Fuji, and Spiral Staircase. He has also recorded for other labels, producing albums such as Spring Dance (Claves Jazz), Mama Soho (TCB), My Summertime (Owl), and Orisha Suite (Connector).

A versatile musician, Mossman has played classical trumpet with the Chicago Chamber Orchestra, Naumburg Orchestra, Jupiter Symphony Orchestra, New Jersey Composer's Guild orchestra, Garden State Composer's Orchestra, New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, National Symphony of the Dominican Republic, and the Secret Cosmos contemporary ensemble. He has recorded two classical CDs for the Music Minus One label, and has recorded Daniel Schnyder's Trumpet Concerto for the Koch/Schwann label.

Mossman is on the faculty at the Aaron Copland School of Music at Queens College, City University of New York. He has previously taught at the Oberlin Conservatory, Rutgers University, the New School for Social Research, Bloomfield College, Manhattanville College, and the New Jersey Summer Arts Institute. He is a graduate of the Anthony Robbins's Mastery University.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Michael Mossman" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/michaelmossman.html); "Michael Mossman" (http://qcpages.qc.cuny.edu/music/index.php).

Motley, Frank Jr. ("Dual Trumpet") (b. Cheraw, South Carolina, Dec. 30, 1923; d. Durham, North Carolina, May 31, 1998). American trumpeter, vocalist, and drummer. Motley grew up in the same town as trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, and received his early trumpet lessons from him. Around 1946, after serving in the navy, Motley moved to New York City and began his career as an early bebop jazz player. He developed a gimmick of playing two trumpets simultaneously, thus earning the nickname "Dual Trumpets," or "Two Horns." Between 1948 and 1950, he studied at music conservatories in Chicago and Washington, D.C. He then played in Omaha, Nebraska, in the local bands of Nat Towles and Preston Love.

Motley formed a small band called Motley Crew in 1949, and in the early 1950s moved the ensemble to Washington, D.C. Motley Crew recorded single tunes which were sold to various record labels including Gotham, RCA Victor, Specialty, Josie, Hollywood, Big Town, Quality, Gem, and Chess. The group was very popular during the 1950s and early '60s, but eventually broke up. He formed a new group, Frank Motley and the Hitch-Hikers. Motley also played with Lionel Hampton in 1954, and Count Basie on and off during the 1950s.

A heart attack in 1984 caused Motley and his wife to retire to Durham, North Carolina. He remained regionally active throughout the 1980s and early 1990s, often performing with his brother's group, The Red Toppers. He also appeared on the television show, Ripley's Believe It or Not.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Frank Motley Biography" (www.last.fm/music/Frank+Motley/+wiki?ver=1).

Mueller, Herbert Charles (b. St. Joseph, Missouri, Sept. 18, 1920; d. Ithaca, New York, Dec. 21, 1985). American trumpeter. Mueller grew up in St. Joseph, Missouri, and attended the University of Kansas from 1939 to 1942. World War II interrupted his schooling, and he joined the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. He was later transferred to the US Air Force Band, and then to Arlington Cemetery as a bugler. He completed his bachelor of music degree in 1947 at The Juilliard School, where he studied with William Vacchiano. He earned a master of music education degree at Columbia University, where he also studied with Vacchiano.

Early in his career, Mueller played with the Ballet Russe Monte-Carlo Orchestra for ten years, and the Kansas City Philharmonic (1948-57). He recorded Music for a Farce by Paul Bowles for the Columbia label. After leaving the Kansas City Philharmonic, he taught at Indiana University (1957-68), and toured with the Henry Mancini orchestra (1967-68) before accepting a position at the University of Toronto (1968-71). While in Toronto, he often performed with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and other leading ensembles in the city. His last teaching post was at Ithaca College (1971-85). He also performed and recorded with the Ithaca Brass Quintet. Among his best known students are Susan Slaughter, Edmund Cord, Kim Dunnick, and Gary Mortenson.

Mueller published a text titled Learning to Teach Through Playing with Addison Wesley Publications (now owned by Hal Leonard), and wrote the article, "Accompanied Two-Trumpet Literature: An Annotated Bibliography" for the Newsletter of the International Trumpet Guild in October 1976. He enjoyed fishing, gardening, and constructing buildings. After retiring in 1985, Mueller developed colon cancer, and died within six months. He was survived by his wife Joyce—whom he had married in 1949—as well as children Diane (b. 1951), Gordon (b. 1955) and Paul (b. 1961). After his death, Ithaca College established the Herbert C. Mueller Memorial Scholarship in his honor.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview with Joyce Mueller, Aug. 12, 2010.

Mueller [Müller], [Jean Baptiste] Pierre (b. Luxembourg, Mar. 18, 1846; d. c1901). Luxembourg trumpeter. Mueller immigrated to the United States in 1888 in order to become second trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Wilhelm Gericke, a position he held for twelve years until 1900. According to Barbara Perkel of the BSO archives, he was also principal trumpet of the Boston Pops orchestra from 1893 to 1900. During his tenure with the BSO, he performed under conductors Gericke, Nikisch, and Paur. Mueller also played with the Haydn & Handel Society from 1888 to 1898. He taught at the New England Conservatory from 1881 to 1900.

Bibl.: Reaban, Derek. "Roster of Trumpet Sections of the Boston Symphony Orchestra" (www.trumpetherald.com); "Principal Musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra" (www.stokowski.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Muhammad, Ameen [Chapman, Curtis] (b. Clarksdale, Mississippi, July 12, 1954; d. Chicago, Illinois, Feb. 27, 2003). American trumpeter and composer. Born as Curtis Chapman, Muhammad moved with his family to Chicago when he was seven. Being from the poor South, he suffered many prejudices during his early school years. His grandmother educated him about the history of black slaves in America, and Muhammad became intensely interested in African-American culture. As his musical talents developed, he sought an education from the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians in Chicago, studying trumpet with Lester Bowie. He also studied composition and played a vital role in Ernest Dawkins's New Horizons Ensemble. In addition, he performed with Ed Wilkerson's Shadow Vignettes, and Aoki's Miyumi Project Big Band.

Muhammad became one of Chicago's leading composers, performers, and historians for Black music in America. He composed a folk opera titled Roots N' Da Blues, of which only the first act was performed. He received a National Meet the Composers Artist Award in 1995, and formed his own jazz group called Chicago-3. Although he did not record any albums as leader, Muhammad can be heard on numerous CDs and film soundtracks. He toured the United States, Europe, and Japan. Perhaps his biggest legacy is the educational work he did concerning the history of Black music in America at the AACM in Chicago.

Muhammad had a daughter named Ameena Chapman, and two sons—Fareed Chapman (who preceded him in death) and Rameen Chapman. Muhammad died of heart failure at his home at the age of forty-eight.

Bibl.: Jenkins, Todd S. "Ameen Muhammad—Trumpeter, composer and educator" (The Last Roll Call: www.jazzhouse.org); "The Candlestick Maker—Performers' Biographies" (www.michaelzerang.com).

Mühlfellner, Martin (b. Salzburg, Austria, Apr. 4, 1972). Austrian trumpeter. Mühlfellner studied music at an early age with his father, and later attended the Salzburg Mozarteum where he studied with Friedrich Krammer. From 1991 to 1996, he studied with Josef Pomberger of the Vienna Philharmonic. Mühlfellner began his orchestral career in the Bühnenorchester and the Bundestheater in Austria. Since 1996, he has been principal trumpet of the Vienna Philharmonic.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Mullens, Edward ("Eddie" "Moon") (b. Mayhew, Mississippi, May 11,1916; d. New York, New York, Apr. 7, 1977). American trumpeter. Mullens began his music career playing with singer-entertainer Franklin "Half-Pint" Jaxon, and with Earl Bostic. In 1938, he performed with "Hot Lips" Page, and during the late 1930s was also a member of Benny Carter's band. From 1946 to 1948, he was a member of Louis Armstrong's group, and then the Cab Calloway band. In 1949, he played in the Lionel Hampton band, and during the late 1950s was a section player in the Duke Ellington Orchestra. After leaving the Ellington organization in the early 1960s, he left music to become a professional photographer.

Bibl.: Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Mulligan, Peter Sidney [Michael] ("Mick") (b. Harrow, Middlesex, England, Jan. 24, 1928; d. Chichester, West Sussex, England, Dec. 20, 2006). English trumpeter and bandleader. Mulligan was influenced by recordings of Louis Armstrong and taught himself to play the trumpet before going into the military as a member of the Rifle Brigade. After returning home, he worked in his family's wine importing business. However, his love of drinking wine and inviting friends over for wine-tasting parties prompted the family to pay him an even larger salary just to stay away from work. So, in 1948 he formed Mick Mulligan & the Magnolia Jazz Band (professional from 1950).

Mulligan's band included vocalist George Melly. The two became best friends and boozing pals and seduced hundreds of women during their many years together. They were the first to organize all-night drinking and sex parties, known as "raves." Mulligan was known as the King of Ravers. Although Mulligan was a passionate performer with a larger-than-life stage personality, his trumpet technique was limited. Nonetheless, his irresistible charm, as well as the excellence of the band, kept the group going until 1953. Mulligan and Melly reformed the band in 1955 as a sextet, performing mostly in the Dixieland style. It became one of the top bands in all of England, performing on radio and television, and recording for Saga, Tempo, Parlophone, Pye, and Upbeat Jazz.

With the rise in popularity of rock and roll in England during the early 1960s, Mulligan disbanded the group in 1962. He became Melly's concert manager for a while, and accepted occasional guest solo appearances with various dance bands until the late 1970s. His last playing gig was at his son Guy's wedding in 1987. He managed a grocery store in Sussex, and during his last years owned several racehorses.

Mulligan's first wife Pamela, with whom he had two sons and two daughters, died in 1978. He and his second wife Tessa were married in 1980, but had no children. Mulligan died at the age of seventy-eight.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Mick Mulligan" (www.answers.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Murillo, Willie (b. Whittier, California, Nov. 23, 1974). American trumpeter. Murillo began teaching himself to play trumpet at age eleven. He graduated from California High School in 1992, and attended California State University in Fullerton from 1992 to 1994 where he studied with Mark Garrabrant. He played lead trumpet with the Brian Setzer Orchestra, winning a Grammy Award with the group in 2002, and soon performed with many top artists and bands including Tony Bennett, Quincy Jones, Bob Dylan, Leann Rimes, Arturo Sandoval, Maynard Ferguson, Manhattan Transfer, Rosemary Clooney, Julie Andrews, Stevie Wonder, Natalie Cole, James Brown, Patti Austin, Hootie and the Blowfish, Pacific Symphony, Seattle Symphony Orchestra, Christina Aguilera, and the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra.

As a studio player, Murillo has recorded soundtracks for such films as Elf, Christmas with the Kranks, Stuart Little, Me Myself and Irene, Path to War, Larry the Cable Guy, Santa Claus 3, and The Thirteenth Floor. Television credits include The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, The Late Show with David Letterman, Nip Tuck, Fox 7, MTV, Regis & Kathy Lee, VH1, and Beverly Hills 90210. He has also performed for President George W. Bush.

A devoted music educator, Murillo founded Varsity Publishing in 2001, a company that produces junior high and high school jazz band arrangements. He has appeared as a clinician in numerous schools, and is a staff composer for Mariner's Church in Newport Beach, California.

Murillo and his wife Annie have been married since 1999, and have three children: Lucy Ann (b. 2006), Charlie Stanton (b. 2008), and Quincy Jeremiah (b. 2010). He enjoys spending time with his family, church activities, singing, music production, and racquetball.

Bibl.: Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford); personal interview, Nov. 28, 2011.

Photo: Willie Murillo with Quincy Jones.

Murphy, Maurice Harrison (b. Hammersmith, London, England, Aug. 7, 1935; d. London, England, Oct. 28, 2010). British trumpeter and cornetist. Murphy was one of the greatest and most beloved musicians in England. His thirty years as principal trumpet of the London Symphony Orchestra made him a legend.

Murphy grew up in Yorkshire, and began playing the cornet at age six. His father William, a member of the local Salvation Army Band, was his first teacher. At age twelve, Maurice became the All-Junior Champion Cornet Soloist, and soon joined the Harton Colliery and Crook Hall Colliery bands. He also played with the Yorkshire Engineering and Welding Band, plus the Fairey Aviation Band in Stockport, for twelve months while maintaining a day job as an electrician. He became well known when he was later named principal cornet of the Black Dyke Mills Band from 1956 to 1961.

In 1961, Murphy was appointed principal of the BBC Northern Symphony Orchestra, and in 1977 he became principal of the London Symphony Orchestra. His sound in the LSO became an icon through hundreds of record albums and film tracks, such as all six Star Wars, Superman, Raiders of the Lost Ark, Gangs of New York, Johnny English, Reign of Fire, Mr. Holland's Opus, Harry Potter, Philadelphia, Batman, Alien, Frankenstein, Gladiator, Who Framed Roger Rabbit, We Were Soldiers, Brassed Off, and many others. He officially retired from the orchestra on October 16, 2000 but was given additional year-by-year contracts until his actual retirement on June 3, 2007.

In October 2000, a concert in his honor took place with the participation of the LSO, the LSO Brass Ensemble, the LSO Big Band, and trumpeters Rod Franks and Derek Watkins, besides Murphy himself, who moved his listeners by his rendition of Copland's Quiet City. He made many solo recordings including Unaccompanied Bach (1978, on the Sounding Brass label), Stars in Brass (Oct. 1994, M. Murphy/G. Barker/D. Watkins, on the Doyen label), Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto (LSO cond. by Gordon Nikolitch), Vivaldi's Concerto (with Rod Franks, trpt. 2, LSO cond. by G. Nikolitch, Les Chefs-d'oeuvre de la Trompette on Cloud 9), and under his own name: Music for Trumpet and Organ with Nicholas Jackson on Gamut/Vista; Concerto for Trumpet by Harry James, Georgia, Tico Tico, Misty, and other solo works on various labels.

Murphy received the International Trumpet Guild's Honorary Award in 2008, and in 2010 became a Member of the Order of the British Empire (MBE). He was described by Maestro André Previn as an absolutely ideal player in the symphony orchestra setting. He was a humble man who described himself, I'm just another trumpeter who's been very lucky. Known for his sense of humor, when Maestro Claudio Abbado conducted the LSO in a symphony by Brahms and remarked, It's German music. It should be played on German trumpets—Murphy's response was, Perhaps it should be a German conductor as well.

Murphy taught at the Royal Northern College of Music from 1974 to 1977. He was married to his wife, Shirley, and they had a son, Martin.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Maurice Murphy—The Icon" (The Brass Herald, Dec. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Maurice Murphy" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "A Tribute to a Legend: Maurice Murphy" (ITG News, www.trumpetguild.org/news/news00/murphy_htm); "Maurice Murphy" (London Symphony Orchestra Podcasts, http://lso.co.uk/mauricemurphy).

Murray, Robert ("Rob") (b. Emporia, Kansas, Dec. 26, 1958). American trumpeter. Murray grew up in Vancouver, Washington. He began playing trumpet at the age of ten under the guidance of Frank Zgonc, a clarinetist and music store owner who rented Murray his first instrument (grades 5-7). He had no private lessons until he graduated from Fort Vancouver High School in 1977, when he enrolled at the University of Washington (1977-83), where he studied with Roy Cummings, and earned a bachelor of music education degree. For the next ten years, he freelanced and toured in the Seattle area, performing with Ray Charles, Quincy Jones, Cab Calloway, Lawrence Welk All-Stars, Oregon Symphony Orchestra, and Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus, among others. He also served as the assistant director of athletic bands at the University of Washington. He returned to college (1993-96), earning bachelor's and master's degrees in performance at Portland State University studying with Fred Sautter and Gerald Webster.

Murray moved to the Dallas area in 1996 in order to pursue a DMA in trumpet at the University of North Texas where he studied with Keith Johnson through 1998. He became a member of the Dallas Brass (1997-2000), which toured all over the country, while he continued working with many musical organizations in the Northwest, including the Portland Opera (1998 and 1999 seasons). Through the various residencies of the Dallas Brass, he received Distinguished Service Awards from music education organizations in Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Florida, Minnesota, Georgia, and Alabama. He completed his doctoral degree in 2002.

Murray was professor of trumpet at Murray State University in Kentucky (1999-2003). He performed as principal of the Owensboro Symphony (1999-2003) and the Orquesta Sinfonia de Mineria in Mexico (summers, 2000-03). He taught at the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley (2003-09), and in the fall of 2009 accepted his current position as professor of trumpet at Columbus State University in Georgia where he hosted the 2012 International Trumpet Guild Conference. Murray is also a former member of the Rocky Mountain Brass Quintet and Greeley Philharmonic, and is currently a member of the Columbus Brass Band. He has played on occasion with the Colorado Symphony Orchestra, Denver Brass, and the Colorado Jazz Orchestra. In 2007, he was the University of Northern Colorado's College of Performing and Visual Arts Scholar of the Year, and a recipient of the Special Commendation Award from the Colorado House of Representatives.

Murray and oboist Lauren Murray have been married since 2001. His hobbies include traveling, hiking, and reading. He is also an avid baseball fan.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Robert Murray" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/news04/125murray.htm); "Robert Murray" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/10/1056.html); personal interview, July 27, 2012.

Murtha, Roger G. (b. c1936). American trumpeter. While a boy, Murtha heard Louis Armstrong perform, which inspired him to begin playing the trumpet in fifth grade; his first teacher was Dom Perone. He excelled in sports and attended Elon College on a football scholarship. However, he did not like the school, so he transferred to the Hartt School of Music at the University of Hartford in 1956, studying with Ted Gresh and Theodore Weis, and earning a bachelor of music degree in 1960. He completed his bachelor of music education degree there in 1961, and in 1962 received master of music degrees in performance and education. Additionally, he studied with Armando Ghitalla and Mel Broiles.

Murtha was a graduate teaching assistant at the Hartt School, and also taught thirty to forty students each week at the community school division of the university. In 1959, he became the utility trumpet of the Hartford Symphony, and in 1962 became the second and associate principal of the orchestra with which he played until 2008. He often played as a substitute in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops, becoming a close friend of the principal trumpeter, Armando Ghitalla. (Ghitalla later became godfather to Murtha's oldest son, Jay.) He recorded Erb's Diversion for Two (other than sex) (with Tele Lesbines, percussion, on Opus One S-1). He also performed with the Brass Quintet at the Hartt School of Music, where he taught from 1962 until his retirement in 2009.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Belluscio, Christopher. "Roger Murtha Looks Back on His Career as a Teacher and Performer" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2010).

Mustafa, Melton Shakir (b. Miami, Florida, Nov. 23, 1947). American trumpeter and arranger. Mustafa comes from a musical family. He started playing alto horn in seventh grade, but switched to trumpet a year later. While in high school, he played in a jazz quintet that included his brother, Jesse Jones, on saxophone. Melton attended Mississippi Valley State University (1965-67), the Berklee College of Music (1966), and Florida A&M University (1967-69)

Mustafa's career began during the 1970s when he played with rhythm and blues bands such as Frank Williams's Rocketeers, the Uptown Funk All-Stars, and Chuck Jackson and the Marvelettes. He also played with Ira Sullivan's group. During the 1980s, he played with Lionel Hampton (1980), Jaco Pastorius's Word of Mouth (1983), Bobby Watson's Horizon (on and off, 1983-90), the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1985), Jon Hendricks, James Williams, John Hicks, Count Basie (1985-92), Mingus Dynasty, and Gunther Schuller.

Since 1994, Mustafa has led his own seventeen-piece big band (Melton Mustafa Orchestra). He is also associated with MSM Arts, Inc. (a nonprofit organization) and ZAKI Publishing through which he has published many arrangements. He has released numerous albums including Boiling Point (Contemporary), St. Louis Blues (Contemporary), The Softer Side (ZAKI), Mean Streets Beat (Contemporary, with Eric Allison), Gumbo (Evidence, with Bobby Watson), Inventor (Blue Note, with Bobby Watson), and Tailor Made (Columbia, with Bobby Watson).

As an educator, Mustafa is head of the music department at the African Heritage Cultural Arts Center, and is a professor of music at Florida Memorial University where he produces the annual Melton Mustafa Jazz Festival.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Melton Mustafa" (www.answers.com); Melton Mustafa's official website: www.meltonmustafa.com.

Myagchenko, Nikolay Alexeyevich (b. Petrograd, Russia, Dec. 7, 1921; d. Leningrad, Russia, June 16, 1981). Russian trumpeter. Myagchenko graduated from the Rimsky-Korsakov Music College in Leningrad in 1939; his teacher there was his father-in-law, Alexander Schmidt. He began his career in the Leningrad Front Ensemble (1943-45), and was principal of the Maliy Opera Orchestra from 1945 to 1967. From 1939, he studied again with Schmidt at the Leningrad Conservatory, completing his degree in 1949. Myagchenko also taught at the Mussorgsky Music College in Leningrad from 1949 to 1981, as well as the Rimsky-Korsakov Special Music School from 1950 to 1956.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Myers, George William (b. Feb. 11, 1920; d. Clear Brook, Virginia, June 21, 1998). American trumpeter and bugler. Myers grew up in Kokomo, Indiana. He earned a bachelor of music degree from Baylor University. He was a Sergeant First Class in the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. from 1945 to 1961, and became chief bugler at Arlington National Cemetery. Myers performed Taps at hundreds of funerals, including those for Generals John J. Pershing, George C. Marshall, and Henry H. "Hap" Arnold. He also played for the funeral of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

After retiring from the Army in 1961, Myers studied at the American University, earning a bachelor of education degree. He taught music in the Fairfax County Schools, eventually retiring from Longfellow Intermediate School in McLean, Virginia, in 1981. He died of cancer at the age of seventy-eight, and was survived by his wife of fifty-five years—Betty Myers—and his sons Lloyd and Phillip. He is buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

Bibl.: "George Myers" (http://tapsbugler.com/buglers-of-arlington-national-cemetery); "George Myers" (http://archives.rootsweb.ancestry.com/th/read/VAFREDER/2004-10/1096907746).

Myers, Walter ("Walt") J. (b. Columbus, Ohio, May 24, 1937). American trumpeter. Myers began playing trumpet at the age of ten, studying with Alphonse Cinecone. While attending Dublin High School in Dublin, Ohio (graduating in 1955 as valedictorian), he studied with Sam Giamarco. He then enrolled at The Ohio State University where he studied with Forrest Stohl and Richard Suddendorf, graduating with a bachelor of music education degree in 1959. Myers earned master of music and master of music education degrees, studying with Frank W. Baird at the University of Colorado in Boulder in 1961.

Myers taught in the public schools of Plainview, New York, and Hempstead, New York, between 1961 and 1963, during which time he also freelanced in the New York City area, substituting in the New York Brass Quintet and the American Brass Quintet, and playing principal trumpet in the Brooklyn Symphony Orchestra. He was also a member of the New York Orchestral Society orchestra. He accepted a teaching position at Wichita State University in 1963, and founded the Wichita Brass Quintet (faculty). He became principal of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra and the Wichita Music Theater orchestra. During the summers of 1963 through 1970, he performed and taught at the Aspen Music Festival where he served as a member of the Aspen Brass Quintet with trumpeter Robert Nagel.

Beginning in the summer of 1970, Myers pursued a DMA degree at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, studying with William Trumbauer, while also serving as principal of the Kansas City Lyric Opera Orchestra. His summer classes were interrupted in 1975 when he took a position in the Chautauqua Music Festival Orchestra in Chautauqua, New York. He graduated in 1979 after completing his dissertation titled A Photographic, Air Flow Direction, and Sound Spectrum Analysis of Two Trumpet Embouchure Techniques.

Myers became Associate Dean of Fine Arts at Wichita State University in 1987, and was promoted to Dean in 1990. He resigned his position with the Wichita Symphony Orchestra in 1987, and relinquished his role as trumpet teacher during the same year. During his twenty-four years as trumpet professor at WSU, he taught hundreds of students including Stephen G. Jones, Allan Cox, David Hickman, John Aley, Robert Suggs, Donald Duncan, Charles Tumlinson, Richard Jorgensen, and Leslie Linn.

Walter and Kaye Myers were married in 1959, and have two daughters: Elizabeth (b. 1968) and Allison (b. 1971). Myers's hobbies include golf, boating, and politics. He was named the "Outstanding Alumnus of the Year" by the Dublin, Ohio, City Schools in 2011.

Bibl.: Myers, Walter J. A Photographic, Air Flow Direction, and Sound Spectrum Analysis of Two Trumpet Embouchure Techniques (unpublished diss., University of Missouri-Kansas City, 1979); personal interview, Jan. 22, 2011.

Greg Adams, the original trumpeter with Tower of Power.

Ambrose Akinmusire, a jazz star of the younger generation.

Maurice André (1933-2012) was the world's most famous classical soloist.

Ole Edvard Antonsen is a brilliant classical and crossover (New Age) soloist who performs over three hundred concerts each year.

Ralph Alessi is the third generation of trumpeters in his family.

The US Postal Service issued this Louis Armstrong commemorative postage stamp in 1995.

Paul Archibald is one of England's finest performers and teachers.

Armstrong's deformed upper lip was caused mostly from an incident in a Chicago nightclub during the early 1930s, when a mobster held a pistol to his head and forced him to play higher and higher until blood gushed from the lip.

Louis Armstrong made countless television appearances and was featured in dozens of movies. One of his music recordings is included on the Voyager Golden Record sent into space to represent the greatest achievements of mankind.

Gravesite of Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong (1901-1971) at Flushing Cemetery in Queens, New York.

A top big band and studio trumpet artist, Louise Baranger has released the solo CD, Trumpeter's Prayer, on the Summit Records label.

Gravestone of Leon "Bix" Beiderbecke, one of the most influential jazz cornetists.

Vincent Bach B-flat trumpet (serial number 65) made in New York City. Bach began building trumpets and cornets in 1924 and moved the factory to Mount Vernon, New York, in 1953.

Detail of Vincent Bach B-flat trumpet with serial number 65. Owned by Gerald Endsley.

International soloist Alison Balsom records for EMI.

Andrew Balio, principal trumpet of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra (since 2001).

One of the giants of jazz, Marcus Belgrave is a strong advocate for jazz education.

Known to many as “Waynard,” Wayne Bergeron played lead trumpet with Maynard Ferguson’s band from 1986 to 1988. His impressive upper register can be heard on hundreds of film soundtracks.

Principal trumpet of the Opera and Museum Orchestras in Frankfurt since 1975, Wolfgang Basch is also a leading German soloist who has released dozens of Baroque and Classical albums.

As a classical soloist, Wolfgang Bauer combines the brilliant trumpet playing of Maurice André with the historically informed style of Edward Tarr.

Votive painting once owned by trumpeter Cesare Bendinelli (c1542-1617) and donated to the pilgrimage church of Aufkirchen. (See Bendinelli biography for story.) Bendinelli wrote the first known trumpet method book in 1614.

Detail of painting depicting trumpeter Cesare Bendinelli as he prays to have the boat he is in saved from a whirlpool on the Danube River.

Album cover of Randy Sandke meets Bix Beiderbecke.

Besson (England) trumpet in F/E owned by Gerald Endsley.

The highly versatile Lyman Brodie is an important trumpeter and arts administrator.

Bobby Bradford is a top jazz trumpeter, teacher, and composer in Los Angeles.

Till Brönner is a superstar performer whose music is a unique blend of bebop and jazz fusion, but which also sometimes includes country, rock, pop, and other styles.

Trumpeters of the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow (2012).
Left to right: Dennis Provkin, Pavel Arkhipov, Andrei Klevtsov, Aleksander Skvortsov, Andrei Ikov, Mikhail Gaiduk, Alexei Korniliev, Konstantin Moskvin, Nikolai Pavlov, Sergei Kositsin, Yevgeni Guriev.

Ingolf Burkhardt is one of Germany's top jazz artists.

The gravestone of Clifford Brown in the Mt. Zion Cemetery in Wilmington, Delaware. Despite his accidental death at age twenty-five, "Brownie" became a giant in the jazz trumpet world.

Joe Burgstaller is currently one of America's leading trumpet soloists. His crossover group BM4 is widely acclaimed.

Larry Black was a member of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra from 1970 to 2003.

Neal Berntsen is a member of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and teaches at Carnegie Mellon University.

Charles Butler, now retired, was principal trumpet of many symphony orchestras including the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, Israel Philharmonic, Seattle Symphony, Malaysia Philharmonic, and Houston Symphony.

Albert “Eddie” Calvert was one of England’s most famous pop artists. He was the first British instrumentalist to have a gold record (1953).

Dr. Leonard Candelaria was president of the International Trumpet Guild (1993-95) and has taught at the University of North Texas and the University of Alabama - Birmingham.

Armando Cedillo is one of Mexico’s most versatile trumpeters. He is also the founder and organizer of the annual Rafael Méndez Trumpet Festival in Mexico City.

Although Dick Cathcart is mostly remembered as a featured trumpet soloist with the Lawrence Welk Band (1962-68), he was also a noted composer who wrote the theme music for the popular television series, Dragnet.

Robert “Bahb” Civiletti is well known for his outstanding performances on the Baroque trumpet.

A legendary orchestral trumpeter and teacher, Stephen Chenette was elected president of the International Trumpet Guild from 2003 to 2005.

Jim Cullum Jr. is considered to be the successor of Bix Beiderbecke. He is a leading traditional jazz cornetist.

A statue of cornet soloist Bowen R. Church (1860-1923) in the Roger William Park of Providence, Rhode Island.
(Photo by Richard Ashmore.)

Ted Curson (1935-2012) was a top jazz trumpeter and was also an excellent vocalist, piccolo trumpet player, and flugelhornist.

Jazz and pop trumpeter Kiku Collins is well known for her performances with Beyoncè and Michael Bolton.

A professional classical and jazz trumpeter, Dr. Thomas Erdmann has published nearly two hundred music articles and editions.

Gravesite of the famous cornet soloist, Herbert Lincoln Clarke. Clarke's ashes were buried in the Congressional Cemetery (Washington, D.C.) near his longtime friend and colleague, John Philip Sousa.

Known for his high degree of versatility, Dr. Luis Engelke is an expert on Brazilian trumpet music.

Paul Wesley "Doc" Evans (1907-1977) became a top Dixieland trumpet and cornet player.

Australian trumpeter Brian Evans is a professor at the Sydney Conservatorium. He is also a fine lyric tenor.

When Dizzy Gillespie visited Turkey and heard Maffy Falay play jazz, he told his manager that he had discovered a fantastic trumpeter who played like Miles Davis and Lee Morgan, only better!

Horst Fischer was Germany's answer to American jazz trumpet soloists such as Harry James and Maynard Ferguson. Another one of Fischer's albums, Horst Fischer and His Golden Trumpet, sold over one million copies in 1959.

Fezile "Feya" Faku is one of South Africa's finest jazz trumpeters.

Howard Engstrom has been a member of the Houston Symphony and the Calgary Philharmonic.

The highly versatile British trumpeter, Tony Fisher, is one of London's star musicians.

Fernando Dissenha is one of Brazil's leading classical trumpeters.

Gravestone of the brilliant British cornetist Edwin Firth who died in battle during World War I.

Rebecca Coupe Franks is an active American west coast trumpeter and composer. Her compositions have been heard on television shows such as Melrose Place and Law and Order.

John Foster is second trumpet of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra and is the founder of the ensemble, Australian Baroque Brass.

Paolo Fresu was born and raised on the Italian island of Sardinia. He is one of Europe's finest jazz trumpeters and teachers.

Professor Amy S. Gilreath is one of America's leading trumpeters. She has taught at Illinois State University since 1990.

Garth Greenup has been principal trumpet of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra since 1996.

"Dizzy" Gillespie received his nickname after auditioning for the Frank Fairfax Orchestra in 1935. Trumpeter Joe Facio rigged the audition so that Gillespie would play poorly, and afterward remarked to his band colleagues, You know that dizzy little cat, the one who carries his trumpet in a paper bag, he can't read worth a damn.

Often referred to as the "Louis Armstrong of England" during his early career, Nat Gonella became one of the world's finest jazz trumpeters.

French trumpeter Michel Laplace is a noted author who has written hundreds of biographical articles about trumpet players.

The great Italian jazz trumpeter, Andrea Giuffredi, is one of the most versatile musicians in the world. He has released three solo CDs on the Summit label.

Matthias Höfs is one of Germany's star classical trumpet soloists.

Billy Ray Hunter has been one of the principal trumpeters of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra since 2004.

John Holt is principal trumpet of the Dallas Opera Orchestra (since 1989) and teaches at the University of North Texas (since 2002).

Finnish trumpet soloist Jouko Harjanne has toured the world for the past twenty years. He is also a professor at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki.

Roy Hargrove is a versatile musician who is comfortable performing traditional jazz, bebop, avant-garde, and rap music.

Regents' Professor David Hickman in his teaching studio at Arizona State University (2011).

Chris Jaudes is one of New York City's busiest freelance trumpeters. He teaches at The Juilliard School.

Megastar Quincy Jones holds the record for the most Grammy nominations (seventy-nine), and has received twenty-nine Grammy Awards, including a Grammy Legend Award in 1991.

Strike Up the Band is one of many Quincy Jones albums recorded during the late 1950s and early '60s.

The great Russian trumpeter, Andrei Ikov (principal trumpet of the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra), in his home music study.

Gravesite of famed keyed bugle soloist Ned Kendall in Boston's Old Forest Cemetery.

Detail of Kendall gravestone.

A leading researcher and writer about colonial America, Timothy Kent was fourth trumpet of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra from 1979-1998.

Dutch jazz artist Saskia Laroo almost always plays trumpet with one hand (left or right). Heavily influenced by Miles Davis, American critics have dubbed her the "Lady Miles Davis."

Dr. Cathy Leach has been a professor at the University of Tennessee since 1981 and serves as principal trumpet of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

Trumpeter Wynton Marsalis is the first artist in history to win Grammy Awards in both classical and jazz categories in the same year (1983).

Uwe Kleindienst has been principal trumpet of the Bavarian State Orchestra in Munich since 1989.

The pop and jazz trumpeter, Ralph Marterie, was born in Italy as Ralph Martire. He had twelve hit songs that kept his band working after big bands lost popularity.

Raymond Mase has been teaching trumpet at The Juilliard School since 1987. He is now chairman of the brass department.

Swedish trumpeter Lasse Lindgren was inspired to play the trumpet at age five after hearing Louis Armstrong on the radio.

Vadim Novikov has been a trumpet professor at the Moscow Conservatory since 1978.

Puerto Rican trumpeter Luis “Perico” Ortiz is a top salsa music performer.

Fred Mills was a member of the famed Canadian Brass for twenty-four years.

Dr. Henry Meredith has amassed a collection of over 6,000 instruments.

Cal “Folks” Massey was an important trumpeter and composer in the New York-Philadelphia area during the 1950s to the 1970s.

Gospel trumpeter David O’Neill on his 350cid Boss Hoss motorcycle.

Born in Hawaii to Japanese parents, Eric Miyashiro has worked as a studio player in Japan since 1989.

Geoffrey Payne is one of Australia's most virtuosic trumpet soloists. He has been principal trumpet of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra since 1986.

Trumpet soloist Adam Rapa often performs on his custom-made four-valve B-flat trumpet.

Bach's most famous trumpeter, Gottfried Reiche (1667-1734), in a portrait by Elias Gottlob Haussmann (1727).

Mike Price has played lead trumpet with the big bands of Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich, Gerald Wilson, and many others.

As a founding member, Ronald Romm performed over 4,500 concerts with the Canadian Brass. He is currently teaching at the University of Illinois. Photo by Ivano Buat.

Cuban trumpeter, pianist, and composer Arturo Sandoval has received six Grammy Awards and ten nominations. He has also received six Billboard Awards and one Emmy Award.

Tony Scodwell is an important Las Vegas trumpeter.

Judith Saxton is currently a professor at the University of North Carolina School of the Arts.

German trumpeter Adolf Scherbaum was a pioneer of the Baroque music revival.

Thomas Rolfs is principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Charles Schlueter spent the last twenty-five of his forty-eight-year career as principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Swiss trumpeter Claude Rippas is an important soloist and pedagogue.

Carl “Doc” Severinsen has defined trumpet artistry and showmanship since the early 1960s when he began to be featured each night on television’s Tonight Show with Johnny Carson.

Bernard Soustrot is a leading French classical trumpet soloist.

Philip Smith has been principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic since 1985.

Jazz great Bobby Shew (from the 1980 album cover, Outstanding in His Field).

The portrait of Handel’s trumpeter Valentine Snow (1685-1779) hangs in the Fenton House in London.

Del Staigers was considered America’s foremost cornet soloist during the 1920s-30s. When John Philip Sousa died in 1932, Staigers was selected to perform Taps at the funeral.

Costa Rican trumpeter José Sibaja is well known for his versatility.

Dr. Roger Stoner is a prominent performer, teacher, and arts administrator.

Known for his over-the-top technical ability and versatile trumpet playing, Allen Vizzutti is also a skilled composer.

Jack Sutte has been second trumpet of the Cleveland Orchestra since 1999.

After being a member of major orchestras in Charleston, New York, and Cleveland, Robert Sullivan accepted the position of principal trumpet of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra in 2008.

Dr. Edward H. Tarr is a famous soloist, teacher, and trumpet historian. He is pictured with his wife, Dr. Irmtraud Tarr-Krüger, a professional organist and psychotherapist.

Czech trumpeter Marek Zvolánek is not only one of Europe's foremost orchestral musicians, but also a world-class soloist.

Trumpeter Rich Wetzel leads his band, the Groovin' Higher Orchestra.

N

Næss, Lars Harald Wittgren (b. Oslo, Norway, Feb. 2, 1943). Norwegian trumpeter. Næss began playing trumpet at age thirteen. From 1956 to 1959, he studied with Willy Mittelbach. Other teachers include Bjørn Jensen (1964-65), Harry Kvebæk (1966-68), Howard Snell (London, 1974), and Edward Tarr (Basel, Switzerland, 1979). Næss was acting principal trumpet of the Norwegian Opera Orchestra from 1968 to 1972, and became principal in 1972. He often performs solo pieces for trumpet on the radio, and is a specialist on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, is an active soloist and chamber musician, and enjoys teaching. His dissertation paper is on the compositions for trumpet and cornet by Oskar Böhme.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nagel, Kurt (b. Hockenheim, Germany, July 30, 1949). German trumpeter. Nagel studied with Reinhold Lösch from 1966 to 1972 at the City School of Music and Theater in Mannheim, and also attended the music school in Heidelberg-Mannheim. After graduation, he joined the Opera House Orchestra in Frankfurt, and from 1974 to 1976 was principal of the Theater Orchestra of Lower Saxony in Hanover and principal of the National Theater Orchestra in Mannheim (until 1990). Since 1977, he has been a member of the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra, and has taught in Hanover, Mannheim (1978-90), and Saarbrücken (1990-93).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nagel, Robert ("Bob") E[arl Jr.] (b. Freeland, Pennsylvania, Sept. 29, 1924). American trumpeter. Nagel comes from a musical family dating back to the first stadtpfeifers in Leipzig who were friends of J.S. Bach. At age eight, Nagel began playing an old cornet handed down to him from his great-uncle. He received group lessons from Stephen Miescer, and later private lessons from Emmett Kuehner. When Nagel was thirteen, Dr. Frank Simon invited him to tour as a soloist with his famous ARMCO Band, performing Willow Echoes across the country. During high school, Nagel studied with Fred Bosworth (one year) and Murray Karpilovsky (one year). He also studied with Ernest Williams, Guy Borelli, and Georges Mager at the Tanglewood Institute.

After high school, Nagel served for three years in the US Military Academy [Marine] Band during World War II. He then attended The Juilliard School as a composition major, and while there, played trumpet very little, although he did perform Copland's Quiet City, a performance that led to an invitation to audition for WOR Radio. As a result, he performed as first trumpet in the newly formed Little Orchestra Society of New York (1947-60) and freelanced in the city, playing with the Goldman Band, Radio City Music Hall, Bach Aria Society, Contemporary Chamber Ensemble, Metropolitan Opera stage band, and other diverse groups.

Nagel and Harvey Phillips formed the New York Brass Quintet in 1954, a stellar group that led the way for hundreds of other brass quintets. It was managed for twenty-five years by Columbia Artists Management, Inc. until the group retired in 1986. Today, the NYBQ's music library, programs, reviews, photographs, and other memorabilia are housed in the Yale School of Music library archives. Nagel also established The King's Brass, a religious-based quintet.

Through the suggestion and encouragement of Harvey Phillips, Nagel cofounded (with Charles Gorham) the International Trumpet Guild in 1974. He has received ITG's Honorary Award for outstanding lifetime achievement, and the Cesare Bendinelli Award (Verona, Italy) in 1999. He has presented recitals at the National Trumpet Symposium in Denver, as well as at various conferences of the International Trumpet Guild. He is also the founder and owner of Mentor Music, a publishing company devoted to producing fine works for brass.

Among Nagel's music compositions are Concerto for Trumpet and Strings, Brass Trio, Brass Trio No. 2, and This Old Man March. His publications of trumpet study include Rhythmic Studies, Speed Studies, Studies in Contemporary Music, Trumpet Skills, plus collections of trumpet solos and trios with piano such as Baroque Music for Trumpet, The Regal Trumpet, Trumpets on Parade, The Sound of Trumpets, and Trumpets of Spain. He has made numerous recordings of solo and chamber pieces and has released an album of educational solos on the Music Minus One label. He also recorded Stravinsky's A Soldier's Tale and Octet for Winds under the composer's baton. He has also published numerous editions of trumpet solos for International Music Company.

Nagel taught at Yale University (1956-87), University of Hartford, The Juilliard School, New England Conservatory, and the Manhattan School of Music, and served as an adjunct faculty member at the University of South Carolina. Among his best-known students are Susan Slaughter, Thomas V. Short, David Baldwin, W. Ritchie Clendenin, Walter Myers, and Eric Berlin. For most of his career, Nagel was a clinician for the Conn Corporation, playing a model 22B early in his career, and later a 60B. A church deacon, Nagel is a humble gentleman who has greatly influenced and enhanced the trumpet and its repertoire in America.

Bibl.: Irish, John. "Robert Nagel: A Freelance Career" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2001); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Najoom, Dennis (b. Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Jan. 14, 1947). American trumpeter. Najoom's mother was a singer and schoolteacher who instilled in him a love of music. His uncle, George Fulginiti, was his first trumpet teacher, and taught him from age nine through high school. Najoom spent four summers at the Tanglewood Institute where he studied with Armando Ghitalla and Roger Voisin. He decided during his high school junior year to become a professional trumpeter.

After graduating from high school in 1964, Najoom entered the Hartt School of Music at the University of Hartford where he studied with Ronald Kutik and Robert Nagel. Other influences were Rafael Méndez, Harry James, Seymour Rosenfeld, Doc Severinsen, Maurice André, Adolph Herseth, Al Hirt, and Roger Murtha. During his sophomore year of college, he became third trumpet in the Hartford Symphony Orchestra (1966-70). He also joined the Connecticut National Guard in 1969, and served in the Guard Band until he transferred to the Wisconsin National Guard Band in 1970.

After visiting and observing the legendary brass craftsman William Tottle many times, and having his C trumpet converted to a "Tottlephone," Najoom became fascinated by Tottle's modification of trumpets and his innovative line of two-piece mouthpieces. He soon began tinkering with his own trumpets, which eventually led to a lifetime of producing his own brand of leadpipes, trumpets, and mouthpieces; in 1994 he established Najoom Music Products that he and wife Jennifer run.

Najoom joined the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra in 1970 as assistant principal trumpet, and in 1991 was appointed coprincipal by Maestro Zdenek Macal. He also serves as principal trumpet in the Milwaukee Chamber Orchestra, and performs occasionally with the Philadelphia Orchestra. In addition, he is a member of the Cream City Brass Quintet. He has taught at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Lawrence Conservatory of Music, and is currently teaching at Wisconsin Lutheran College. His daughter Anna Najoom is a prominent clarinetist and educator in Chicago, and his wife Jennifer a playwright.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Urness, John. "The Inquisitive Life of Dennis Najoom" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2004); "Najoom Music Products" (www.najoom.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nakariakov, Sergei (b. Gorki, Russia, May 10, 1977). Russian trumpeter and flugelhornist. Nakariakov's father Mikhail began teaching him to play the piano at the age of six, but a serious automobile accident in 1986 (age nine) caused a spinal injury that ended his piano-playing career. He began playing the trumpet and continued studying with his father who transcribed many classical piano works for trumpet, and instilled a somewhat unique style of trumpet musicianship in Sergei. As a result, he has developed an extraordinary technique and lightness that is unequaled in the trumpet world.

From age ten, Nakariakov began winning solo contests. At age thirteen, he was dubbed the "Paganini of the Trumpet," and at age fifteen received a prize at the Salzburg Festival. Because his home of Nizhni Novgorod was a closed city, Nakariakov's parents knew that he would have difficulty touring outside of his geographic area, so the family managed to move to Israel. Nakariakov released his first solo recordings on Teldec (1993), and briefly attended a conservatory in Paris under Guy Touvron (1994-95), but was drafted into the Israeli Army. After his required military service, he continued studying with his father. His solo career blossomed when he performed at many of the world's leading venues such as the Hollywood Bowl, Lincoln Center, Royal Festival Hall, and Royal Albert Hall. Teldec produced several more compact discs of his playing, and he signed with Columbia Artists Management in New York.

Curiously, during Nakariakov's early career playing with major orchestras around the world, he experienced feeling rather nervous in front of the many packed houses. He entered the stage looking only at the floor, and tilted his head downward so as to avoid seeing the audience in front of him. His bell pointed nearly straight down, and he only looked at the audience during final bows. However, he was holding his trumpet in a normal manner by the time he performed spectacularly in a concert at the 2008 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Banff, Canada, where his flawless performance of a Haydn cello concerto transcription (played on a specially designed four-valve flugelhorn by Courtois) included an amazing display of articulated technique using circular breathing.

Nakariakov's CDs (all on Teldec) include Trumpet Works, Sergei Nakariakov, Carmen Fantasie, Élégie, Concertos for Trumpet, No Limit, The French Trumpet, From Moscow with Love, and Echoes from the Past.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Sergei Nakariakov's official website: www.nakariakov.com; Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nance, Ray [Willis] (b. Chicago, Illinois, Dec. 10, 1913; d. New York, New York, Jan. 28, 1976). American trumpeter. At age six, Nance took piano lessons, then studied violin for seven years with Max Fishel before learning to play the trumpet from N. Clark Smith at Wendell Phillips High School in Chicago. His early professional experiences were with the Rhythm Rascals at Lane College. In Chicago, he formed a sextet (1932-36) and played with the big bands of Earl Hines (1937-38) and Horace Henderson (1939-40).

Nance's big break came in November of 1940 when he replaced Cootie Williams in the Duke Ellington Orchestra. Having been influenced by Bubber Miley and Williams, Nance easily assumed the plunger mute solos played by these two predecessors. Nance played continually with the band for twenty-three years. His most famous recording is of the trumpet solo in Take the "A" Train. Ellington took advantage of all of Nance's performing talents—trumpet, violin, singing, and dancing. His violin playing added a special color to the sound of Ellington's band and is featured in recordings of the tunes, Moon Mist and Come Sunday of the Black Brown and Beige suite. Vocal solos are featured in tunes such as Just A-Sittin' and A-Rockin', Just Squeeze Me (But Don't Tease Me), A Slip of a Lip will Sink a Ship, and Tulip or Turnip.

In 1961, after twenty-one years away from the Ellington band, Williams returned and reclaimed many of his former solos that Nance had been playing during Williams's absence. This placed Nance in an uncomfortable position and he began to drink more and more over the next two years. Nance switched to cornet in hopes of finding a new identity, but his drinking became uncontrollable and Ellington had to let him go in 1963, after which Nance spent his last years freelancing. He performed with Chico Hamilton, Dizzy Gillespie, Chick Corea, Sol Yaged (1968-69), Andre Chaix (1967), Brooks Karr, Paul Lavalle, and Chris Barber (with whom he toured England in 1974). Nance's recording output during his last fifteen years dropped dramatically. He died at the age of eighty-three.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Napoleon, Phil [Filippo Napoli] (b. Brooklyn, New York, Sept. 2, 1901; d. Miami, Florida, Sept. 30, 1990). American trumpeter. Napoleon came from a musical family. His brothers George and Joe played saxophone, brother Matthew played the guitar, brother Ted played the drums, and nephews Teddy and Marty played the piano.

At age twelve, Napoleon ran away from home to New Orleans, but was soon caught and returned to Brooklyn. He studied the cornet, and by age fifteen played as a classical musician. He soon switched to jazz music after being inspired by hearing the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Around his sixteenth birthday, he formed his own band, the Original Memphis Five, and although the band performed some, Napoleon made his living playing as a classically trained freelance musician.

Napoleon recorded Memphis Blues and St. Louis Blues with Lanin's Southern Serenaders in July 1921. His popularity grew, and he was able to record 111 tunes with his own group from 1922 to 1923. He was also a much sought after backup artist with others including the Ambassadors, Broadway Syncopators, Ladd's Black Aces, Sam Lanin, Savannah Six, Southland Six, Tennessee Ten, Jazzbo's Carolina Serenaders, Cotton Pickers, and Bailey's Lucky Seven. He recorded forty-three tunes in 1924, twenty-two in 1925, and thirteen more in 1926. His recordings of pop tunes in a jazz style helped bring jazz into the American mainstream during the 1920s.

The first recordings made by Napoleon under his own name were made in December of 1926. In the following year, he formed his own group, Napoleon's Emperors (until 1930) that did well, but most of his activity was as a freelance jazz musician and recording artist. During the late 1920s, he played with the Dorsey Brothers, California Ramblers, Hotsy Totsy Gang, Miff Mole's Little Molers, New Orleans Black Birds, Charleston Chasers, Jack Teagarden, Babe Russin, Pee Wee Russell, Emperors, Hot Air Man, Boyd Senter, Eddie Lang, Sam Lenin, Joe Venuti, Glenn Miller, Gene Krupa, Davey Tough, and Lennie Hayton.

During the 1930s, Napoleon worked as an anonymous staff musician in a radio orchestra for RCA. His own band folded in 1938 and he took a job in the musical instrument business for a while. In 1937, he joined the NBC staff orchestra where he played with B.A. Rolfe, the NBC Symphony under Arturo Toscanini, and Paul Lavalle's Band of America. He also worked on and off with the Jimmy Dorsey band from 1943 to 1947. He regained a portion of his former popularity when he recorded sixteen Dixieland tunes with a septet. In 1949 he reformed his Memphis Five and performed at Nick's in New York for seven years. In the early 1950s, he also led a big band, which recorded twelve tunes for Decca and Columbia.

Napoleon moved to the Miami area in 1956 where he opened Phil Napoleon's Retreat Club in 1966. He played Dixieland music into the mid 1980s. His last three albums were recorded for Capitol in 1959-60. He also recorded for Variety, Swan, Decca, Columbia, Arto, Paramount, Victor, and Edison. His best albums include Featuring the Original Memphis Five (IAJRC) and Phil Napoleon and the Memphis Five (Capitol). Although he never reached stardom, he is today considered to be an important pioneer in popularizing jazz music during the 1920s.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nark, Vaughn (b. Mt. Carmel, Pennsylvania, Sept. 18, 1956). American trumpeter. At age six, Vaughn began learning the trumpet from his father Leon. He showed remarkable progress and displayed a fantastic ability in the extreme upper register of the instrument. By age seven, he was playing in the Mt. Carmel High School band, and a year later was first chair. His early idols were Dizzy Gillespie, Maynard Ferguson, Doc Severinsen, and Miles Davis.

After graduating from high school, Nark played for a year and a half with a top 40 rock band, performing four-hour shows, six nights per week. He joined the Air Force Ceremonial Band at age nineteen, and spent much of his duties performing Taps for funerals at Arlington Cemetery in Washington, D.C. He became a lifelong friend of Ken Smukal, a trumpeter with the Airmen of Note jazz band. Nark was asked by Smukal to sub for him in a rehearsal, only to find out that the rehearsal was meant to be his audition for the band. Nark then joined the Airmen of Note, performing as lead trumpet and soloist for twenty years (1978-98).

Nark was featured on thirteen record albums with the Airmen of Note, but because these albums were never commercially available, Nark's reputation remained somewhat obscure. After his retirement from the military at age thirty-seven, he has been able to release several other recordings that have made him a well-known trumpeter. Albums include El Tigre (LP on Progressive), Cutting Through (LP on Lavenham), Flying High (Summit), Something Special (Summit), and Panorama: Trumpet Prism (Summit). He has also recorded with Bob Grauso, Keith Killgo, Tom Principato Band, A La Carte Brass & Percussion, Bill Potts Big Band, and others. He has performed with Dizzy Gillespie (1980, late 1986, 1988), Doc Severinsen, James Moody, Arturo Sandoval, Jon Faddis, Henry Mancini, Louie Bellson, Red Rodney, Wynton Marsalis, Bobby Shew, and the Smithsonian Institution's Jazz Masterworks Orchestra.

Vaughn Nark performs on trumpet, flugelhorn, and valve trombone. His screaming high register rivals that of Jon Faddis, Maynard Ferguson, and Arturo Sandoval, and he is an "over-the-top" jazz soloist with a wild flair. He is an active clinician and is on the faculty of the Landon School in Bethesda, Maryland. He was featured during the opening ceremonies of the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta, Georgia.

Bibl.: Erdmann, Tom. "Putting Melody First: An Interview with Vaughn Nark" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2006); Keim, Freidel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Vaughn Nark's official website (www.vaughnnark.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nashan, Rudolf ("Rudy") Reinhardt (b. 1924). American trumpeter and arts administrator. Nashan studied with Georges Mager at the New England Conservatory. In 1948, he played in the Springfield (MA) Symphony Orchestra and at the Chicago Grant Park concerts. In 1950, he rejected an offer to be principal trumpet of the Denver Symphony Orchestra in order to become second trumpet to Adolph Herseth in the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, led at the time by Maestro Fritz Reiner. During the late 1950s or early 1960s, Nashan was elected to the newly formed CSO Orchestra Committee, one of the first of its kind in American orchestras. The committee was instrumental in improving policies governing the musicians, but orchestra management and some orchestra members often considered Orchestra Committee members as radical troublemakers; in 1961, the CSO management moved Nashan to fourth chair, and by 1963, the political situation was so heated that Nashan resigned from the orchestra.

Nashan became vice president of the Chicago Musicians Union, later replacing the infamous James Petrillo as president. Nashan made many changes in policies, and helped integrate Afro-Americans into the union. However, Petrillo managed to win back the presidency through various means, including counting votes of deceased union members. Now without a job, Nashan moved to Syracuse, New York, where he assumed duties as principal trumpet of the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra (1966-72). He also taught at Syracuse University (1967-72).

After retiring from orchestra life, Nashan became involved in several arts organizations, including being administrator of the New York State Council on the Arts, regional representative of the New England states for the National Endowment on the Arts (1980-82), and executive director of the New Hampshire Art Association. He also taught trumpet part-time at the University of Maine. Nashan is now retired, and lives in Belfast, Maine.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Information provided in various discussions on the website forum, www.TrumpetHerald.com, mainly by George Coble (who replaced Nashan as principal of the Syracuse Symphony in 1972), and by Joshua Whitehouse, a former student of Nashan at the University of Maine.

Naude, Jean-Claude (b. Amiens, France, Mar. 7, 1933; d. Saint-Hilaire, France, Jan. 9, 2008). French trumpeter, composer, and arranger. Naude studied piano (from 1937) and the trumpet at a conservatory in Amiens (1946-50). He later had additional study under Jean Greffin and Robert Pichaureau. He made his debuts in traditional jazz bands in Amiens (1952), then was a member of the band led by clarinetist Piwi Bizouarn (1952-54). He made his name when he joined Raymond Fonsèque's group in November of 1954. He also performed in popular clubs in Paris, such as Tabou and Bidule (with pianist Georges Arvanitas). From late 1954 to 1964, Naude was a regular member of the Maxim Saury Band, making many recordings and television shows, as well as film appearances in Les Tricheurs (1958) and Adieu Philippine (1962). Naude also played with Sidney Bechet (1955), Albert Nicholas (1955), Memphis Slim, Guy Lafitte, and various bands. In 1964, he formed his Grand Orchestre de Jazz (until 1971), and played with Roger Guerin (1968), Sonny Grey (1968), and Ivan Jullien (1968). He toured with Benny Waters in 1972, Claude Bolling (1972-75), and toured Germany during the 1980s.

As a composer and arranger, Naude is best known for his work in public television and for various films. His solo albums include Standards de Chicago, Enfin, A New Kind of Band, New Orleans Forever, and Percussion System.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jean-Claude Naude" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jean-Claude_Naude.fr).

Naumann, Andrew (b. West Bend, Wisconsin, July 26, 1968). American trumpeter and designer. Naumann grew up in Oconomowoc, Wisconsin. He comes from a family of singers, and began playing the trumpet at age ten. He studied with John Aley and Richard Metzger while attending Oconomowoc High School, and graduated in 1987. He then enrolled at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, studying with Dr. Robert Kase and earning a bachelor of music degree in 1992. He studied with Dr. Leonard Candelaria at the University of North Texas, earning a master of music degree in 1994.

Through his association with Candelaria, Naumann began making natural (valveless) trumpets in 1994 at UNT, and formed Naumann Trumpets in Oconomoc, Wisconsin, later that year. He taught at the University of Wisconsin in Oshkosh (1994-98) and was principal trumpet of the Central Wisconsin Symphony Orchestra (1994-98). In 1998, he was hired as Director of Development and Marketing for the Getzen Co. and Edwards Instrument Co. In October of 2002, he and his wife Julie purchased Schilke Music Products from Renold Jr. and Joan Schilke (children of Renold Schilke). His awards include being named the 2006 Distinguished Alumnus at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Andrew and Julie Naumann were married in 1991, and have three children: Emily (b. 1996), Erik (b. 1999), and Grant (b. 2004).

Bibl.: personal interview, May 26, 2011.

Naumann, Carl Georg (b. Thonberg [near Leipzig], Germany, Apr. 8, 1878; d. Grimma, Germany, Jan. 27, 1967). German trumpeter. Naumann studied with Ferdinand Weinschenk at the Leipzig Conservatory from 1894 to 1898, and also studied violin and piano. Upon graduation, he became principal trumpet of the Orchestra of Libau in Russia, and played in the music corps of the 153rd Infantry Regiment. After his service obligation, he played for a few years with the Royal Orchestra of the North Island and the Concert Orchestra of Sweden. From October 1905 to February 1943, he served as second trumpet of the Gewandhausorchester in Leipzig. He made a recording of the cornet solo Die Teufelszunge with band accompaniment around 1928 for the Lyrophon label.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Navarro, Theodore ("Fats") [Theodoro Navarro Gonzalez] (b. Cuba, Sept. 24, 1923; d. New York, New York, July 7, 1950). American trumpeter. Born in Cuba, Navarro moved to Key West, Florida, when he was a small boy. He was a cousin of Charlie Shavers. He learned to play piano and tenor sax before beginning to play the trumpet at the age of thirteen; Uan Rasey gave him some early lessons. By age seventeen, he was playing as a member of Snookum Russell's territorial band (1941-42). He then joined the well-known Andy Kirk Orchestra (1943-44), and replaced Dizzy Gillespie (Navarro's mentor) in Billy Eckstine's big band (1945-46). Major influences on his style of playing were Howard McGhee, Roy Eldridge, and Gillespie.

The late 1940s were Navarro's most successful career years. He was a leading bop player known for his beautiful, large tone and simple jazz lines. He made several important recordings with the Bebop Boys, Coleman Hawkins, Kenny Clarke, Charlie Parker, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Don Lanphere, Illinois Jacquet, Bud Powell, and the Metronome All-Stars. He recorded under his own name for the Savoy and Blue Note labels, as well as with Tadd Dameron for Milestone. In 1948, he played with both Lionel Hampton and Benny Goodman (small group).

Navarro gave lessons to Miles Davis and Clifford Brown who became his foremost adherent; with "Brownie" he was considered a top model in bop trumpet playing.

By 1948, Navarro suffered from tuberculosis and a longtime addiction to heroin. Once an overweight trumpeter, he wasted away and died at the young age of twenty-six.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008); Mondello, Nick. "A Time For Excellence—An Interview With Arturo Sandoval" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011).

Navratil [-Gerl], Wolfgang (b. Salzburg, Austria, Mar. 18, 1972). Austrian trumpeter. Navratil began studying music at age nine; his early trumpet teachers were Heinrich Stettner and Harald Sowa. He worked as a bricklayer from the age of fifteen to eighteen, and then joined the Army as a trumpeter. Afterwards, he worked in an office, and at age twenty-one he began serious study in music at a university. Final studies were at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, studying with Fritz Krammer, Josef Eidenberger, and Hans Gansch, and graduating with distinction in 1999. While still a student, be became principal trumpet of the Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra in 1997, a position he held until 2004 when he was named principal of the Mozarteum Orchestra.

Navratil has performed with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra (U.S.), Frankfurt Symphony Orchestra (Germany), Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble Munich (Germany), Philharmonic Orchestra of Bad Reichenhall (Germany), Cappella Istropolitana (Slovakia), and Otto Sauter's international trumpet ensemble, Ten of the Best. He has recorded many CDs with various ensembles and made a live CD of Haydn's Concerto in E-flat with the Orchestra Pro Musica Salzburg (Edition Riedenburg).

Wolfgang Navratil has been married to Andrea Gerl since 2001. Their children are Teresa (b. 2006) and Florian (b. 2009).

Bibl.: "Wolfgang Navratil" (www.salzburg.com/wiki/index.php/Wolfgang_Navratil); "Wolfgang Navratil" (www.blasmusik360.de/musiker/blechblaser/wolfgang_navratil_salzburg); personal interview, Nov. 27, 2012.

Nelson, Davidson ("Dave") C. (b. Donaldsonville, Louisiana, 1905; d. New York, New York, Apr. 7, 1946). American trumpeter. Nelson's father and mother both played the piano. He himself learned the violin and piano before taking up the trumpet. Nelson, who was related to King Oliver's wife Stella, was the protégé of Oliver. While in his teens, he studied piano and arranging with Richard M. Jones.

Nelson moved to Chicago during the mid 1920s and soon played with the Marie Lucas Orchestra, Ma Rainey (toured from February 1925 to 1927 and recorded in December 1927), Jelly Roll Morton, Edgar Hayes's Eight Black Pirates (1927), Jimmie Noone, Leroy Pickett (1928), and Luis Russell (1929), and occasionally led his own band. As early as 1924, he was active as a studio musician for Paramount records.

In the fall of 1929, Nelson joined Luis Russell and King Oliver's band as a trumpeter and arranger. During his two years with Russell and Oliver, he made many recordings, often taking over some of Oliver's solos because of Oliver's dental problems. On listening to the Victor recordings they made, it is sometimes difficult to tell Oliver from Nelson because Nelson was able to sound like Oliver. However, Nelson's big tone and wide range was better than Oliver's at the time. On the other hand, he was clumsy in the use of mutes.

After leaving Oliver, Nelson led a recording session with Oliver's band (minus Oliver) on seven tunes under the names The King's Men and Dave's Harlem Highlights. Nelson can be heard playing trumpet as well as singing on each song. After that, he led his own groups in New York and New Jersey (playing trumpet and piano) but never became famous. He appeared on a recording session in 1937 with Willie "the Lion" Smith and led one of his own in 1942, recording twelve tunes that were never released.

Dave Nelson spent his last four years as a staff arranger for the Lewis Publishing Company. He died of a heart attack at the age of forty-one. He can be heard on a CD compiled from the early King Oliver recordings, The New York Sessions 1929-30 (Bluebird).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Nelson with Ma Rainey.

Nelson, Jon R. (b. Weymouth, Massachusetts, Dec. 10, 1966). American trumpeter. Nelson grew up in Middleboro, Massachusetts, and began playing the trumpet at age ten. His early teachers were James Simpson, Mark Gould, and Laurie Frink; he also received chamber music coaching from the Empire Brass Quintet. After graduating from Middleboro High School in 1984, Nelson studied with Mark Gould at The Juilliard School, from which he graduated with a bachelor of music degree in 1989. For a short while, he also studied with Antoine Curé in France.

While a student at Juilliard, Nelson cofounded the Meridian Arts Ensemble in New York. He later served on the faculties of Princeton University, Middlebury College, Boston University, and the Hartt School of Music at the University of Hartford. He is currently an associate professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo (since 1998). He has served as principal trumpet in the Festival Aix-en-Provence de Musique in France under the direction of Pierre Boulez, and in the Mineria Festival Orchestra in Mexico City. He has also performed at festivals of contemporary music in the U.S., Holland, Germany, Portugal, France, Belgium, Romania, Mexico, Costa Rica, Brazil, Cuba, Colombia, Australia, Taiwan, Japan, and other Asian countries.

Nelson is responsible for many of the arrangements and compositions performed by the Meridian Arts Ensemble. In addition to producing nine CDs with Channel Classics Records, he and other members of the group formed the record label, 8Bells Records.

Meridian commissioned and recorded over forty new works, and became known for crossing the line between classical and popular genres. With Meridian, Nelson also collaborated with Frank Zappa, Natalie Merchant, Duran Duran, Dr. Nerve, and David Sanford.

Active as a teacher, Nelson has taught at numerous music festivals including the Tanglewood Music Center, Oaxaca Instrumenta, Lieksa Brass Week, Bay Harbor Brass Week, Meridian Seminar at ECU, Wellesley Composers Conference, Atlantic Brass Seminar, and June in Buffalo. He has also presented master classes at numerous colleges and conservatories around the world. While in New York, he performed in various Broadway pit orchestras, and with Dave Douglas cohosted the Festival of New Trumpet Music.

Nelson has released five solo albums: Fable, Trumpet Nature, Genkin Philharmonic, Metalofonico!, and Gran Calavera Electrica, and can be heard on over forty recordings with various ensembles on labels such as Channel Classics, Barking Pumpkin, BMG/RCA, Bridge, EMF, Cuniform, Peer, New World Records, Vandenburg, and CRI. He and his wife Lázara, a violinist and translator, have two children, Jon-Marcos (b. 2000) and Diego (b. 2007). His hobbies include following politics, studying history, and arranging music.

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "Jon Nelson & Brian McWhorter of the Meridian Arts Ensemble" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2007); "Jon Nelson" (www.music.buffalo.edu); personal interview, May 11, 2010.

Nemes, Balàzs (b. Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 10, 1976). Hungarian trumpeter. Nemes's early trumpet studies were in Budapest with Éva Nagyivàn, and from 1991 to 1993 with Attila Simon at the Bélà Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. From 1993 to 1995, he studied with Guy Touvron at the Paris Regional Conservatory, and from 1997 to 1998 with Raymond Mase and Mark Gould at The Juilliard School in New York City.

Nemes began his orchestral career playing with various orchestras in Germany from 1995 to 1997. In December of 1998, he became principal trumpet of the Basel Symphony Orchestra in Switzerland, and in September 2000 joined the Frankfurt Radio Orchestra as principal trumpet (replacing Reinhold Friedrich), a position he still holds. After a short time in Frankfurt, he was appointed principal trumpeter of the orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera in New York City. When his colleagues refused to become acquainted with rotary valve trumpets for certain repertoire pieces, he went back to Frankfurt, a position he still holds. He is also an active soloist.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Neugebauer, Franz Willy (b. Waltersdorf, Sudetenland, North Moravia [then a part of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy], Sept. 29, 1904; d. Wipperfürth, Germany, Mar. 12, 1975). German trumpeter. Neugebauer came from a musical family; his father directed brass and string orchestras, and was leader of a wind band in Hannsdorf, Germany. At age sixteen, Neugebauer studied at the State Conservatory in Prague (main instrument violin, secondary instrument trumpet) 1920-25, and at the State Conservatory in Dresden from 1928 to 1931.

Although Neugebauer is mostly known today for his artistry as a trumpet soloist during the 1930s and '40s, performing and recording popular melodies and "air varies" by Arban and other cornetists, he was also a significant orchestra player and teacher. He was principal trumpet of the Municipal Opera (later German Opera) orchestra in Berlin from 1931 to 1936, and principal of the Gürzenich-Orchestra in Cologne from 1937 to 1945. There he also taught at the State Hochschule für Musik. When the war ended, Neugebauer went first to the Munich Philharmonic, then to the Southwest German Symphony Orchestra in Baden-Baden. In 1950, he became principal of the Symphony Orchestra of the West German Radio in Cologne. During the summers of 1937 through 1962, he played in the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra.

Neugebauer was the trumpet professor at the Folkwang Musikhochschule in Essen. Among his students were Walter Scholz, Willy Berg, Uwe Komischke, Matthias Wagemann, and Burkhard Burg. In 1963, he retired to the small village of Wipperfürth, where he led the town band to unimagined musical heights and taught amateur trumpet students. In May of 2004, his former students saw to it that the center of Wipperfürth be named after him and a memorial plaque be erected in his honor.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Neumann, Trevor D. (b. Frankfurt, Germany, Mar. 8, 1978). German trumpeter. Neumann began playing piano at age five and the trumpet at age nine. During the late 1990s, he earned a bachelor of music degree, studying with Charles Geyer and James Thompson at the Eastman School of Music, and won the Downbeat Award for jazz. He attended the Henry Mancini Institute in Los Angeles during the summer of 2000 and then enrolled at the University of Miami in Florida where he received a master of music degree in jazz and studio technology in 2002. He then began worldwide tours with various formations.

Since 2003, Neumann has been an active freelance musician in New York City. He has performed numerous Broadway shows, has recorded with Queen Latifah, Carlos Santana, and others, and has performed with Barry Manilow, the Temptations, Supremes, Shirelles, Ojays, Tito Puente, Bette Midler, Paul Anka, Jonny Lang, and many other artists.

Neumann's hobby is snowboarding.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Trevor Neumann's official website: http://trevorneumann.com.

Nevin, Jeff (b. Chicago, Illinois, Dec. 27, 1968). American trumpeter and composer. Nevin grew up in Tucson, Arizona, and studied trumpet with his father. While in high school, he took lessons from Russell Plylar of The Phoenix Symphony. He also was strongly influenced in the mariachi style of playing by Federico Torrez, Ruben Moreno, George Bejarano, and Armando Chacon.

Nevin attended the University of Illinois as a theory-composition major, and studied trumpet with Ray Sasaki from 1986 to 1990. From 1990 to 1991, he studied with David Hickman at Arizona State University, earning a master's degree in composition in 1992. He then moved to San Diego, California, where he freelanced, and formed the ensemble, Mariachi Champaña Nevin in 1998. The group has enjoyed a great deal of success by performing Nevin's compositions and arrangements, including Concerto for Mariachi and Orchestra and the song cycle Al aire libre (based on the poetry of Alberto Blando) with major symphony orchestras. As a soloist or with his group, Nevin has performed with such organizations as the San Diego Symphony, Colorado Symphony Orchestra, Pasadena Symphony, Grant Park Orchestra, Orquesta Sinfónica de Aguascalientes, La Jolla Symphony (from 1997), San Bernardino Symphony, American Philharmonic, Desert Symphony, Key West Symphony, East Texas Symphony Orchestra, Orquesta de Baja California, and the Jalisco Symphony. He has appeared on television in at least seven countries and performed in Russia, China, France, and across the U.S. and Mexico. He and Mariachi Champaña Nevin appeared in the documentary, Viva el Mariachi, and are featured prominently in the documentary film, In the Name of Mariachi Music!, which details the mariachi education movement in the U.S. and was premiered on KPBS television in 2009.

From 1993 to 1998, Nevin earned a PhD in music theory and composition at the University of California at San Diego where he studied trumpet with Edwin Harkins. He has performed with celebrity artists including Placido Domingo, Kenny Loggins, Aida Cuevas, Dave Brubeck, Charlotte Church, Burt Bacharach, Garrison Keillor, and Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlan. He is currently a professor of music and director of mariachi activities at Southwestern College in Chula Vista, California (since 1998), where he implemented the world's first college degree in mariachi (AA in Music: Mariachi Specialization). He is also an adjunct professor of mariachi at Arizona State University (since 2012). He has published the books, Virtuoso Mariachi (University Press of America, 2002) and Mariachi Mastery, a method for learning the mariachi style (Kjos Music, 2006). Nevin is the artistic director of the Mariachi Scholarship Foundation, Director of Youth Music Programs for Sinfonía Mexicana, and was named California Multicultural Music Educator of the Year in 2008.

As leader, trumpet soloist, producer, and arranger, Nevin has released several CDs, including La Forza del Destino, Classic-Mariachi-LIVE! (with the San Diego Symphony), Romances Mundiales (accompanying Florencia Tinoco), and Nuestra Navidad. He and his former wife (divorced in 2003), Deborah Nevin, a high school band director in San Diego, have a daughter Charlotte Nevin (b. 1993). His hobbies include reading, movies, traveling, and composing.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jeff Nevin Biography" (www.virtuosomariachi.com); "Jeff Nevin Biography" (www.swccd.edu/~music/index.asp?L2=424); personal interview, Oct. 23, 2010.

Newman, Joseph ("Joe") Dwight (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Sept. 7, 1922; d. New York, New York, July 4, 1992). American trumpeter. Newman's father Dwight was a piano player. Joe took up the trumpet and studied under Davey Jones (who also taught Louis Armstrong). As a youngster in New Orleans, Newman played with the Valmore Victor Band and the Eureka Brass Band. Newman then played in bands at Alabama State Teachers College (now the University of Alabama) and turned professional when he joined the Trenier band, then Lionel Hampton's band, in 1941. Two years later, he went to Count Basie's orchestra where he shared the trumpet solo duties with Harry "Sweet" Edison (1943-45). From 1946 to 1950, Newman played in the bands of J.C. Hunt (1946 only) and Illinois Jacquet.

After freelancing for a year in New York, Newman played again with Basie (1952-61) and toured Europe with the Count in 1954. This time he shared the solo spots with Thad Jones. It was about this time that he began to record on his own, leading recording sessions for RCA and other labels. After leaving Basie, Newman joined Benny Goodman's band in 1962-63, including a tour in the USSR.

Joe Newman became involved in music education during the early 1960s, forming Jazz Interactions, Inc. that brought jazz music to the schools. He became its president in 1967 and worked with the Jazz Interactions Orchestra while continuing to freelance as a soloist. He can be seen teaching in the film Born to Swing by John Jeremy (1973). He recorded at the Newport in New York Festival in 1972, and joined the New York Jazz Repertory Company in 1974, participating in a tour of the USSR and Europe in 1975. He then played in pit orchestras for various Broadway shows. He also played in some of the Basie alumni bands and toured with Benny Carter. He was a strong player with a great feel for melodic solos.

Joe Wilder and Newman co-led an album in 1984 called Hangin' Out (Concord Jazz). Other albums during Newman's career include Joe Newman and His Band (Vanguard), I'm Still Swinging (RCA), Salute to Satch (RCA), Happy Cats (Coral), Joe Newman with Woodwinds (Roulette), Joe's Hap'nin's (Swingville), and Joe Newman at Count Basie's (Mercury). He also recorded for other labels including World Pacific, Stash, Savoy, Fresh Sound, Jazztone, MCA, Pacific, Honey Dew, and Phontastic. He worked as a studio player, backing such artists as Judy Garland, Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, Aretha Franklin, Louis Jordan, and Quincy Jones.

Joe Newman died at the age of seventy. He left behind his companion Keilo Kimura, sons Kevin and Fredrik, and daughters Nicole, Bonita McAdams, and Annie. Compilations of some of his music can be heard on CDs such as The Complete Joe Newman (RCA), and I Feel Like a Newman (Black Lion).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Watrous, Peter. "Joe Newman, 70, a Versatile Trumpeter in Jazz" (New York Times, July 8, 1992); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Joe Newman" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Newman, Miles (b. Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, Feb. 11, 1959). Canadian trumpeter. Newman began playing trumpet at age eleven, and studied with Walter Garlick, Ken Sterling, and Maureen Patterson. After graduating from Walter Murray Collegiate Institute in 1977, he attended the University of Saskatchewan where he received bachelor of music performance (1977-81) and bachelor of music education (1981-83) degrees studying with Dr. Larry House. From 1982 to 1986, he was principal trumpet of the Saskatoon Symphony Orchestra.

During the 1986-87 academic year, Newman studied with David Hickman at Arizona State University, and from 1987 to 1989 was enrolled in the Advanced Studies in Music program at the Banff Centre for the Arts in Canada. He moved to Calgary in 1989 where he was a member of the Calgary Philharmonic until 1991, and played Broadway shows, such as Les Misérables and Phantom of the Opera. During these same years, he also served as principal of the Lethbridge Symphony Orchestra, played with the Southern Alberta Brass Quintet, and taught at the University of Lethbridge Conservatory.

Newman became principal of the Regina Symphony Orchestra in September 1991, and is solo trumpet of the Regina Symphony Chamber Players and a founding member of The Big Sky Brass. He has taught at the University of Regina Conservatory since 1991, and in 2004 began teaching at the University of Regina's Department of Music.

Newman's partner since 1988, Julie McKenna, is Deputy Library Director of the Regina Public Library. At age fourteen, their daughter Katie Newman (b. 1993) is the youngest cellist to be granted tenure in the Regina Symphony Orchestra. Newman's hobbies include playing golf and restoring his 1976 TR6 Triumph automobile.

Bibl.: "Miles Newman" (http://ca.yamaha.com/en/artists/brass_woodwinds/miles_newman); personal interview, May 16, 2011.

Newsome, Charles Stanley ("Stan") (b. Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, May 16, 1919; d. London, England, May 31, 1989). British trumpeter. Newsome's father was a mill engineer and purchased a cornet for his four-year-old son, before dying at the age of forty-seven. Stan took to it right away and played in local brass bands and dance bands throughout high school.

Newsome joined the Army at the beginning of World War II, serving as a stretcher-bearer with the Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. After his discharge in 1946, he became a member of the George Crow Orchestra, and a year later was with the famous Ambrose Orchestra in Monte Carlo. In 1948, he freelanced, played for many television and radio shows, and played with Carroll Gibbons at London's Savoy Hotel. His fame began in 1947 when he joined Mantovani's Orchestra, which toured constantly and released dozens of albums. Newsome's trumpet solos on the tunes American Gypsy (1956), Around the World (1957), and Let Me Be Loved (1957) made him a star.

During the late 1950s, Newsome met Barbara, who became his wife for nearly thirty years. In order to be with her and raise a family, he decided to leave the Mantovani organization in 1959. He joined the BBC Variety Orchestra and performed for radio and television until 1968 when he returned to freelancing. However, an illness soon caused him to cease playing the trumpet. In 1981, he helped found the Merton Concert Band. He spent his remaining twenty or so years as a conductor of concert bands, including the Harrow Concert Band and the British Rail Band until shortly after his seventieth birthday and before his death in 1989 from cancer.

Bibl.: "Stan Newsome's Trumpet" (www.hallowquest.com/snewsome.htm).

Newton, William Frank ("Frankie") (b. Emory, Virginia, Jan. 4, 1906; d. New York, New York, Nov. 3, 1954). American trumpeter. Newton (who preferred to be listed as Frank Newton on recordings) was one of the finest, but underrated, trumpeters of the swing era, who performed with many of the best musicians in the country, including Sam Wooding, Chick Webb, Charlie Barnet, Andy Kirk, Charlie "Fess" Johnson, Lucky Millinder, and Pete Brown. He accompanied Bessie Smith on her final recordings (Nov. 24, 1933), as well as accompanying Maxine Sullivan and Billie Holiday on their recordings. He also recorded with Ella Fitzgerald, Jack Teagarden, Sidney Bechet, Art Tatum, Benny Carter, Willie "The Lion" Smith, Mezz Mezzrow, Big Joe Turner, Teddy Wilson, and others. Newton was a member of Charlie Johnson's band (1933-35) and replaced Roy Eldridge in Teddy Hill's band (1936-37). He recorded seventeen tunes in eight sessions under his own name between 1937 and 1939: three tunes in 1937 for Irving Mill's Variety label, six in 1939 for Victor, six in 1939 for Vocalion, and two in 1939 for Blue Note.

Newton started his career in 1926 with the orchestra of Lloyd Scott, and later with the bands of Elmer Snowden, Eugene Kennedy, and Garland Wilson. He played in clubs in New York and Boston, leading his own band and doing groundbreaking work with saxophonist Sidney Bechet and the Port of Harlem Jazzmen that was the first group to be recorded by Blue Note records. Since he was known to be a Communist, his political life caused him to obtain little work during the "McCarthy Era" in America, and after 1944 many record labels were reluctant to engage him despite his musical abilities. After working with James P. Johnson in 1944-45, he withdrew from music, being more interested in painting. His chronic ill health and early death at age forty-eight ended what could have been a career equal to those of trumpet legends such as Cootie Williams, Charlie Shavers, Buck Clayton, and Henry "Red" Allen. Fortunately, the Jasmine record label has issued a CD compilation of fifty tracks featuring Newton titled Frankie Newton—The Story of a Forgotten Jazz Trumpeter, and Bob Weir and John Raymond Postgate have coauthored a paperback book called Looking for Frankie: a bio-discography of the jazz trumpeter Frank Newton.

Bibl.: Kernfield, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Postgate, John Raymond and Bob Weir. Looking for Frankie: a bio-discography of the jazz trumpeter Frank Newton (Bob Weir); "William Frank Newton" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Frank_Newton); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Nguyen, Ben ("Benny") (b. Saigon, Vietnam, July 22, 1961). Vietnamese-born American trumpeter. Nguyen arrived in the United States in 1968, and lived in Bethesda, Maryland for seven years. In 1975, he and his family moved to Huntington Beach, California, where he attended Mariana High School, graduating in 1979. Although he began playing trumpet at age nine in Maryland, his main teacher was Joan LaRue in California. He studied with Boyde Hood at the University of Southern California from 1979 to 1983, earning a bachelor of music degree, and from 1983 to 1985 attended the New England Conservatory in Boston, studying with Charles Schlueter, where he received a master of music degree. He also studied with Adolph Herseth and Vincent Cichowicz.

Nguyen has been a member of the Norfolk Chamber Music Festival Orchestra (1985), South Bend (IN) Symphony Orchestra (1985-91, principal), Chicago Chamber Orchestra (1987-91), Chicago Sinfonietta (1988-91), Civic Orchestra of Chicago (1988-90), Chicago Brass Quintet (1989-91), Bolshoi Ballet Orchestra (1989), Northwest Indiana Symphony (1988-91, third and assistant principal), and Ravinia Festival Orchestra (1989-91). He became assistant principal trumpet of The Phoenix Symphony in 1991, a position he still holds, but served as fourth trumpet of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra during the 2000-01 season, as well as fourth trumpet in the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a short while in 2001. In addition, he has performed on occasion with the Honolulu Symphony Orchestra and the American Ballet Theatre Orchestra.

Nguyen and his wife Anne, a business manager at the Arizona State University School of Business, have been married since 1989 and have three children: Michael (b. 1995), Luke (b. 1997), and Olivia (b. 2000). His hobbies include martial arts.

Bibl.: "Ben Nguyen" (www.phoenixsymphony.org/musician/ben-nguyen); personal interview, July 28, 2012.

Nichols, Ernest Loring ("Red") (b. Ogden, Utah, May 8, 1905; d. Las Vegas, Nevada, June 28, 1965). American cornetist. Nichols began learning the bugle at the age of four, then cornet at five from his father, a college music teacher. By age twelve, he was playing in his father's brass band.

At the age of fifteen, Nichols attended the Culver Military Academy where he studied violin, piano, and cornet, but he was soon kicked out. He worked in various pit orchestras and played with Ray Stilson on violin and cornet (1922), then with the Syncopating Five, a group that he later led in Atlantic City and Indiana under the name Royal Palms Orchestra. Influenced by recordings of Bix Beiderbecke, he developed a strong technique and beautiful tone on the cornet.

In 1923, Nichols moved to New York City where he became a respected sideman, arranger, and recording artist. In 1924, he joined Sam Lanin's orchestra and recorded with George Olsen. He also worked with Harry Reser, Bennie Krueger, Ross Gorman, Henry Halsted, Vincent Lopez, Don Voorhees, and the California Ramblers. In 1927, he played with Paul Whiteman's orchestra for a few months, replacing Bix Beiderbecke.

Nichols formed his most popular group, Five Pennies, in 1926. Its 1927 hit recording, Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider, made the group very popular. It recorded a great deal between 1926 and 1932 under the names Five Pennies, Charleston Chasers, Arkansas Travelers, Red Heads, Louisiana Rhythm Kings, and Red and Miff's Stompers. He also led a band for the hit musicals Strike Up the Band and Girl Crazy. Although he became popular with audiences, his heavy discipline with band members caused him to be personally disliked by his colleagues.

During the early 1930s, Nichols became America's most popular Dixieland cornetist in Europe, largely because Louis Armstrong's recordings were not yet available abroad. Nichols was a significant studio musician and bandleader during the 1930s. He had his own radio show, and in 1940 was featured at the Famous Door. He took time off from music from 1942-44 to take care of his daughter who had contracted polio. He worked in a shipyard during this time, but made a comeback as a cornet player in 1944 when he joined the Casa Loma Orchestra. Later that year, he reformed the Five Pennies as a sextet and moved the group to Los Angeles. The group was one of the leading Dixieland bands during the late 1940s and 1950s. They recorded for Brunswick, Jump, Jazzology, and Capitol.

Nichols appeared on the television show, This Is Your Life (Oct. 1956) hosted by Groucho Marx. The episode was popular and sparked an interest in Nichols's life. As a result, the feature movie The Five Pennies (starring Danny Kaye and Louis Armstrong) was produced in 1959. Although the movie is only loosely based on the life of Red Nichols, Nichols ghosted Kaye's trumpet solos, once again gaining popularity until his untimely death at age sixty due to a heart attack.

Nichols toured Europe in 1960 and 1964, and appeared in other films such as Wabash Avenue (1950), Disc Jockey (1951), Quicksand (1951), and *The Gene Krupa Story (*1959). Two of his albums are Red Nichols and Miff Mole (Retrieval) and Red Nichols and His Five Pennies (Jazzology). Along with Bix Beiderbecke, he was considered to be one of the leading white jazz cornetists of his day. Many white jazz musicians got their start playing with Nichols including Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, Jack Teagarden, Artie Shaw, Joe Venuti, Eddie Lang, Vic Berton, Pee Wee Russell, Jimmy Dorsey, Adrian Rollins, Fud Livingston and Miff Mole. His personal papers are now at the University of Oregon in Eugene, and his private collection of recordings is in the Archives of Recorded Sound at the University of Kansas in Lawrence.

Bibl.: Feldman, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Evans Ph. R et al. The Red Nichols Story; After Intermission, 1945-1962 (1997, Lanham); Stroff, M. St. Red Heat; A Chronological Survey of Red Nichols and His Five Pennies (1996, Lanham); Sudhalter, Dick. Lost Chords (1999, Oxford University Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nichols, Robert ("Bobby") Joseph (b. Boston, Massachusetts, Sept. 15, 1924; d. Mar. 1975). American trumpeter. Nichols began playing the trumpet at the age of eight. He started playing professionally at age fifteen when he joined Vaughan Monroe's orchestra (1940-43). He enrolled at the New England Conservatory of Music in 1943, but was soon drafted into the military. He was assigned to Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band (1943-45), becoming one of Miller's most featured soloists. Nichols and the Miller band recorded numerous discs for Bluebird. He also recorded in Paris with Eddie Barclay.

After his service years, Bobby Nichols joined Tex Beneke's band (1946-47). He then played with Ray McKinley's band (1948), and started his own group. Nichols later played with the Tommy Dorsey band (1951) and the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra (1952-61). When the Sauter-Finegan band broke up in 1961, Nichols became a studio player. Little is known about the remainder of his career, but he frequently performed at the Roxy Theatre in New York. He died in 1975 at the young age of fifty.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Bobby Nichols" (www.answers.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Bobby Nichols with the American Band of the Allied Expeditionary Forces.

Nicolay [Nikolay], Michel [Jean Louis] (b. Alleur, Belgium, Aug. 1, 1896; d. Ixelles [near Brussels], Belgium, May 20, 1952). Belgian trumpeter. Nicolay studied from 1909 with Théo Charlier at the Royal Conservatory in Liège, receiving First Prize with distinction and the Enamel (Vermeil) Medal, the conservatory's highest honor, in 1915. He then served in the military, performing in the 4th Infantry Regiment Band, later in the 1st Pioneers Regiment Band as principal cornet. In 1928, he worked in a radio orchestra (principal in 1931), and in 1932 launched a solo career that took him to France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and Russia. He was among the first to perform Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 (including in Paris, 1935). Like his teacher, Charlier, he played it on a G piccolo trumpet made by Victor Mahillon. In August 1933, he gave the world premiere in Strassburg a concerto for trumpet and wind ensemble by Karl Amadeus Hartmann (1905-63). The manuscript of this work became mislaid, and the concerto became rediscovered only in 2000 (through the efforts of Friedel Keim and Freddy Grin in Amsterdam).

Nicolay officially took over the trumpet class of the Royal Conservatory upon Charlier's retirement in September of 1933. He held this position until his death in 1952, and also performed as principal trumpet of the National Institute of Radio Broadcasting in Brussels.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Niehaus, Mark. American trumpeter. Niehaus began his professional career at age eighteen as principal trumpet of the New Haven Symphony, and attended The Juilliard School where he studied with Raymond Mase and Mark Gould. Immediately after graduation, he was hired as the trumpet teacher for Juilliard's Pre-College Division that was featured in an episode of CBS Television's 60 Minutes. After six years with the New Haven Symphony beginning at age twenty-four, he became a member of the New World Symphony in Florida under Maestro Michael Tilson Thomas, where he remained for three years.

Niehaus was selected as principal trumpet of the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra in 1998, and has performed as soloist with the orchestra on several occasions. He has also served as principal trumpet at the Eastern Music Festival for twelve summers, and has spent summers at the Tanglewood Music Festival, Pacific Music Festival, Spoleto USA, and the Colorado Music Festival. He is a founding member of the New York Big Brass Ensemble and the National Brass Virtuosi, and has taught at the North Carolina School of the Arts. He has edited a collection of more than thirty trumpet solos in three volumes with CD recording titled The Trumpet Collection for G. Schirmer, Inc. Niehaus was appointed president and executive director of the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra in September of 2012. He had previously served on the orchestra's MSO Board, and was chair of the Orchestra Player's Council for several years.

Niehaus is married and has two sons. He is a Cubmaster of Cub Scout Pack 398 for the Cub Scouts of America.

Bibl.: "Mark Niehaus, Principal Trumpet" (www.mso.org/about_mso/meet_the_orchestra/musician_roster/mark_niehaus); "Press Release" (www.mso.org/news_press/press_releases/release?article=20120912).

Nielsen, Per (b. Sønderborg, Denmark, June 1, 1954). Danish trumpeter. Nielsen began his studies at the Royal Danish Music Academy in Copenhagen in 1973, and later studied with Vincent Cichowicz in Chicago (1982), Peter Masseurs in Amsterdam (1986), and Maurice André in Paris (1988). He served in the Danish military, playing E-flat cornet in a military corps band in Haderslev, and joined the Sønderjyllands Symfoni-orkester in 1979 (principal since 1986).

Nielsen's career has mostly been as a soloist. He has appeared on numerous radio and television programs and has sold over 350,000 CDs, making him one of the most popular recording artists in his country. His fourteen solo albums include Trumpet Concertos, Trumpet Emotions, Amazing Grace, Christmas Joy, With Friends, On My Own, Trumpet Serenade, My Way, Danske Toner, Christmas Time, and others.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Per Nielsen's official website: www.trompet.com.

Nilsen, Arnulf Naur (b. Hamar, Norway, June 10, 1952). Norwegian trumpeter. Nilsen studied with Harry Kvebæk at the music conservatory in Oslo from 1968 to 1972. He also studied with Adolph Herseth, Vincent Cichowicz, and Arnold Jacobs in Chicago, and with Philip Smith in New York City.

Nilsen was principal trumpet of the Bergen Symphony Orchestra from 1973 to 1975, and since 1975 has been principal of the Oslo Symphony Orchestra. He is also a member of the Scandinavian Brass Ensemble. He has taught at the Norwegian Academy of Music, Inge Sund Academy of Music, Stavanger Conservatory, and the Barratt Due Institute of Music. His best-known student (since 2002) is soloist Tine Thing Helseth.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Arnulf Naur Nilsen" (www.sommersymfoni.no/index.asp?id=27334).

Nilsson, Bo (b. Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 19, 1940). Swedish trumpeter. His parents were Karl Gustav (a carpenter) and Elsa Nilsson. His grandmother gave him an accordion at the age of five, and he began playing the trumpet soon afterwards under the direction of Ivar Widner. As a boy, he played in the Skansens Vaktparad, a select Swedish youth band in Stockholm. At the age of fifteen, he joined the Military Coast Guards Band, and received lessons from Per Goffin.

Two years later, he was transferred to the Royal Air Force Band, and was taught by Bengt Hedbom. During his late teens and while still in the service, he attended the Royal Academy of Music in Stockholm where he studied with Allan Olsson.

After military service, Nilsson joined the Symphony Orchestra of the City of Norrköping conducted by Howard Bloomstedt (1960-61). Later that year, he won the position of second trumpet in the Malmö Symphony Orchestra, a position he held during most of his career. He traveled to Denmark for occasional lessons with Knud Hovaldt (1962-67). Hovaldt completely changed Nilsson's embouchure and musical approach to performing, which led to an insatiable desire to learn as much about teaching as possible. He loved studying with various master teachers including Pierre Thibaud (Paris, 1968-71), Edward Tarr (Basel, Switzerland, 1970) and Adolph Herseth (Chicago, 1974-75).

Nilsson first began teaching at a professional level in 1969. One of his earliest students was Håkan Hardenberger. He taught at Lund University in Malmö (1974-78), and in 1979 was a guest professor at the Victorian College of the Arts in Melbourne, Australia. In 1980, Nilsson organized the first of his many trumpet seminars in Malmö, which brought together many of the leading trumpet players and teachers from around the world. He also taught at the music conservatory in Stavanger, Norway (1986-88). He was a guest teacher at the famed Gakuen School of Music in Tokyo (1990-96), and was a coteacher (with Otto Sauter) at the Bremen Trumpet Academy in Bremen, Germany (1995-2002). Nilsson's style of teaching is extremely basic and carefully thought out. Among his many other students is the famous Swedish soloist, Ole Edvard Antonsen. To help his students become successful in the professional world, Nilsson has formed an international network of friends and contacts that have been important in finding record labels, booking agencies, and performance opportunities for his best students.

Since 1998, Nilsson and Hardenberger have shared teaching responsibilities at a university in Malmö. Nilsson has presented master classes and seminars around the world. As a performer, he has played with the Edward Tarr Brass Ensemble, Otto Sauter's Ten of the Best, and the Bengt Eklund Baroque Ensemble. He has recorded several solo albums and participated on a CD of trumpet ensemble music with Adolph Herseth, Anthony Plog, Otto Sauter, Urban Agnas, and others. He appears in a video about Häkan Hardenberger titled Golden Trumpet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Bo Nilsson – Cicerone of the Brasses" (Brass Bulletin, no. 113, I/2001); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nockles, Bruce (b. London, England, June 19, 1959). British trumpeter and composer. Nockles studied trumpet at the University of York, and trumpet and music composition at the Royal Academy of Music in London. Since 1981, he has performed with orchestras such as the London Sinfonietta and the Chamber Orchestra of Europe. However, his main activity centers on contemporary music, which has brought him to many of Europe's leading new music ensembles including Fires of London, Almeida Ensemble, Music Projects London, Endymion, Birmingham Contemporary Music Group, Ensemble Intercontemporain, Composers Ensemble, Gemini, Matrix Ensemble, and Klangfurt Wien. He is best known for his work with Ensemble Modern of Frankfurt (1997-2001), and has appeared as a soloist with the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra and the BBC Symphony Orchestra. He is also an active conductor.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Bruce Nockles" (www.endymion.org.uk/?page_id=67).

Noday, Dennis (b. Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 20, 1947). American trumpeter. Noday started to play the trumpet at the age of eleven, and subsequently studied with John Clyman, Don Raeder, Calvin Greer, and Johnny Mammacher. He attended the Graduate Naval School of Music, and was a member of the Symphony Orchestra of the Americas. During the late 1960s, he was lead trumpet with the US Army Jazz Band, and from 1971 to 1975 toured as lead trumpet with the Stan Kenton Orchestra. He recorded seven albums including the well-known Live at Redlands for the Creative World Records label. From 1975 to 1978, he was lead trumpet for Maynard Ferguson's band that recorded four albums during his time with it, including Chameleon and Conquistador, both on the Columbia label.

Noday worked in Hollywood at Universal Studios, recording soundtracks for television shows such as Quincy, Hawaii Five-O, The Incredible Hulk, and Gunsmoke. He also performed with numerous touring musicals such as A Chorus Line, Sweeny Todd, and Chicago. He has played with many big bands, including the Chicago Metropolitan Jazz Orchestra (recording the album, Live and Screamin'), Maynard Ferguson ReUnion Band, Kenton Alumni (directed by Mike Vax), and is leader of his own Dennis Noday Orchestra in south Florida. He is an active clinician who teaches at the Florida Youth Conservatory. He is the author of the text, Today's High Velocity Trumpet Playing (self-published).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Dennis Noday Orchestra" (www.cyberjaz.com/noday/bio.htm); Dennis Noday's official website: http://dennisnodaybigband.com.

Noguchi, Hiro[fumi] (b. Osaka, Japan, c1976) Hiro Noguchi is a native of Osaka, Japan, and is among the artistic leaders of his generation from that country. Now based in Tokyo, he has performed worldwide as a member of the Boston-based Atlantic Brass Quintet (1999-2007), as a jazz and classical soloist who was a prize-winner at the National Trumpet Competition at George Mason University, and as a leading trumpeter for numerous Broadway shows in New York. Many composers, including Michal Hersch (Guggenheim fellow and Prix de Rome winner), have written works for him. Hoguchi is also a composer, and has written many works for his own jazz group, Pacific Bridge. He has played with the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, New York City Ballet orchestra, Orchestra of St. Luke's, Martha Graham Dance Company, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Baltimore Chamber Orchestra, Lew Anderson Big Band, Harlem Renaissance Jazz Orchestra, Pittsburgh Collective, Gary Wofsey Jazz Orchestra, Metropolitan Gospel Big Band, and his own quintet. He has also presented workshops at over one hundred schools including The Juilliard School, Harvard University, Yale University, Rice University, San Francisco Conservatory, University of Maryland, Hong Kong International Performing Arts School, and Peabody Conservatory. He has recorded for Summit, Mark Classics, EMF Classics, Matador, and other labels. In addition, Noguchi is the founder and artistic director of The Japan Chamber Music Society.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Hiro Noguchi's official website: www.geocites.jp/hironoguchimusic/EnglishBio.html.

Norris, Alex[ander] ("Pope") (b. c1969). American trumpeter. Norris grew up in Columbia, Maryland, and began playing the trumpet at the age of nine. He received a full scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, studying classical trumpet. Before his graduation in 1990, his interest turned more to jazz, and he began freelancing in the Baltimore/Washington, D.C. area, performing with Gary Thomas, Dennis Chambers, George Colligan, Grachan Moncur II, Gary Bartz, Billy Hart, Carter Jefferson, and others.

In 1992, Norris toured the world with the Glenn Miller Orchestra, and then settled in New York City where he worked with the Mingus Band, Village Vanguard Orchestra, Toshiko Akiyoshi jazz orchestra, and the Maria Schneider Band. From 1994 to 1998, he played in Betty Carter's Jazz Ahead, becoming its musical director in 1998. He also played with the bands of Jason Lindner, Lonnie Plaxico, Ralph Irizarry's Timbalaye, and worked with Slide Hampton, Joshua Redman, Carl Allen, Ray Bryant, Kenny Wheeler, Brian Blade, Chris Potter, Brad Mehldau, John Patitucci, the Woody Herman Orchestra, Avishai Cohen, and others. Norris also took an interest in Afro-Cuban music, performing with Andy and Jerry Gonzalez, Paquito D'Rivera, Hilton Ruiz, Giovanni Hildago, Monguito Santamaria, Poncho Sanchez, and Chico O'Farrill. In addition, the versatile Norris has played and/or recorded Pop and R&B music with Incognito, US3, Philip Bailey, Steve Winwood, Gloria Estefan & Miami Sound Machine, Jon Secada, and JJ Grey & MOFRO.

Norris received a master of music degree from the Manhattan School of Music in 1995. He taught as an adjunct faculty member at the Manhattan School, New School of Jazz and Contemporary Music, Towson University, and City College of New York. From 2005-07, he taught part-time at the University of Miami while earning a doctor of musical arts degree (2007). After completing his doctorate, Norris taught one more year in Miami as a visiting assistant professor of jazz.

Now living and working in New York, Alex "Pope" Norris plays worldwide with the Dizzy Gillespie Alumni Big Band, Manny Oquendo's Libre, and his own jazz groups. He is a staff member of the New York Jazz Workshops, and has appeared on over sixty CD recordings. His album as leader of the Alex Norris Quintet is A New Beginning (Fresh Sounds/New Talent). He teaches each summer at the Maryland Summer Jazz Workshop.

Bibl.: www.myspace.com/alexpopenorris.

Norris, Philip E. (b. York, Pennsylvania, Jan. 27, 1954). American trumpeter. Norris's mother died when he was six years old. His aunt thought that it would be good therapy for him to play an instrument, so he began playing her uncle's cornet. His first teachers were Rodney Trimmer (age ten to fourteen) and Ray Miller, the band director at Milton Hershey High School in Hershey, Pennsylvania, where he graduated in 1972. He was influenced early by hearing concerts by Rafael Méndez, Al Hirt, and Carl "Doc" Severinsen.

Norris attended Grace College in Winona Lake, Indiana, from 1972 to 1976, studying with Jerry Franks, as well as with Marvin Perry III of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Norris then earned a master of music degree at Northwestern University from 1979 to 1982, studying with Vincent Cichowicz and Luther Didrickson, and a DMA at the University of Minnesota from 1994 to 1998, studying with David Baldwin and Gary Bordner. He also studied respiration and brass with Arnold Jacobs in Chicago, and conducting with John Paynter at Northwestern University.

Norris's orchestral career began with the Salem (Oregon) Symphony Orchestra (1980-81) while teaching at Western Baptist College, and with the Alexandria Symphony Orchestra in Virginia (1982-83). In 1983, he taught instrumental and choral music at Wheaton Christian High School (Illinois) until 1986 when he was hired to reinstate the music education program at Sterling College in Kansas. In 1993, he was appointed professor of music at Northwestern College in St. Paul, a position he still holds. He has performed on occasion with the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra and the Minnesota Orchestra. He was a featured clinician during the 2002 and 2004 conferences of the International Trumpet Guild.

Norris published Top 50 Orchestral Excerpts for Trumpet and Uncommon Ceremonial Works for Trumpet with Organ/Keyboard of his own composition (Crown Music Press), as well as over twenty-five works for band or brass ensemble. His compositions have earned high praise. He also orchestrated Eric Ewazen's Sonata for Trumpet and Piano for trumpet and orchestra, calling it Concerto No. 1 (Southern Music Co.).

Norris and his wife Julie, a ministry assistant at Bethlehem Baptist Church in Minneapolis, have been married since 1981, and have three children: David (b. 1983), Abigail (b. 1984), and Hannah (b. 1987). His hobbies include reading (particularly Christian theology), gardening, home improvement, swimming, walking, and grandparenting Matteo (b. 2010).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Philip Norris" (www.nwc.edu/web/music/philip-e-norris); personal interview, Feb. 3, 2011.

Northcott, William ("Billy") (b. Devonshire, England, May 1841; d. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Apr. 30, 1920). British cornetist. Northcott began music study and cornet lessons in England with Robert Norton at the age of nine. At age fourteen, he became a cornetist aboard numerous ships in the British navy. After ten years of service, he accompanied his parents to Australia where they planned to mine for gold. He started the Northcott Brass Band in Sandhurst, Victoria, and performed as its soloist for four years. In the latter part of 1868, he moved to New Zealand and formed his own concert company.

Northcott planned a trip to San Francisco in 1869, but when the ship had a three-day layover in Honolulu en route, he organized a concert band made up of various people aboard the ship, and managed to persuade the government officials in Honolulu to sponsor the band permanently. He stayed with the group for fifteen months before moving on to San Francisco.

He arrived in the United States in September of 1871, and immediately volunteered for a large band that was to play a series of concerts up and down the west coast to benefit the victims of the Chicago fire. He played with the band for a few months, and then traveled to New York City where he joined the Grand Opera House Orchestra as special cornet soloist.

In 1872, Northcott toured as cornet soloist with Parepa Rose. Later that year, he joined the famed Carncross Minstrels and performed solos nightly. From 1872 through 1876, he toured constantly with various organizations such as Simon Hassler's Orchestra in New Jersey, San Francisco Minstrels, and Chestnut Street Theater in Philadelphia. However, his greatest and most popular performances were at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876, accompanied by an immense organ. These concerts drew thousands of spectators and were so popular that the concerts were repeated for two years—long after the Centennial was over.

Between 1883 and 1885, Northcott toured nationally with his own touring company. His last public solo appearance was at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair. For the next two decades, he performed by himself on the streets of Philadelphia, playing for contributions from anyone that would care to help the old, white haired man. Although many musicians ridiculed Northcott behind his back because he had resorted to being a street musician, he actually made more money than people thought. He invested in real estate in the Philadelphia area, and died a wealthy man in 1920. The Philadelphia Enquirer newspaper reported on May 1: William Northcott, a veteran cornetist, who ranked with Jules Levy, Matthew Arbuckle, and others of equal fame, died Friday night at his home, 1632 Broad Street. He was seventy-nine years old and has long been a familiar figure on the streets of this city. As he had not been connected with any organization, for some years, he was an itinerant, playing alone for the crowds in the open. The white haired cornetist, always played classical and popular music in fine style, even at his advanced age.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications).

Norton, John Thompson (b. before 1818; d. 1868). English trumpeter. Norton is known as one of the first proponents of the English slide trumpet. He played at the Opera (London), Philharmonic Society, a York Festival (1823, with John Hyde and Thomas Harper, trumpets), Birmingham Festival (1826, with Harper and Irwin, trumpets) and a concert at the Royal Academy of Music (also in 1826, at Hanover Square, London, with Harper and the Gambati Brothers, trumpets). He preceded Thomas Harper as professor of the slide trumpet at the Royal Academy of Music before immigrating to America in 1827 when he was hired as trumpet soloist and musical director of the Chestnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia. His best solos were trumpet obbligatos from Handel arias such as The Trumpet Shall Sound and Let the Bright Seraphim.

Norton was well known throughout the Eastern Seaboard by 1832. He was enticed by William Niblo of New York to compete in a public contest with the Italian trumpeter and cornetist, Alessandro Gambati, on August 22, 1834 at Niblo's Pleasure Garden. The highly publicized stunt drew nearly four thousand spectators. Gambati performed on a two-valve alto trumpet in F or G, and Norton played the slide trumpet. The contest was nearly too close to judge, but the trophy was awarded to Norton.

Norton offered lessons to women on the pianoforte and in the art of English singing. For men, he offered lessons on the slide trumpet, keyed bugle, flute, and single and double flageolet. He published several arrangements of arias, ballads, and quadrilles.

In 1835, Norton went to New Orleans to help open the St. Charles Theatre. Gambati happened to be performing in the city at the same time, and several attempts were made for a rematch of their contest, but none occurred. Any lingering animosity between Gambati and Norton appears to have disappeared, because the two players joined forces in a duet during a benefit concert in Niblo's Gardens later in 1835, and in 1838 Gambati performed at a benefit concert for Norton. Norton returned to Philadelphia where he worked as a musician until his death in 1868.

Bibl.: Hoover, Cynthia A. "A Trumpet Battle At Niblo's Pleasure Garden" (Musical Quarterly, 1969); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Norton, Nick Marshall (b. Tyler, Texas, Mar. 9, 1954). American trumpeter. Norton grew up in Rusk, Texas, started studying the trumpet at age ten, and later attended the University of Texas in Austin. He earned a bachelor of music degree in 1976 studying with J. Frank Elsass and Raymond Crisara, and a master of music degree under Crisara in the following year. He studied at Yale University in 1978, and the University of Southern California (with Anthony Plog) in 1980.

Norton became assistant principal trumpet of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in 1980, a position he held through 1991. He was acting principal of the Malmö Symphony Orchestra in Sweden in 1992, but returned to the Utah Symphony Orchestra as principal in the fall of 1992. He is a former member of the Austin Symphony Orchestra, East Texas Symphony Orchestra, and the Tetons Festival Orchestra. He has also performed with the Oregon Bach Festival Orchestra and the Summit Brass.

Norton was a trumpet teacher at the University of Austin (1978), an adjunct professor at Amarillo College in 1978-80, Malmö Musikhogskola in 1992, and the Academy of St. Cecilia in Rome in 1998. In addition to playing with the Utah Symphony, he is currently teaching at the University of Utah. Along with former teacher Anthony Plog, Norton has released the CD, Colors of the Baroque on the Summit Records label.

Norton and Utah Symphony bassist Claudia Norton have been married since 1995. His hobbies include hiking, bicycling, gardening, and tango dancing.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nick Norton" (www.music.utah.edu/faculty/faculty_a-z/nick_norton).

Noto, Sam (b. Buffalo, New York, Apr. 17, 1930). American trumpeter. Since 1975, Noto has been living and working in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. He turned professional at the age of seventeen, gigging in upper New York State. He played with many of the leading big bands, including Stan Kenton's orchestra (1953-58), Louis Bellson's band (1959), Kenton again (1960) and the Count Basie Orchestra (on and off from 1964-67). Then he opened a coffee shop in his home city. He moved to Las Vegas in 1969 and performed in various show bands where he met Red Rodney. The two became close friends and recorded the album Superbop for the Muse label.

After moving to Toronto in 1975, Noto began playing with Boss Brass, and working in various clubs and studios. From 1975 to 1978, he made many recordings for the Xanadu label. Among his albums as leader are Entrance!, Act One, Notes to You, and Noto-Riety. Since that time, Noto has recorded several other solo albums, and has recorded with Stan Kenton, Al Cohn, Dexter Gordon, Rob McConnell, Kenny Drew, and others. He also made a video, Live in New Orleans, with Don Menza and Cedar Walton (1991). Although less active today, Sam Noto continues to perform in the Toronto and Buffalo areas.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Nottingham, James ("Jimmy") Edward Jr. (b. Brooklyn, New York, Dec. 15, 1925; d. New York, New York, Nov. 16, 1978). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Little is known about Nottingham's childhood. He began his career in 1943 in Cecil Payne's group. From 1944 to 1945, he was in the military playing with Willie Smith's Navy band. Upon discharge, he worked mainly as a lead player with Lionel Hampton (1945-48), Charlie Barnet, Lucky Millinder (1947), Count Basie (1948-50), and Herbie Fields (1950-51).

From 1951 to 1953, Nottingham played in various Latin bands in New York. In 1953, he became a staff trumpeter for CBS and spent the next twenty years as a New York studio musician. He coled a group with saxophonist Budd Johnson in 1962 and played at various times with Dizzy Gillespie, Oliver Nelson, Benny Goodman, Thad Jones-Mel Lewis (1966-70), Ray Charles, Benny Carter (1972), Rod Levitt Octet (1973), and in Clark Terry's big band (1974-75). He was a strong lead player who had excellent plunger technique and good taste. He led one recording session in 1957, recording four tunes for the Seeco label. Nottingham died one month before his fifty-third birthday.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Novikov, Vadim Alexeyevich (b. Kolomna [near Moscow], Russia, Mar. 19, 1941). Russian trumpeter. Novikov was the first prizewinner in the 1962 Helsinki international trumpet competition. He first studied under Yeriomin at the Moscow Musical College, and then graduated from the Moscow Conservatory, where he studied with Yury Usov (1930-99), in 1964. He played at the Bolshoi Theatre from 1964 until 1986, many of these years as second trumpet to the great Timofei Dokshitser.

Since 1978, Novikov has taught at the Moscow Conservatory, receiving the title of professor in 1993. He was the first performer in the Soviet Union of Hindemith's trumpet sonata, as well as works by N. Rakov, M. Millmann, A. Nikolayev, T. Smirnova, and others. He is president of the Russian Trumpet Guild, and holds the distinction of Russian Honored Master of Art. Many of his former students, including Boris Shlepakov, Dmitry Lokalenkov, A. Grinko, Iskander Akhmadullin, A. Korniliev, Viktor Kisnichenko, A. Kozlov, and Mikhail Gaiduk have won major solo competitions.

Vadim is a kind and modest man. His wife is Inessa ("Ina") Novikov.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Vadim Novikov" (www.mosconsv.ru/english/page.phtml?2139); personal interview, Nov. 5, 2011.

Novy, Don[ald] A[ndrew] (b. Oak Park, Illinois, Apr. 23, 1932). American trumpeter. Novy came from a family of engineers, and grew up in Berwyn and Riverside, Illinois. He began playing the bugle at age five, and the trumpet at eight; his early teachers were John Sovinec and Elden Benge. During his senior year at Riverside-Brookfield High School in 1950, Novy received the "Young Man With A Horn Award" and appeared on local television. He attended Northwestern University from 1950 to 1955, earning a bachelor's degree in music theory and composition, and a master's degree in trumpet, studying with Vincent Neff and Jerry Cimera. During summer breaks, he traveled with the Barnes and Carruthers State Fair Shows, playing throughout the Midwest and West.

Novy taught at Baker Junior High School, but his first fulltime position was as a visiting professor at the University of Colorado in Boulder in 1955-56, substituting for Frank W. Baird who was on sabbatical leave. In 1956-57, Novy taught instrumental music at Durango High School in Colorado, and from 1957 to 1988 taught in the Denver public school system. In 1960-61, while on sabbatical, he earned the Geneva Conservatory Trumpet Performance Certificate, studying with Michel Cuvit of the Suisse Romande Orchestra.

A versatile freelance musician, Novy performed with Art Gow's orchestra for twenty years at the historic Brown Palace Hotel in Denver, substituted in the Denver Symphony Orchestra, played jazz with the Denver Broncos Band (twenty years) and Denver Municipal Band, and performed with the Brico Symphony Orchestra in Denver, as well as with The Denver Affair vocal group.

He also performed with numerous ice shows, circuses, dance bands, and stock show bands. Novy founded a summer music camp in Colorado for young music students called the Alpine Music Camp, which he directed for five years during the early 1970s. He also established the Alpine Music Studio in Englewood, Colorado, where he was a sales representative for Benge, Schilke, Olds, and other trumpet manufacturers. Along with Edwin Lenicheck, Novy helped Legh Burns establish the National Trumpet Symposium at the University of Denver (1968-73). Novy has also taught at the University of Colorado-Denver, Metropolitan State College, Colorado Women's College, and the University of Denver.

Novy's early study with Benge led him to the invention of AAIIRR (Acoustic Adjustment for Improved Intonation Response and Range) in 1973. Subsequent research produced the AcoustiCoil, a small plastic acoustic impedence device for many brass and woodwind instruments.

Novy was married to Diane Novy from 1956 to 1976, but they were divorced. He has been married to Sharon Novy since 1992. He is now retired from teaching, and his hobbies include golf, fishing, and traveling.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Aug. 7, 2010.

O

Oakes, Philip B. ("Flip") Jr. (b. Olean, New York, Sept. 30, 1949). American trumpeter and designer. Oakes began his career at age twelve when he joined his father's Dixieland band. He and his family moved to southern California in 1964, and back to western New York in 1970. He opened his Olean Instrument Band and Repair Service in 1972, and relocated to Oceanside, California, in 1977.

Although mainly a trumpeter, Oakes also plays clarinet and saxophone (mostly during the 1960s and '70s). He has played in various Dixieland and jazz bands including the Clive Collins Dixieland Band (1991), Shep Meyers Jazz Quartet (since 1987), Prime Time with Jan Sutherland (1998-2001), Uptown Jazz Quartet (since 2002), Titan Hot Seven (since 2006), New South Market Street Jazz Band (in San Diego), Conrad Janis and the Beverly Hills Unlisted Jazz Band, and his own Flip Oakes Jazz Party Quartet. He has recorded numerous CDs, including several as leader.

In order to find a better playing trumpet than those sold during the 1980s, Oakes experimented with hundreds of trumpets, and then went to Zig Kanstul for help. Together, they built a trumpet that played totally differently from any stock instrument. When his friends tried it, they exclaimed, "That thing is wild." Thus, the Flip Oakes Wild Thing trumpet was born. Soon, many friends asked for a trumpet just like it, so Oakes (with Kanstul) began producing the instruments for sale in 1994.

Oakes and his wife Joyce Oakes have one daughter.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Flip Oakes" (www.titanhotseven.com/pages/bioOakes.html).

Oakley, Dick (b. Carbondale, Pennsylvania, Mar. 5, 1940). American trumpeter and cornetist. Oakley grew up in Binghamton, New York, and began playing the cornet at the age of nine at school. During the late 1950s, he coled the Penn-Can Jazz Band with trombonist Jack Hockenberry, and during the next decade performed with Spiegle Willcox, the Muskrat Ramblers, Dixie Racing and Clambake Society, Chuck Slate, and others.

Oakley moved to San Francisco and began substituting in Turk Murphy's band in 1967. In the following year, he became a regular member and stayed with Murphy for eleven years. He then joined the South Frisco Jazz Band (1980-98), and also played with Lavay Smith's Red Hot Skillet Lickers, Chris Tyler's Silver Leaf Jazz Band, Ted des Plantes, Bob Helm, and Jack Teagarden, and did radio broadcasts with Jim Cullum's band. He has appeared at numerous jazz festivals, and has recorded for many labels including Atlantic, Vault, Stomp Off, Merry Maker 9, GHB, and MPS.

Bibl.: Keim, Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ode, James A. (b. Brandon, South Dakota, Dec. 9, 1934). American trumpeter. Ode began playing trumpet at age fourteen, and studied with J.H. Elgethun. After graduating from Brandon High School in 1953, he attended Augustana College in Sioux Falls, South Dakota (1953-57), where he studied with Leland Lillehaug, Ardeen Foss, and Russ Henegar, and earned a bachelor of music degree. He joined the US Army 9th Division Band as principal trumpet (1957-59), and concurrently played in the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra. He then went to the Eastman School of Music for graduate work. His trumpet teachers at Eastman were Edwin Betts, Daniel Patrylak, and Sidney Mear. He completed his master of music degree in 1961.

Ode took a position as trumpet teacher and assistant director of bands at Augustana College (1961-63). He returned to Eastman for doctoral work, playing in the Eastman Wind Ensemble (principal), the Rochester Brass Quintet, and Sioux Falls Symphony Orchestra, and earned a DMA in trumpet with a Performer's Certificate in 1965.

He became professor of trumpet at Ithaca College in 1965, holding this position until 1981, when he assumed duties as chair of the music department at Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas. Post doctoral trumpet study was with William Vacchiano (1980-86). Ode accepted the position of chair of the division of music in the Meadows School of the Arts at Southern Methodist University in 1986. At SMU, he also served as director of Music Career Services and head of the department of music education. He retired in 2006 after a total of forty-five years of teaching and music administration.

Ode has performed with the Ithaca Brass Quintet, Cayuga Chamber Orchestra (principal, 1969-81), and has been an active soloist throughout his career. He authored Brass Instruments in Church Services (Augsburg), Hymns, Descants and Fantasias for Brass Ensembles (Augsburg), and recorded Music for Trumpet (Mark Records) as well as albums with the Ithaca Brass Quintet for the Mark and Golden Crest labels.

Ode and Ruth McBride were married in 1991. His children from a previous marriage to Edna Gilbertson are Karen (b.1958), Elizabeth (b. 1960), Janice (b. 1962), and Kathryn (b. 1965). He has served on the board of directors of the New Conservatory of Dallas, and as secretary/treasurer of the Southern Methodist University Retired Faculty Association. His hobbies include international travel, Mensa crossword puzzles, and reading.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Dec. 21, 2010.

O'Hara, Betty (b. Morris, Illinois, May 24, 1925; d. Sherman Oaks, California, Apr. 18, 2000). American trumpeter and singer. Betty O'Hara (maiden name unknown) began playing the trumpet at the age of nine while growing up in Connecticut. She later was a member of the Hartford Symphony Orchestra. During the early 1960s, she and bass trombonist husband Barrett O'Hara moved to Los Angeles where she worked mostly as a studio musician, playing trumpet, valve trombone, and sometimes double-bell euphonium. She recorded numerous television soundtracks including Hill Street Blues and Magnum P.I.

O'Hara toured with Billy Vaughan's orchestra during the 1970s and was a charter member of Ann Patterson's all-female big band, Maiden Voyage. She also played with the Jazz Birds, Dick Cathcart, and George Van Eps, and appeared at several jazz festivals. She regularly rehearsed with Dick Cary's Tuesday Night Band and made a solo CD with them called Woman's Intuition (Sea Breeze). She also cut two CDs with saxophonist Rick Fay titled Catching Up (Klavier) and Rick Fay's Endangered Species (Arbors). Her solo album is called Horns-a-Plenty (Delmark).

Betty O'Hara was quite active as a jazz, Dixie, and swing trumpeter in the Los Angeles area until two strokes in 1998 ended her career. She was moved to a convalescent home in Sherman Oaks where she died two years later from complications of yet another stroke. She was seventy-four.

Bibl.: Pratts, Greg. "Betty O'Hara: Biography" (All Music Guide); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ohno, Shunzo (b. Gifu, Japan, Mar. 22, 1949). Japanese trumpeter and composer. Ohno began playing the trombone as a boy of thirteen, and switched to trumpet at seventeen. He was self-taught and started playing professionally at age nineteen. He played with Keiichiro Ebihara's Lobsters in 1968 and with George Otsuka from 1970 to 1973. He joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers in 1973 and was encouraged by Blakey to move to New York City, which Ohno did, and where he has lived since, although he often performs for extended periods in his native Japan.

After leaving Blakey's group in late 1974, Ohno played with Roy Haynes's Hip Ensemble, Norman Connors (1975-77), Machito's Afro-Cuban orchestra (1981-83), Gil Evans (1983-88), Buster Williams, and Super Sounds (two years). He recorded with Herbie Hancock, David Byrne, Onaje Allan Gumbs, David Matthews, Machito, and Helen Merrill. Among Ohno's albums as leader are Bud and Bird (Projazz, with Gil Evans), Farewell (Projazz, with Gil Evans), Quarter Moon (Inner City), Poetry of Japan (Min-On), Home (Pulsebeats), Falter Out: Shunzo Ohno Quartet (RCA), Something's Coming (East Wind), Bubbles (East Wind), Antares (Electric Bird), Manhattan Blue (ProArte), Live '94 Take Off (Nippon Crown), and Maya (TBM).

In 1988, Ohno was involved in a serious automobile accident that caused extensive damage to his teeth and lips, but after years of recovery, he was able to return to the stage. However, his career took another turn for the worse in 1996 when he was diagnosed with throat cancer. Ohno refused to give up and endured years of radical cancer treatments. His survival and miraculous return to music inspired a biography of his life titled Trumpet of Hope (Ushis) that has also been turned into a television documentary. His story was also featured on Fuji Television in a program called Unbelievable.

Ohno is the first person to receive the Asian American Jazz Connection Music Award from the Universal Jazz Coalition, as well as the first Asian musician to be a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers. Ohno lives in New York with his wife and three daughters.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Shunzo Ohno's official website: www.shunzoohno.com.

Ojala, Lauri (b. Kaustinen, Finland, Sept. 22, 1918). Finnish trumpeter. Ojala's father was a well-known pop musician. Ojala began playing the Kannel (a type of zither) and the violin (folk version), and at age fourteen attended the Military School of Music of the Uudenmaa Regiment. In 1932, he became a student at the Helsinki Conservatory where he studied violin with Arvo Hannikainen, and trumpet with Vilho Pynnönen. After graduating in 1938, he enlisted in the military, and served in a Regiment band in Pori (1938-39) that entertained troops during World War II.

After his military duties, Ojala was given a trumpet position without audition in the Orchestra of Turku. In 1943, he won an audition for principal trumpet of the Helsinki Philharmonic (replacing his former teacher, Pynnönen), a position he held for thirty-four years (1943-1977). From 1947 until his retirement in 1977, he also taught at the Sibelius Academy; it is said that ninety-five percent of all professional Finnish trumpeters studied with him.

Ojala won second prize in the 1947 Geneva Competition (no first prize was awarded). He also won first prize in a New York television contest, in which he performed the Carnival of Venice. The prize was a twenty-six-concert tour of the United States during which he performed works by Honegger and Méndez. In 1963, he was offered the position of principal trumpet of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra, but did not accept it.

During Olaja's career, he had a reputation for having nerves of steel. He always had a predilection for light music. Now retired, he occasionally plays dance music and teaches privately. Throughout his career, he played only the B-flat trumpet. He enjoys driving fast cars.

Bibl.: Mäkinen, Timo. "Lauri Ojala" (Brass Bulletin, no. 53, I/1986); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2009).

O'Keeffe, Mark (b. Youghal, Cork County, Ireland, June 18, 1969). Irish trumpeter. O'Keeffe began playing trumpet at age seven under the guidance of his father. He attended the Cork School of Music, and later received a bachelor of music degree from the Royal Northern College of Music, and a master's degree from the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama (now the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland). His teachers include John MacMurray, Murray Greig, John Wallace, Bo Nilsson, and Fritz Damrow.

After winning the RTÉ "Musician of the Future" competition, O'Keeffe was appointed principal trumpet of the National Symphony Orchestra of Ireland, and after four years there, became principal of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra in December of 1996. He has also served as a guest principal of the London Sinfonietta, London Symphony Orchestra, City of Birmingham Orchestra, BBC Symphony Orchestra, and the Halle Orchestra. He has toured Australia with The Wallace Collection, a Baroque ensemble, and has been an active soloist for many years. A strong advocate of contemporary music for trumpet, he has recorded several CDs for the Delphian label. He is a professor of trumpet at the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland, and was a featured artist at the 2002 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Manchester, England.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Mark O'Keeffe's official website: www.markotrumpet.com.

Okoshi, Toru ("Tiger") (b. Ashiya City, Hyogo, Japan, Mar. 21, 1950). Japanese trumpeter. Okoshi is the son of a samurai warrior. He began playing the trumpet at age eleven, and two years later, when he heard a concert by Louis Armstrong in Japan, knew that his life would be spent playing jazz trumpet. He studied with alto saxophone player Sadao Watanabe, and then graduated from Kwansei Gakuin University with a bachelor's degree in music. He and Akemi Okoshi were married in 1972 and moved to Boston in the fall of that year where Tiger enrolled in the Berklee College of Music. He received his diploma in 1975 and began freelancing in the Boston area.

Okoshi's career includes performances with Buddy Rich, John Scofield, Bob Moses, David Sanborn, Pat Metheny, Gary Burton, George Russell, Tony Bennett, Dave Liebman, and many others. He has recorded with Dave Grusin, Cercia Miller, and Jerry Bergonzi. His albums include Two Sides to Every Story (JVC), Times Square (ECM), Tiger Okoshi Plays Standard (Jeneon), Color of Soil (JVC), Echoes of a Note (JVC), That was Then—This is Now (JVC), Mudd Cake (JVC), and Tiger's Baku (JVC).

Okoshi founded a group called Tiger's Baku, which has won several awards including Best Local Band & Fusion Group by the Boston Music Awards, and Best Jazz Band by Boston Magazine (1988). In 1998, the group performed for Queen Elizabeth II. ("Baku" is a mystical creature that eats bad dreams.) He was also selected as the Best Brass & Reed Player by the Boston Music Awards committee. In addition, he received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Berklee, and the John Thayer Award from The Japan Society of Boston for his contributions to better U.S.-Japan relations. He is also an award-winning composer.

Okoshi is now a faculty member at the Berklee College of Music. A versatile trumpeter, he plays fusion, jazz, bop and rock music. He amplifies his trumpet acoustically and electronically. His style of playing and teaching was greatly affected by his experience in Kobe, Japan, where he helped rescue survivors from an earthquake that killed over six thousand people. With Charles Lewis, he has coauthored a book called Practice Method: Trumpet (Berklee Press).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Tiger Okoshi" (www.allaboutjazz.com).

Olcott, James ("Jim") L. (b. Berkeley, California, Feb. 27, 1944).

American trumpeter. Olcott grew up in Berkeley, California. He began playing the trumpet at age ten; his first teacher was Robert Hansen. After graduating from Berkeley High School in 1961, he attended San Francisco State University from 1963 to 1966 where he earned bachelor of music and bachelor of music education degrees. From 1966 to 1968, he studied at the Manhattan School of Music. His teachers include William Adam, Joseph Alessi Sr., Edwin Betts, Mel Broiles, Cecil Collins, Donald Reinberg, and William Vacchiano.

Olcott began his professional teaching career at Ft. Hays State University in Kansas in 1968, where he remained until 1977. He taught at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire from 1977 to 1978, and in the fall of 1978 accepted his final post at Miami University of Ohio in Oxford. He was principal trumpet of the Ballet Orchestra of Cincinnati and the Middletown Symphony Orchestra for twenty-five years, and also performed with the San Francisco Opera and Ballet orchestras, and the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. He was also principal trumpet at several summer festivals including the International Festival at Round-Top (Texas), Peter Britt Music Festival (Oregon), and Tidewater Music Festival (Maryland). From 1979 to 2000, he taught at the Blue Lake Music Camp in Michigan.

Intensely involved with the International Trumpet Guild, Olcott served on the board of directors, and as secretary, vice president, president (1999-2001), and chair of numerous committees. He received the ITG Award of Merit in 2005. Olcott is founder and director of the Cincinnati Herald Trumpet Ensemble, and is a noted jazz band director. For his outstanding contributions to music and education, the mayor of Oxford proclaimed April 7, 2008 as "James L. Olcott Jazz Day." Among his other awards, Olcott received the A.K. Morris Alumni Award in 2011 for service to alumni of Miami University. In addition, he is the founder-owner (1990) of Triplo Press, a publishing company devoted to trumpet ensemble music, which has published many of his own compositions and arrangements.

Olcott and Marcia JoAnn Jackson were married in 1968, but she died of cancer in 2004. He has two children: Evan (b. 1970), and Ryan (b. 1974) who plays piano. Olcott married Vera Hørven, a professional trumpeter and avid photographer from Norway, in 2006. His hobbies include graphic arts and website design.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "James Olcott" (http://arts.muohio.edu); personal interview, Feb. 23, 2011.

Oliver, Joe ("King") (b. Abend, Louisiana, May 11, 1885; d. Savannah, Georgia, Apr. 8, 1938). American cornetist and bandleader. Oliver began playing the trombone and saxhorn (baritone and alto), and later switched to cornet. He studied with Walter Kinchin (1899-1905) and had lessons with George McCullum Sr. (1905), Willie "Bunk" Johnson, and Frank Guarante (1914). Oliver played in brass bands and dance bands such as the Melrose Band, Eagle Band, Olympia Band, Onward Brass Band, Original Superior Band, Allen's Brass Band, Richard M. Jones's Four Hot Hounds, and with Kid Ory. Oliver earned the nickname of "King" when he defeated Freddie Keppard and Manuel Perez in a cornet battle cutting session. His early jazz playing was mostly in bars and cabarets at night while holding a day job as a butler until he began playing professionally in 1909.

In 1918, Oliver moved to Chicago, and by 1920 was leader of his own band, which toured the Chicago area, as well as California in 1921. The band returned to Chicago, where he and several members of the band formed a new group, King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band, which recorded in April of 1923. One of the new members was young Louis Armstrong who played second cornet. In 1924, Oliver and the band toured the Midwest states and Pennsylvania, at which time, Armstrong left the band in order to play in New York with Fletcher Henderson. In 1925, Oliver reorganized the band as the Dixie Syncopators, which performed at New York City's glitzy Savoy Ballroom until the group disbanded in 1927. For the next three years, Oliver performed and recorded with various ad hoc jazz groups. He recorded for the Gennett, Okeh, Columbia, Paramount, and Victor labels.

Oliver toured with various bands throughout the Midwest and upper Southeast states between 1930 and 1936. He suffered from teeth and gum problems due to the many sugar sandwiches he ate as a child, and as the pain increased, his solos became increasingly shorter and less frequent. His last recording was made in 1931. Touring was financially difficult due to the Great Depression, often leaving the band with broken-down buses and no money. Unable to play and keep his band together, Oliver moved to Savannah, Georgia, and retired from music in 1937. He was too proud to accept money from the now famous Louis Armstrong or other musician friends, instead choosing to spend his last years as a poolroom attendant. He died in 1938 at the age of fifty-two.

Oliver's influence on jazz and cornet playing cannot be overstated. His plunger mute solos were copied by Mutt Carey, Papa Celestin, Louis Panico, Mugsy Spanier, and Tommy Ladnier; Bubber Miley mixed the influences of Oliver and Johnny Dunn. Oliver's students included Wooden Joe Nicholas, Johnny Mendell, and the most prestigious of all, Louis Armstrong. Oliver's overall style greatly influenced Eddie Allen, Don Albert, Johnny DeDroit, Punch Miller, Sam Morgan, and Johnny Wiggs. His early recordings with the Creole Band sparked a 1940s revival of the old New Orleans style in the United States (e.g. Lu Watters) and in France (e.g. Pierre Merlin). His best-known recorded solos include Dippermouth Blues, Sugar Foot Stomp, Too Late, Bozo, Snag It, Doctor Jazz, Canal Street Blues, and West End Blues.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Williams, Martin. Jazz Masters of New Orleans (Macmillan Pub. Co.); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Olson, R. Dale (b. Houston, Texas, Jan. 20, 1935). American trumpeter and designer. Olson moved to Galveston, Texas, when he was five, and later attended Ball High School. He turned professional as a teenager and played with various local groups. He also toured with the post swing era big bands of Paul Neighbors, Denny Beckner, and Jack Fina. After graduating from high school in 1952, he attended North Texas State University (now University of North Texas) in Denton where he studied with John J. Haynie. He completed his bachelor of music education degree in 1956, and continued studies for another year, receiving his master of music degree (performance) in 1957—the first trumpet performance degree ever awarded by the school. His other teachers include Everette James (father of Harry James), Renold Schilke, John Clyman, and Vladimir Drucker. During the years 1958-60, Olson toured with several commercial bands, and worked with Renold Schilke in Chicago studying design and researching the works of Victor C. Mahillon, David James Blaikley, and Henri Bouasse.

Olson moved to California in 1961 when he was named Director of Research for F.E. Olds & Son, Inc. in Fullerton. As a professional player, he performed at Disney Studios between 1970 and 1990, performing as many as ten shows each day (totaling over 30,000 performances!). He also worked with acousticians Robert W. Young (former president of the Acoustical Society of America) and William T. Cardwell Jr. in research related to trumpet design. At Olds, Olson was closely associated with trumpet designer and maker Zig Kanstul and the legendary Rafael Méndez, with whom he often played duets. Olson has published numerous articles on trumpet and mouthpiece design and the book, Sensory Evaluation of Brass Musical Instruments. At the age of fifty-one, he attended California State University and received a master's degree in Experimental Psychology (1987).

After leaving the Olds company in 1968, Olson started his own firm, Acoustic Instruments, and continued as consultant for Olds and other makers. Acoustic Instruments designed the Bach line of mutes for Conn-Selmer in 1968, and continues production today, now managed by the Olson family. Olson and wife Diane (Dolfi) Olson have been very successful in real estate investment in southern California and in Galveston, Texas. They are active in the restoration of historic properties and collecting vintage English automobiles. Dale is also an expert on Texas Gulf Coast history and enjoys wine collecting.

Olson has presented lectures on trumpet design and acoustics at the National Trumpet Symposium (Denver) and conferences of the International Trumpet Guild. He holds several U.S. and foreign patents on mute and trumpet design, and is a consultant to several musical instrument companies. He received the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the University of North Texas in 2007.

R. Dale Olson was involved in the design of many Olds trumpets and other brass instruments, including the Custom line of trumpets and the innovative Pinto-model trumpet. He continues to do research on trumpet and mute designs, and is considered a leading expert in the acoustics and physics of brass instruments. He and his wife have two children, daughter D'lisa (Olson) Creager (b. 1959) and son Daryl (b. 1960).

Bibl.: "Presenter Biographies: R. Dale Olson" (www.trumpetguild.com); personal interview, Dec. 30, 2009.

Olstad, Peter ("Pete") Dyke (b. Burbank, California, July 6, 1958). American trumpeter. Olstad spent the first twelve years of his life living in southern California. He began playing the trumpet at age nine, and studied with Henry Miranda (a former student of Rafael Méndez). His family moved to Evergreen, Colorado (near Denver), when he was thirteen, where he took lessons from his band director, Bob Montgomery, a professional jazz trumpeter. After graduating from Evergreen High School in 1976, he attended the Berklee School of Music in Boston for three years, but left school in order to freelance. While at Berklee, he was named "Best Jazz Soloist" by Downbeat magazine three years in a row. He moved back to Colorado, and enrolled at Northern Colorado University where he studied with Dr. William Pfund, and completed his bachelor of music degree in 1981. He also studied with Uan Rasey, William Vacchiano, and Bobby Shew.

Olstad moved back to Los Angeles in 1981 where he freelanced and played with numerous big bands. In 1996, he moved to New York City for ten years before moving to Denver where he now lives. During his impressive career, he has been soloist or lead trumpet with the bands of Maynard Ferguson, Woody Herman, Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Mel Tormé, Buddy Rich (1981), Buddy Morrow, Brian Setzer, and Steve Allen. He also played with Blood Sweat & Tears, the Russ Morgan Orchestra (led by Jack Morgan), and toured the world with Tom Jones for nine years (1999-2008). From 1982 to 1983, he lived and worked as a Dixieland trumpeter in New Orleans on Bourbon Street, the Delta Queen Steamboat, and the Mississippi Queen riverboat. He has recorded albums with Maynard Ferguson, Bill Elliott, Chico O'Farrell, Michael Pagan, Tom Jones, Nelson Rangell, Waymond Tisdale, John Colianni, and Alan Hood.

Olstad and wife Jennifer were married in 1999; he has three grown stepchildren: Maggie, Colleen, and Tyler. His hobbies include collecting old trumpet mouthpieces, and riding road bikes.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Pete Olstad's official website: www.peteolstad.com; personal interview, Feb. 6, 2012.

O'Neill, David (b. Meriden, Connecticut, Feb. 17, 1956). American trumpeter. O'Neill began playing the trumpet at age ten and studied with James Mase, father of Raymond Mase, who interested him in drum and bugle corps, something that had a huge affect on his development as a trumpet player. He joined The Washington Park Fife and Drum Corps, directed by Mase, and also the Connecticut Hurricanes. He continued his studies with Raymond Mase, and during his junior and senior years of high school, took lessons from Roger Murtha at the Hartt School of Music, University of Hartford. His interest in playing focused mostly on individual drum corps competitions for trumpet, eventually earning him ninety-two gold medals and state championships in Connecticut, New York, and Rhode Island. He also studied with Armando Ghitalla.

After graduating from Maloney High School in 1974, O'Neill studied with Murtha for one semester at the University of Hartford, but dropped out of school to join the US Marine Corps (1976-80). After his service duties, he freelanced in New York City and performed at the Broadway Theater in pit orchestras for The Wiz and other productions, as well as at Radio City Music Hall. He also backed celebrities such as Bette Midler, Diana Ross, B.B. King, Dionne Warwick, Tom Jones, and Michael McDonald.

O'Neill began using drugs during the 1980s, and by 1983 was addicted to cocaine. His playing career fell apart, and he sold his trumpets. When his life was at its lowest point in 1987, he became a Christian, turned his life around, stopped using all drugs, and began performing as a gospel musician with Sandy Patti's group that toured the U.S. He also took trumpet lessons from Ed Shiner in Pittsburgh, one of Doc Severinsen's early teachers. While on tour, he met arranger and producer Don Marsh, and the two began collaborating on numerous projects and recordings. O'Neill moved to Nashville to work more closely with Marsh, with whom he recorded two solo gospel CDs, Oracle and Triumphant for the Diadem Music label, which helped launch O'Neill's new career as a soloist.

O'Neill founded MTM Music Company (Mighty Trumpet Ministries), which distributes CDs and books, and arranges gospel shows at churches across the country. He also started his own publishing company, Brass Trax, which sells sheet music and accompaniment tracks, and arrangements of many of his solos. O'Neill moved to Scottsdale, Arizona, in 1990, but relocated to San Diego, California, from 1991 to 1998. He returned to Scottsdale in 1998 where he now resides. He is a regular performer in the Phoenix area, and presents over one hundred gospel shows at churches around the country each year.

While appearing on a television show during the late 1990s, one of the producers suggested to O'Neill that he have his teeth straightened, but after O'Neill had done so, he discovered that his upper range dropped significantly. After months of struggle and frustration, he had his upper front teeth filed a little bit, allowing the air column to vibrate his upper lip more easily. Luckily, much of his upper range returned.

O'Neill invented the *Buzzz*Master device in 2010, a small attachment for a brass mouthpiece that enables the player to buzz the mouthpiece (without the trumpet) with a resistance very similar to a trumpet. It has become a very popular accessory for all brass players (made for trumpet, cornet, horn, trombone, and tuba), and is distributed to music stores through the Vincent Bach Corporation. His newest CD is titled The Hymn Project.

O'Neill has three children from a previous marriage: Ryan (b. 1983), Rebekah (b. 1985), and Rachel (b. 1987). His hobbies include working out, pistol shooting, and riding his Boss Hoss motorcycle.

Bibl.: Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford); "David O'Neill" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/davidoneill.html); David O'Neill's official website: www.davidoneill.com; personal interview, Aug. 3, 2011.

Oosthof, Jan (b. Almelo, Netherlands, Oct. 18, 1952). Dutch trumpeter. Oosthof learned to play the trumpet from his father at age six, and by age fourteen was playing in a school Dixieland band. His career as a musician began as a member of a Dutch radio orchestra called The Skymasters, and in 1978 he became the lead trumpet player in Peter Herbolzheimer's Rhythm Combination & Brass. He has performed and recorded with hundreds of top musicians including Zoot Sims, Bill Holman, Bob Brookmeyer, Lee Konitz, Ack van Rooyen, Derek Watkins, Chuck Findley, Bob Findley, Gary Grant, Andy Haderer, and Bobby Shew. He has also played with the James Last Orchestra, Metropole Orchestra, Dutch Jazz Orchestra (lead since 1996), Cologne Music Big Band, and the WDR Big Band. Alone between 1976 and 1992 he recorded about three hundred CDs. He has been teaching at the Amsterdam Conservatory since 1992.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Ortí Soriano, José Maria (b. Torrent, Valencia, Spain, 1942). Spanish trumpeter and conductor. Ortí studied at the Valencia Conservatory and the Madrid Conservatory, finishing at both institutions with the highest distinction, and was a member of the Youth Orchestra of Spain.

He played with the Madrid Municipal Band, the Band of Music of the Chief of State (now Band of His Majesty the King), and was principal trumpet of the National Orchestra of Spain for many years. Ortí is a leading teacher in Spain, first the professor of trumpet at the Royal Superior Conservatory of Music in Madrid for many years, and then head of the department of brass, percussion, and jazz at the Superior Conservatory of Music in Valencia, of which he is presently vice director. The majority of trumpeters occupying leading positions in Spanish bands and orchestras were among his students.

As a conductor, Ortí first studied with some of the leading conductors with whom he was associated in the National Orchestra of Spain. He then conducted various brass and wind bands throughout the country. At the moment he is a conductor of the Musical Union of Torrent. He is also artistic director of the brass instrument makers Stomvi. He has received countless awards. Among them are the Medalla de Oro de Bellas Artes and the Cruz de Caballero de la Orden al Mérito Civico conferred upon him by the king, and the Golden Medal of the city of Torrent.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ortiz, Luis ("Perico") (b. San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 26, 1949). Puerto Rican trumpeter, composer, arranger, and producer. Ortiz was raised in Santurce, a suburb of San Juan. After starting on trumpet at an early age, he received his nickname, "Perico," from the title of the first song he ever played. He studied at the Escuela Libre de Música Puerto Rico, and also completed a bachelor of music degree at the University of Puerto Rico. A talented musician and trumpeter, Ortiz was a guest soloist at age eighteen with the Puerto Rican Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pablo Casals.

Ortiz moved to New York City in 1970, where he worked with Tito Puente, Mongo Santamaria, the Fania All Stars, Blondie, and David Bowie. He formed his own band in 1971, and has backed numerous celebrity artists including Ann-Margret, Dionne Warwick, Tony Bennett, Trini Lopez, Diahann Carroll, Sammy Davis Jr., Paul Anka, Engelbert Humperdinck, and The Supremes. Later, he worked with Celia Cruz, and paid a tribute to Chocolate Armenteros with Charlie Sepúlveda (2006). He is regarded as a fundamental personage of salsa music. His accomplishments in New York during the golden age of the 1970s also did much to consolidate its expression in his native Puerto Rico.

Perico Ortiz has released about two dozen solo albums for labels such as Turnstyle, New Generation, Perico, DPI, Sauve International, and RMM. His many awards include the Diplo Award in Puerto Rico for "Best Trumpeter of the Year" (1971), Latin New York Magazine Trophies for "Best Trumpeter of the Year," "Arranger of the Year," "Best Orchestra of the Year," and "Musician of the Year." In 1981, he was awarded the ACE Award for "Best Interpreter of Salsa Music," and the ACE Award for "Best New Orchestra." In 2002, he won the TU Musica Award for "Best Christmas Production."

Ortiz founded Dialen Promotions, Inc. in 1988, a company that provides advertising, sound production, arranging, television jingles services, etc. to clients such as Smirnoff, McDonald's, Kodak, Polariod, and HBO Television. He also formed Luis "Perico" Ortiz Productions, Ltd. in 1993. Customers include Walt Disney and Quincy Jones. He is musical director for Iglesia del Nazareno de Levittown Ministries, and since 2007 is an artist-in-residence at the Music Conservatory of Puerto Rico.

Luis has a son named Lenny, and two daughters—Dianette and Jennifer.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Luis "Perico" Ortiz's official website: http://home.coqui.net/perico/page1.htm.

Orvid, Georgy [Georgi] Antonovitch (b. Voznesensk, Ukraine, Russia, Nov. 25, 1904; d. Moscow, Russia, June 17, 1980). Ukrainian trumpeter. Orvid began playing the trumpet at age ten under the guidance of his father, Anton Orvid, a military band conductor. From age fourteen to seventeen, Georgy was a cavalry trumpeter during the Civil War of Russia. He earned his diploma in music in Kiev in 1927, studying with Pyotr Vasilyevich Ryazantzyev (1881-1966). He then attended the Moscow Conservatory where he studied with Mikhail Tabakov (1877-1956), receiving his diploma in 1930 and a graduate degree in 1933, and authoring a trumpet method—the first person to do so in the USSR. In 1928 while an undergraduate student at the Moscow Conservatory, Orvid premiered the Trumpet Concerto by Vyacheslav Schelokov [Shchiolokov], the first trumpet concerto written in the USSR.

Orvid's orchestral career began as a member of the Kiev Opera-Ballet Theater Orchestra (1925-27). He was a member of the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra (1927-30), Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra (1930-35, as principal trumpet), All-Union Radio Great Symphony Orchestra (1933-35), and the newly established State Symphony Orchestra of the USSR (1936-40). In 1941, Orvid shared first prize with Timofei Dokshitser in the All-Union Wind Players' Competition.

Orvid taught at the Moscow Conservatory (1931-72), becoming a full professor in 1941. He was made deputy chair of the military-conducting department of the Moscow Conservatory (1939-46), and was chair of music institutions administration of the Arts Council of the USSR (1946-48). His administrative career continued (by 1941 he had given up all concertizing), serving as deputy director of the Moscow Conservatory (1948-56), deputy Minister of Culture of the Soviet Union (1956), and director of the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra (1959-61). Orvid returned to trumpet performing in 1961, after a twenty-year hiatus from concert life.

He was the first to introduce high-pitched trumpets, including the piccolo B-flat/A, to Soviet students. Orvid made many solo recordings between 1963 and 1968. Trumpeter Edna White reissued Orvid's version of Enesco's Legend (on cassette, Trumpet Productions). One of his main contributions was introducing contemporary works of Absil, Hindemith, Jolivet, Martinů, Tomasi, and others to Russian students and audiences. A result was that many Russian composers began to write trumpet sonatas, which they dedicated to him. Among Orvid's many students were Valentin Yudin, Vladimir Dokshitser (Timofei's brother), Andrei Ikov, Evgeni Matyushin [Evgeny Matzhshin], Orest and Mikhail Usach, Georgs Snikers, Leonid Chumov, and Vladimir Zykov. Orvid was given the Honored Worker of the Artist in USSR award in 1966, and received the People's Artist of the RSFSR in 1972. He published his own edition of the Arban method, as well as Certain Objective Laws of Sound Production and the Trumpeter's Art (1976).

Bibl.: Akhmadullin, Iskander. The Russian Trumpet Sonata: A Study of Selected Sonatas for Trumpet and Piano with an Historical Overview of the Russian Trumpet School...(unpublished doctoral diss., Univ. of North Texas, 2003); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Chumov, Leonid. "The Life and Times of Russian Trumpeter Georgi A. Orvid" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2001); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Osterloh, Klaus Hannes (b. Bremen, Germany, Jan. 29, 1952). German trumpeter and composer. While a boy, Klaus moved with his family to the Ruhr area of Germany. He began playing the trumpet at age nine, and studied at the music conservatory in Duisburg where he learned baroque and jazz music. At age fifteen, he had his first jazz band, and also played Bach's Christmas Oratorio with Friedemann Immer, who was only four years older and with whom he has been associated ever since. He later obtained a trumpet diploma from Walter Holy at the Duisburg Musikhochschule. Since then, he has performed jazz with Beat Machine, Axel Jungbluth, Klaus Esser, and Al Craig, as well as classical music with the Duisburg Symphony Orchestra and the Essen Philharmonic.

Osterloh moved to Stuttgart in 1978 to become a member of Erwin Lehn's Südfunk Dance Orchestra (now the SWR Big Band); he also performed jazz with the Gernd Rabe Quintet, Jerry van Rooyen, Bill Dobbins, and the Darktown Jazz Band, and Baroque music with the Haarlem Trumpet Consort, the Heidelberg Chamber Orchestra, and the Collegium Aureum. In 1983, he became a member of the WDR Big Band in Cologne, a group that backed many jazz stars. In 1988, he became a founding member of the Friedemann Immer Baroque Trumpet Consort, and is a former member of the German Brass. He has appeared on numerous jazz and Baroque recordings.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Osterwald, [Rolf Erich Osterwalder] ("Hazy") (b. Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 18, 1922; d. Lucerne, Feb. 2, 2010). Swiss trumpeter. Osterwald began playing piano at age eight, but switched to trumpet at age seventeen before attending the Bern Conservatory. In 1941, he joined Fred Böhler's band, and in 1942 played with Teddy Stauffer's band. He started using the nickname "Hazy" in 1942, the same nickname used by his father, Adolf, a professional football player and accountant.

In 1944, Osterwald played for a short time with the Teddies under Eddie Brunner. He then formed the Hazy Osterwald Sextet in 1944, enlarged it to a big band in 1946, and from this group created his famous Sextet in 1949. He took part in the historic Paris Jazz Festival (1949) when he was a bebop pioneer in Switzerland. His Sextet was at first strongly oriented towards jazz, but with its first film appearance in 1954 swung towards pop music. He had his own television show in Germany (1959-61). His group was the top dance band in Switzerland during the 1960s through 1980s. Their biggest hit single was Kriminaltango, which sold over one million records in 1959. The success of the recording led to the Sextet appearing in fifteen German movies, and a tour of all of Europe, South America, United States, and Israel. Osterwald's solo albums include Latin Dance to the Trumpet of Hazy Osterwald and Jet Set (1962-63). He was host of a popular German television show called Love Show, and his Sextet was the official band for the 1972 Olympics in Munich, as well as the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck.

Osterwald, a popular trumpeter, singer, and bandleader, founded a string of eight nightclubs under the name Hazyland during the 1960s. However, all of them were sold during the 1970s due to the rise in popularity of disco music. Besides his nightclubs, his business imperium at its height also included two music publishing houses and a record company, involving three hundred employees. Late in his career, he gradually gave up the trumpet in favor of playing jazz vibraphone (in the style of Lionel Hampton). In May 1979, thirty years to the day since its founding, the Hazy Osterwald Sextet gave its last concert in Montreux. Between June and September 1982, he led Le Grand Orchestre du Sporting in Monte Carlo, stopping at the death of Princess Grace. In 1984, he surprised everyone with a new band, Hazy Osterwald and the Entertainers, with which he continued touring until 2005. In 2005, he donated much of his music library and memorabilia to the International Jazz Archive in Eisenach. In 2009, he was given the Swiss Jazz Lifetime Achievement Award.

Osterwald was married three times: Katherine Margo Maschetzke (1951-65), Emma Damia (1966-79), Eleonora Mathilde Schmid (since 1985). He published his autobiography, Kriminaltango, in 1999.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Hazy Osterwald" (www.downtownrecords.ch/html/english/musiker/html); http://www.xecutives.net/interviews/interviews-in-english/261); "Hazy Osterwald" (http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hazy_Osterwald).

Østrem, Åge (b. Stord, Norway, Nov. 27, 1960). Norwegian trumpeter. Østrem began playing trumpet at age eleven, and studied with Leif Slaatten until age nineteen when he took lessons from Karstem Dahlsreud. From 1981 to 1985, he attended the University of Stavanger, studying with Alf Aareskjold. He also commuted to Sweden for lessons with Bo Nilsson from 1981 to 1987. Østrem came to America to study with David Hickman at Arizona State University from 1989 to 1993, earning a master of music degree and finishing coursework towards a doctorate in music. He returned to his native Norway in 1993 to accept his current position as trumpet professor and head of brass at the University of Stavanger. Concurrently, he teaches at the Vågem Videregående School. Additionally, he studied with Bengt Eklund and Håkan Hardenberger.

Østrem has released a CD titled Wedding Music (private label), and has performed with the Stavanger Symphony Orchestra, Ensemble 21, Phoenix Pops Orchestra, Cappella Svithuniensis, and the Collegium Musicius Brass Ensemble. He is the chair of the Bjergsted Trompeter Laug (Bjergsted Trumpeter's Lodge).

Østrem has two daughters, Ingrid (b. 1996) and Nora (b. 2001). His hobbies include fishing and snow skiing.

Bibl.: personal interview, July 5, 2011.

Õttl, Andreas (b. St. Anton am Arlberg, Austria, Jan. 22, 1974). Austrian trumpeter. Õttl began his music and trumpet studies with his father, Serafin Õttl, and played flugelhorn in a local brass band. He joined a military band in Bregenz from 1993 to 1999, and simultaneously studied at the Landeskonservatorium für Vorarlberg in Feldkirch with Lothar Hilbrand, finishing with a degree in instrumental and singing pedagogy with distinction. He then studied with Hans Gansch at the Salzburg Mozarteum, receiving a magister artium, also with distinction, in October of 2002. From January to August 2002, he played second trumpet in the Mozarteum Orchestra.

Since September 2002, Õttl has been principal trumpet of the Bavarian State Opera Orchestra in Munich and a member of the brass groups, OperaBrass (of the Bavarian State Opera) and Art of Brass. He has performed with the Salzburg Festival Orchestra, Orchestre de Paris, and Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio. As a soloist, he performs such diverse works as Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 and the Arutunian Concerto. Since September 2005, he has been a teaching assistant to Johann Gansch at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, as well as filling a teaching position of his own concerning the training of orchestral passages.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Overton, William J. (b. 1914; d. 1976). British trumpeter. Overton's father was a founding member of the Salvation Army Band at Margate in 1896, and taught William to play the cornet. William successfully competed for one of only four available scholarships to the Royal College of Music, and graduated three years later.

Overton was a member of the BBC Empire Orchestra, London Symphony Orchestra (1939-44), Royal Air Force Central Band (1944-45), and the BBC Symphony Orchestra (1945-71), playing principal most of the time. He was also a bandmaster of the Lewisham Salvation Army Band during the 1940s and '50s. He recorded three solos on 78-rpm discs (numbers MF304, MF305, MF358) for the Regal Zonophone label, and also performed the British premiere of the Concertino by André Jolivet. Overton was one of the band instructors for the Margate Citadel Corps, and taught at the Royal Academy of Music in London (appointed full professor in the early 1960s). Among his students was John Wilbraham.

Bibl.: "William Overton" (www.themouthpiece.com/vb/archive/index.php/t-4863.html); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Photo: William Overton (far left) with Wesley Woodage and Ernest Hall.

Owen, Don (b. Gastonia, North Carolina, Aug. 2, 1937). American trumpeter. Owen grew up in Gastonia, North Carolina. He began playing the trumpet at age ten; his first teachers were Howard Gaffney, Charles Gallagher, and Fred Mende. He graduated from Gastonia High School in 1955 before attending Stetson University where he received a bachelor of music degree (1959), studying with Don Yaxley. He went to graduate school at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), studying with John Haynie and receiving a master's degree (1960). Additionally, he studied music theory/composition with Samuel Adler at NTSU (1961-63).

Owen's distinguished teaching career began when he served as a graduate assistant in trumpet at NTSU (1959-60). He also taught all brass instruments at Arkansas Tech University (1960-63), Killeen High School in Texas (1963-64), and trumpet at the University of South Florida (1964-2002). Among his many students are Lyman Brode, Thomas Hooten, Sam Trimble, Bryan Coyle, Cliff Newton, Bob Thompson, Ken Brown, David Burnett, Rich Willey, Mike Payton, and Barry Hopper.

As a performer, Owen was principal trumpet of The Florida Orchestra from 1964 to 1987, and second trumpet from 1987 to 2009. He also played in the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra from 1961 to 1963.

Owen is now fully retired from both teaching and performing, as is his wife, Justine, who was a member of The Florida Orchestra horn section from 1974 to 2008, serving as principal for fifteen years. He has two children from a former marriage: Bill (b. 1962) and Jana (b. 1964); and two stepchildren: Jessica (b. 1972) and Melissa (b. 1976).

Bibl.: personal interview, Jan. 15, 2011.

Owens, James ("Jimmy") Robert Jr. (b. New York, New York, Dec. 9, 1943). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Owens's interest in jazz was mostly a result of listening to recordings of Miles Davis and Clifford Brown. His desire to play jazz was realized at age fifteen when he sat in with Davis during a jam session. Owens was selected to play in Marshall Brown's Newport Youth Band (1959-60), and later graduated from New York's High School of Music and Art.

Owens's career began in the early 1960s while he was freelancing in New York. His talent was evident from the start, and the advice he received from Donald Byrd about the music business soon met with success. Owens played with Slide Hampton (1962-63), Lionel Hampton (1963-64), Maynard Ferguson, Gerry Mulligan, Hank Crawford, Charles Mingus (1964-65), Thad Jones & Mel Lewis, Herbie Mann (1965-66), Max Roach, Clark Terry, Duke Ellington (1968), Dizzy Gillespie (European tour, 1968), Count Basie, Billy Taylor, New York Jazz Sextet, Billy Cobham (1973), and others. He also led his own bop combos, and was a member of Ars Nova during the late 1960s.

In addition to performing jazz in concert, Owens did a great deal of studio work in New York City. Among the hundreds of musicians he worked with are Gary Bartz, Joe Henderson, Booker Ervin, Erroll Parker, Kenny Burrell, Jaki Byard, Billy Taylor, the Mingus Dynasty, Billy Cobham, Mike Longo, Gerald Wilson, Norman Simmons, the Jazz-mobile All-Stars, and Fabian Zone. As leader, Owens recorded albums that include You Had Better Listen (Atlantic), Young Men on the Move (Horizon), Headin' Home (Horizon), and Peaceful Walking. From 1969 to 1972, Owens played in Billy Taylor's band for television's The David Frost Show. When Yale University established a fellowship program in honor of Duke Ellington, Owens was selected to perform a tribute to the first trumpet inductees (Dizzy Gillespie, Cootie Williams, Clark Terry, Sweets Edison) on October 12, 1972.

Since the 1970s, Owens has led a group called Jimmy Owens Plus, which has toured extensively and appeared at jazz festivals throughout the world, often in Germany. Much of his time since 1980 has been devoted to education and arts administration. He has served on the board of directors of the Jazz Foundation of America, as a panelist for the National Endowment for the Arts (1972-76) and the New York State Council on the Arts, and as an advisor and volunteer for the American Federation of Musicians, Local 802. In 1966, he was a founding member and musical director of Collective Black Artists, Inc., a nonprofit organization. In 1990 he was also a founding member of the Jazz Musician's Emergency Fund, a program of the Jazz Foundation of America. Since 1990, Owens has been a part-time faculty member at the New School Jazz and Contemporary Music Program.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Jimmy Owens's official website (http://jimmyowensjazz.com); "Jimmy Owens" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Oxley, Dan (b. Tokyo, Japan, Jan. 27, 1957). American trumpeter. Oxley is the son of missionary parents. He began playing violin in Tokyo, and then the trumpet at age eight. He attended the Christian Academy of Japan in Tokyo, but during his senior year moved to Wheaton, Illinois, where he graduated from Wheaton Central High School. He then became a music major at Grace College in Winona Lake, Indiana, where he studied trumpet with Jerry Franks. After his sophomore year in 1978, he left school to tour with Truth, a contemporary Christian music group, and during this time he and vocalist Donna Carter were married in 1979. In 1980, they decided to settle in Los Angeles where Oxley resumed his college studies at Azusa Pacific University. He studied off campus with trumpeter Bob Rithaler, and graduated in 1982 with a bachelor of music degree.

Between 1980 and 1990, Oxley freelanced in southern California. He took trumpet lessons from Bob Findley, and studied jazz with vibes player Charlie Shoemake. He also developed an interest in becoming a recording engineer, so in 1990, Oxley and his wife moved to Nashville, Tennessee, where he built a home recording studio and worked as a studio player and producer. He has recorded several solo albums for his own label, as well as for the Word and Provident Music Group labels. Among his CDs are The Hymns Project, A New Day, The Dan Oxley Praise Band, Dan Oxley, Praise Band Classics, Echoes of the River, A Quiet Place, and The Trumpet of Christmas. He is also a specialist on the EVI (an electronic valve wind controlled midi instrument), and has toured many countries of the world.

Oxley and his wife have three sons: Matthew (b. 1985), Jordan (b. 1991), and Nathan (b. 1993). He is an avid runner (including marathons) and bicyclist.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Dan Oxley's official website: www.danoxley.com; personal interview, Dec. 20, 2011.

P

Pace, Matthew (b. presumably in Dublin, Ireland, 1770; d. London, England, 1823). Irish manufacturer. Pace's birth records were destroyed in a fire at the Irish Public Record Office in 1922, probably due to an uprising and battle in the city. He supposedly was working with Esau Clarke on 23 Henry Street in Dublin in 1781; whether or not this may be, he took over Clarke's premises in 1798, and stayed there until 1813. He evidently purchased Joseph Haliday's patent on a five-key bugle of 1810 for the sum of £50. From 1813, he was in No. 26 Henry Street. He moved the business to London in 1815, retiring in 1819. From 1819 to 1822, the business was known as Charles and Frederick Pace, 2 Lower Crown Street, Westminster, renamed by his two sons when they took over the business. Matthew Pace was buried in St. Margaret's churchyard, Westminster.

Pace's sons split up in 1828, with Frederick moving to the neighboring King Street. In 1833 Charles (b. Dublin, Ireland, 1803; d. Camberwell, London, Mar. 14, 1867) also relocated at 49 King Street. With his wife Eliza he had nine children, of whom only two sons survived to adulthood. Furthermore, in 1840 he occupied a house and garden in the village of Hatchan, Deptford, to where he had moved because of his wife's ill health. When she died the following year, Charles immediately moved back to the premises in King Street, where he lived until 1854. In 1851 Charles Pace and Sons exhibited at the Great Exhibition of 1851 as inventors and manufacturers of Cornopeans, trumpets and valve horns. In 1854 he may well have joined his son Charles Matthew (b. 1826; d. Chislehurst, Kent, July 31, 1872), who since at least 1847 had been a partner in the business, in Pimlico. After 1854 nothing more is known of Charles until his death of asthma in 1867. Charles Matthew Pace lived at five different addresses between 1853 and 1858. In the 1861 census he and his family were living in Clapham, London, and in the census of 1871 his profession was given as piano tuner. In 1872 he died of an enlarged liver.

Louise Bacon has discovered that there were at least two Paces named Frederick. Frederick I (1806-35), Matthew's son, had moved in 1828 from Crown Street into 15 King Street. Between 1828 and 1831 there is no record of him there, but a Frederick Pace was working during precisely this period as an instrument maker at 26 Bath Street in Bristol, Ireland. In 1831 he apparently returned to London and after several moves relocated at the former King Street address. He died there in 1835 and was buried with his father on October 4. His son Frederick II was only seven then.

After Frederick I's death, there was an interregnum. His widow Ursula continued to carry on the company. She married a William Alexander in 1839, but he died between 1849 and 1851. In 1849 the firm was moved to 6 King Street. The 1851 census showed that Ursula was a widow again, and that her son Frederick II (b. 1828, d. 1901 or later), whose profession was listed as "musical instrument maker", and his wife were living with her. Frederick II probably apprenticed with his uncle Charles and/or his cousin Charles Matthew.

Frederick II seems to have been a wanderer. Between 1854 and 1861, two of his children were born in Manchester and Sheffield. In 1861 he appeared as a musical instrument maker with his own shop at 6 Hanway Place, London; but three years later we find him at 4 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London. In 1868 he, a "journeyman musical instrument maker," was bankrupt in Portsmouth. In the 1881 census, he was living in Werburgh, Derby, and his wife was running a boarding house in Birmingham. In 1895 he was in Sheffield again, and in 1901 he was staying in London with his wife, Sophia Ann, and his profession was listed as "musician".

It was Frederick II's descendents who continued the instrument-making tradition. From about 1883 Frederick II and Charles Matthew were working in Sheffield, and the other son George Henry—Matthew's great-grandson—was there from 1887 to c1913.

Bibl.: Bacon, Louise. "The Pace Family of Musical Instrument Makers, 1788-1901" (The Galpin Society Journal, May 2004); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published).

Packeiser, Hans-Jörg (b. Hamburg, Germany, Mar. 31, 1956). German trumpeter. After starting to play trumpet at age seventeen studying with Thomas Schroedter, Packeiser studied in Hamburg with Alfons Krause, earning a bachelor of music education degree in 1983.

He also learned to play the (valveless) Baroque trumpet studying with Edward H. Tarr, and soon specialized in performances of Baroque music. He has been an active soloist with organ (modern and Baroque trumpets) at several large churches in Hamburg for over thirty-five years.

Packeiser has been a member of the Friedemann Immer Trumpet Consort, La Petite Bande, Gustav Leonhardt Consort, Collegium aureum, La Chapelle Royale, Concentus Musicus Wien, and the Gottfried Reiche Consort Hamburg, performing in concerts and in radio and CD productions. He is also principal trumpet of the German Bach Orchestra, and since 1985 has taught at the Hochschule for Music and Theatre in Hamburg. Packeiser's CDs include Festive Music for Trumpet and Organ in the Cathedral of Ratzeburg, Festive Baroque Music for Trumpet and Organ from the Church of St. Paul Heidenheim, Music of His Majesty's Sackbuts and Cornetts, and Dialogue.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Hans-Jörg Packeiser" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hans-Jörg_Packeiser).

Paella, Natalo A[ngelo] (b. Niagara Falls, New York, Dec. 25, 1927; d. Burlington, Vermont, Jan. 25, 2001). American trumpeter. Paella began playing trumpet at age thirteen, and later studied at the Eastman School of Music and the US Navy School of Music. He completed his bachelor of music degree at Louisiana State University in 1956, and a master of music degree at the New England Conservatory in Boston in 1958.

As a freelance musician in Boston, Paella played with the Boston Pops and Esplanade Orchestra for fifteen years (1957-72) under Maestro Arthur Fiedler. He also performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on occasion between 1957 and 1977. For twenty-six years, he was principal trumpet of the Boston Colonial Theater where he performed in Broadway shows such as A Chorus Line, Porgy and Bess, Man of La Mancha, and Annie, and backed stars such as Sammy Davis Jr., Lena Horne, and Rosemary Clooney. Other groups with which he performed were the Piano Festival Orchestra, the New York Chamber Orchestra, the New England Brass Quintet, and the Boston Brass Ensemble. He founded the Paella Brass quintet in 1965, and taught trumpet, brass pedagogy, brass ensemble, and jazz band at the University of Massachusetts at Lowell (1965-94), where in 1994 he was given the title of emeritus professor; he also taught occasionally at the University of New Hampshire, Boston Conservatory of Music, Longy School of Music, the Wentworth Institute, and the Brookline Music School. In 1984, he recorded the trumpet and piano version of Edna White's Suite for Trumpet.

Paello died of leukemia at age seventy-three. He was survived by his wife Jeanne [McCoy] Paella (a professional horn player) and son, Vincent.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Natalo A. Paella 1927 – 2001" (ITG News: www.trumpetguild.org/news/news01/paella.htm); "Natalo Paella Guest" (http://www.trumpetguild.org/news/news01/paella.htm).

Page, Oran Thaddeus ("Hot Lips") (b. Dallas, Texas, Jan. 27, 1908; d. New York, New York, Nov. 5, 1954). American trumpeter. Page's mother was a music teacher; he began playing saxophone and clarinet, and switched to trumpet at the age of twelve. In 1920, he joined a boys' band led by Lux Alexander. During his teenage years, he backed blues singers including Ma Rainey, Bessie Smith, and Ida Cox. During the 1920s, he played with Troy Floyd's band in San Antonio and toured throughout Texas with Sugar Lou and Eddie's Hotel Tyler Band.

Page moved to Kansas City in 1928 where he joined Walter Page's (no relation) Blue Devils; during his three years there, he developed his exhilarating style. From 1931 to 1935, he performed and recorded with Bennie Moten's band, but when Moten died in 1935, Page led a quintet for a short while (which included Hershal Evans on saxophone and Pete Johnson on piano) before joining Count Basie's new orchestra as a special guest at the Reno Club (1936), as well as with Andy Kirk. In 1937, Page signed Joe Glaser (Louis Armstrong's manager) as his agent and formed his own band, the Hot Lips Page Orchestra, at the Onyx Club (spring 1937) and a big band (August 1937 to late 1939). From 1940 to 1941, he jammed with various small groups and played for a while with the bands of Bud Freeman and Joe Marsala, and at the Monroe's Uptown House (May 1941). Page joined Artie Shaw's band in August 1941, and was the featured soloist and singer, but the following year Shaw was inducted into military service during World War II. Page took over the band, but it didn't survive without Shaw's fame. Page also played with Don Redman (1945) and Ethel Waters (1946). During the rest of his career he led combos.

Page's most significant success occurred in 1949 when he recorded a hit version of Baby It's Cold Outside with Pearl Bailey. He participated in the Paris Jazz Festival with Sidney Bechet and Charlie Parker (1949), toured Europe a few times, and recorded under his own name from 1951 to 1952. In 1953, he appeared at the Café Society in New York City. He was a good blues singer and an exciting trumpet soloist who doubled on the mellophone. Page died of a heart attack in 1954 at the age of only forty-six.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Pagnard, Charles ("Charlie") M. (b. Crestline, Ohio, Apr. 27, 1948). American trumpeter. Pagnard started playing the trumpet at age eleven; his first teacher was Ettore Chiudioni, and he later had a few lessons with Don Jacoby. After graduating from Crestline High School in 1966, he attended Bowling Green State University, studying with Edwin Betts (1966-70) and earning a bachelor of music education degree.

Pagnard toured with various rock bands that opened for star groups such as Three Dog Night, the Carpenters, and Gladys Knight and the Pips (1969-72). He was music director for the Bellefontaine School District in Bellefontaine, Ohio (1973-76). He studied with Sidney Mear and Allan Dean at the Eastman School of Music (1975-77) where he received a master of music degree. He completed nearly all DMA requirements at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music (1984-90), and has studied with Vincent Cichowicz in Chicago.

Pagnard began teaching at Cedarville University in 1977, and in addition to teaching trumpet, conducts the university symphony orchestra and brass choir. He has also taught at Wittenberg University (1977-79), University of Dayton (1980-85), and the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music (1985-86). Pagnard has been principal trumpet of the Dayton Philharmonic since 1981 and is a member of the Carillon Brass Quintet. He often plays with the summer pops series of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and is an active recitalist and freelance performer. He is also the Minister of Music and Worship at Washington Heights Baptist Church in Kettering, Ohio.

Pagnard and his wife Elaine Pagnard, manager and co-owner of two pizza franchises, have two children: Charles G. (b. 1969) and Christian (b. 1974). His hobbies include golf and scuba diving.

Bibl.: "Charles Pagnard" (http://daytonphilharmonic.com/orchestraprincipalplayers); personal interview, Aug. 29, 2011.

Paine, Thomas D[udley] (b. Foster, Rhode Island, Oct. 9, 1812; d. Woonsocket, Rhode Island, June 1[?], 1895). American designer and manufacturer. Paine was the fifth of ten children born to John and Polly Paine. John was a schoolteacher and justice of the peace who became the owner of a fair amount of real estate. John was also elected as a representative to the Smithfield General Assembly. At age ten, Thomas was sent to Woonsocket, Rhode Island, to live with his aunt and work as a spinner at a cotton mill. He worked at the mill for ten years, eventually becoming the overseer of the spinning room. He took up the violin during his teen years, and often performed in a local dance orchestra. In 1832, Thomas quit his job at the mill and became an apprentice watch and clock maker and repairer. In 1834, he married Perly C. Thayer, the first of his three wives. In 1835, he finished his apprenticeship and set up his own watchmaking and repairing business in Woonstocket Falls.

With the formation in 1838 of the American Brass Band in nearby Providence, brass music became popular in New England. Paine began working as a brass instrument maker around 1840, and moved to Boston in that year to work for the E.G. Wright Company, the finest brass instrument maker in the city. He learned to make keyed trumpets and keyed bugles, and returned to Woonsocket in 1842 where he opened his own brass instrument shop, Thomas D. Paine & Company, with his father and brother, Emery. Soon, he was supplying the American Brass Band with quality instruments. He also played tuba with them. During this period he also participated in dance formations playing violin and posthorn.

Paine made two important inventions. The first was a string linkage for rotary valves. This linkage was later used by virtually all American instrument makers, and is still in use today on some instruments. His second invention (patent no. 5919 of November 1848) was a type of rotary valve that required relatively little movement to operate: only an eighth of a turn instead of a quarter turn. A cornet with this type of valves (plus a keyed trumpet) was entered in the 22nd Exhibition of American Manufacturers (1852) in Philadelphia and received great acclaim. However, Paine made no further improvements on his instruments, and by 1855 was being surpassed by other makers.

As business declined, Paine abandoned his brass shop in 1857 and returned to watch and clock making and repair. His father sold him the building where his shop had been, and he became well known for his watch work. He repaired violins as a hobby, and eventually began making violins. In 1861, his wife Perly died. Two years later, he married Mary Arnold, a woman of some wealth.

By 1885, at age seventy-three, Paine was listed in local directories as a violinmaker and watch repairer. Altogether, he made 134 violins. Surviving violins are considered to have excellent craftsmanship and tone. In the late 1880s, Paine married Ida Elenor Darling Paine. Together, they had one daughter, Grace Darling Paine, born in 1890. Ida died in the State Hospital for the Insane in Cranston, Rhode Island, in 1912, some seventeen years after Thomas died. Today, Thomas D. Paine is mostly known for his rotary valve design and string linkage, all of which took place between 1847 and 1857. Seven of his instruments and one of his brother Emery survive today. On their instruments, the first valve slide is for half a step, and the second for a whole step. He also composed many pieces for dance orchestra, and published his The People's Quadrille.

Bibl.: Eliason, Robert E. Early American Brass Makers (The Brass Press).

Pandolfi, James (b. c1963). American trumpeter. Pandolfi began playing the trumpet at an early age under the guidance of his father. He later attended The Juilliard School in New York City, studying with Mel Broiles and William Vacchiano. He was associate principal trumpet of the Mexico City Philharmonic, principal of the Rhode Island Philharmonic, and principal of the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra before joining the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in New York as third trumpet under Maestro James Levine. He performed with the orchestra for fifteen years until a degenerative eye disease forced him to retire from fulltime orchestra playing.

Pandolfi has taught in The Juilliard School's Pre-College Division and at the New England Conservatory. He continues to give master classes at leading universities and conservatories, and is an active soloist.

Bibl.: "James Pandolfi" (http://riwe.org/musicians.htm).

Panico, Louis Sr. (b. Naples, Italy, June 21, 1898; d. Cook County, Illinois, July 29, 1986). Italian-American cornetist and trumpeter. Panico is best known as the originator of the "laughing cornet or trumpet," as a consequence of his famous recording of Wabash Blues with the Isham Jones Orchestra in 1921. He made the horn laugh through the use of a derby hat covering and uncovering the bell, and was considered a master of the dozen or more mutes he carried with him.

As a boy, Panico studied with Raffaele Toscano of the San Carlo Opera Company in Italy. He came to the U.S. when he was twelve, and began his career playing as "The Boy Wonder" (wearing short pants) in the American Chautauqua circuit. He then performed in various theater orchestras, and became interested in dance music as a result of listening to the recordings of King Oliver in whose band he later played in Chicago, where he influenced young Louis Armstrong, also a member of the band. Panico played with Isham Jones from 1921 to 1924, after which he formed his own small band in Chicago, which was active from 1924 through the 1930s. He recorded for the Brunswick and Decca labels and played at Guyon's Paradise Ballroom (1926, a radio broadcast each week on WGES called Panico's Panic) and worked at the WBBM studios (Chicago). Panico wrote The Novelty Cornetist (1923), and with Wirskirchen coauthored Stage Band Trumpet Manual (Berklee).

Not much is known of Panico's life after 1940. He influenced Wild Bill Davison's cornet playing, but his own career seems to have quickly declined. He died in Melrose Park, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, at the age of approximately eighty-three.

Bibl.: Franchine, Philip. "Louis Panico Sr., originator of the 'laughing trumpet.'" (Chicago Sun-Times, July 31, 1986); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Isham Jones and his artists: John Kuhn, sousaphone, Carrol Martin, trombone, Louis Panico, trumpet, Joseph Frank, drums, Arthur Vanaslk, soprano saxophone, Leo Murphy, violin and saxophone, Charles McNeal, banjo and saxophone, Al Eldridge, piano and saxophone with Isham Jones on saxophone

Paniotov, Kharlampy Ilyich (b. Rostov-on-Don, Russia, Jan. 1, 1923). Russian trumpeter. Paniotov studied trumpet with the famous Michail Tabakov at the Gnesin Institute in Moscow where he graduated in 1948, after which he became a member of the Moscow Regional Philharmonic Orchestra until 1951. From 1951 to 1954, he was a member of the Moscow All-Union Cinematography Committee Orchestra, and from 1954 to 1958 played in the Stanislavsky & Nemirovich-Danchenko Theatre Orchestra in Moscow. His most important position was as principal trumpet of the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra from 1956 to 1974. Since 1974, he has been principal of the Moiseyev Folk Dance Ensemble.

According to Russian trumpeter Anatoly Selianin, Paniotov had all of his teeth removed many years ago, and makes his own dentures to adapt and suit the requirements of various works of music to be performed (!).

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

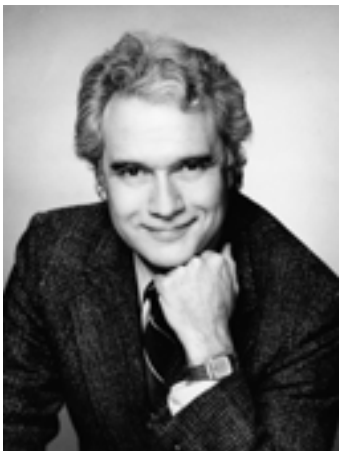
Parcells, Ramón (b. Chicago, Illinois, Oct. 10, 1944). American trumpeter. Parcells grew up in Maryland, near Washington, D.C. His father was a viola player who spent much of his music career as principal violist of the US Air Force Orchestra and as a violist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, as well as being a master piano technician. His mother was a violist—also with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra—pianist, and respected piano teacher. Parcells started playing piano at age five, then the violin, and at age nine settled on the trumpet. His first trumpet teacher was William Vincent. While attending High Point Senior High School, he studied with George Foss of the National Symphony Orchestra, and apprenticed as a piano technician with his father. After graduation in 1962, Parcells enrolled at the New England Conservatory in Boston in the fall, studying with Roger Voisin, and graduating in 1965. While in college, he worked as a piano technician, freelanced, and played first trumpet in many television productions for PBS. During his senior year, he also won the New England Conservatory solo competition that led to a solo appearance with the Boston Pops orchestra. He occasionally performed as a substitute in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops.



Parcells became the principal trumpet of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra in Canada in 1965, but was drafted into the US military a year later. He served as a member of the Strategic Air Command Band near Omaha, and was a featured soloist and head of the brass ensemble. During this time, he traveled to Chicago to study with Vincent Cichowicz. After discharge in 1970, he returned to his former position with the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, continued his studies with Vincent Cichowicz, and from 1970 to 1982 taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Manitoba. During the summers of 1974 through 1979, Parcells taught trumpet and conducted brass and percussion choir concerts as a staff member of the National Youth Orchestra of Canada. During the summers of 1981, 1982, 1992, 1993, and 1994, he was principal trumpet of the Santa Fe Opera orchestra.

Parcells was appointed principal of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in 1982, replacing Donald Green who went to the Los Angeles Philharmonic, and was often featured as soloist with the orchestra. He was an adjunct faculty member at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor from 1982 to 2002, and at Wayne State University from 2001 to 2002. Among his many former students are Guy Few, Cathy Leach, John Marchiando, and composer Frank Ticheli. During his years with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, he taught trumpet and conducted brass and percussion choir concerts for the DSO's Civic Orchestra program.

When Parcells was a boy, while playing Little League baseball (and just before beginning to play trumpet), he was hit in the mouth with a baseball, breaking a front tooth. The related dental work and a few bridge replacements during his career provided first-hand experience in embouchure adjustments and the realization that necessity together with commitment can enable muscles to be retrained without fear. In 2010, he survived prostate cancer and retired from the DSO.

A highly respected trumpeter and musician, Parcells was called a "musician's musician" by conductor Antal Doráti. After a solo appearance with the Manitoba Chamber Orchestra, a review in the Winnipeg Free Press stated, What impresses most about his playing is not so much the total command he has over the instrument, but a musical freedom that is almost vocal in its approach. It's rare that one describes a brass player as having a truly singing line, or cantabile, but that is exactly what Parcells has.

Parcells married pianist and violinist Marie-Paule Parcells in 1979. His stepson, David, born in 1972, is owner of Detroit's Motor City Wine where he is also a D.J. who regularly showcases live jazz. Parcells's sister Julie Parcells (b. 1955) is a violinist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. Ramón and Marie-Paule moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico, in 2010 where they enjoy Nordic skiing (he also enjoys Telemark and back country skiing), hiking, and bicycling. Canoeing enthusiasts, they still return to the call of the Loon in northern Ontario's Algonquin Provincial Park.

Bibl.: personal interview, Feb. 20, 2011; "Ramón Parcells" (www.trumpetherald.com/forum/viewtopic.php?t=26958&start=0); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Parin, Fredeline ("Poppee") Rezare (b. Quezon City, Philippines, June 15, 1967). Filipino trumpeter and conductor. Parin began playing the trumpet at age eight under the guidance of his father Emiliano Parin, former principal trumpet of the Manila Symphony Orchestra for twenty years. At age twelve, Fredeline was performing solos with his family-owned brass band, and as a teenager was a soloist with the Philippine Youth Orchestra, Philippine Youth Symphonic Band, and Manila Symphony Orchestra. He won a second and a first prize in the National Music Competition for Young Artists (National and Regional level), as well as several other solo competitions between 1979 and 1983.

Parin replaced his father as principal of the Manila Symphony Orchestra in 1987, and played with the orchestra until it disbanded in 1989. He appeared as soloist on local television shows such as A Little Night of Music, Paco Park Presents, and Concert at the Park. He attended music workshops in Thailand, U.S., Australia, Malaysia, Indonesia, and Japan, and has also participated in numerous trumpet master classes given by world-renowned artists such as Crispian Steele-Perkins, James West, Pierre Dutot, Douglas Hedwig, Tiger Okoshi, Brian Evans, Vincent DiMartino, Barbara Butler, Kevin Eisensmith, Susan Slaughter, Michael Sachs, Jerome Callet, Frank Kaderabek, David Hickman, Zhonghui Dai, Josef Pomberger, Philip Smith, and Wynton Marsalis.

Parin is on the faculty at the University of the Philippines (since 1990), Centro Escolar University (since 2006), and Saint Stephen High School (since 2002). He is conductor of the Centro Escolar University Concert Band (since 2008), and the historic Banda Kabataan of General Trias, Cavite. He is also principal trumpet of the Philippine Philharmonic Orchestra (since 2003).

Fredeline Parin and flutist Diana Leaño Parin were married in 2010. His hobbies include target shooting and hunting.

Bibl.: "Fredeline R. Parin" (www.upd.edu/ph~music/faculty_wind_parin.htm); personal interview, Jan. 19, 2011.

Parlato, Charles ("Charlie") (b. Fredonia, New York, Feb. 16, 1919; d. Oak Park, California, Sept. 8, 2007). American trumpeter and vocalist. Parlato grew up in Fredonia, New York, and attended the Ithaca Conservatory. In 1942, he moved to Los Angeles to seek a career in show business. He became a member of the orchestras of David Rose and Kay Kyser, and performed with celebrities such as Red Skelton, Dinah Shore, Bing Crosby, Tennessee Ernie Ford, and Andy Williams. He appeared in a non-speaking role in the 1952 film, Meet Danny Wilson.

Parlato's fame began when he joined the Lawrence Welk Orchestra in 1962. For the next two decades, he was featured as a trumpet soloist, vocalist, and comic character in several televised novelty numbers. In addition to being a brilliant musician, he used his relatively short five-foot, five-inch height to humorous advantage. He left the orchestra when Welk retired in 1982.

Parlato died at the age of eighty-eight due to complications resulting from a hip injury. He was married to Margaret Parlato. They had five children. One of their granddaughters is Gretchen Parlato, a talented jazz singer who won the 2004 Thelonious Monk Award. Parlato was also an excellent drummer and tennis player.

Bibl.: "Charles Parlato" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Charlie Parlato" (www.welkmusicalfamily.com/welkbios5.html).

Parton, Rob (b. Covington, Kentucky, Nov. 7, 1963). American trumpeter, flugelhornist, and bandleader. Parton, who started to play trumpet at eleven, earned a bachelor of music education degree at the University of Kentucky, and a master of music degree at Northern Illinois University. His teachers were Richard Illman, Vincent DiMartino, and Ronald Modell. He has been one of the most active trumpet players in the Chicago area for many years, and also works a great deal in Columbus, Ohio, where he is an associate professor of music at Capital University and plays in the Capital Brass Quintet and the faculty jazz group Spectrum. In Chicago, he teaches trumpet and jazz ensembles at the Chicago College of Performing Arts of Roosevelt University. A highly versatile performer, Parton has performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Milwaukee Symphony, Chicagoland Pops Orchestra, Tony Bennett, Doc Severinsen, Mel Tormé, Frank Sinatra Jr., the Beach Boys, Céline Dion, Natalie Cole, and Maynard Ferguson. He is an active show performer, serving in various pit orchestras for productions of Wicked, The Full Monty, Sweet Charity, The Music Man, Legally Blonde, The Color Purple, Young Frankenstein, In the Heights, and Billy Elliot.

Parton is a guest director of All-State jazz bands as well as a clinician at numerous school jazz programs. He has released seven solo jazz CDs on the Sea Breeze Jazz label, one CD with his Rob Parton Big Band, and another CD with his Rob Parton Quartet (Jazztech).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. *Das gro*ße Buch der Trompete (Schott); Rob Parton's official website: www.rparton.com.

Pasquarelli, Anthony ("Tony") L. (b. Jan. 13, 1915; d. Feb. 3, 2011). American trumpeter. For many years during the 1940s, '50, and '60s, Pasquarelli was the leading freelance trumpeter in the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, area. He played lead trumpet with the Civic Light Opera, Nixon Theater, Penn Theater, Stanley Theater, local television and radio staff orchestras, and ice shows and circuses that came through town. He also performed on occasion with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, Pittsburgh Grand Opera, and Pittsburgh Sinfonietta.

Pasquarelli taught at Carnegie Mellon University from 1957 to 2004. He was a very well liked teacher who produced many top players in the region. Among his best-known former students are Dennis Ferry, Mark Schrello, and Charles Metzger. Upon his retirement, many of his former students established The Anthony L. Pasquarelli Foundation, which supports scholarships for talented trumpet students. In his honor, they also commissioned a concerto from composer Drew Fennell. Pasquarelli's students affectionately refer to him as "The Boss."

Bibl.: "Anthony Pasquarelli" (www.drewfennell.com/Bio_The Boss.htm); "Anthony Pasquarelli" (www.carnegiemellontoday.com/article.asp?Aid=117).

Patrylak, Daniel ("Dan") John (b. Plymouth, Pennsylvania, Aug. 10, 1932). American trumpeter. Patrylak's father John ("Jake") was an assistant manager of a life insurance firm and a drummer/bandleader of a group called Jakey's Keystonians. His mother Mary was a secretary at the insurance agency, but later a homemaker. Daniel received his first cornet as a present on his ninth birthday, and immediately began nine years of lessons with David Melson, a local cornetist and conductor. His first professional engagement was with Melson's Alexander Band.

After graduating from Plymouth High School in 1950, Patrylak attended the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, where through 1954, he studied with Sidney Mear, who also played in the Rochester Philharmonic. After receiving a bachelor's degree in music education and a performer's certificate, Patrylak won a position as second cornet in the US Marine Band in Washington, D.C. He also played first trumpet in the Marine Band orchestra and lead trumpet in the dance band. Patrylak had the opportunity to solo with the Marine Band on numerous occasions.

After the end of military service in 1958, Patrylak returned to Rochester and began his master's degree using the G.I. Bill of Rights. He won a position as third trumpet in the Rochester Philharmonic, and served as the third trumpet teacher at the Eastman School. In 1962, he became the second trumpet of the Rochester Philharmonic, and the second teacher at Eastman. He was the principal teacher at Eastman during the summers of 1958 through 1971. As Mear's eyesight began to fail, Patrylak performed more and more first parts in the orchestra. Beginning in 1962, he also played first trumpet in the faculty brass quintet, which in 1966 was officially named the Eastman Brass Quintet.

Patrylak performed with the Eastman Brass Quintet through 1975. However, his duties at the school included administrative work, as well as trumpet teaching. In 1961, he became assistant director of the summer session, and in 1967 was assistant director of the School in addition to director of the summer session. From January 1972 to February 1973, he was acting director of the School, and from 1973 to 1975, the assistant director for academic affairs.

Patrylak became a fulltime administrator in 1975 when he accepted a position as chair of the music school at the University of Texas in Austin. He also performed in the Texas Brass Quintet (faculty) until 1979 when he became head of the music department at the University of Connecticut. He directed the UConn School of Music, and played with the UConn Brass Quintet through 1985, but then returned to teaching trumpet fulltime when the school had an open trumpet position. In addition to his teaching duties, he maintained an active career as a freelance artist and jazz musician.

Patrylak retired in 2000, although he continued performing on a freelance basis. In 2006, he moved to Phoenix, Arizona, where he was executive director of the Young Sounds of Arizona, a select high school-level jazz band. He also served as an advisor to several Arizona arts organizations, including The Phoenix Symphony. He has also served as president of the Connecticut Music Educator's Association, chair of the board of directors of Opera New England (Northwest Chapter), chair of the board of directors of the Hochstein Music School in Rochester, and producer of Opera Under the Stars at the Eastman School (eight years). In late 2011, he moved back to Connecticut.

Patrylak is best known for his performances with the Eastman Brass Quintet, which toured extensively, presented concerts at the Denver Trumpet Symposium in 1969 and 1973, and released a historically important LP album on the Vox/Candide label. More recently, Summit Records has issued a double-CD set of previously unreleased early EBQ recordings from the 1970s. Patrylak received the 1973 "Musician of the Year" award from Mu Phi Epsilon, and the 1974 "Alumni Achievement Award" from the Eastman School. The City of Rochester also declares one day each year as "Daniel Patrylak Day." His best-known students include Allen Vizzutti (informal lessons), Philip Collins, Vincent DiMartino, Jeff Tyzik, John Schorge, and Richard Stoezel.

Bibl.: personal interview, June 13, 2010.

Pavlović, Milorad ("Milo") (b. Belgrade, Serbia, Dec. 2, 1930). Serbian trumpeter. The son of a jazz musician, Pavlović studied at the Berklee School of Music, but has spent most of his career in Serbia and Germany. He began as a solo trumpeter in the Radio Orchestra of Belgrade, and then established himself in Germany in 1956. He is perhaps best known for his work with the Berlin Big Band and Kurt Edelhagen's legendary All Star Big Band in Cologne (1957-67). He recorded with Specs Powell (1957), Heinz Kretzschmar (1960), and Edelhagen (1959-64). He played with the Sender Freies Berlin (Radio Free Berlin) Dance Orchestra under Paul Kuhn as lead trumpet and soloist (1968-81), Clarke-Boland Big Band (1968), Oliver Nelson & Berlin Dream Band (1970), Slide Hampton, and Charlie Mariano (1976), and led the Berlin Big Band on occasion. He was also a teacher in Montenegro.

Pavlović was one of the best European big band lead players of the 1970s, and also a popular trumpet virtuoso who made numerous recordings under his own name.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Payne, Geoffrey H. (b. Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, Dec. 30, 1957). Australian trumpeter. Payne began playing the cornet at age seven, and switched to trumpet at age twelve. He earned a Performer's

Certificate at the Sydney Conservatorium, and was a member of the ABC Training Orchestra in 1976 and the Sydney Symphony Orchestra from 1976 to 1979. His teachers were Gordon Webb, Lou Campbell, Arthur Stender, and Peter Walmsly. In 1979, he became associate principal trumpet of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra, and moved to principal in 1986. In 1986, he also spent six months playing with the San Diego Symphony Orchestra.

A virtuosic soloist, Payne won the 1982 ABC Instrumental and Vocal Competition, and the 1984 22nd International Trumpet Competition in Budapest. He has been featured at the 1987 and 2010 conferences of the International Trumpet Guild. His three CDs, all on the ABC Classics label, are Great Trumpet Concertos (two-CD set), Bel Canto Trumpet, and Trumpet Magic—A Tribute to Rafael Méndez.

Payne's wife Julie is second trumpet of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Lyren, Del. "Notes" to CD: Trumpet Magic (ABC Classics); "Geoff Payne" (News Item: www.trumpetguild.org/news/sews04/222geoggreypayne.htm).

Photo: Lucia Rossi

Payton, Nicholas [Anthony] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Sept. 26, 1973). American trumpeter. Payton is one of the "young lions" of jazz trumpet. His father Walter Jr. was a top bassist and sousaphone player who played in the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, and his mother Maria was a classical pianist and opera singer. As a child, Nicholas was surrounded by music, both at home and in the city of New Orleans. He received his first trumpet as a Christmas present when he was four years old, by eight was accompanying his father with the Young Tuxedo Brass Band, and by age twelve was playing with several local bands. During his teenage years, he became good friends with Wynton Marsalis who became his mentor.

Payton studied at the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, and later at the University of New Orleans with Ellis Marsalis, Wynton's father. Payton also had a few lessons with Wynton. His regular trumpet teachers were Ronald Benko and Clyde Kerr Jr. Payton debuted in the McDonough School Band. In 1990, at the age of twenty-seven, Payton played on cruise ships with Clark Terry, and also worked with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, Wynton Marsalis (April 1991, Tribute to Louis Armstrong), and Carl Allen. In 1992, he toured with Marcus Roberts and Jazz Futures, and played with Michael White (from 1992). From 1992 to 1994, he was trumpeter and musical director of Elvin Ray Jones's Jazz Machine. Other performances include concerts with Joe Henderson, Jimmy Smith, and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra under Wynton Marsalis.

Verve Records signed Payton in 1994. Payton put together his own group and soon released several albums including From the Moment, Gumbo Nouveau, Payton's Place, Nick at Night, Dear Louis, and the Grammy Award album, Doc Cheatham and Nicholas Payton. Other albums include New Orleans Collective (Evidence), Trumpet Legacy (Milestone), and Sonic Trance (Warner Bros.). He also recorded the soundtrack for the movie, Kansas City. Payton's playing styles range from traditional jazz to that of Freddie Hubbard.

Payton was the leader of the Louis Armstrong revival band (2000-01). He has also performed or recorded with Ray Charles (Jazz in Marciac, 1997), Doc Cheatham (1997), various Trumpet Summits, Christian McBride, Joshua Redman, Roy Hargrove, and Joe Henderson. In 2007, Payton joined The Blue Note 7, a group formed to celebrate the seventieth-year anniversary of Blue Note Records. He toured with the Barcelona Jazz Orchestra (2007) and with a Tribute to Lionel Hampton featuring Jason Marsalis on vibraphone (2009).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Nicholas Payton" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Nicholas Payton's official website (www.nicholaspayton.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Paz, Victor Nicolás ("Vitín") (b. Panama City, Panama, Aug. 30, 1932). Panamanian trumpeter. Truly one of the greatest musicians of Panama, Paz learned to play trumpet from his father, Victor Nicator

Paz, a trumpet player and bandleader. At age thirteen, his father arranged for him to play in the Firefighter band, and by age nineteen Vitín was playing professionally in Venezuela with various television show bands. He graduated from the National Institute of Panama and played with the Paz Brothers band, Armando Boza (1951), Bobby Capo (1952), Beny Moré, his own orchestra (in Panama), and Arsenio Rodriguez (1960).

In 1963, Paz moved to New York City to join the Tito Rodriguez Orchestra, but left to play with Tito Puente in 1966. During his thirty-five years in New York, he played or recorded with such stars as Dizzy Gillespie, Ella Fitzgerald, Buddy Rich, Tony Bennett, Johnny Mathis, Ray Charles, Benny Goodman, Henry Mancini, Count Basie, Stevie Wonder, Nat "King" Cole, The Village People, Perry Como, Peggy Lee, Frank Sinatra, Duke Ellington, Quincy Jones, James Brown, Aretha Franklin, Bill Evans, Lionel Hampton, Paul Anka, Mario Bauza, Machito, The Jackson 5, Chico O'Farrill, Sammy Davis Jr., Carmen McRae, Eddie Palmieri, the Fania All Stars, and many others. He was also a member of the television house band for the Dick Cavett Show from 1969 to 1974, and played for dozens of Broadway musicals. While in New York, he took lessons from Carmine Caruso, who used his playing to demonstrate lessons to other students.

Paz moved back to his native Panama during the late 1990s. He continues to tour the world and record. Among his albums as leader are La Trompeta de América, Vols. 1-2, Mí Romance, and Victor Paz and His Orchestra. He can be heard in the film, The Mambo Kings (1992). Paz teaches at the University of Panama.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Victor Paz" (www.panamajazzfestival.com/vitin-paz-english); Victor Paz's official website: http://victorpaztrumpet.webs.com.

Pearce, Dick (b. Forest Gate [London], England, Apr. 19, 1951). British trumpeter. Pearce began playing trumpet at age twelve, participating in the local Boys Brigade Band (1964) and Ewell Brass Band. From 1968 to 1971, he served in the army as a member of The Household Cavalry, performing bugle calls on horseback.

Pearce became interested in jazz music at age fifteen, and at age twenty-one became a member of the National Youth Jazz Orchestra. He played professionally in Graham Collier's jazz group (intermittently between 1972 and 1978), and during the 1970s also played with a host of jazz musicians including Graham Collier, Dudu Pukwana, Keith Tippett, Mike Westbrook, Don Rendell, and Michael Garrick. The following decade found him mostly with Ronnie Scott, Jack Sharpe's Big Band, Gil Evans, Mike Westbrook, and Peter King.

A motorcycle injury in September of 1990 took Pearce temporarily out of the music scene, but he returned to Ronnie Scott's group in 1991-93. He also led his own quartet in the 1990s. Since the year 2000, he has worked mostly as a freelance musician, but also performed recently with the Tribute to Cannonball Adderley Band, the Don Weller Big Band, and a few other groups.

Dick Pierce has authored a book titled Scenic Routes (self-published) that explains alternative chord progressions to typical jazz harmonies. He recorded four CDs for the FMR label, as well as Never Pat A Burning Dog (Jazz House) and PD3 with Dick Pearce. He is also a fine composer and arranger.

Bibl.: Chilton, John. Who's Who in British Jazz (Continuum International Publishing Group); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Dick Pearce's official website: http://dickpearce.co.uk.

Pechin, Ernest (b. Seymour, Iowa, Nov. 18, 1891; d. Orlando, Florida, Sept. 23, 1946). American cornetist. Pechin came from a musical family. His older brother taught him to play the violin at an early age. When he was nine, the family moved to Phillips, Nebraska, where he began playing the cornet, and soon played in the town band led by his older brother. He had no cornet instructor, but had a driving desire to learn the instrument from listening to recordings of the great cornet soloists.

Pechin met and played for Bohumir Kryl in Grand Island, Nebraska; Kryl hired him as his assistant soloist. Pechin toured with Kryl's band for the remainder of the 1909 season and for the following two years. In 1911, Pechin joined the Hotel Montrose orchestra in Cedar City, Iowa, which turned out to be fortuitous, because John Philip Sousa and Herbert Clarke happened to stay in the hotel while returning home from their concerts at the World's Fair in Vancouver, B.C. Pechin was hired to be Mr. Clarke's assistant soloist for the following season. Before starting with Sousa's band, Pechin traveled to Clarke's farm in Reading, Massachusetts, for lessons. Clarke said of Pechin, One of my pupils from Nebraska, Mr. Ernest Pechin who studied with me for a time, at my home near Reading, Massachusetts was to be my assistant in Sousa's band, when the season opened in August of 1912, and since then has become one of the finest cornet soloists I have heard for brilliancy, tonal quality and endurance.

From 1914 to 1916, Pechin was cornet soloist with the Rochester Municipal Band, and from 1916 through 1920, soloist and assistant conductor of the Innes Band. Innes said, I think Ernest Pechin is now the greatest living cornetist, and he is just in his prime. Pechin then played as soloist and assistant conductor with Conway's band for four years, then with the Anglo-Canadian Leather Company Band in Huntsville, Ontario, through 1927. After hearing a performance by Pechin in 1927, cornetist Clay Smith remarked, Pechin rendered a ballad as well as he played all the fireworks, such as triple tonguing, running triplets, etc. which isn't always true of many soloists.

Pechin moved to Chicago in 1928, and played as principal trumpet and cornet soloist with the Chicago Theater Symphony Orchestra, as well as with the Balaban & Katz Theater circuit through 1933. He remained in Chicago through 1939, and worked as conductor and soloist for WGN Radio from late 1933 to 1937, and thereafter only as soloist. Around Chicago, Pechin was often called the "Little Napoleon of the Cornet," probably because of his French ancestry.

From 1920 through 1946, Pechin played a Conn 6A "Victor" cornet. He made only one commercial recording—the cornet solo, Innes-Phenominal Polka. He published eight books of exercises that included eight recordings of him playing the exercises. Kjos also published his double and triple-tonguing method. He spent his last years in Orlando, Florida, where he opened a music store with his wife Ethel and their son Garry. Pechin remained active as a public school band director and cornet teacher until his death in 1946 at the age of fifty-four.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pellegrini, Esotto ("Pelli") (b. Centerville, Pennsylvania, Oct. 1, 1926; d. Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 6, 2006). American trumpeter. Pellegrini was the son of an Italian father, Guido (a professional trumpeter), and a Polish mother, Martha (Noretti) Pellegrini. The family spoke multiple languages, and by age six, Esotto was fluent in English, French, and Italian. The family moved to Youngstown, Ohio, when he was a boy, and where he later graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School.

Pellegrini began playing the violin, but soon switched to the cornet. At age sixteen, while still in high school, he became professional, and joined the local musicians' union. He was drafted into military service in 1945, and served in the Army Air Force Band in Italy during World War II until 1946. Dental problems caused him to consider a career in teaching.

Upon returning home, Pellegrini attended the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music from 1947 to 1949, but transferred to Youngstown College (now Youngstown State University) in order to live at home. He graduated with a bachelor of music education degree in 1951, as well as receiving a master's degree from Kent State University. He was a public school band director in Rootstown, Ohio, for four years, and then held a similar position in North Lima, Ohio, from 1957 to 1962.

Pellegrini became a member of the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra and was a charter member of the Warren Packard Band. He accepted a job at Youngstown State University as a part-time trumpet teacher, and after much urging by the director of the school of music, he became a fulltime member of the faculty. He was an excellent teacher who taught hundreds of trumpet students, among them William Pfund and Sean Jones. In 1975, while an associate professor, he received the Walter E. and Caroline H. Watson Foundation Distinguished Professor Award. He retired from university teaching in 1987 as a full professor, although he continued to teach out of his home for several more years.

A stroke in 1996 ended Pellegrini's career. He had played in the Youngstown Symphony for forty years, and taught at the university for twenty-five years. He was known for his versatile trumpet playing, clear tone, and smooth style. (He even performed Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 on B-flat trumpet!) He was a member of the Masons and other organizations. He and his wife Vera (Kiddon) Pellegrini had two daughters, Brenda (Pellegrini) Land and Carol (Pellegrini) Masters. His older sisters, Lee Ermart and Neige Lubrani, preceded him in death.

Pellegrini died at the age of eighty. The Dana School of Music at Youngstown State University established the Esotto and Vera Pellegrini Scholarship Fund for brass scholarships.

Bibl.: Heidenreich, Chris. "Esotto Pellegrini: Extraordinary Trumpet Player / Exceptional Teacher" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2009); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pelt, Jeremy (b. California, Nov. 4, 1976). American trumpeter and composer. Pelt began playing trumpet while in elementary school and became interested in jazz during high school. He attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston where he majored in film scoring. After graduating, he moved to New York City in 1998 and soon joined the Mingus Big Band. During the succeeding decade, he also performed with Jimmy Heath, Ralph Peterson, Cliff Barbaro, Frank Wess, John Hicks, Charli Persip, Keter Bette, Bobby Short, Frank Foster, Vincent Herring, The Skatalites, Ravi Coltrane, Winard Harper, Lonnie Plaxico, Nancy Wilson, Bobby "Blue" Bland, Roy Hargrove Big Band, the Village Vanguard Orchestra, Cedar Walton, and the Duke Ellington Band. Pelt plays in the tradition of Lee Morgan and Freddie Hubbard, and took part in many international festivals including Jazz in Marciac (2003). Pelt also performs as a member of the Lewis Nash Septet, the Cannonball Adderley Legacy Band, and the Frank Foster Loud Minority Big Band.

Pelt has formed three groups: Creation (sextet), Noise (a semielectric band with effects), and The Jeremy Pelt Quintet. He was five times voted a "Rising Star on the Trumpet" by Downbeat magazine and the Jazz Journalists Association. He also received the Downbeat Critics Choice Award in 2009 and has toured the U.S., Europe, and Japan. His albums include Profile (his 2002 debut CD on Fresh Sound), Insight (Criss Cross), Close to My Heart (Max Jazz), Identity (Max Jazz), November (Max Jazz), and Shock Value: Live at Smoke (Max Jazz).

Bibl.: Williams, K. Leander. "Top Live Shows: Jeremy Pelt Quintet" (Time Out New York, No. 632, Nov. 8-14, 2007); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jeremy Pelt" (www.allaboutjazz.com).

Pender, Mark ("The Love Man") (b. Grandview, Missouri, Aug. 21, 1957). American trumpeter, vocalist, and songwriter. Pender grew up in a suburb of Kansas City, and graduated from Grandview Senior High School. He was a member of the Inner City Orchestra from 1977 to 1979, and moved to New York City around 1980. His popularity as a player and person led to associations with numerous celebrity performers. He toured with Diana Ross from 1981 to 1982, and played with Little Steven and The Disciples of Soul (1982), as well as Ella Fitzgerald, Gladys Knight, Southside Johnny, Asbury Jukes, Bruce Springsteen, David Bowie, Joe Cocker, Bon Jovi, Robert Cray, Power Station, The Bogmen, Son Seals, Cissy Houston, Joe Pesci, and Ricky Martin.

Pender became the trumpeter for NBC's Late Night with Conan O'Brien in 1993. He recorded over 1,700 shows, and also played on The Tonight Show with Conan O'Brien. He is a member of The Miami Horns, and plays regularly with La Bamba & The Hubcaps. He was featured during the halftime show of Super Bowl XLIII, and has recorded hundreds of CDs with various bands.

Pender was given his nickname, The Love Man, by Little Steven. He was married to Connie Pender from 1982 to 1992, but is now married to Françoise Pender, who he met in Paris while touring with The Disciples of Soul.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Mark Pender" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Mark Pender" (www.markpenderband.com/mpb/bio.asp?id=351).

Penzarella, Vincent J. (b. c1944). American trumpeter. Penzarella grew up in Philadelphia. He began studying music at the age of eight, and started playing the trumpet at age thirteen, and one year later performed Hermann Bellstedt's Napoli with the University of Pennsylvania Band. At age fifteen, he attended the Curtis Institute of Music on a full scholarship, and while there, played as a substitute in the Philadelphia Orchestra and performed in various local groups. His teachers include Vito De Cesare, Samuel Krauss, Arnold Jacobs (1960-62), and John Ware. He served in the 5th US Army Band, played principal trumpet in the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra (at age eighteen), and principal in the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

After graduating from the Curtis Institute, Penzarella moved to New York City to study with John Ware of the New York Philharmonic. Penzarella played in several Broadway show pit orchestras, the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra (1966-67), and the City Center Opera and Ballet orchestras. He was in the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra for eight years before joining the New York Philharmonic (1977-98). He has also been a member of the Brass Arts Quintet.

As a teacher, Penzarella has taught at the Mannes College of Music, Brooklyn Conservatory, Peabody Conservatory, Aaron Copland School of Music, State University of New York at Purchase, Queens College, Columbia University, New York University, and the Manhattan School of Music (since 1991), and has presented master classes around the world. In 2003, he was honored at the New York Brass Conference for Scholarships.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Vincent J. Penzarella" (http://steinhardt.nyu.edu/music/brass/people/faculty/penzarella).

Pepping, Amanda (b. Albuquerque, New Mexico, Dec. 5, 1980). American trumpeter. Pepping grew up in Albuquerque, New Mexico. She studied with Robert Dorer, Douglas Carlsen, and Jeff Korak, all members of the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra. While in high school, she also studied for one summer with Jan Roller at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan. She graduated from Eldorado High School in 1999 as valedictorian.

Pepping attended Arizona State University where she studied with David Hickman (1999-2003), receiving her bachelor of music degree before continuing for her master of music degree there (2003-05) and serving as one of Hickman's teaching assistants. She also took lessons from Emery Harvison of The Phoenix Symphony. While in Phoenix, she performed with The Phoenix Symphony and taught as an adjunct professor at Mesa Community College and Phoenix College. She was a member of the National Repertory Orchestra in Breckenridge, Colorado, for one summer, and performed with the Brass Band of Battle Creek in Michigan. She also developed her solo career by performing with numerous ensembles, and arranging her own solo repertoire. In 2005, she recorded a solo album titled Amanda (Summit Records).

Pepping won a Fulbright Scholarship to study Baroque trumpet with Dr. Edward Tarr in Karlsruhe, Germany, from the fall of 2005 through the winter of 2006. She also studied modern trumpet with Reinhold Friedrich and Laura Vukobratović. Pepping made many guest solo appearances throughout Europe, and performed on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet with several early music groups.

Returning to the U.S. in early 2006, Pepping worked as an assistant administrator for the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra and often performed with it. She continued her studies with Ray Sasaki at the University of Texas-Austin, earning a doctorate in trumpet in 2010, and serving as a graduate teaching assistant to musicologist Lorenzo Candelaria. She also taught part-time at Texas State University in San Marcos and Texas Lutheran University in Seguin. Pepping accepted a fulltime position as assistant professor of trumpet at Georgia State University in Atlanta beginning in the fall of 2010, but resigned in April of 2013 to teach at Sam Houston State University (adjunct).

Pepping is News Column Editor of the International Trumpet Guild Journal, in print as well as on the ITG website. She is the editor of David Hickman's five-hundred-page text, Trumpet Pedagogy: A Compendium of Modern Teaching Techniques (Hickman Music Editions), published in 2006.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Amanda Pepping" (The Brass Herald, Oct. 2011); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, bk. 2 (Schott); "Amanda Pepping" (www.music.gsu.edu/directory.aspx?id=205); Amanda Pepping's official website: www.amandapepping.com; personal interview, Sept. 14, 2010.

Perez, Manuel [Emanuel] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 19, 1878; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, 1946). American cornetist. While Perez is said to be one of the originators of jazz and ragtime music, this is not completely true. However, he was an important influence on King Oliver, Sidney Bechet, Bunk Johnson, Buddy Bolden, Freddie Keppard, and others, who would later become giants in early jazz history.

Perez was a classical cornetist and a pupil of Sylvester Coustaut. From 1895 to 1898, he was a member of John Robechaux's orchestra, and in 1897 played in a concert band conducted by Luis Tio (alongside other neo-Orleans classical brass specialists such as Paul Chaligny and George Moret on cornet). From 1899 to 1902, Perez played the E-flat cornet with the Onward Brass Band. From 1900 to 1917, he led the Imperial Orchestra known to have played exclusively from written music. A photograph taken in 1909 shows this ragtime orchestra. From 1902 to 1917, he also led the famous Onward Brass Band, which played marches strictly from music. It included great musicians such as cornetists Andrew Kimball and Joe Oliver, and clarinetists Lorenzo Tio Jr. and Alphonse Picou.

Known for his excellent reading ability and power, Perez could play written blues, ragtime, pop, folksongs, waltz, Schottish, and operatic arias. Although he was a shy person exhibiting little showmanship, his performances made him the best cornetist in New Orleans until the younger Buddy Bolden, Freddie Keppard, Bunk Johnson, and Joe ("King") Oliver rose to prominence years later.

Perez moved to Chicago in 1915, where his own band alternated with Charles Elgar at the Arsonia until 1919. He also appeared at the Pekin with Alphonse Picou (1918), and on the SS Capitol boat with the Maple Leaf Orchestra led by the trombonist Oak Gaspard (1919-20). He returned to New Orleans and led the noted Imperial Brass Band (previously called Onward) from 1921 to 1927. From 1922 to 1927, he also led the Imperial Serenaders at the Pytian Temple Roof that played the leading music of the day, including jazz tunes. He possibly had a brief stay in Chicago in September 1926, and there is evidence that he lived in Chicago on Michigan Avenue from 1927 to 1928. During the summers of 1927 and 1928, Perez played with Charles Elgar in Milwaukee. Returning to New Orleans, he possibly again led the Imperial Brass Band (1928-30).

A stroke in 1930 hindered Perez's music career and he began working at his cousin's furniture store; he later became a fulltime cigar maker. The effects of the stroke began to render cornet playing impossible, and he suffered a series of strokes in the early 1940s that incapacitated him completely. Sidney Bechet told about seeing Perez: I was down in New Orleans and I saw Manuel before he died. I saw him and I couldn't bear to see him; it was something awful. He just began to slobber at the mouth when you spoke to him...And when he looked at you there wasn't anything in his eyes...it was like they were missing from his face, and his face, it had just come apart. Perez stopped playing in 1937 and died in 1946 at about the age of seventy-five. He was a fine classical cornet teacher in New Orleans, and among his pupils were Don Albert, Sidney Desvigne, Natty Dominique, Manuel Manetta, Willie Pajeaud, and Kid Rena. He advised Bunk Johnson, Joe Oliver, and Louis Armstrong who said Perez was a very patient man giving lessons mostly from a method book. When a pupil missed one measure, he'd send him back home and give him that same lesson back over.

Besides early musicians like Oliver and Bechet, Perez influenced other leading jazz players such as Bunk Johnson, Lawrence Veca, Punch Miller, and Lee Collins. Perez's place in jazz history might be better known if he had agreed to speak with several jazz historians who tried to interview him during the 1930s. Also, no known recordings of Perez's cornet playing exist, so he remains relatively unknown. Although it has been assumed that he was a jazz player, he was actually a classical player who could play written music in a jazz style. But as far as improvisation is concerned, trumpeter and researcher Dan Vernhettes has discovered that Perez actually hated that type of jazz (!).

Perez had two sons. The eldest died in Los Angeles in 1999, and the other died in 1956.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Manuel Perez" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Périnet, François [Etienne] (b. Savoy, France, date unknown; d. c1862-63). French designer and manufacturer. It is a pity that little is known about this inventor of the modern piston valve. Périnet improved upon the older tubular valves of Stölzel and Wieprecht by making the valve body larger than the actual bore of the instrument, thus allowing correctly sized valve ports to be used. He also inserted rounded discs in the ports so that the angles in the bore were less severe than on other valves. His registration for a patent became effective on October 27, 1838 even though it was not officially approved until May 6 of the following year. (According to French law, the duration of the patent ran from the date of registry, not of issue.) This système Périnet eventually became standard on all piston trumpets and cornets.

Périnet learned to make brass instruments at the Raoux shop. He opened his own shop in Paris in 1829. From that date, Périnet added a third valve to the cornet-à-pistons (commonly with two valves). In 1841, he made a pre-tuba instrument called piston basse with four valves, but he could not compete against Adolphe Sax so he turned to making hunting horns. In 1859, he left Paris for Passy, and his company was renamed François Périnet, Pettex-Muffat & Cie.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (Norton and Norton); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Dumoulin, Géry. "The Cornet and Other Brass Instruments in French Patents of the First Half of the Nineteenth Century" (Galpin Society Journal, LIX, 2006).

Perry, Marvin C[hapman] ("Chappy") II (b. Birmingham, Alabama, Feb. 12, 1948). American trumpeter. Perry's father, Marvin Sr., worked as an engineer for a power company and his mother, Lora, played piano, sang, and for a while was a church choir director; his grandmother was organist at a Baptist church. Marvin II sang in the church choir, and at age nine began taking trumpet lessons from Walter Moeck, a trumpeter and assistant conductor of the Birmingham Symphony Orchestra. Listening regularly to the orchestra, Perry gravitated toward classical music. When Moeck left to teach at Eastman's prep school in Rochester, New York, Perry took lessons from John Head. A call from Moeck led Perry to spend his junior and senior high school years at the prep school before entering the Eastman School of Music as a trumpet major in 1966 where he studied with Sydney Mear, and graduated with a degree in music in 1970.

Upon graduation, Perry became a member of the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. (1970-73). During his three years in the band, he also played in the Fairfax Symphony, as well as singing in and conducting a church choir. He continued his trumpet studies with Lloyd Geisler and Barry Shank. He and Anne Katherine Finne, a female horn player from Norway, began dating and were married. During more than thirty-five years of marriage, they have had five children: Marvin III, Barbara Helen, Lora, Ellen, and Daniel.

Perry became the third trumpet of the Birmingham Symphony (his hometown) in the fall of 1973, and while there, attended the University of Montevallo where he earned a master of music education degree in 1975. After two years in the Birmingham Symphony, he won the principal trumpet chair in the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra (replacing Michael Farrow), a position held from 1975 until his retirement in 2012. He is currently adjunct professor at Grace College, and has also taught as an adjunct professor at Butler University (on and off since 1976), University of Indianapolis (during the late 1980s and early 1990s), and DePauw University (for one semester, filling in for Robert Grocock). In addition, he has taught as a visiting professor at Indiana University during sabbaticals and other leaves of absence by professors Charles Gorham, Louis Davidson, Bernard Adelstein, and Edmund Cord.

Perry has enjoyed a highly successful career as a principal trumpeter in a major orchestra. He has received the President's Award for outstanding achievement from the University of Montevallo and was named one of its Distinctive Alumni. He rides a 1500cc Honda Goldwing motorcycle, and loves to camp with his family. He is a devout Christian.

Bibl.: Norris, Philip. "Catch a Ride to Indianapolis with Marvin 'Chappy' Perry" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2008); personal interview Jan. 8, 2010.

Persson, Bent (b. Karlskrona, Sweden, Sept. 6, 1947). Swedish trumpeter and cornetist. Persson grew up in Stockholm. He studied trumpet with Claes Strömblad, principal trumpet of the Stockholm Philharmonic Orchestra and attended Stockholm's Musikpedagogiska Institut. He began playing professionally when he formed the Stockholm Stompers in 1968, and also performed and recorded with Maggie's Blue Five, Kustbandet, Weatherbird Jazzband, Bent's Blue Rhythm Band, Charlie Holmes (1974-75), Eva Taylor (1976), Carol Leigh, Maxine Sullivan, Kenny Davern (1980), Bob Wilber, Tomas Örnberg Blue Five & Bob Barnard (Jazz in Marciac), and Jens Lindgren & Orange Kellin (1994).

Persson, who has spent his entire career in Sweden, is an excellent traditional jazz player who can imitate Louis Armstrong solos to perfection. He is well known for his four volumes of Louis Armstrong's 50 Hot Choruses for Cornet on the Kenneth label. He has recorded with hundreds of leading artists, appeared on radio and television dozens of times, and has recorded a great deal of film music. His albums as leader include El Rado Shuffle (Kenneth), Bent Persson's London Stompers, Bent's Blue Rhythm Band (unissued), and others. He has also appeared at dozens of top international jazz festivals.

Since 1974, Persson has played in his own groups including Bent's Blue Rhythm Band, and with the Kustbandet big band, which was selected to perform during three Nobel Prize parties in Stockholm.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Bent Persson" Encyclopedia of Jazz Musicians (www.jazz.com/encyclopedia); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Peters, Grant S. (b. Omaha, Nebraska, Sept. 7, 1963). American trumpeter. Both of Peters's parents were musicians—his father was an oboe professor, and his mother a choral music teacher. Grant began playing the trumpet at age ten, and studied with Gene Badgett, Roger Groth, Fred Forney, and Charlie Shepard before graduating from Westside High School in Omaha in 1981. He studied with Dennis L. Schneider at the University of Nebraska (1981-86) where he received a bachelor of music education degree. He continued his studies with Leonard Candelaria at the University of North Texas (in residence 1986-93), earning the master of music and doctor of musical arts degrees. His dissertation is entitled The Trumpet as a Musical and Dramatic Element in Selected Operas of Gioachino Rossini and Giuseppe Verdi (1998). He has also served on the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild (2009-13).

Grant and his wife Eugenia Alcocer-Peters, a creative advertising manager, have been married since 1994 and have two children, Alex (b. 1998) and Elisa (b. 2003). His hobbies include golfing and gardening.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Grant S. Peters" (www.missouristate.edu/music/GrantPeters_Trumpet%20htm); personal interview, May 15, 2011.

Peters, Richard E. (b. Ypsilanti, Michigan, May 31, 1929). American trumpeter. Peters's father Elmer was an assistant postmaster, and his mother Vera was a salesperson at a men's clothing store. Richard's younger sister, Joyce, was born in 1939.

Peters began playing the trumpet in fourth grade and took lessons from Leland Randall and Maurice Riley (a violist). After graduating from Ypsilanti High School in 1947, he attended Michigan State Normal College (now Eastern Michigan University) where he studied with Graham Young from 1947 to 1951, receiving a bachelor of music degree. He then earned a master of music degree with Clifford Lillya at the University of Michigan (1951-52). He also studied with James Nielson for one summer.

Peters served in the US Army (1952-54), playing with the 40th Division Band in Korea (1952-54) and the 5th Army Band in Chicago (1954). After discharge, he became a high school band director in Berrin Springs, Michigan (1954-59), and in Yuma, Arizona (1959-66). In 1966, he accepted a professorship at the University of Arizona in Tucson, serving as trumpet teacher until his retirement in 1994. He performed as principal trumpet of the Tucson Symphony Orchestra from 1966 to 1994, Tucson Brass Quintet (1966-94), Arizona Opera Orchestra (Tucson, 1970-84), and the Tucson Pops Orchestra (1966-94). He has been a member of the Skyline Brass Quintet since 2002.

Peters and his wife Elaine were married in 1952, and have four children: Michele (b. 1955), Denise (b. 1959), Duane (b. 1963), Jennifer (b. 1973). His hobbies include golf, hunting, fishing, and gardening.

Bibl.: "Richard E. Peters" (www.skylinebrass.com); personal interview, Sept. 15, 2010.

Petit, Alexandre(-Sylvain) (b. Paris, France, June 5, 1864; d. Paris, France, Jan. 21, 1925). French cornetist. Alexandre(-Sylvain) Petit studied cornet with Hippolyte Maury, Xavier Teste, and Jean-Baptiste Arban at the Paris Conservatory and received a second prize on the cornet in 1881.

Petit began a career as a cornet player in 1875. He was solo cornet in the Arban Band (1881-84) and the Garde Républicaine (1896-97). He played at the Concerts Colonne under Edouard Colonne (1891-97), and then solo cornet at the Opéra-Comique (from 1898). In 1904, along with [Jean] Edouard Lachanaud, Petit recorded numerous cylinders for the Pathé label (it was often not clear which recordings were made by Lachanaud or Petit). Beginning in 1908, he often performed the Septuor by Saint-Saens, sometimes with the composer playing the piano.

Petit succeeded Mellet as cornet teacher at the Conservatory on April 1, 1910, and retained this position until his death in 1925. He was the teacher of René Voisin and Marcel Lafosse, two trumpet players who established careers in Boston.

Petit composed numerous solos for cornet and piano including Gouttes d'eau, Fête Militaire, Myrto Polka, Madeleine, Après la Victoire, O Bellos Montagnos, and Eva. He also wrote study books for the cornet: La Semaine du Virtuose; 25 Etudes Mélodiques. He also documented very valuable information about the cornet virtuosos prior to 1912.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Petit, Joseph Crawford ("Buddy") (b. White Castle, Louisiana, Dec. 23, 1896; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, July 4, 1931). American trumpeter. Born Joseph Crawford, he took the last name of his stepfather, valve trombonist Joseph Petit. Buddy Petit studied under his stepfather, and also with Willie "Bunk" Johnson and Freddie Keppard. Petit's role model was Bunk Johnson. He was working at a glass factory when he began to perform in 1912 at the Gentilly with violinist Tom Albert.

In 1916, Petit coled a band with Jimmie Noone. Jelly Roll Morton invited Petit and a few other New Orleans musicians to join his band in Los Angeles in 1917. But, after they had been in the band for a while, Morton began to chastise his new members for being backward "country boys," criticizing their clothing, cooking in dressing rooms, and eating while on stage. After a heated argument, the bandsmen returned to New Orleans. (Petit threatened to kill Morton if he ever appeared again in New Orleans!)

Back in New Orleans in 1918, Petit led his own six-piece band, which included Alphonse Picou on clarinet, and led his own brass band at the Carnival Parade. Bill Johnson offered Petit a job with his band in Chicago, but Petit refused to leave New Orleans. Joe ("King") Oliver was sent in his place and became famous when he introduced New Orleans jazz to the Midwest. In 1918-19, Petit led the Young Olympians featuring Sidney Bechet on clarinet. In 1920, he played in Biloxi and Covington, and also joined the Tuxedo Orchestra led by Papa Celestin.

Petit's band became extremely popular in the South. He formed several bands under his name and would sometimes appear in four or five places to play a few tunes with each band. His Black & Tan Orchestra had consistent gigs in nearby Manderville, Bogalusa, Thibodaux, and Madisonville (1920-21). In 1921, he briefly played with Kid Ory in California and appeared with Frankie Dusen in Los Angeles (1922). Then, Petit was a hot soloist with Toots Johnson's Jazz Orchestra in Baton Rouge. In 1924-25, Petit's band was active in Pensacola, Florida. In 1926, and again in 1930, Petit played on the SS Madison riverboat. He also played as second cornet in Kid Sheik's band (1930) and with Kid Minton's group (1931, the lead trumpet being Lawrence Toca).

Petit's jazz playing influenced Don Albert, Andy Anderson, Ernie Cagnolatti, Tommy Ladnier, Punch Miller, Lee Collins, Herb Morand, Wingy Manone, and Louis Armstrong. In 1921, Richard Baptist was a student of Petit's.

Petit's drinking got out of hand in the late 1920s. He died at the approximate age of thirty-three from overeating and drinking at an Independence Day picnic. He was known for his beautiful trumpet sound and skilled jazz solos, but no recordings of his playing exist.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pétré, Léon [Leonardus Josephus] (b. Sint-Truiden, Belgium, Jan. 27, 1943). Belgian trumpeter. Pétré studied the violin as a child, but switched to the trumpet during his teen years when he studied with Emile Swijsen. He studied medicine in college before enrolling in the Royal Conservatory in Brussels where he studied with Louis-Julien Vannetelboch. His later studies were with Emile Maes at the Royal Conservatory in Antwerpen. He also enjoyed listening to Adolf Scherbaum, Maurice André, Harry James, and Roger Delmotte, and received advice on early music from Michael Laird and Edward Tarr.

While in Antwerp, Pétré played as a steady extra in the Philharmonic Orchestra. He then accepted an invitation to teach at the Lemmens Institute in Louvain, which he did for twenty-five years. He devoted his playing to all styles of music and was a principal trumpet of the Collegium Instrumentale Brugense, Musica Polyfonia, and the Amsterdam Baroque Orchestra. He was also a twenty-five-year member of the contemporary music group, Xenakis Ensemble.

Now retired, Pétré continues to enjoy playing and teaching on an irregular basis. He enjoys gardening and reading about new medical topics.

Bibl.: Bellens, Ivo. "A Conversation with Belgian Trumpeter Léon Pétré" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Petzold, Robert Franz (b. Waldheim, Saxony, Germany, July 26, 1858; d. Leipzig, Germany, Apr. 4, 1908). German trumpeter. Petzold learned to play the trumpet beginning at age fourteen under the guidance of Theodor Fischer, a chief city musician. He entered the music corps of the 8th Infantry Regiment No. 107 as first trumpet in 1876 at age eighteen, and upon his release, won an audition on October 1, 1881 as third and first trumpet of the Gewandhausorchester Leipzig, where he remained for the rest of his life. In 1907, just one year before his death, he replaced Ferdinand Weinschenk as professor of trumpet at the Leipzig Conservatory.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Pezel, Johann Christoph (b. Glatz, Silesia, Dec. 5, 1639; d. Bautzen, Oct. 13, 1694). German trumpeter, violinist, and composer. Pezel started his career as a violinist, but soon became a member of the Ratsmusiker, a class of musicians derived from the tower watchmen-trumpeters of former times. He was appointed a Kunstgeiger (string players) in the Leipzig town band in 1664, and in 1670 was promoted to Stadtpfeifer (city piper) for life in 1670. Judging from his own compositions for trumpet, he was a highly skilled trumpeter capable of reaching the eighteenth harmonic.

Pezel published two surviving collections of tower music for five-part cornett and trombone ensemble: Hora decima musicorum Lipsiensium (Leipzig, 1670) and Fünff-stimmigte blasende Music (Frankfurt, 1685). He also published a sonata for trumpet, bassoon, and basso continuo, six sonatinas for two trumpets and basso continuo, as well as duos for other instruments and basso continuo in a third collection, Bicinia Variorum Instrumentorum (1675). In addition, he wrote many works for various nonbrass instruments and even some vocal works, including two funeral odes and two masses. Several further collections have been lost.

In 1681, plague broke out in Leipzig and he moved to Bautzen where he worked until his death in 1694.

Bibl.: "Johann Christoph Pezel:" (Oxford Music Online); Smithers. Don L. The Music and History of the Baroque Trumpet before 1721 (Syracuse University Press).

Pezzo, Camillo del (b. Corbara-Salerno, Italy, Feb. 16, 1927). Italian trumpeter. Pezzo received his first trumpet instruction at age six, and at age fourteen entered the Rome Conservatory of Music. From 1945 to 1950, he studied at the Music Conservatory San Pietro a Majella in Naples, and in 1954 became assistant principal of the Rome Opera House Orchestra. He played for a while as principal trumpet of the Bogotá Symphony Orchestra in Colombia, where he also taught at the local conservatory until 1967. He then attended The Juilliard School in New York City during the 1967-68 school year. He then returned to his hometown of Salerno to teach and conduct at the Salerno Conservatory, retiring in 1999. At that time, he continued to be active in concerts of Classical and folk music.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Pfeiffer, Carl (fl. 1730-70). German trumpeter. Pfeiffer was the Karlsruhe court trumpeter for composer Johann Melchior Molter (c1695-1765). Molter composed three significant concertos for him in quick succession around 1750. Not much is known about Pfeiffer, except that he was known as a "Concert[ist]" and is mentioned in pay lists with two other trumpeters in 1738, all receiving the same salary, and with four others in a "Staats- und Addresse Calender" in 1763.

Bibl.: Dahlqvist, Reine. Bidrag till trumpeten och trumpetspelets historia...(dissertation, Göteborg, Sweden, 1998); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Pfeiffer, Joachim (b. Lühnde, Kreis Hildesheim, Germany, Sept. 9, 1963). German trumpeter. Pfeiffer began playing trumpet at age thirteen, taking lessons with Wilfried Bode in Hannover, and later with William Forman in Kassel. He studied with Wilhelm Staller at the Hamburg Musikhochschule from 1984 to 1988. His apprenticeship was with the Hamburg State Opera (1986-87), and in 1987-88 he became second trumpet in the State Philharmonic of Hamburg.

After a time with the Hannover State Theatre Orchestra, Pfeiffer in 1995 became principal trumpet of the Philharmonic Orchestra of the Hansa city Lübeck. He was also a member of the Schleswig Holstein Brass Ensemble. He has been a guest trumpeter, concertizing, touring, and recording with the North German Radio Orchestra. He also performs with the Schweriner Brass Collegium. Joachim is the youngest brother of trumpeters Harald (b. 1942) and Martin (b. 1951) Pfeiffer, who together formed the Pfeiffer Trumpet Consort in 1985. This five-member ensemble has performed extensively and released several CD recordings.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Joachim Pfeiffer" (www.bach-cantatas.com/Bio/PTC.htm).

Photo: Pfeiffer Trumpet Consort - (from left) Martin, Harald, and Joachim Pfeiffer, trumpets, Peter Schumann, organ, and Mathias Müller, timpani.

Pfüller, Werner (b. Gornsdorf, Erzgebirge, Germany, Nov. 24, 1931). German trumpeter. As a boy of twelve, Pfüller was introduced to brass instruments by listening to a fanfare ensemble called Pimpfen. At age sixteen, he was shown how to improvise on the trumpet by a trumpeter who returned from a prisoner of war camp. By 1948, he was working in various big bands in Chemnitz, including the Karl Walter Big Band. When the Communist authorities forbade this kind of music, he fled in April 1954 to West Berlin and then Hamburg. He then played in a television dance orchestra in Berlin, and recorded film music as a studio player. Already in 1955 he was rehabilitated and began working in Fips Fleischer's orchestra. He began to compose and arrange, and his works were performed by the two leading radio dance orchestras in Leipzig and East Berlin. In 1960, he founded his own jazz quintet that recorded albums of bebop and hard bop music.

From 1986 to 1989, Pfüller taught trumpet, jazz improvisation, arranging, and ensembles at the Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy Hochschule für Musik in Leipzig, and from 1989 to 1996 taught at a music school in Berlin-Reinickendorf. After retiring, he founded the Swinging Dixie Union ensemble and a bebop group called Jazz Report (since 2003). He continues to play his trumpet, and gives private lessons at his home.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pfund, William ("Bill") Arthur (b. Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 1, 1944). American trumpeter. Pfund began learning to play piano with his mother's guidance at age five. He also began playing the trumpet at age nine, studying with Esotto Pellegrini in Youngstown, Ohio. He graduated from Columbiana Exempted Village High School in 1961, and in the fall attended Youngstown University (now Youngstown State University) where he studied with Pellegrini, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1966. He then studied with Roger Voisin at the New England Conservatory (1966-68) where he received his master of music degree with distinction. Additionally, he has studied with Bernard Adelstein, Adolph Herseth, Josef Levora, William Lang, Maurice Murphy, Philip Jones, Knud Hovaldt, Bo Nilsson, and Anthony Plog.

Pfund's music career began in 1968 when he joined the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. (1968-70). After his service years, he taught at the University of Nebraska-Omaha (1970-71) before joining the faculty at the University of Northern Colorado in the fall of 1971. He has played principal trumpet in the Greeley Philharmonic Orchestra and the Rocky Mountain Brass Quintet, and has also performed with the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra and the Youngstown State University Faculty Brass Quintet.

An active member of the International Trumpet Guild since its inception in 1975, Pfund has served as a board member, vice president, president (2007-09), and past president. He has received numerous awards, including the Lucille M. Harrison Prize for teaching (1990) and the ITG Award of Merit (2011). His publications include The Trumpeter's Pedagogical Guide, Bill Pfund's Beginning Trumpet Method, Bill Pfund's Intermediate Trumpet Method, and Bill Pfund's Problem Solving Exercises.

Pfund and his wife Susan were married in 1966, and have a daughter (Linda, b. 1969) and a son (Chris, b. 1971). Now retired in Eaton, Colorado, Pfund enjoys presenting master classes around the world, and flying his own small plane, a 1947 Aeronca Scout that he repaired and restored (he received his pilot's license in 1999). He also enjoys flying radio-controlled planes (since about 1990); collecting, restoring, and showing autos; fishing, hunting, and target shooting; building houses; restoring, designing, and building trumpets; and raising cattle on his farm.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "William Pfund" (www.music.mahidal.ac.th/en/upcoming_view.php?id=78); personal interview, Feb. 12, 2010.

Phelps, Joe F[rank] (b. Conway, Arkansas, Feb. 27, 1944). American trumpeter. Phelps grew up in Conway, Arkansas, where he studied trumpet with Ashley Coffman. He attended the University of Central Arkansas, studying with David Ritter from 1962 to 1964. He studied with John Haynie in Denton, Texas, for one summer before attending Indiana University from 1965 to 1967, where he studied with William Adam and completed a bachelor of music degree. Upon graduation, he taught in the public schools of Arkansas and Indiana, played in the Ft. Smith Symphony, South Bend Symphony, Elkhart Symphony, and South Bend Symphony Brass Quintet between 1967 and 1970. He then attended Eastern Kentucky University, studying with Fred Peterson and completing a master of music degree in 1971. He also studied with Gilbert Johnson of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Phelps accepted a position as trumpet teacher and band director at Appalachian State University in Boone, North Carolina, in 1971. He specialized only in trumpet from 1987 until he became a professor emeritus in 2001, but continues to teach there on a part-time basis. While at Appalachian, he played in the Western Piedmont Symphony and many faculty brass ensembles. He received the Chancellor's Award of Merit, Distinguished Service Award (from the Alumni Association), and the School of Music's Outstanding Teacher Award (2001). He has published a book titled So You Want To Be A Trumpet Player.

Phelps and Anne Dodd, a retired teacher, were married in 1976 and reside in Vilas, North Carolina. He has two stepsons: Jay (b. 1961) and Craig (b. 1967). His hobbies include tennis and woodworking.

Bibl.: "Joe Phelps" (http://everythingtrumpet.com/Joe-Phelps); "Joe Phelps" (http://music.appstate.edu/emeritus-directory/joe-frank-phelps); personal interview, Aug. 30, 2011.

Phillips, William ("Bill") (b. Guelph, Ontario, Canada, Sept. 19, 1937). Canadian trumpeter and conductor. Phillips studied trumpet in Toronto with Joseph Umbrico. He began his career as principal trumpet of the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra (1961-62) and the National Festival Orchestra in Stratford. He was principal of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra and the CBC Winnipeg Orchestra (1963-64), and an assistant conductor of the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra in Switzerland (1964-65). He then moved to London, England, in 1965 to play with the BBC Symphony Orchestra and the English Chamber Orchestra for a year. He remained in England until 1970, studying composition with Edmund Rubbra and John White, and conducting with Alexander Gibson and Neville Marriner. He spent part of 1970 studying trumpet at the Paris Conservatory with Maurice André.

Phillips returned to Hamilton, Ontario, to play principal with the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra again (1970-72). He became a founding member of the Canadian Brass (1970), and also founded the New Chamber Orchestra of Canada (1973), a thirteen-piece string ensemble, and Classical Brass, a brass ensemble in which he played first trumpet (1972-74). In 1974, he left the Canadian Brass and other positions to teach at the Royal College of Music in London (England), and lead the London Gabrieli Brass Ensemble that recorded nine LP albums under his directorship.

Phillips returned to Toronto during the late 1970s. He conducted the Toronto Jewish Folk Choir (1978-87), and has been leading various orchestras in Canada and New York. He has composed several works for brass.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "William Phillips" (www.thecanadianencyclopedia.com/index.cfm?PgNm=TCE&Params=U1ARTU0002794).

Pierce, Dede [De De] [Joseph de Lecrois (Lecroix)] (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Feb. 18, 1904; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Nov. 23, 1973). American cornetist and singer. Pierce was not a self-taught cornetist as is usually written. He studied under Paul Chaligny (one lesson each week for a year), then took lessons from Kid Rena and Chris Kelly. He played in Arnold Depas's Olympia Band starting in 1924 while taking a day job as a brick mason. Pierce played in the D'Jamal Garnier Brass Band (Garnier was one of the numerous teachers of Louis Armstrong) and led a dance quartet before he joined Allen Prade's Syncopators in Lake Charles (1931-33), which included pianist Nellie Lutcher. Lee Collins joined them at occasions.

Pierce met pianist-singer Billie Wilhelmina Goodson (1907-1974) in 1933 while she was playing in Buddy Petit's band. They were married in 1935 and became one of the leading musician couples in the city. They worked together for over thirty years, making their recording debut in 1953. Billie and Dede Pierce appeared at the King Fish (1933-35) with George Lewis, then had a steady job at Luthjen's (1936 to the 1940s). In 1949, Dede Pierce paraded at Mardi Gras in the Young Tuxedo Brass Band just behind Louis Armstrong, the King of the Zulus. Then, Pierce played with Abbie Williams's Happy Pals Brass Band, and in 1951 recorded with clarinetist Emile Barnes. Afterwards, Billie and Dede Pierce again took a steady job at Luthjen's (1953-54).

Billie and Dede were hospitalized during the mid 1950s due to a serious illness. Billie recovered well, but Dede was left permanently blind. He was depressed for over five years, but in 1960 or so, Billie finally convinced him to return to performing. They recorded albums for Folkways (1961), Riverside, Jazzology, and American Music. They also recorded an album with George Lewis in 1962 and made the LP recording, Bill and De De Pierce at Luthjen's (Center). They spent their last years working and touring (including a tour of Europe) with the Preservation Hall Jazz Band. Dede Pierce was a gentle, melodic player and a passionate singer.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pietzsch, Hermann (b. Dittmannsdorf, Germany, Oct. 29, 1852; d. Düsseldorf, Germany, Nov. 26, 1920). German trumpeter. Pietzsch was a leading trumpeter, teacher, and scholar in Germany. He is best remembered for his large book of orchestral excerpts for trumpet, Die Trompete, which was among the first written sources to discuss the use of the alto and bass trumpets. The book first appeared in 1880, and was reprinted during the 1960s by the University of Michigan Press. Pietzsch also composed and published 22 Virtuosity Studies in 1941 (new edition edited by Georges Mager for Southern Music Company) and 24 Duets (new edition edited by Mel Broiles). He also published Theoretical-Practical Studies for Trumpet or Cornet in B-flat (in two volumes) in 1894.

Pietzsch was a member of the Municipal Orchestra of Düsseldorf from 1910 to 1915.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Pietzsch, Hermann (Edited by Clifford Lillya and Renold Schilke; Eng. trans. by Josef Blatt). Die Trompete (University of Michigan Press).

Pinkett, [William] Ward (b. Newport News, Virginia, Apr. 29, 1906; d. New York, New York, Mar. 15, 1937). American trumpeter. Pinkett's father was an amateur cornet player and his sister Loretta played saxophone. Ward began learning the cornet from his father when he was ten years old. Ward played in his school band at the Hampton Institute in 1923 (alongside Harry Cooper who gave him advice) and later attended the New Haven Conservatory of Music. He then joined the White Brothers Orchestra in Washington, D.C.

In 1926, Pinkett toured with a traveling show. After playing in New York, he decided to stay. He soon joined Charlie Johnson's band and during the next ten years, played with many musicians including Willie Gant, Billy Fowler, Joe Steele (1928), Charlie Skeete, Lloyd Scott (replacing Jabbo Smith), Chick Webb (1929), Bingie Madison (1931, sometimes under the conducting of King Oliver), Rex Stewart (1933-34), Teddy Hill (1934), and the house band at James Hogan's Joyland.

Beginning in 1928, Pinkett made many recordings (sixty-two tunes total). His record debut was with Jelly Roll Morton's group. He also filled in for King Oliver during Oliver's weaker period (1929-31). Two of his best recorded solos are Low Gravy and Strokin' Away. In 1930-31, he recorded with Bubby Miley's Mileage Makers. He performed scat vocals on some of these recordings.

Pinkett's career took a nosedive after 1931 due to the Depression and alcoholism. In 1935, he played with Albert Nicholas and recorded with Freddy Jenkins's Harlem Seven, and the Little Ramblers. But, he became seriously ill due to alcohol abuse and stopped eating altogether. He died of pneumonia at the age of thirty. Pinkett was influenced by Louis Armstrong and Red Allen. His playing can be heard on CDs of reissued recordings with Jelly Roll Morton on the Classics label.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Piper, Jeffrey ("Jeff") Scott (b. Kirksville, Missouri, Dec. 31, 1949). American trumpeter. Piper grew up in Queen City, Missouri. He began playing the trumpet at age ten; his early teachers were Earl Turner, Robert Romine, and Harold Copenhaver. He graduated from Schuyler County R1 High School in 1967, and attended Truman State University from 1967 to 1972 where he earned a bachelor of music degree, studying with professors Harold Copenhaver, Roger Cody, and Edward Bostley. He attended graduate school at the University of Michigan where he studied with Clifford Lillya, receiving a master of music degree. Postgraduate teachers include Arnold Jacobs, Susan Slaughter, Richard Giangiulio, Robert Nagel, and Mel Broiles.

Piper began teaching at the University of New Mexico in 1976. He was a member of the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra (1978-2006), Santa Fe Symphony, Chamber Orchestra of Albuquerque, Opera Southwest, and the San Diego Symphony (acting principal, summer of 1989). He is a member of the New Mexico Brass Quintet, which he cofounded in 1977.

An active member of the International Trumpet Guild, Piper hosted the 1985 ITG Conference, served on the ITG Board of Directors (1991-95, 2009-11), was the ITG Secretary (1998-2003, 2011-13) and Vice President/President (2003-09). He received ITG's "Award of Merit" in 2009 for outstanding lifetime service to the trumpet community.

Piper and his wife Marsha Lichtenstein, a professional mediator, have three children: Beth (b. 1981), Michael (b. 1984), and Laura (b. 1986). His hobbies include golf, motorcycles, coin collecting, baseball, and radio controlled airplanes.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jeffrey Piper" (http://music.unm.edu/faculty_staff/fac_profiles/piper.htm); personal interview, Aug. 15, 2011.

Pirinen, Pasi (b. Tornio, Finland, Aug. 6, 1969). Finnish trumpeter. Pirinen studied for four years in the Junior Department of the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki with Pertti Kulku before attending the Guildhall Academy of Music and Drama in London where he studied with John Miller and Paul Cosh (1988-92). He has also studied with Charles Schlueter, Michael Sachs, and Antoine Curé.

Pirinen began his orchestral career in 1992 when he became principal trumpet of the Orchestra of San Luis in Argentina, as well as the Córdoba Symphony Orchestra. From 1994 to 1995, he freelanced in London, then was principal of the Finnish Radio Orchestra from 1995 to 2005. Since 2005, he has been principal of the Helsinki Philharmonic Orchestra. In addition, he is the current principal of the Avanti ensemble, and plays period instruments in the 6th Floor Orchestra. He is a founding member of the Finnish Brass Symphony.

Pirinen won second prize in the 1987 Concertino Prague Competition, and first prize in the 1998 Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild International Solo Competition. In 1999, he was named brass player of the year at the Lieksa Brass Festival. He has performed as soloist throughout Finland, and has presented numerous master classes and made guest appearances around the world. He has performed as a guest orchestra player with the London Sinfonietta, City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, Oslo Philharmonic, and the Stockholm Philharmonic. He is also active as a judge at international trumpet competitions, and has released several solo albums.

Pirinen teaches at the Sibelius Academy and the Jazeps Vitols Latvian Academy of Music in Riga. He enjoys performing contemporary works for trumpet, and has commissioned and premiered works of this genre.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2010); Pasi Pirinen's official website: www.pasipirinen.com.

Plank, Johann (b. Leoben, Steiermark, Austria, Aug. 25, 1961). Austrian trumpeter. Plank's early lessons were at eight years of age with Otto Pole and Fritz Mischlinger. From 1976 to 1982, he studied under Hans Meister at the Hochschule für Musik and darstellende Kunst in Graz. He won first prize in a national young artists competition, as well as the Helmut Wobisch Memorial Prize. In 1982, he became principal of the Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra and Brass Quintet, and has since also been a member of ensembles such as Die Reihe, Kontra-Punkt, Johann Strauss Orchestra, Vienna Chamber Opera Orchestra, and the Austrian Chamber Symphonists. Since 2000, he has served as a professor at the Vienna Conservatory of the City of Vienna University. He also teaches at the Joe Zawinul Music School in Gumpoldskirchen and gives seminars in his home country and others.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Members of the Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra trumpet section - Christian Hollensteiner, Franz Tösch, Peter Fliecher, and Johann Plank (far right).

Platt, Robert ("Bob") (b. Ft. Wayne, Indiana, Mar. 24, 1937). American trumpeter. Platt, now retired, spent most of his career in Germany. He began playing the trumpet at age fourteen. By the time of his graduation from high school in 1955, he was already a member of the Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestra. He attended Indiana University, where he studied with William Adam, and received a bachelor of music degree in 1959 and a master of music degree in 1961. He taught music in the public schools of Freelandville, Indiana (1960-62).

After hearing a performance by the Berlin Philharmonic in Bloomington, Indiana, in 1963, Platt arranged to move to Berlin and study with Horst Eichler, the principal trumpet of the orchestra. After studying in Berlin for two years, he won the position of principal trumpet in the Dortmund Opera and Symphony Orchestra, a position he held for seven years, before becoming a member of the Gürzenich Orchestra in Cologne. In 1982, he became a member of the Berlin Philharmonic, and although he was hired as second trumpet, evidence indicates that he also played principal trumpet for some of his many years there. He retired from the Berlin Philharmonic around 2002. Besides his orchestral position, Platt also taught at the Berlin Hochschule der Künst.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Lange, Arno. "Robert Platt and the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1993); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pletcher, Tom (b. New Haven, Connecticut, May 29, 1936). American cornetist. Tom Pletcher is considered the world's authority on the music and cornet style of the legendary early jazz musician Bix Beiderbecke. Pletcher's grandfather, Thomas M. Pletcher, was a leader in the piano roll industry during the 1920s, and his father, Stew Pletcher (1907-78), was a trumpeter with many of the swing bands. Tom studied the piano from age seven to eleven, but hated taking lessons. Although his father encouraged him to play the piano or the guitar, it wasn't until Tom was sixteen that he fell in love with music after listening to Bix Beiderbecke on a recording from his father's record collection. He taught himself to play through various recordings, and attended City College in Los Angeles as a business major for three years. He moved to Michigan in 1962 to run his grandfather's metal business, playing cornet only as a hobby.

Pletcher has performed early-style jazz throughout most of his life, but it was after he sold the metal business in 1987 and retired, that he had the time and desire to play music fulltime. He formed the Sons of Bix ensemble and performed with them for seventeen years. He freelanced in New York, appeared in many classic jazz festivals, and recorded in Sweden with Bent Persson's Jazz Kings. His extraordinary renditions of pieces in Bix Beiderbecke's style of playing have built a large fan base, and he has released several successful albums including I'm Glad (Stomp Off), The Sons of Bix's (Fairmont), Friends and Heroes (Teaspoon), With Guests (Fat Cat Jazz), Ostrich Walk (Jazzology), Copenhagen (Jazzology) and If Bix Played Gershwin (Arbors). He also played with Eddie Miller, Ade Monsbourgh, and at the JazzAscona Festival (2003 with the Civica Jazz Band of Milano conducted by Enrico Intra. He recorded with Bob Haggart (Carolina in the Morning, Jazzology), Bill Challis (The Goldkette Project, Circle) and Lino Patruno (2003, A Tribute to Bix Beiderbecke: "Royal Garden Blues" with Randy Reinhart, Jon-Erik Kellso, and Randy Sandke on trumpet and cornet, Jazzology).

Tom Pletcher ghosted the cornet solos in the documentary film, Bix: An Interpretation of a Legend (Rhapsody Films). He is also a founding member of the Bix Beiderbecke Memorial Society, and organized the Bix Centennial Band aboard the Bix 100th Birthday Cruise in Florida (Nov. 2003).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Tom Pletcher" (www.bixbeiderbecke.com/pletcher.html).

Plietzsch, Johann (b. Berlin, Germany, May 28, 1967). German trumpeter. Plietzsch studied with Lüdwig Güttler and Günter Rössler at the Musikhochschule in Dresden, and with Robert Platt at the Hochschule der Künste in Berlin. He became a specialist on the (valveless) Baroque trumpet when he studied in Cologne with Friedemann Immer, and in Basel with Edward Tarr. In 1990, he founded the Berlin Baroque Trumpet Ensemble, a chamber group that has performed and recorded a great deal. Since 19914, he has been teaching trumpet at the Domasingschule of St. Hedwig's Cathedral in Berlin, as well as giving courses in various places for trumpet, Baroque trumpet, and chamber music. In 2005, he began teaching regular and Baroque trumpet at the International Summer Academy of Early Music in Wilanow (Warsaw), and since October of 2007 has led a class of natural trumpet and early music at Poznan High School of Music in Poland. Also an early music conductor, Plietzsch gave his conducting debut in 2002.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Baroque Trumpet Ensemble Berlin" (www.barocktrompeten-ensemble-berlin.de).

Pliquett, Joachim (Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 3, 1957). German trumpeter and conductor. Pliquett studied with Reinhold Lösch in Mannheim, and in 1975 won first prize in the National Youth Music competition. From 1978 to 1982, he was principal trumpet of the Staatsphilharmonie Rheinland-Pfalz, and since 1982 has been principal of the German Symphony Orchestra.

In 1979, Pliquett and organist Arvid Gast formed a duo for which many works have been written, and which has presented hundreds of concerts. It has released numerous recordings, as has Pliquett as a soloist with piano or orchestra. Pliquett founded the German Chamber Virtuosi of Berlin in 1995, an ensemble that he conducts, and is artistic director of that institution as well as of the Praetorius Brass Ensemble of Berlin. He also was an adviser for Max and Heinrich Thein in the design of their instruments.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Joachim Pliquett" (www.bach-cantatas.com/Bio/Pliquett-Joachim.htm).

Plog, Anthony ("Tony") (b. Glendale, California, Nov. 13, 1947). American trumpeter and composer. Plog comes from a musical family; his father Clifton, a trombonist, gave him his first lessons at age ten after Anthony had studied piano for a year. His main interest as a boy was baseball, but by age seventeen he began to think seriously about playing the trumpet as a career. He was a member of the American Youth Orchestra, and studied with Irving Bush and Thomas Stevens. He had additional lessons with Robert DiVall, James Stamp, and hornist Vince DeRosa.

Plog's first trumpet position was as principal of the San Antonio Symphony (1970-73) before he went to Los Angeles to freelance. In 1974, he served as assistant principal of the Utah Symphony (associate principal, 1975-76). He again returned to Los Angeles where he freelanced, was a member of the Fine Arts Brass Quintet, and played as an extra with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and principal trumpet with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. As a studio performer, he participated in recordings for films such as Star Trek I, Gremlins, Rocky II and III, Altered States, and others. He also did a great deal of solo work, and recorded several trumpet albums. In 1986, he became a charter member of Summit Brass, a group he would perform and teach with for many years. In addition, he was an adjunct professor at the University of Southern California, and taught at California State University-Northridge and the Music Academy of the West. He exchanged teaching jobs with Edward H. Tarr during the first half year 1985, with him teaching Baroque trumpet at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis and Tarr teaching modern trumpet at USC. He premiered Concerto for Trumpet & Strings by Raymond Premru (Ithaca, New York, May 1983, ITG) and Concerto for Trumpet & Orchestra by Frank Campo (with the Pasadena Symphony, 1984), and was a guest soloist with The Phoenix Symphony, Virtuosi of Salt Lake City, Oregon Bach Festival, San Luis Obispo Mozart Festival, and many others.

In 1988, Plog moved back to Utah to develop his career as a composer. It was at this time that he met and married Cathy Plog, a nurse. His first major work for brass, Octet for Brass, written earlier in Los Angeles for the Edward Tarr Brass Ensemble, was performed by the Summit Brass in 1986, which led to a recording of an album of all-Plog brass works titled Colors for Brass, performed by Summit Brass on the Summit Records label (1988). In 1990, he accepted a position as acting principal trumpet of the Malmö Symphony Orchestra in Sweden. In 1992, he moved to Modena, Italy, where he worked for only four months before moving to Freiburg, Germany. He has also taught at the Accademia di Santa Cecilia in Rome, and filled a one-semester sabbatical leave for David Hickman at Arizona State University during the late 1980s.

Plog replaced David Hickman in the Saint Louis Brass Quintet in 1988. He continued touring with Summit Brass, and released solo recordings for labels such as Crystal, Summit, BIS, and Centaur. In order to devote more time to composing, he performed his final concert as a trumpeter with the Summit Brass during its annual Rafael Méndez Brass Institute in 2001. He also retired from the Saint Louis Brass Quintet at about the same time, and was replaced by Ray Sasaki.

Since the early 1990s, Plog has been the trumpet professor at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg, Germany, retiring in February 2013. He became a coprincipal trumpet of the Basel Symphony Orchestra in Switzerland (three years), and was a guest principal of the Stockholm Royal Philharmonic during its tour of Japan in 1992. He is a leading composer for brass and other instruments, and has received commissions from the American Brass Quintet, Summit Brass, Saint Louis Brass Quintet, Malmö Symphony Orchestra, GECA Brass Ensemble of France, Chicago Chamber Musicians, the University of Texas-Austin, the National Repertory Orchestra, the Evansville Philharmonic, and many other ensembles. His works have a distinctive compositional style, and have been heard in over thirty countries. Plog is known for his keen sense of humor and unassuming personality.

Bibl.: Grabowski, Randy. "Trumpeter to Composer: An Interview with Anthony Plog" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2003); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Anthony Plog: Conductor and Composer" (www.anthonyplog.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Plume, Serge (b. Ronse, Eastern Flanders, Belgium, Sept. 13, 1967). Belgian trumpeter. Plume studied classical trumpet at the Royal Music Conservatory in Ghent, receiving a bachelor of music degree. He then earned a master of jazz degree studying with Ack Van Rooyen at the Hilversum Conservatory. His playing career began at age eighteen with the Belgian Radio and Television (BRT) Jazz Orchestra and Big Band, and as a freelance jazz and pit orchestra performer. He has performed with the West German Radio Orchestra in Cologne, Radio Orchestra of Frankfurt, Southwest German Radio Orchestra Big Band in Stuttgart, The Skymasters, Jazz Orchestra of the Concertgebouw, RTL Big Band, Timeless Jazz Orchestra, l'Orchestre Régional de Jazz, Caratini Jazz Ensemble, King of Swing Orchestra, El Tattoo del Tigre, Hazy Osterwald (four years), and the Orchestre National de Jazz under Laurent Cugny (Paris), and from 1998 to 2002 was lead trumpet at The Night of the Proms in England. He has toured Japan and the United States and is often featured at international jazz festivals.

Plume taught at the Royal Conservatories of Ghent and Antwerp (1991-97), and at the Lemmens Institute in Leuven (2001-03). He was a featured artist at the International Association of Jazz Educators conferences in New Orleans and New York City, as well as the International Trumpet Guild Conference in Santa Barbara, California. He is cofounder of the Brussels Jazz Orchestra and is a member of the Edwin Evers Band, Cor Bakker Orchestra, Jay Horns, and the bands of Paul de Leeuw, Marco Borsato, and Clouseau. He has recorded and/or toured with dozens of international pop and jazz stars including James Morrison, Al Jarreau, Michel Legrand, Quincy Jones, Shirley Bassey, Lionel Richie, Kid Creole, and Joe Cocker.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Plylar, Deborah [Koch] (b. Durham, North Carolina, Jan. 21, 1960). American trumpeter. Plylar grew up in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, and began playing trumpet at age ten. Her early trumpet teachers were John Harding and Edward Hoffman. After graduating from Chapel Hill High School in 1977, she attended the University of Miami as a Presidential Scholar, studying with Gilbert Johnson (1977-79). She transferred to the University of Michigan to study with Armando Ghitalla (1979-80), and then received her bachelor of music degree studying with Raymond Mase at the North Carolina School of the Arts (1980-82). Additionally, she has studied with Carmine Caruso, Richard Giangiulio, Harry Glantz, Renold Schilke, James Stamp, and Thomas Stevens.

Plylar was coprincipal trumpet (1980-82) of the Winston-Salem Symphony Orchestra and the Piedmont Opera Orchestra. She moved to Phoenix, Arizona, in 1982 when she and trumpeter Russell Plylar were married. She has been an active freelance player, member/manager of the Southwest Brass Quintet, and was cofounder of the Plylar Trumpet Academy. She was an administrator and instructor at the Arizona Brass Workshop (1982-84), and an adjunct faculty member (1983-87) at Grand Canyon College, Phoenix College, and Mesa Community College. She has performed with The Phoenix Symphony, Sun Cities Symphony, Spoleto Festival Brass Quintet, Stowe Festival Orchestra, Eastern Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Brevard Music Center Orchestra. Now retired, she includes golf and tennis among her hobbies.

Bibl.: "Deborah Plylar" (www.plylartrumpetacademy.com); personal interview, Nov. 21, 2010.

Plylar, [John] Russell Jr. (b. Greenville, Mississippi, Oct. 12, 1949). American trumpeter. Plylar grew up in Durham, North Carolina. He began playing trumpet at age ten. His first teacher was James Charlesworth, a doctoral student at Duke University. He studied with Saul Caston during his last two years of high school, graduating from the North Carolina School of the Arts in 1967. He studied for one more year there with Charles Brady, but joined the Louisville Orchestra in 1968 as third trumpet. (He became second trumpet in 1971.) Plylar enrolled at the University of Louisville in 1968, studying with Leon Rapier and earning a bachelor of music degree in 1976. He also studied with Samuel Krauss, Gerard Schwarz, Charles Geyer, Frank Kaderabek, James Stamp, Renold Schilke, and Louis Opalesvsky, and played in the Aspen Festival Orchestra and Aspen Chamber Orchestra during the summers of 1970, '71, and '72.

Plylar became principal trumpet of The Phoenix Symphony in 1973, a position he held until 1982. He taught as an adjunct faculty member at Arizona State University from 1975 to 1980, and founded the Southwest Brass Quintet in 1975. During the summers of 1976 to 1981, he served as principal trumpet of the Brevard Music Center Orchestra in North Carolina. From 1982 until his retirement in 2011, he was an active chamber music performer, freelance artist, and teacher in the Phoenix area.

Plylar was married from 1970 to 1981 to Sandra Soderberg, a vocalist and choir director, with whom he had a daughter, Vanessa, born in 1976, and a son, David, born in 1978. In 1982, he and Deborah Koch, a professional trumpeter, were married. His hobbies include golf and travel.

Bibl.: "Russ Plylar" (www.plylartrumpetacademy.com); personal interview, Nov. 21, 2010.

Pocius, Jeanne Gabriel (b. Manchester, Connecticut, June 25, 1958). American trumpeter. While in high school, Pocius studied with Robert Lemons. She attended the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, studying with Walter Chestnut, and the University of Connecticut with Daniel Patrylak. Additionally, she studied with William Vacchiano, Mel Broiles, Charles Colin, Rolf Smedvig, and Jerome Callet.

Pocius freelanced in the Boston area and formed the groups Sophisticated Swing Band, Password Jazz Duo, and Just-in-Time. She plays principal trumpet in the Cape Ann Symphony, and is founder and director of the North Shore Brass quintet. She is a highly skilled lead player, and has played in various show bands for celebrity artists. Pocius's teaching focuses on the embouchure, and so she has dubbed herself the "Chop Doc." She has authored the book Trumpeting by Nature (Outskirts Press), a textbook on embouchure formation and development.

Pocius has been deeply involved in music education for underprivileged children, and is founder of Instrumental Change, a nonprofit organization that provides musical instruments to disadvantaged children. For years, she has traveled to Haiti to teach music to children. Recently, she has also been involved in Haitian earthquake relief. Her hobbies include collecting seashells, woodcarving, puppetry, reading, and gardening.

Bibl.: "The Chop Doc Speaks" (http://abel.hive.no/trumpet/jeanne/interview.html).

Polcer, Edward ("Ed") Joseph (b. Paterson, New Jersey, Feb. 10, 1937). American cornetist and bandleader. Polcer's father Joe was a trumpeter, and his uncle Mickey a trombonist, each well known in New Jersey. Ed took saxophone lessons at age six, but switched to trumpet at ten after listening to Louis Armstrong and Wild Bill Davison records in his uncle's collection. His trumpet teacher was James Dittamo. By age twelve, he was playing in local school bands in New Jersey. As his interest in Dixieland music grew, Polcer gave up the trumpet and played cornet. He played in a polka band (1949) and in the Paterson Civic Band (1950).

Polcer attended nearby Princeton University from 1954 to 1958, graduating with a degree in mechanical engineering. From 1956 to 1960, he also played as a member of Stan Rubin's Tigertown Five, a Dixieland group that performed at the wedding of actress Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier of Monaco (April 1956).

After serving in the Air Force for two years (1960-62), Polcer became of member of Mezz Mezzrow's band that toured Europe in 1963. He worked outside of music for a few years, but eventually returned to music. Between 1969 and 1985, Polcer played on and off with Red Balaban, and from 1972-73 was also a member of Benny Goodman's sextet. From 1975 to 1985, he led the Midtown North Band at the Eddie Condon Club. (Polcer was a part owner.) He played with Bob Greene, Dick Wellstood (1975), Major Holley, and recorded with Jane Harvey (1975) and the Billy Dodd Swing All Stars (1980). He led several recording sessions that produced albums such as In the Condon Tradition (Jazzology), The Magic of Swing Street (BlewZ Manor) which is also the name of one of Polcer's traveling shows, Coast to Coast Swingin' Jazz (Jazzology), Some Sunny Day (Jazzology), Jammin' à la Condon (Jazzology), Whose Honey Are You (Jukebox Jazz, with Terry Blaine), With Thee I Swing (Jukebox Jazz, with Terry Blaine), and Let's Hit It (BlewZ Manor).

During the 1990s and 2000s, Ed Polcer toured with his show, Lionel, Red & Bunny, and also as leader of an international band. He also toured Japan with The World's Greatest Jazz Band. In 2001, he gave a Command Performance in Bangkok for the King of Thailand. He performed at the festival JazzAscona (2002 and 2004), recorded with Allan Vaché (2003), and in 2004 was invited to perform at the official opening ceremony for the Louis Armstrong House museum. He was made an honorary member of the Statesmen of Jazz. As an administrator, Polcer served during the 1980s as president of the International Arts of Jazz and on the Advisory Panel for the Jazz Musicians Foundation of New York. He continues to perform at jazz festivals around the world.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Ed Polcer's official website: www.edpolcer.com.

Pollin, Pierre (b. Troarn, France, Apr. 28, 1925). French trumpeter. Pollin, the youngest of seven children, comes from a musical family. Pierre played in the village band, and received trumpet lessons from his older brother Yves, a student at the Caen Conservatory. Pierre entered the Caen Conservatory in 1937 where he studied with François Bellis, and won the first prize in 1941. In 1942, his teacher introduced him to Eugène Foveau, professor at the Paris Conservatory, who accepted Pollin into his class in 1943. However, Pollin had dreams of becoming a cycling champion, so was reluctant to make music his career, but he agreed to enter the Paris Conservatory as a part-time trumpet student, and studied the books of Arban, Forestier, and Chavanne with Foveau.

Pollin's natural ability enabled him to win the first prize in trumpet in 1945 at the age of twenty-one, playing Fête Joyeuse by Dallier. At this time, he made the decision to become a professional musician, and began working in chamber orchestras, theaters (Champs-Elysées, Edouard VII), and each winter at the Saisons Classiques in Cannes (1946-48). Because of illness, Pollin stopped playing the trumpet for six months between the winter of 1946 and winter 1947.

In 1948, he joined the French Radio Orchestra in Tunis (1948-52) where he performed the Haydn Concerto. Then, in 1952, he was transferred to Radio Lille. Pollin studied with Raymond Sabarich in 1952 in order to enter the Garde Républicaine; Pollin won the competition, but never played in the Garde, preferring to stay at the Radio. He also began his teaching career at the Roubaix Conservatory at the same time (1952-56). In 1956, he won a job as principal trumpet with the Orchestre Radio-Lyrique in the French Radio-Television orchestra in Paris, until he became principal trumpet of the National Orchestra of the RTF, later called "de France" (1960-85) where he continued as fourth trumpet (1985-90). At the radio, he recorded solo works with piano for the South America Broadcasting Company. Pollin and Jean Douay cofounded the Brass Quintet of the National Orchestra of France in 1968; the group recorded six albums, made many tours throughout Europe, and took part in the International Brass Congress in Montreux (1976). As a soloist, Pollin played the Concertino by Jolivet with the Nice Chamber Orchestra under Serge Baudo (1961) and the Haydn Concerto many times, and premiered the Concerto by Vaubourgoin (1965). His great performances (1972-73) of the Sonatine by Poulenc with Jean Douay (trombone) and André Fournier (horn) were notable. He was a founding member of the Paris Brass Octet in 1975, and recorded the Sonatine by Castérède with Hélène Pignari on the piano, as well as the Royal Fireworks Music by Handel with the Jean-François Paillard Orchestra (1961). Although not credited, he recorded with the Paris Brass Ensemble conducted by Jean-François Paillard (Fanfares de tous les Temps on Erato).

Pollin is considered with Ludovic Vaillant to be one of the best orchestral players of the works of Ravel in the true French tradition. He has played under André Cluytens, Georges Prêtre, Georges Delerue, Jean-Michel Defaye, Charles Mackerras, Leonard Bernstein, and Sergiu Celibidache, among others, and with artists such as pianists Samson François, Francis Poulenc, and Jacques Février.

Pollin taught at the Conservatorie National de Région in Paris and the School of Music in Bourges. Among his pupils are André Bernard, Gérard Boulanger, Georges Bouron, Pierre Dutot, and Yves Rémy. One of his favorite players was Aimé Barelli, and the great tenor singers of his day influenced his orchestral playing. Pollin has been an adviser for the Courtois trumpet company.

Bibl.: Bellis, André. "Pierre Pollin: grand de la trompette française" (Brass Bulletin, no. 68, IV/1989); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3, video clip; Oct. 2008); interview with Pollin by Michel Laplace on February 18, 2010.

Polonsky, Naum Emmanuilovich (b. Cherkassk, Ukraine, May 18, 1910; d. Moscow, Russia, Apr. 19, 1988). Ukrainian trumpeter. A virtuosic soloist, Polonsky was cowinner with violinist David Oistrakh of the 1935 All-Union Competition for Performers. He studied with Wilhelm Yablonsky from 1928 to 1930 at the Kiev Music College, and graduated from the Gnesin Institute in 1935, where he studied with Mikhail Tabakov. He was immediately placed as principal trumpet of the Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra in Moscow where he worked until 1971. Timofei Dokshitser said he was a wonderful musician who combined the power of a trumpet player with the virtuosity of a cornet player.

A gifted woodcarver, Polonsky made violins and various wooden percussion instruments. His violins won prizes at various international violin-making competitions.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pomberger, Josef (b. St. Johann im Pongau [near Salzburg], Austria, Sept. 15, 1944). Austrian trumpeter. At age eighteen, Pomberger became a member of the Salzburg Military Band in which he played from 1962 to 1966. He studied with Fritz Kramer at the Mozarteum from 1963 to 1969. He moved to Vienna in 1969, and played with the Vienna Folk Opera orchestra for a year (1969-70), while at the same time studying with Josef Levora at the Vienna Musikhochschule until 1972. He was a member of the Vienna State Opera orchestra from 1970 until 2004, and was also principal trumpet of the Vienna Philharmonic from 1975 to 1999. He retired in October of 2004.

Pomberger is one of the most important teachers in Europe. He has taught at the Vienna University since 1977, and was made a full professor in 1983. Among his students are Martin Mühlfellner, Alfred Gaal, Bernhard Pronebner, Franz Baumann, and Andreas Gruber.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Josef Pomberger" (www.wienerphilharmoniker.at).

Pomeroy, Irving Herbert III ("Herb") (b. Gloucester, Massachusetts, Apr. 15, 1930; d. Gloucester, Massachusetts, Aug. 11, 2007). American trumpeter. Pomeroy was one of the world's finest jazz educators, and a trumpeter-bandleader of some fame. He studied dentistry at Harvard University for a while, but switched to music. He graduated from Schillinger House (later renamed the Berklee College of Music), freelanced in the Boston area, and played with Charlie Mariano, Serge Chaloff, Stan Getz, Coleman Hawkins, and Charlie Parker whenever Parker was in the Boston area.

Pomeroy became a significant player when he toured with Lionel Hampton's band from 1953 to 1954. Pomeroy also toured for a few months as a member of the Stan Kenton Orchestra (1954). Back in Boston, he played with the Varty Haroutunian combo (at the Stable). Pomeroy also started his own band, The Herb Pomeroy Big Band (at the Stable in 1955 with Lennie Johnson, lead trumpet), that was active until 1962, and that backed many celebrity performers such as Mel Tormé, Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, Dionne Warwick, Sarah Vaughan, Nancy Wilson, Zoot Sims, Lee Konitz, Jimmy Heath, Benny Golson, and Gerry Mulligan. Pomeroy also toured with the John Lewis Orchestra USA (1962-63). He played with Sonny Rollins, Ornette Coleman, and Max Roach, and later led various combos and big bands.

In 1955, Herb Pomeroy became a fulltime member of the music faculty at the Berklee College of Music. His student big band was renowned and made several record albums during his forty-one years there. Pomeroy also taught for two years during the early 1960s at the Lenox School of Music, Harvard University, Brandeis University, and was founder and director of the Festival Jazz Ensemble at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) for twenty-two years. A legion of jazz musicians studied with professor Pomeroy, including Bill Berry, Dusko Gojkovic, Joe Gordon, Roy Hargrove, Gary Burton, Alan Broadbent, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Mika Pohjola, Gary McFarland, Frank Amsallem, Dennis Wilson, Tiger Okoshi, Les Allen, Phil Wilson, Greg Hopkins, Michael Gibbs, Joshua Redman, Keith Jarrett, Jeffrey Leonard, and many others. He retired from his teaching position in 1995 and resumed his performing activities. Pomeroy received numerous honors for his teaching, including being inducted into the Downbeat Jazz Education Hall of Fame (1996), Berklee's first Alumni Association Award for Teaching, and induction into the International Associations of Jazz Educators Hall of Fame (1997). He also received an Honorary Doctorate degree from the Berklee College of Music.

Herb Pomeroy and his band made numerous albums. Among them are Jazz in a Stable (Transition), This Is Always (Daring), Walking on Air (Arbors), Life is a Many Splendored Gig (Roulette), Herb Pomeroy's Band in Boston (United Artists), The Band and I (United Artists), Here's to Joe (Brownstone), Rara Avis (Stash), and Premlatta's Hips (Shiah). He died at the age of seventy-six after a long battle with cancer.

Bibl.: Bouchard, Fred. "Herb Pomeroy 1930-2007: Beyond Category" (www.berklee.edu); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Herb Pomeroy" (www.answers.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Herb Pomeroy" (www.allaboutmusic.com).

Ponomarev, Valery [Waleri Ponomarew] (b. Moscow, Russia, Jan. 20, 1943). Russian trumpeter. Ponomarev is considered to be the first prominent jazz trumpeter to emerge from the former Soviet Union. He began playing piano and drums at age ten, but switched to trumpet at fourteen after hearing recordings of Clifford Brown, Lee Morgan, Freddie Hubbard, and others through Voice of America radio programs. He studied at the Moscow Art School and the Moscow Musical College, and played with Earl Hines (1967) and various bop combos. In 1971 at the age of twenty-eight, he defected to Italy where he freelanced for two years before moving to New York City in 1973.

Because of his difficulty speaking English, and the strained Soviet-U.S. relations, Ponomarev had a challenging time earning a living in New York. He attended a concert by Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, and introduced himself to Blakey who allowed him to sit in with the band, and in December of 1976 Ponomarev replaced Bill Hardman on trumpet. During the next four years, Ponomarev recorded nine albums with the group. In tribute to his early hero Clifford Brown, Ponomarev performed at a Clifford Brown memorial concert in 1981.

Ponomarev has had a very successful career as a jazz trumpeter and educator. He leads the group, Universal Language, which has recorded four albums for the Reservoir label. Ponomarev has also released four albums for Reservoir as leader: Beyond the Obvious, Messenger, A Star is Born, and Live in Denver. He has also appeared on various television shows including CNN and To Tell the Truth, discussing his life as an ex-Soviet artist. He was featured in a 2002 documentary titled Messenger from Russia, as well as in the movie, Frozen in Amber. Ponomarev has written an autobiography titled On the Flip Side of Sound.

Ponomarev has performed with Paquito D'Rivera, Arturo "Chico" O'Farril, Pepper Adams, Mercer Ellington, Paul Ellington, Lionel Hampton, Joe Farrell, Warne Marsh, Lee Konitz, Ralph Moore, Kenny Washington, Curtis Fuller, Bobbie Watson, Benny Golson, Vincent Lewis, and many others. He returned to Russia in 1990 to perform at the first International Jazz Festival in Moscow, and has toured Australia, China, and Europe. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from the State University of New York-Empire State College, and teaches part-time at Jazz For Teens Wachovia at the New Jersey Center for the Performing Arts in Newark.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Valery Ponomarev's official website: www.valeryponomarev.com.

Ponzo, Mark (b. Syracuse, New York, Aug. 20, 1957). American trumpeter. While growing up in Syracuse, New York, Ponzo began playing the trumpet at age ten. His first teacher was Steven Pofhal. He earned a bachelor of music degree at the Crane School of Music at the State University of New York in Potsdam (1975-79) studying with Dr. John Schorge, and later attended Syracuse University (1979-81) where he received a master of music degree studying with George Coble.

Ponzo began his professional career as fourth trumpet in the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra (1979-81), coprincipal of the Mexico City Philharmonic (1981-82), and again fourth in the Syracuse Symphony (1982-85). He served as director of bands (1983-89) in the Baldwinsville Central Schools (NY), and worked towards a doctorate in music at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester (1988-90) studying with Barbara Butler. Ponzo has also studied with John Hagstrom, Charles Schlueter, and Richard Jones. He was fourth trumpet of the Rochester Philharmonic during the 1988-89 season, and third trumpet in 1990. After receiving his degree and Performer's Certificate from Eastman, Ponzo accepted a fulltime faculty position at Northern Illinois University (1990 to present).

Ponzo has performed with Chicago's Music of the Baroque, Elgin Symphony, Illinois Chamber Symphony, Chicago Sinfonietta, Illinois Philharmonic, Millar Brass, Chicago Brass Quintet, Light Opera Works, and other groups. He is a member of the New Sousa Band, founding member of the Antiqua Baroque Concert, and is an active recitalist.

Ponzo has released three CDs: Music for Trumpet by Dexter Morrill (Capstone), Dexter Morrill: Three Concertos (Centaur), and The Trumpet Music of Verne Reynolds (Mark Records). He has commissioned new works for trumpet from composers Betsy Schramm, Michael Ruszczynski, James Phelps, Verne Reynolds, Robert Fleisher, Dexter Morrill, Rufus Brown, John Whitney, and others. He has also published numerous etude and exercise books, plus solo pieces with Colin Music, Balquhidder, and Buccine Press.

Ponzo and his wife Lisa Bradley, an occupational therapist, have a daughter, Stephanie Ponzo (b. 1988). He enjoys woodworking, bicycling, and collecting antique cornets.

Bibl.: "Mark Ponzo Biography" (The Complete Sight Reading Etude Collection for Trumpet (Balquhidder Music); Mark Ponzo's official website: www.markponzo.com; personal interview, Oct. 24, 2010.

Poper, Roy (b. Los Angeles, California, Oct. 7, 1948). American trumpeter. Poper grew up in Los Angeles. He began playing the trumpet at age six under the guidance of his father, Richard Poper, who had studied in Long Beach with Herbert L. Clarke and Floyd Hoose. Roy studied with Hoose for two years, then Joan La Rue, and with the legendary James Stamp for eighteen years. After graduating from high school, Poper attended the University of Southern California (under Stamp) from 1970 to 1973, but left before graduating when freelance work consumed too much of his time. He credits Mario Guarneri and Malcolm McNab as being important mentors as he developed his thirty-year career in Los Angeles. He also studied with William Vacchiano and Mel Broiles.

Poper has performed on over two thousand film soundtracks, is a founding member of the Modern Brass Quintet (1973-86), and has performed with Frank Zappa, The Mothers of Invention, various Broadway shows, and numerous jazz players. He was principal trumpet of the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, Los Angeles Music Center Opera Orchestra, and was acting principal of the San Diego Symphony (1982-83 season). He has also been principal of the Los Angeles Master Chorale and the San Luis Obispo Mozart Festival. He has played with the Cleveland Orchestra (1980) and Amadeus Brass Quintet (since 1985).

Much of Poper's career has been devoted to teaching. He completed his bachelor of music degree at USC in 1994, and earned a master of music degree at the California Institute of the Arts in 1996 while serving as the school's trumpet teacher. Other teaching posts include Pepperdine University (1972-75), California State University-Northridge (1976 until about 2000), Pomona College (1980-90), and The University of Southern California (1984-2002). In 1999, he accepted a position as professor of trumpet at the Oberlin Conservatory in Oberlin, Ohio. He has recorded for Nonesuch, Orion, Crystal, and Dorian. Poper is well known for his book, Guide to the Brasswind Methods of James Stamp (Balquhidder Music).

Poper and his wife Laura Kuennen-Poper, a professional violist, have a son, Ian Poper (b. 1994). Poper's hobbies include fly-fishing and making fly rods.

Bibl.: "Roy Poper" (www.oberlin.edu/faculty/rpoper); Poper, Roy. Guide to the Brasswind Methods of James Stamp (Balquhidder); personal interview, Mar. 31, 2011.

Popov, Sergey [Petrov] Petrovich (b. Kornino [near Kiev], Ukraine, Aug. 15, 1914; d. 2012). Unkrainian trumpeter. Popov began lessons with his father, Peter Popov, and was in Wilhelm M. Yablonky's trumpet class (1931-33) at the Kiev Conservatory. He is said to have been the best proponent of his teacher's style of playing. He then played in the TDKA Band (1933-35) and TDKA Symphony under L. Schteynder (1935-37).

Popov worked in various Moscow orchestras, but mostly as principal trumpet of the USSR State Radio-TV Symphony (from 1949 to 1975). He made the first recording of Alexandra Pakhmutova's Trumpet Concerto (under Evgeny Svetlanov), Vassilenko's Trumpet Concerto, and is well known for his recording of Scriabin's Poem of Ecstasy. He also recorded Shostakovich's Piano Concerto No. 1 (under G. Rozhdestvensky) and a Chamber Symphony by Gavriil Popov (not related) with a studio chamber ensemble conducted by A. Korneyev (1976). Popov's son, Valery, has become one of Russian's foremost bassoonists and a professor at the Moscow Conservatory.

Sergey Popov was a Distinguished Artist of The Russian Federation. He retired in 1975, and at the time of his death was working as a tutor in children's musical schools.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); "Valery Popov" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Notes" to the CD, Orchestra Virtuoso Trumpet, Sergei Popov (Vista Vera, 2006); Lavrik, Vladislav. Obituary in International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2012.

Populin, Mario (b. Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 25, 1943). Swiss trumpeter. Populin studied with Carlo Poggi in Bern, Louis Duquénoy in Zurich, and Jean Venos in Winterthur. He was principal trumpet of the Hamburg Symphony (1962-64), and played with the St. Gallen Municipal Orchestra (1965-68), Tonhalle and Theater Orchestra in Zurich (1969-70), and Basel Radio Symphony Orchestra (1971-94). He also taught at the Basel Music Academy (1971-96).

Populin is a well-known entrepreneur, having founded and performed with the pop group, The Symphonics Basel. He is the founder of the PRO MUSICA music shop in Riehen, founder and leader of the Big Band of the Music School in Rheinfelden, and is leader of the Exciting Bigband AG.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Porcino, Al (b. New York, New York, May 14, 1925). American trumpeter. Porcino began playing the trumpet at age fifteen and took lessons from Charles Colin. Three years later, he was playing with Louis Prima's big band where he learned to play lead from the great trumpeter, Sonny Berman. After a year in Prima's band, Porcino freelanced in New York and played many shows at the Paramount Theater. He also studied with Carmine Caruso and Harold "Pappy" Mitchell.

During Porcino's early career, he played with a string of top big bands, usually as lead trumpet, including those of Tommy Dorsey (1944), George Auld (1945), Gene Krupa, Woody Herman's First Herd (1946), Stan Kenton (1947-48), Woody Herman's Second Herd and Third Herd (1949-50), Pete Rugolo, Charlie Parker (1952), Count Basie (1951), Elliot Lawrence (1952), Charlie Barnet, Woody Herman (again in 1954, European tour), and Stan Kenton (again in 1954-55).

Porcino moved to Los Angeles in 1957 and freelanced in the motion picture, television, and recording studios. He cofounded an orchestra with Med Flory called the Jazz Wave Orchestra that recorded for Jubilee. From 1959 to 1967, he played lead in the Terry Gibbs Dream Orchestra and toured a great deal with his own band during the 1960s, backing singers such as Mel Tormé, Frank Sinatra, Ray Charles, Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, Nancy Wilson, Judy Garland, Mark Murphy, Sammy Davis Jr., and others. During the late 1960s, he played in the Buddy Rich Band (1968), Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra (1969-70, 1975-76), Chuck Mangione band (1970-72), and the Woody Herman Band once again (1972).

In 1977, Porcino moved to Munich, Germany, where he worked in various radio orchestras as well as leading a big band, and where he continues to play. Two of his earlier albums are Jazz Wave Orchestra (Jubilee) and In Oblivion (Jazz Mark).

Bibl.: Davidson, Louis. Trumpet Profiles (self-published, 1975); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Tonkins, Les. "Al Porcino" (www.jazzprofessional.com); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & Xxe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Porter, Jake [Vernon Haven] (b. Oakland, California, Aug. 3, 1916; d. Los Angeles, California, Mar. 25, 1993). American trumpeter, songwriter, and record producer. Porter began studying the violin at age seven in 1923, and cornet two years later. His career began in the San Francisco area in 1931 when he joined the jazz band of Melvin Parks. During the 1930s, he played with Lionel Hampton and Saunders King. He moved to Los Angeles in 1940, but was soon drafted into military service, and played in a base band at Camp Lockett, near San Diego. After his discharge in 1943, he toured with the bands of Benny Carter, Fats Waller, Noble Sissle, Fletcher Henderson, and Horace Henderson. He formed his own band during the mid 1940s, and for a short while in 1947 played with Benny Goodman.

Porter, who also occasionally played trombone, was an active songwriter and record producer, and formed his own label, Combo Records, which existed from 1951 to 1958. He produced recordings that mostly featured young, unknown jazz artists and older musicians who were past their prime. Often, he had these artists record songs he had written. His best-known composition was Ko Ko Mo (I Love You So), which was recorded by several famous musicians including Louis Armstrong, Perry Como, and The Crew-Cuts.

In 1964, Porter played with Mike Riley, and in 1969 toured with Little Richard. During the 1970s, he worked as an official for the Los Angeles Musicians Union, and remained an active freelance musician well into the 1980s. Porter sometimes went by the name Vernon Porter.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jake Porter" (http://jazzagemusic.blogspot.com/2009/08/august-3rd.html).

Posvalyuk [Posvaliuk], Valery Terentyevich (b. Kiev, Ukraine, July 20, 1947). Ukrainian trumpeter. Posvalyuk was a student of Oleg Belofastov (1965) and then Wilhelm Yablonsky at the Kiev Conservatory of Music (1965-69). In 1968, he was a prizewinner at the Ukrainian Competition for Performers in Kiev. He played principal trumpet in the Ukrainian State Symphony Orchestra (1967-79) and now occupies similar positions in opera and ballet orchestras. He has worked under Svetlanov, Kondrashin, and Kurt Masur.

Posvalyuk has recorded works by Rudolf Svirsky, Lysenko, and Herbert L. Clarke. He held a teaching post at the Tchaikovsky Academy, then at the Lysenko School of Kiev (from 1969), and finally the National Music Academy of Ukraine (1988-98). He has written numerous articles on historical topics concerning the trumpet and trumpet players, etudes, and pedagogical methods. In 2005, he published his doctoral dissertation for Kiev University, History of the Kiev Trumpet School (of the 19th and 20th centuries).

An active performer and soloist, Posvalyuk has made many radio and television recordings, and is one of the very first Ukrainians to perform on the piccolo trumpet. He is the founder and first president of the Ukrainian Guild of Professional Trumpeters, and hosted the 1998 Euro-International Trumpet Guild Conference in Kiev. He also served on the (now defunct) Euro-ITG board of directors. He was honored by the State in 1999. His son, Konstantin (b. 1974), is also a professional trumpet player.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Powell, J. Fred (b. Roanoke Rapids, North Carolina, July 4, 1964). American trumpeter. Powell began playing the trumpet at age seven, and studied with Fred Woodaman, Mac Wells, and Rolla Durham before graduating from Grace Christian High School in Petersburg, Pennsylvania, in 1982. He earned a bachelor of music degree at Bob Jones University in 1987, studying with Argyle Poddock, and a master of music degree at Florida State University in 1989, studying with Bryan Goff. While in graduate school, he performed as a substitute in the Florida Symphony Orchestra, Jacksonville Symphony, Savannah Symphony, and the Brevard (North Carolina) Symphony. He also freelanced in Orlando, Florida, and performed with the Brassworks Brass Quintet. He has performed with the Boston Brass, Broadway shows, and other leading classical and jazz ensembles.

Powell was interested in trumpet repair and design, so for two years he occasionally apprenticed with Richard Brunk in Norfolk, Virginia. He then worked for Roy Lawler Trumpets for six years, and Kanstul Musical Instruments for one year. He was in charge of all brass design for United Musical Instruments in Elkhart, Indiana, for the next seven years, and Conn-Selmer for two years. In 2005, Powell founded his own company, TrumpeTech, Inc., now maker of J.F. Powell Signature Trumpets. He has also been a design consultant to other companies and is a founding board member of the National Trumpet Competition. Powell is an active freelance musician in the Chicago area.

Fred and Diana Powell were married in 1986, and have two children: James (b. 1995) and Jessica (b. 1998). His hobby used to be stock car racing.

Bibl.: "J. Fred Powell" (www.nationaltrumpetcompetition.org/pages/page.asp?page_id=89359); personal interview, May 26, 2011.

Prager, Nathan ("Nat") (b. Apr. 2, 1910; d. New York, New York, May 1, 1963). American trumpeter. Little is known about Prager's upbringing and early training. His first job as a trumpeter was at age sixteen as the third/assistant principal trumpet of the Cleveland Orchestra. At age eighteen, he became second trumpet to Harry Glantz in the New York Philharmonic (1929), a position he held until his untimely death in 1963.

From all accounts, Prager was the finest second trumpet in the country. For some reason, he had a fear of first parts, but enjoyed playing second. Yet, everyone claimed that Prager's ability on the trumpet was second to none. William Vacchiano, principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic during much of Prager's tenure said, Prager could play any part you put in front of him as long as it said second trumpet...He had the greatest technique, the greatest embouchure...even the great soloists couldn't even come close to him as far as technique, speed and everything else was concerned. He was outstanding! He was a great, humble gentleman...We all loved him. He was fabulous...Everyone recognized Prager...There was never any question as to who was the best. He walked away with all the prizes.

When Glantz left the New York Philharmonic to become principal trumpet of the NBC Symphony under Toscanini in 1942, Prager was offered the job as second trumpet at NBC, but turned it down because he feared that he might have to play some first parts in the studio work. Prager did, however, make hundreds of recordings with the André Kostalanetz orchestra and the Jackie Gleason Show for television. He also took part in the Crest LP by the New York Philharmonic Brass Ensemble.

Harry Glantz said, Nat Prager was the most outstanding second trumpet player I ever knew. John Ware, the Philharmonic's assistant principal trumpet remarked, Nat can make anyone sound great. Prager's own advice to student Frank Kaderabek was to Play second trumpet, you'll live longer and happier. It's paradoxical that Prager died from a sudden heart attack at the age of fifty-three. He left a rehearsal to go home, told his wife that he didn't feel well, and took a nap. When she went in to wake him to go back to work, he was dead. He was replaced by one of Vacchiano's students, Carmine Fornarotto.

Prager was a warm and friendly man. Kaderabek said, Nat Prager was a very quiet man. He never spoke of his achievements or boasted about his ability. Prager used the B-flat trumpet exclusively, even when playing second trumpet in the oratorios of J.S. Bach. He taught at the Manhattan School of Music for many years, and gave thousands of private lessons out of his mother's New York City apartment. When Vacchiano heard the news of Prager's death, he remarked, It felt as if someone had cut off my right arm.

Bibl.: Kaderabek, Frank "Remembrances of Nathan Prager" (New York Brass Conference for Scholarships Journal, 1978); Shook, Brian Andrew. William Vacchiano: His Career as a Trumpet Player and Pedagogue (unpublished diss., Arizona State University. 2006); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pratt, Bobby (b. Aberdeen, Scotland, Jan. 24, 1927; d. Alperton, Middlesex, England, June 5, 1968). Scottish trumpeter. Pratt began playing the trumpet at an early age, and was playing professionally by age sixteen. In 1945, Pratt was working with pianist Archie Alexander when he was called up for military service. He spent the next two years in the Royal Corps of Signals as soloist and bandleader of the Skyliners Army Band stationed at Catterick Camp in Yorkshire. After his release from the military, he played with Ken Mackintosh's band (1948-49). His fantastic upper register earned him the nickname, "The Conrad Gozzo of Britain."

Pratt replaced Stan Roderick as lead trumpet in Ted Heath's band in 1949. He also played with Frank Chacksfield's orchestra, performing Bobby Hackett-style music in three-hour shows three times a day! After leaving Heath's band in 1960, he worked with the big bands of Humphrey Lyttelton, Eddie Harvey, Bob Miller, Ivor Kirchin, Johnny Keating, Tubby Hayes, the Downbeat Big Band, Tommy Watt, Jack Parnell, and others.

When Pratt and Tina Pratt were married in 1957, he decided to become a studio player so that he could be at home with his wife. He backed artists such as Petula Clark, Tom Jones, Laurie Gold, Geoff Love, Matt Monro, and Cilla Black. He played in studio orchestras for numerous television shows including Steptoe and Son, The Arthur Haynes Show, The Dick Emery Show, The Dave Allen Show, Morecambe and Wise, the David Frost Show, and Hancock's Half Hour. He also recorded many movie soundtracks, including the James Bond films From Russia with Love, Goldfinger, and Doctor No. He recorded with John Keating (1956-67), Humphrey Lyttelton (1959), Tubby Hayes (1961), and Ted Heath (Ted Heath Recalls the Fabulous Dorseys, Eclipse LP 2004).

Pratt's many friends described him as a six-foot-tall, lovable and mild-tempered man who never said an unkind word about anyone. He died at the young age of forty-one.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Burdett, Geoff. "Bobby Pratt" (www.jazzprofessional.com/profiles/Bobby%20Pratt.htm).

Preis, Ivo (b. Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 8, 1929). Czech trumpeter. Preis studied with Jaroslav Kolář at the Prague Conservatory from 1951 to 1958. In 1952, the Bop Time Poll selected him as the second best jazz trumpeter in Czechoslovakia. From 1954 to 1955, he was a member of the Karel Vlach and Karel Krautgartner big bands, and in 1959-64 was in the motion picture orchestra of Prague. He also played with Zdenek Bartak, Ladislav Habart, and the Metronome Ensemble. He premiered works by Slava Vorlova and Josef Matej.

Preis was appointed principal trumpet of the Prague Symphony Orchestra in 1964, but in 1968 he fled to West Germany to escape the Soviet invasion. Maestro Herbert von Karajan offered him a position in the Berlin Philharmonic, but he elected to take the position of principal of the Hessian Radio Orchestra (HR) instead. That same year, he released an album titled Trumpet Concertos on the Supraphon label that included works by Telemann, Haydn, L. Mozart, and Richter. In 1971, he recorded the Second Brandenburg Concerto by Bach with the Heidelberger Kammerorchester, and was the first Czech trumpeter to perform on the piccolo trumpet.

Preis toured Japan with the Stuttgart Bach Collegium in 1979. He also played in the Frankfurt Radio Symphony and the HR Big Band (until 1991). He was still playing with the Sachsenhäuser Akkordeon Orchester in 1996.

Bibl.: "Ivo Preis" O.J.'s Page (http://abel.hive.no); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Presencer, Gerard (b. London, England, Sept. 12, 1972). British trumpeter. Presencer's father Alain (an anthropologist and psychologist) was a fine opera singer with an intense passion for jazz. Alain's vast collection of jazz recordings, particularly an album featuring trumpeter Roy Hargrove, inspired Gerard's desire to play the trumpet at the age of ten. He took lessons from Paul Eshelby for four years and by age eleven, was a member of the National Youth Orchestra, an ensemble he played in for five years. When Gerard's father opened a jazz club, Gerard was allowed to sit in with the musicians, which provided him with a great opportunity to develop quickly. He drew inspiration from jazz trumpet greats Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis, Kenny Wheeler, Freddie Hubbard, Woody Shaw, Clifford Brown, and Lee Morgan.

By age eighteen, Presencer was playing jazz at a professional level. During his early career he played with the Charlie Watts Quintet (1991-92), Stan Tracey, the Pizza Express Modern Jazz Sextet (from 1989), Bob Wilber's big band (1991), John Dankworth (1992-93),

Don Weller, Pete King (1994), Gail Thompson's Gail Force, and others. Presencer also had the opportunity to perform with numerous American jazz artists visiting London, including Roy Hargrove, Bill Holman, Herb Feller, Bill Watrous, Teddy Edwards, Conte Candoli, Harold Land, Red Rodney, Phil Woods, Louie Bellson, and Chick Corea.

Now considered a rising star in England, Presencer has performed at jazz festivals in Europe, Japan, and South America. He has played with pop artists Tina Turner and Robbie Williams, and has recorded with Sting, Ray Charles, James Brown, Kylie Minogue, and The Spice Girls. His solo albums include Platypus (Linn), The Optimist (Linn), and Changing Reality (ACT). He has played on albums each year since 1992, one of which, Hand on the Torch (Blue Note) with US3, has sold over three million copies. Presencer has won the trumpet category of the Hamlet British Jazz Awards four times.

As a jazz educator, Presencer has taught at the Guildhall School of Music in London, and has been on the faculty of the London Royal Academy of Music since 1999, as well as the the Hanns Eisler Musikhochschule in Berlin.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Gerard Presencer" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Gerard Presencer" (www.hoppermanagement.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Preston, Edward ("Eddie") L. (b. Dallas, Texas, Sept. 5, 1925; d. Palm Coast, Florida, June 22, 2009). American trumpeter. Preston began trumpet studies at the University of California in 1946, and commenced his professional music career when he joined Johnny Otis (1947-51), and then Lionel Hampton's band in 1955-56. He later played with the bands of Ray Charles (1959), Louis Jordan (1960-61), Duke Ellington (1962 and 1971), Count Basie (1963), and Charles Mingus (1963-65; 1970-72). He also worked as a freelance bebop musician during much of his career, playing with jazz legends such as Sonny Stitt, Frank Foster, Roland Kirk (1977), and Archie Shepp (1979).

Eddie married Annette Preston in 2002. The two had fallen in love about forty years earlier, but had lost track of each other for decades. Annette's daughter from a previous marriage, Celeste Marie Hall, said of Preston, Eddie was a man of very few words. He didn't say a lot, but he was a man who loved to smile and who loved his music. Preston was honored by the National Jazz Museum in Harlem just a few weeks before he died.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom); "Eddie Preston" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Eddie_Preston).

Price, Calvin (b. Williamsport, Pennsylvania, June 18, 1951). American trumpeter. Price began his music studies on piano at age seven, continuing into college. He took up the trumpet at age nine, studying with Don Stroud. He then studied with Don Ramos through high school. After graduating from Ridley High School in Folsom, Pennsylvania, in 1969, he attended the Oberlin Conservatory under C. Eugene Young, earning a bachelor of music degree in trumpet in 1973. From 1973 to 1975, he continued his studies under Armando Ghitalla at the New England Conservatory where he received a master of music degree. Additional study was with Frank Kaderabek.

As a performer, Price has played with the Philadelphia Orchestra (1978-87), Philadelphia Brass Soloists (a quintet with several principal players of the Philadelphia Orchestra), Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra (third/assistant principal, 1982-88), Orchestra Sinfonica di Torino della RAI (principal, 1984-88), Orchestra del Teatro "La Fenice" in Venice (principal, 1985-88), Orchestra da Camera di Padova (principal, 1985-88), Nuova Orchestra Italiana (principal, 1985-88), San Diego Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1988-89), and Philadelphia Orchestra (second/assistant principal, 1989-90). He has been principal of the San Diego Symphony Orchestra since 1990, and has taught as an adjunct faculty member at Glassboro State College (1978-79), Temple University (1980-84), University of Delaware (1982-84), University of the Arts (Philadelphia, 1982-84), San Diego State University (1990-2004), Point Loma Nazarene College (1994-97), and the University of California-Los Angeles (1996-2001). As an active studio player in Los Angeles, Price has recorded soundtracks for numerous television commercials and shows, as well as for films such as Miracle, Men of Honor, Imposter, Kiss the Girls, The Jackal, George of the Jungle, Ransom, Star Trek: First Contact, The Defenders, From Earth to the Moon, and Shooting War. He is the author of Breathing Your Way to Greater Artistry (1st Call Publications), and since 2002 has been the artistic director of the Helix Brass, Trumpetissimo, and Brassissimo. He is also a member of the Due Duo Quartet (two trumpets and two guitars).

Price has been married since 1983 to Mary Cipriani-Price, a licensed marriage and family therapist who is the owner and director of the San Diego Institute for Families and Couples. Their children are Jacqueline (b. 1990) and Evan (b. 1997). His hobbies include snow skiing, swimming, hiking, bicycling, and tennis.

Bibl.: Calvin Price's official website: www.calvinprice.com; personal interview, Apr. 4, 2011.

Price, Michael ("Mike") Burr (b. Chicago, Illinois, Jan. 26, 1941). American trumpeter, composer, and bandleader. Price grew up in Miami, Florida and Valparaiso, Indiana. After graduating from Valparaiso High School in 1959, he received a bachelor of music education degree from Northwestern University studying with Vincent Cichowicz (1959-64), a bachelor's degree in composition from the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1964-67), and a master of music in jazz from the University of Southern California (1986-87).

Price began his career as a big band lead trumpeter with Stan Kenton (1967-68), Buddy Rich (1969-70), the Akiyoshi-Tabackin

Band (1973-83), and the Gerald Wilson Orchestra (1983-89). He also formed and played with the jazz-rock band, Blue Guitar, (1976-83). In addition, he has briefly toured with the bands of Bob Crosby, Harry James, Perry Como, Sammy Davis Jr., Tony Bennett, Stevie Wonder, Cab Calloway, Frank Sinatra, Lou Rawls, Sarah Vaughan, Benny Carter, Julie Andrews, the Manhattan Transfer, the Beach Boys, and others.

In 1988, Price received a grant from the National Endowment of the Arts to study in Japan for a year and a half, after which he decided to stay in Tokyo where his own jazz quintet (formed in 1993) and big band have become very active. He also performs with Nobuo Hara's big band, Sharps & Flats. He has recorded with Toshiko Akiyoshi, Stan Kenton, Grover Mitchell, Buddy Rich, Captain & Tennille, and many others.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Mike Price's official website: www.mikepricejazz.com.

Pride, Steven (b. Maryville, Missouri, Jan. 30, 1957). American trumpeter. Pride earned his bachelor of music degree studying with Eugene Blee at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. He joined the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra as second trumpet in 1980, remaining for twenty-five years, and joined the Queen City Brass in the same year. He has been principal cornet of the Armco [American Rolling Mill Company] Band (now the Frank Simon Band), and plays with the Cincinnati Pops orchestra. He has been a guest teacher at Miami University of Ohio and Northern Kentucky University.

Pride and his wife Patricia, a voice and theory teacher at the Indian Springs Academy, have a daughter and a son. Pride's hobbies include fishing, hiking, and running.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); "Steven Pride" (http://cincinnatisymphony.org/pages/musicianshow2.php?mid=68).

Prima, Louis ("Loui" "Louie") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 7, 1911; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Aug. 24, 1978). American trumpeter and singer. For many years, Prima had "The Wildest Show in Vegas" and was famous for his highly extroverted trumpet playing and comical repartee with his singer-dancer wife Keely Smith. His music inspired the 1990s swing-dance movement.

Prima was born into a musical family that came from Italy, and he began taking violin lessons at the age of seven. When he was thirteen, he studied trumpet with his brother Leon (an accomplished professional trumpeter) and began his career with his own band featuring Irving Fazola (1923). He then played in a pit orchestra at the Saenger Theater in New Orleans and with Red Nichols in Cleveland (1932). In 1933, he moved to Chicago and joined David Rose's orchestra on WGN Radio, and played in the Hotcha Trio with Rose.

On the advice of Guy Lombardo, Prima moved to New York to pursue a career as a trumpeter, and by 1935, was playing with Eddie Miller and George Brunies. Prima played the opening of the Famous Door in NYC (1936). He began recording for the Brunswick label with his group called Louis Prima and His New Orleans Gang, which later recorded for Decca and Vocalion.

Prima moved to Los Angeles and led a big band. His good-natured vocals and extroverted Armstrong-style trumpet playing made him very popular. He composed Sing, Sing, Sing in 1932, and Benny Goodman's famed recording of it made Prima famous. During the 1940s, his recordings of Angelina and Robin Hood were hits that contributed to his success. Prima married several times, but all of those marriages ended in divorce.

By the early 1950s, Prima's style of music, while still novel, was beginning to be considered hackneyed. In 1952, he hired a young singer and dancer named Dorothy Keely, whose shy charm and warm singing style were the perfect opposite to Prima's raspy vocals (à la Armstrong) and wild antics on stage. They became a formidable team and were soon married (his fourth wife). She changed her name to Keely Smith and helped bring the Prima band to new heights, combining swing, Dixieland, rhythm and blues, and early rock-and-roll music into a highly entertaining show filled with comedy.

The popularity of Prima and his band spread throughout Los Angeles. Subsequently, it appeared in several Hollywood films, including Rhythm on the Range (1936), You Can't Have Everything (1937), Start Cheering (1937), Manhattan Merry-Go-Round (1937), Rose of Washington Square (1939), The Benny Goodman Story (1955), Senior Prom (1958), Hey Boy! Hey Girl! (1959), Twist All Night (1961), La Donna di Notte (1962), and Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins (1975). Prima and Smith also won a Grammy Award in 1959 for "Best Performance by a Vocal Group or Choir" with their recording of That Old Black Magic. Prima and Smith had two daughters, Toni Elizabeth and Luanne Frances. Despite their on-stage success, Prima and Smith divorced in 1961. He continued to work and record but his band was not nearly as popular without Smith.

During the late 1960s, Prima contacted a friend in Las Vegas who was the entertainment director for the Sahara Hotel, and pleaded for a job; he was invited to assemble a band to open at the Sahara lounge. Prima's new wife Gia Maione sang with the band, but was not featured nearly as much as Prima's former wife. Nonetheless, his style of music and humor proved successful in the entertainment-oriented city of Las Vegas. His popularity rose to star status and he was soon earning large amounts of money from his three or four performances each night; he moved from the lounge to the main ballroom and became a headliner. He raised racehorses, appeared on television, and even opened a golf course. Walt Disney hired Prima to record the voice of King Louis of the Apes in the animated movie, The Jungle Book, in 1967. He also did voice-overs for the cartoon movie The Man Called Flintstone.

Prima had a mild heart attack in 1973, but in 1975 was diagnosed with a brain tumor. He returned to New Orleans where he underwent surgery to have the tumor removed, but suffered a stroke during the operation. He fell into a coma, was kept alive for three years, but never regained consciousness. He died on August 24, 1978, and was interred in the family plot at the Metaire Cemetery in New Orleans. He was posthumously inducted into the Louisiana Music Hall of Fame in 2008. Vanessa Claire Smith and Jake Broder wrote and starred in a new musical called Louis and Keely Live at the Sahara that premiered in Los Angeles to great acclaim in 2008.

Prima's record albums (all for Capitol records except where noted) include Breaking It Up (1953), The Wildest! (1957), The Call of the Wildest! (1957), The Wildest Show at Tahoe (1958), Las Vegas Prima Style (1958), Hey Boy! Hey Girl! (1959), Strictly Prima (1959), Louis and Kelly (1960), Doin' the Twist (1961, Dot), The Wildest Comes Home (1962), and Let's Fly with Mary Poppins (1965). Compositions not previously mentioned also include A Sunday Kind of Love, Jump Jive and Wail, and Oh Babe! (co-written with Smith).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Louis Prima" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Pringle, Tony (b. Liverpool, England, Dec. 21, 1936). British cornetist and bandleader. Pringle's early professional life was engaged in his native England where he led the Druids Jazz Band. He later played in the New Climax Jazz Band in Leicester. He prefers traditional New Orleans-style music.

Pringle moved to the United States in 1967 and subsequently settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts. In 1970, he cofounded the New Black Eagle Jazz Band with clarinetist Tommy Sancton. (The band had been formed two years earlier by Sancton, and was then known as Tommy Sancton's Black Eagle Jazz Band.) Over the past forty years, the band has regularly performed and recorded for various labels. It has developed a symphonic repertoire and has been featured with numerous orchestras including the Boston Symphony, Baltimore Symphony, and Scottish National Symphony. It toured Holland and Belgium in 2002, and England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland in 2004.

Pringle and the New Black Eagle Jazz Band can be heard on numerous albums, including New Black Eagle Jazz Band (GHB), Old-Fashioned Swing (Stomp Off), New Black Eagle Jazz Band 1981 (Stomp Off), Tight Like This (Stomp Off), New Black Eagle Jazz Band at Symphony Hall (Philo), Dreaming the Hours Away (Stomp Off), and Don't Monkey With It (Stomp Off).

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); New Black Eagle Jazz Band official website: www.blackeagles.com.

Photo credit: Dillon Music

Printup, Marcus (b. Conyers, Georgia, Jan. 24, 1967). American trumpeter. Printup grew up in Conyers, Georgia. His grandfather was a trumpeter who performed with a gospel church group, the sound of which was an inspiration to Marcus, so he began playing the trumpet in fifth grade and continued to play through high school, but didn't get serious about it until his senior year. As a teen, he played in a group called Soul Reason for the Blues.

Printup attended Georgia State University for a year, studying with John Head and Steven Winnick, but transferred to the University of North Florida where he studied with John Almeida and played with the UNF Jazz Trumpet Ensemble (1990). He toured with Marcus Roberts, becoming his road manager in 1991. Roberts introduced Printup to Wynton Marsalis who allowed him to sit in with his group during a concert in southern Florida. Two years later, Marsalis invited Printup to perform with his New York State Theater Ballet. Printup dropped out of school when Marsalis offered him a job with the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra in New York in 1993, whereupon the city of Conyers, Georgia, established the annual Marcus Printup Day, celebrated each August 22.

As a leader, Printup has recorded several solo albums for Blue Note, including Song for a Beautiful Woman, Unveiled, Nocturnal

Traces, *Hubsong*s (with Tim Hagans), Piece in the Abstract, and Bird of Paradise. He also briefly appeared in two films, Dancing about Architecture (with Sean Connery, 1998) and Playing by Heart (1999). He has also performed or recorded with Betty Carter, Dianne Reeves, Wycliffe Gordon (2004), Tim Hagans, Madeleine Peyroux, Carl Allen, Eric Reed, Cyrus Chestnut, and Marcus Roberts, as well as the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra. He received the Dizzy Gillespie composition award from the International Association of Jazz Educators, and the American Society of Composers, Arrangers and Publishers.

Bibl.: LaBarbara, John. "Marcus Printup 'Sorry Coach" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1997); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Prinz, Heinrich (b. Bad Hersfeld, Germany, Aug. 5, 1965). German trumpeter. Prinz grew up in Bruchköbel-Rossdorf. In his youth, he learned to play the piano and organ, starting to play the trumpet at age nine in a local Posaeenchor, and at age fifteen, took trumpet lessons from David Tasa at the Dr. Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt. At age seventeen, he won a prize in the German youth musicians' competition and thereafter was a member of the Hessian Youth Orchestra, with which he also soloed. After his military service with he Army Music Corps No. 2 in Kassel, also soloing with its chamber orchestra in Sweden, he began studies inn 1986; with Tasa at the Hochschule für Musik in Frankfurt. However, he left school early to play in the Rheinische Philharmonie in Koblenz, and the Opera and Museum Orchestra in Frankfurt. Since 1990, he has been principal trumpet of the State Theater Philharmonic Orchestra in Mainz. He completed his music diploma in 1991, in that year receiving a Furthering Prize for Young Artists of the Rhine-Kinzig area. He is now an active soloist in concerts with chamber orchestras and recitals for trumpet and organ.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Privin, Bernard ("Bernie") (b. Brooklyn, New York, Feb. 12, 1919; d. White Plains, New York, Oct. 8, 1999). American trumpeter. Privin was one of ten children in the Privin family, and because it was poor, he lived for eight years in an orphanage. At the age of seven, he began playing the mellophone, and at age thirteen heard a concert by Louis Armstrong at the Apollo Theater. He fell in love with the trumpet and begged his father to buy him one, and so the next day, his father purchased a Carl Fischer trumpet for him for $14. Although Privin enrolled for lessons at the New York School of Music, he learned to play the instrument mostly on his own.

By the age of fifteen, Privin was playing professionally with Harry Reser's group (1937). After that he played with the big bands of Bunny Berigan, Tommy Dorsey, Artie Shaw (1938-39), Charlie Barnet (1940-41), Benny Goodman (1941-42), Mal Hallett, and Jerry Wald. He joined the military in 1943 and played with Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band through 1946. With other members of the Miller Band, he spent some time in Paris and recorded with Django Reinhardt.

After military service, Privin returned to Goodman's band (1946-48), became a freelance and studio player in New York City, and played with Sy Oliver's band (1949-51). He played for NBC for a while, but switched to CBS as a staff musician (1949-74). During these twenty-four years, he continued his jazz performing and recording with Charlie Parker (recording Temptation with him in 1952), Al Caiola (1955), Artie Shaw (mid 1950s), Woody Herman (mid 1950s), World's Greatest Jazz Band, Pee Wee Erwin (European tour, 1974), Tommy Dorsey (European tour, 1974), Kings of Jazz (tour of Europe, 1974), and New York Jazz Repertory Company (tour of Russia, 1975). He also recorded several albums while in Sweden during the 1960s. Privin's personal favorite album was called Dancin' and Dreamin' (Regent, 1956).

Privin was mainly influenced by Louis Armstrong, his childhood hero with whom he became a good friend, and Roy Eldridge, Bobby Hackett, and Billy Butterfield. Privin's dry wit and sense of humor endeared him to everyone he worked with. He and his wife Ethel had two daughters, Beth Ochs and Amy Privin Schwartz.

Privin was active into the 1990s, but developed Parkinson's disease during that decade, which greatly affected his speech and ability to play. In the late 1990s, he was honored by the New York Brass Conference for Scholarships. Several of his close friends, as well as famous trumpeters took the stage to play solos during the ceremony. When asked to speak, Privin had difficulty, but with his usual wit responded, "Is that your best?"

Privin was one of the finest lead and jazz trumpeters in history. He died of colon cancer at the age of eighty.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Voce, Steve. "Bernie Privin Dies" (The Independent); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Prokopov, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich ("Slava") (b. Orenburg, Russia, Dec. 10, 1946). Russian trumpeter. Prokopov completed his initial musical training at the Orenburg Music College, studying with A. Krumgant and A. Simonov, in 1965. From 1962 to 1965, he taught the Orenburg Instrumental Ensemble of the "Pobeda" movie theater. He then studied with Timofei Dokshitser at the Gnesin Institute in Moscow, graduating in 1970. From 1965 to 1970, he was a member of the onstage band at the Bolshoi Theatre, and became one of the principals of the main orchestra from then until January 2006. He taught at the Gnesin Institute beginning in 1972, and was the founder and leader of the Bolshoi Theatre Brass Quintet (starting in 1982). Dokshitser said of him, He was a very well-organized man, good musician, and intelligent teacher. He could influence students, demand, scold, lead, and make them work hard. Upon Dokshitser's retirement, he gave his Selmer piccolo trumpet, which he had received as a gift in 1970 from Maurice André and the Selmer Company, to Prokopov.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Shook, Brian. "Bolshoi Theatre of the Russian Federation Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2012).

Prophet, Jamie (b. 1980). British trumpeter and cornetist. While growing up in Cornwall, England, Prophet played in the Cornwall Youth Jazz Orchestra, Cornwall Brass Band, Bodmin Town Band, and the Cornwall Youth Orchestra. Although piano was his main musical instrument, he concentrated on trumpet while attending the Royal Northern College of Music during the late 1990s. While still a student, he won a position as associate principal trumpet of the BBC Philharmonic at age twenty-one, and in 2006 was named the orchestra's principal trumpeter.

A versatile musician, Prophet founded a jazz quartet with other members of the BBC Philharmonic, Excess Prophet, which has performed since 2000. Jamie is married to Melody Prophet.

Bibl.: Pinnock, Joanna. "Jamie Prophet" (The Brass Herald, Aug. 2011); "JamieProphet" (www.thebrassherald.com/news0315.htm).

Prosser, Douglas ("Doug") (b. Topeka, Kansas, June 10, 1963). American trumpeter. Prosser grew up in Denver, Colorado. He began playing trumpet at age nine; his early teachers were Joseph Docksey and William Pfund. After graduating from Wheat Ridge High School in 1981, he attended the Eastman School of Music from 1981 to 1987 where he earned a bachelor of music degree studying with Barbara Butler and Charles Geyer. He then studied at The Juilliard School with Mark Gould for one semester, but left school to take a position as principal trumpet of the City of Barcelona Symphony Orchestra in Spain from 1987 to 1995. He also taught for six summers at the University of Barcelona.

Prosser joined the Rochester Philharmonic in 1995 as principal trumpet, and has also been an adjunct professor at the Eastman School since 1997. He joined the Eastman Brass in 1998, and took a leave of absence from the Rochester Philharmonic during the summer of 2007 to serve as a substitute player in the Philadelphia Orchestra and Buffalo Philharmonic.

Prosser and his wife Hildegard Mediano, a New York State court interpreter, have three children: Max (b. 1991), Nico (b. 1992), and Andrea (b. 1996). His hobbies include hiking, running, chess, and reading.

Bibl.: "Douglas Prosser" (www.rpo.org/s_3/s_31/p_143/Douglas_Prosser); "Douglas Prosser" (www.harborbrass.org/Faculty.htm); personal interview, Aug. 9, 2011.

Pulcini, Franck [Jean Vincent] (b. Limoges, France, Dec. 14, 1963). French trumpeter. Pulcini started to play at eight and began his trumpet studies at the Limoges Regional National Conservatory under Gérard Dubarry, where he won a both gold medal and a Prix de la Ville (Municipal Prize). He enrolled in the Paris Conservatory where he studied with Pierre Thibaud (1983-86). Additional studies were with Marcel Lagorce, Bernard Jeannoutot, Bo Nilsson, Antoine Curé, Roger Delmotte, and Carmine Caruso. Between 1987 and 1993, Pulcini was a prizewinner at several solo competitions including those in Toulon (1987), Prague (1987 and 1993), and Tallahassee (Ellsworth Smith-International Trumpet Guild, 1993). In 1988, he cofounded the brass ensemble, Epsilon, which won prizes at the Narbonne Competition in France and at a competition in Osaka, Japan.

As an orchestral player, Pulcini played with the Orchestre Régional de Limoges conducted by Guy Condette, Orchestre National de France, Ensemble Intercontemporain, Orchestre National de l'Opéra, Orchestre Bordeaux-Aquitaine, and Capitole (Toulouse), and then was principal of the Montpellier Symphony Orchestra from 1988 to 1990. He has performed with the Radio France Philharmonic Orchestra, Frankfurt Radio Orchestra, and Munich Radio Orchestra. He is currently principal of the Southwest German Radio Symphony Orchestra in Freiburg. Pulcini has taught for the Traveling University of Caracas, Venezuela (1997-2000) and the Brass Week Festival in France. He is now teaching at the Mulhousen Conservatory.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Franck Pulcini" (http://procustom.yamaha-europe.com/trumpoet/de.artists.php?id=123).

Pursell, John O. (b. Phillipsburg, New Jersey, May 4, 1953). American trumpeter. Pursell earned bachelor and master of music degrees studying with Kenneth Laudermilch at West Chester State College (now West Chester University) in Pennsylvania, and a doctor of musical arts degree with Emerson Head at the University of Maryland. He has also studied with Mel Broiles and Seymour Rosenfeld.

Pursell spent twenty-one years in the US Air Force Ceremonial Band in Washington, D.C., rising to the position of Senior Ceremonial Trumpeter. He also played with the USAF Ceremonial Brass, Concerto Soloists of Wilmington, Philly Pops orchestra, and the Orchestra Society of Philadelphia. Although retired from the military, he is an active trumpet soloist and clinician, and teaches at Frederick Community College in Maryland (since 2002) and The Sunderman Conservatory at Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania. He is the author of the book, What I've Learned—The Free Lance Trumpeter's Guide to Professional Music (self-published).

Bibl.: John Pursell's official website: www.johnpursell.com.

Purvis, John ("Jack") (b. Kokomo, Indiana, Dec. 11, 1906; d. San Francisco, California, Mar. 30, 1962). American trumpeter. When Purvis's mother Nettie died in 1912, his bad behavior overwhelmed his father Sanford, a real estate agent. He committed a series of petty thefts that landed him in a reform school, where he learned to play the trumpet and trombone well enough that he was able to play music professionally while attending high school. Ironically, one of his first playing jobs was with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Band. He also worked with Hal Denman's dance band (from 1921). After high school, he worked in Indiana, and moved to Lexington, Kentucky, where he joined the Original Kentucky Night Hawks (until 1926). He also learned to fly small airplanes.

In 1926, Purvis was with Bud Rice's band that toured New England. He also played with Whitey Kaufman's Original Pennsylvanians. He mar-ried in Pittsburgh in 1927, and soon became the father of daughter Betty Lou. He played with Arnold Johnson's orchestra for a short while, and between August and October 1928 toured France with George Carhart's band. Reportedly, he was forced to return to America after being caught cheating a tourist out of their traveler's checks. He then joined Hal Kemp's band from 1929 to 1930, recording with Kemp and others. He led a couple of racially mixed recording sessions in 1930, and during the same year left the Kemp organization because of legal complications that prevented him from traveling to Florida with the band. He found work with the California Ramblers (1930), the Dorsey Brothers, and Fletcher Henderson (1932).

Purvis attempted suicide several times. His lack of accountability plagued him throughout his career, and he was considered to be unreliable in showing up for gigs. From 1932 to 1933, he played with a few radio orchestras and with Fred Waring. In 1933, he toured the South with Charlie Barnet, and moonlighted as a pilot, smuggling illegal goods out of Mexico. He moved to California and was successful with radio broadcasting work, playing as a member of the George Stoll Orchestra, and working as a staff arranger for Warner Brothers Studios, but left Los Angeles to become a chef in San Francisco (!). At the end of 1935, he joined Frank Froeba's Swing Band in New York. The recordings he made in 1935 were the last of his career.

After getting out of music for a couple of years, Purvis was arrested in Texas in June of 1937 for having been involved in a robbery in El Paso. He was tried, convicted, and sent to Huntsville Prison, where he directed the Rhythmic Swingsters, a prison band in which he played piano; the group regularly broadcasted on radio station WBAP in 1938. He was conditionally released from prison in August of 1940, but soon violated his parole and was sent to prison for six more years. He was finally released on September 30, 1946.

Purvis's later life was spent playing in various bands, but never for very long. He had a reputation for setting hotel rooms on fire, and was believed to work as a private mercenary in South America. He took odd jobs as a chef, radio repairman, aviator, and carpenter. Supposedly, he gassed himself to death in San Francisco on March 30, 1962. Despite his torrid and tragic life, he is considered one of the greatest jazz trumpeters of his day. He could play hot solos as well as Louis Armstrong, and composed several tunes now considered standards: Dismal Dan, Down Georgia Way, Poor Richard.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jack Purvis" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jack_Purvis).

Puttkammer [Putkamer], Franz (fl. Moscow, Russia, 1883-1903). Russian cornetist, trumpeter, alto hornist, and conductor. Little is known about Puttkammer's life and training. He was hired as a cornetist for the ballet formation of the Imperial Bolshoi Theatre on January 16, 1883, and from then until July 1, 1903 played trumpet and cornet with that organization.

Puttkammer taught at the Musical College of the Moscow Philharmonic Society from 1883, and was one of the teachers of Max Schlossberg and Mikhail Tabakov. Along with colleague August Marquardt, he established the Bolshoi Theatre Brass Quartet, perhaps the world's first chamber brass ensemble. Near the end of his career, Puttkammer and Marquardt were replaced in the quartet by cornetists Vasily Brandt and Mikhail Tabakov. Puttkammer then played E-flat alto horn (in the shape of a trumpet) in the group. (See photo of quartet in biography of Vasily Brandt.) Puttkammer retired in 1903.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Edtions).

Q

Quealey, Chelsea (b. Hartford, Connecticut, 1905; d. Las Vegas, Nevada, May 6, 1950). American trumpeter. Quealey learned to play the saxophone before switching to trumpet. At age nineteen or so, he began his career with Jan Garber (1925) and then played with the California Ramblers (1926-27). He recorded with the Goofus Five, a subset of the California Ramblers.

Quealey sailed to England in 1927, where he recorded with Fred Elizalde. He stayed there for about two years, working with various groups until ill health caused him to return to the U.S. in 1929. After recovering, he played at the Paramount Theatre and with Don Voorhees, the California Ramblers again (1931), and briefly with Paul Whiteman's orchestra and Ben Pollack's band. He recorded with Mezz Mezzrow (1934) and worked with Isham Jones (1935-36), Red McKenzie, Joe Marsala, Frankie Trumbauer (1937), and Bob Zurke's big band (1939-40). During the 1940s, he played Dixieland music at Nick's and other clubs in New York City. From about 1946 until his death, Quealey performed in California and in Las Vegas. He died from heart problems at the age of forty-four or forty-five.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.) The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Quinque, Rolf (b. Brehna, Germany, June 20, 1927). German trumpeter. Quinque's early studies were at the Dommitzsch Music School. He learned to play the violin, and in 1938 began teaching himself to play the trumpet. He attended the Leipzig Music Academy from 1946 to 1949 where he studied with professor Heinrich Teubig, principal trumpeter of the Gewandhaus Orchestra. In 1950, Quinque replaced his teacher in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, playing there until 1957 when he joined the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra as principal trumpet. With the Gewandhaus, Quinque played the difficult works by Bach such as Mass in B minor and Second Brandenburg Concerto.

In 1971, Quinque resigned from the Munich orchestra in order to begin a fulltime solo career. He possessed an extraordinary upper register and was a brilliant performer on the piccolo trumpet. He gave countless performances of Bach's Brandenburg in addition to more than forty live performances of the concertos of Michael Haydn (in D) and Franz Xavier Richter. He was also the first to perform Hans Zender's nearly impossible solo, Vexilla Regis. He won acclaim as a soloist at important music festivals in Vienna, Salzburg, Berlin, Edinburgh, and other places.

Quinque performed in many live radio broadcasts, and recorded several albums including many versions of the Concerto by Richter (Quinque rediscovered that work and was a specialist in it). He taught at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in Munich from 1971 to 1989 and was head of the brass department. He published two books, Atmung Stütze Ansatz Technik (1980) and Atmung Stütze Ansatz Methode (1981) that are based on the no-pressure system.

Bibl.: Quinque, Rolf. Atmung Stütze Ansatz Technik (Editions BIM); Quinque, Rolf. Atmung Stütze Ansatz Method (Editions BIM); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Tarr, Edward H. Das Gewandhaus Orchester: Seine mitglieder und seine Geschichte seit 1743 (Faber & Faber, 2006); "Rolf Quinque" (www.editions-bim.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

R

Rabbai, George (b. Bridgeton, New Jersey, Aug. 15, 1953). American trumpeter. Rabbai began playing trumpet at age thirteen under the guidance of his father, Eugene Rabbai. After two years of study, he took lessons for several years with John Thyssen. Rabbai graduated from Bridgeton High School in 1971, and attended Glassboro State College (now Rowan University), studying with Thyssen from 1971 to 1976, but leaving school before graduating to perform in the Philadelphia area and with various dinner theaters in Atlantic City, New Jersey. He toured with the Woody Herman band from 1980 to 1982, but continued with Herman on and off throughout the 1980s while working steadily in Atlantic City casinos. He also performed with the Concord Jazz All Stars, Scott Hamilton, and Frank Wess. While freelancing or in college, he also studied with Seymour Rosenfeld, Sidney Mear, James Burke, Vincent Penzarella, and Carmine Caruso.

Rabbai has recorded with numerous jazz musicians, among them Rufus Reid, Hank Jones, and Mel Lewis, and has also worked with Rosemary Clooney, Michael Feinstein, Tony Bennett, and Margaret Whiting, among others. His solo CDs include Lemon Drop (DBK), In Good Company (DBK), Muted Bebop (Dreambox Media), and the double-CD set, Romance on Broadway and Romance on Film. He was featured in the television special, Tony Bennett with Love, and has recorded film soundtracks for Baseball and The West. He is currently teaching as an adjunct professor at Rowan University (since 1985) and at the University of the Arts in Philadelphia (since 1989). He is an active Civil War re-enactor and bugle player who has recorded all of the Civil War bugle calls and published the book, Fun with the Bugle (Mel Bay Publishing). His bugle is heard in the films Wicked Spring and The Last Goodbye.

Rabbai and pianist and organist Marilyn W. Rabbai have been married since 1987. His hobbies include bird watching and hiking.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Mar. 28, 2012.

Lower photo: Rabbai (left) with Jari Villanueva, by Rob Mesite.

Rabold, Frédéric (b. Paris, France, Nov. 23, 1944; d. Waldbrunn-Busenbach, Baden-Württemberg, Germany, Dec. 26, 1993). French trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. Rabold studied at the Musikhochschule in Karlsruhe (Germany) from 1961 to 1964. In 1965, he played in the Alex Quartet Rascals, and in 1968 founded his first ensemble, Crew, that immediately drew attention as one of Germany's leading modern jazz groups. It toured Europe under the auspices of the Goethe Institute, and released several LP albums for the Spinning Wheel, MPS, and Calig labels.

Rabold worked with numerous avant-garde jazz musicians including Gunter Hampel, Lester Bowie, Manfred Schoof, Perry Robinson, and Leszek Zadlo. Between 1984 and the early 1990s, he led the Uni Big Band in Stuttgart and his own Ice Cream Jazz Band.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Radcliff, Susan (b. c1960). American trumpeter. Radcliff received her bachelor of music degree from the State University of New York at Purchase, and her master of music and doctor of music degrees from the State University of New York at Stony Brook. One of her teachers was William Vacchiano. She has been a freelance artist in the New York area since 1980, performing with the Orchestra of St. Luke's, Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, Solisti New York, Sea Cliff Chamber Players, Fairfield Orchestra, and New York City Ballet Orchestra. She has also performed with the San Francisco Contemporary Music Players, Parnassus, Beata Moon Ensemble, and the Other Minds Ensemble.

Radcliff has made numerous recordings with the ensembles she plays with, and teaches at her own private studio. She has been a member of various pit orchestras for musicals such as South Pacific. She is also known for her ability to play the Baroque (valveless) trumpet.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rader, Don[ald] Arthur (b. Rochester, Pennsylvania, Oct. 21, 1935). American trumpeter. Rader moved with his family to Los Angeles when he was seven. He had already started playing the trumpet two years earlier under the guidance of his father, a professional trombonist. Rader attended Long Beach City College in 1954, and joined the Navy later that year; he studied at the Naval School of Music (1954-55), and upon discharge majored in music at Sam Houston State Teachers College (now Sam Houston State University) from 1958 to 1959. He also took jazz lessons from Jerry Coker.

Rader moved to New York City in 1959 and began freelancing with numerous big bands. He toured with Woody Herman (1959-61, 1966), Maynard Ferguson (1961-63), Count Basie (1963-64), Terry Gibbs (1967, 1969), Louie Bellson, Harry James, Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich, and Les Brown (on and off 1967-72 and 1986-90). He also made many arrangements for Herman, Ferguson, and Basie. In 1972, Rader moved back to Los Angeles and formed his own quintet; he often performed with the Toshiko Akiyoshi-Lew Tabackin big band (1974). From 1982 to 1990, he lived in Europe, performing mostly with Peter Herbolzheimer's orchestra. He also played as a staff member of South German Radio-Television in Stuttgart, Radio Zurich in Switzerland, NDR radio orchestra in Hamburg, Germany, and WDR Radio band in Cologne, Germany.

In 1994, Rader moved to Sydney, Australia, and became a studio and jazz performer. He has worked in all of the television and film studios, and occasionally taught at the Sydney Conservatory of Music, as well as at Polytech in Christchurch, New Zealand, and Polytech in Wellington, New Zealand.

Rader's career includes many impressive recordings and tours with such artists as Henry Mancini, Percy Faith, Les Brown, Bob Hope (twelve years), Della Reece, Jerry Lewis (thirty-three years of Muscular Dystrophy Telethons), Terry Gibbs Dream Band (ten years), Diana Ross, Louie Bellson, Benny Carter, Supersax, Elvis Presley, Frank Sinatra Jr., and Andy Williams, among others. His list of recordings as leader includes Polluted Tears, Wallflower, Anemone, Off the Beaten Track, and Foreign Affair. He has recorded for Columbia, Palo Alto, Jet Danger, DRM, Discovery, PRB, Tall Poppies, and Bellaphon.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Don Rader's official website: www.donradermusic.com; "Don Rader Interview" (www.jazzprofessional.com).

Radke, Fred (b. Oakland, California, June 20, 1943). American trumpeter and bandleader. Radke grew up in Oakland, California. He began playing the trumpet at age seven; his first teachers were Weldon Leonardson, Dick Lotter, Billy Catalano, and Joseph Alessi. He soon joined the Weldonians band, and by age fifteen was playing professionally with the Sal Carson and Dick Stewart big bands. During his late teens, he led a band on a steamship that crossed the Pacific Ocean.

After graduating from Oakland High School in 1960, Radke attended the College of San Mateo, where he was the featured soloist and leader of The Lancers vocal group. Influenced by the trumpet playing of the legendary Harry James, Radke worked with Marlene Dietrich, Burt Bacharach, Johnny Mathis, and others before joining the Harry James Orchestra as lead trumpet. After James died in 1983, the James Estate asked Radke if he would lead the Harry James Orchestra in a seventy-one-concert tour of America in celebration of the band's fiftieth anniversary. He continued touring as the band's leader and soloist in 1994-95 and again in 1998.

During his long and distinguished career, Radke has played lead trumpet in the bands of Glenn Miller (conducted by Ray McKinley), Dick Jergens, Leslie Uggams, Johnny Ray, Phil Harris, The Modernaires, Jack Jones, The Lennon Sisters, The King Family, The Pied Pipers, Earl Grant, Dennis Day, Connie Stevens, Pat Boone, Edie Adams, Anita O'Day, Connie Haines, Mel Tormé, Ella Fitzgerald, and others. He has been a featured soloist with the Seattle Symphony, Edmonton Symphony, and other classical organizations. He has made numerous television appearances, and has performed for several U.S. presidents, including Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan, and George Bush.

Radke is a prolific recording artist, and has produced television specials for Diahann Carroll, Connie Stevens, Gina Fumes, Kay Starr, Frankie Lane, Frank Sinatra Jr., Rich Little, and others. He has won three Telly Awards.

Radke is currently teaching jazz at North Seattle Community College and fronting the Harry James Orchestra. The mayor of Seattle proclaimed May 6 as "Fred Radke Day." In 1988, Radke received the Evergreen Safety Council's "Public Service Award." In addition to receiving numerous music awards, he serves on various foundation boards, and is an active composer and arranger.

Fred and Gina Radke (also known as Gina Funes), a well-known singer, have been married since 1966, and have three children: Maurice (a retired Navy officer and current professional golfer in Hawaii), Francine (a law officer for Albertson's stores in Seattle), and H.B. (a professional trumpeter, singer, and bandleader). Radke's hobbies include jogging, fly-fishing, and snow skiing.

Bibl.: "Fred Radke" (www.harryjamesband.com); "Fred Radke" (https://people.northseattle.edu/users/fredke); personal interviews, Mar. 6 and 7, 2011.

Radzischewski, Heinz (b. Wasserburg am Inn, Germany, Mar. 2, 1954). German trumpeter. Radzischewski's first trumpet lessons were with his father, a local band director in Wasserburg. From 1970 to 1974, he studied with Walter Uhlemann at the Musikhochschule in Munich, and soon became principal of the Bad Reichenhall Philharmonic (1974-76) and of the City Theater orchestra in Ulm (1976-79). Since 1979, he has been assistant principal of the German Symphony Orchestra in Berlin, and also serves as head of the orchestra board. He is a member of various chamber groups such as the the Berlin Chamber Orchestra, Berlin Brass Soloists, and the Praetorius Ensemble Berlin and has performed with the C.P.E. Bach Chamber Orchestra, Bach Collegium Berlin, and the German Chamber Virtuosi of Berlin. In 1987-88, he spent his summers playing with the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ragin, Hugh (b. Houston, Texas, Apr. 9, 1951). American trumpeter and composer. Ragin learned to play the piano from his mother at an early age. At thirteen, he switched to trumpet and later earned a bachelor of music education degree at the University of Houston. He then attended Colorado State University where he received a master of music degree.

Ragin is a post-bop performer with a tendency toward the avant-garde. His interest in all kinds of music has led him to perform with symphony orchestras, as well as with artists such as David Murray, Spencer Barefield, Sun Ra, Fred Wesley, Dizzy Gillespie, Maynard Ferguson (1983), Andrew Cyrille, Leo Smith, Anthony Braxton, D.D. Jackson, and poet Amiri Baraka, and he is a member of the Park Hill Brass Quintet in Denver. He taught for a while at Oberlin College in Ohio. His recordings include Team Work, Metaphysical Question, An Afternoon in Harlem, and Live at the Knitting Factory. He also recorded with Roscoe Mitchell.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Hugh Ragin" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ramírez (-Velázquez), Pedro (b. Acámbaro, Guanajuato, Mexico, 1939). Mexican trumpeter and producer. In 1945, the Ramírez family moved to Mexico City where Pedro's father Fermín played in a mariachi band at Plaza Garibaldi. Young Pedro loved to play his father's trumpet each morning before school, but this awakened his father, so Fermín locked his trumpet case each night when he returned home from work. Pedro traded fruit and vegetables from the family garden for a pottery trumpet so that he would have something to play. Sensing the seriousness of his son's attitude towards the trumpet, Fermín bought him a real trumpet and began giving him lessons.

Pedro's early playing experience in music was standing at his father's side, playing second trumpet in mariachi bands. Fortunately, the idea of having two trumpets in a mariachi ensemble had achieved popularity due in part to the pioneering efforts of Miguel Martínez with the group Mariachi Vargas during the 1940s, and with Mariachi México de Pepe Villa during the early 1950s. When Martínez left the latter group in 1954, fourteen-year-old Ramírez was invited to audition. Having shown remarkable talent for his age, and having studied at the Escuela Libre de Música, Ramírez accepted the position where he would spend the next twenty years.

Ramírez left Mariachi México in 1974 in order to devote most of his time to arranging, directing, and producing. He has managed numerous celebrity artists including Vincente Fernández, Angélica María, Leo Dan, Roberto Carlos, Gerardo Reyes, and Vikki Carr. He received an American Grammy Award for "Best Producer in Mexican-American Performance" (with Vikki Carr, 1985), and Latin Grammy Awards in 2000 and 2004 for "Best Producer in Ranchero." He was inducted into the Mariachi Hall of Fame in 2007.

Bibl.: "Pedro Ramírez Velázquez" (http://mariachispectacular.com/2007-pedro-ramirez-velazquez).

Ramm, Kurt (b. Lochau [near Halle/Saale], Germany, Aug. 25, 1921). German trumpeter. Ramm studied at the Görlach Music School in Halle from 1936 to 1940, and then the Dortmund Conservatory until 1943. His teachers were Franz Herbst and Karl Seegers. He started his career in July of 1947 as a member of a light music orchestra for the Leipzig radio, and from 1954 to 1957 played in the large orchestra for the Leipzig radio. Simultaneously, he was able to study trumpet at the Leipzig Hochschule für Musik with Franz Herbst (1947-49) and Karl Seegers (1954-56).

Ramm became the second trumpet of the Gewandhausorchester in Leipzig in May of 1957, a position he held until July of 1979. He also taught at the Leipzig Hochschule für Musik from 1959 to 1986, becoming a full professor in 1981.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rampton, Kenny (b. Las Vegas, Nevada, Aug. 20, 1967). American trumpeter. Rampton grew up in Las Vegas and attended the University of Nevada and the Berklee College of Music in Boston. In 1989, he moved to New York City and worked as a freelance and jazz musician. He toured with the Ray Charles Orchestra and Panama Francis & The Savoy Sultans, Jimmy McGriff, Jon Hendricks, as well as performing with the Lincoln Center Afro-Latin Jazz Orchestra, Chico O'Farrill's Afro-Cuban Jazz Big Band, Supersound, Clark Terry, Wynton Marsalis, Joe Henderson, the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, Lionel Hampton, Charli Persip, Dr. John, Slide Hampton, and others. In addition, he has been a member of the Mingus Big Band, Mingus Orchestra, Mingus Dynasty, George Gruntz Concert Band, and the Bebo Valdès Latin Jazz All-Stars. He also leads his own jazz sextet.

Kenny Rampton has played in the pit orchestras of numerous Broadway shows, and has worked as a studio player who recorded many radio and television jingles. His 2006 solo album is titled Moon over Babylon.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Annibale, Ed. Trumpeters Galore (Trafford); Kenny Rampton's official website: www.kennyrampton.com.

Ranch, Lars (b. Copenhagen, Denmark, Dec. 28, 1965). Danish trumpeter. Few musicians have as broad a career as does Ranch. His first musical studies were with his father, Finn Ranch. After a few years, Lars joined the Tivoli Guard Band in Copenhagen, and was principal trumpet from 1979 to 1982. As a boy, he was awarded various prizes and had an opportunity to sit in with big bands conducted by Thad Jones and Bob Mintzer. He attended the Royal Danish Music Conservatory in Copenhagen from 1982 to 1984 where he studied with Kurt Pedersen and Ole Andersen. By the early 1980s, he developed a freelance career that included concerts with the Danish Radio Symphony, Philharmonic Orchestra of Copenhagen, Royal Band, Seeland Music Corps, and other leading ensembles.

Ranch moved to Paris in 1984 to study with Pierre Thibaud (until 1989). He worked as a studio player there from 1987 to 1989, and was principal trumpet of l'Orchestre des Prix in Paris from 1988 to 1989. In 1989, he moved to Germany where he served as assistant principal of the Bremen Philharmonic Orchestra (1989-91) and principal with the State Philharmonic Orchestra of Hamburg (1991-92). Since 1992, he has been a soloist and member of the Royal Danish Brass, and since October of 1994 has been principal of the Berlin Radio Symphony Orchestra. He is an active concerto soloist with orchestras, a recitalist with piano and organ, leads his own brass quintet (RanchBrass) and big band (Lars Ranch Party Band), and is a member of The Swinging Brass and the Royal Danish Brass Band. Since 2005, he has been teaching at Otto von Guricke University in Magdeburg, Germany.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Lars Ranch's official website: www.solo-trumpeter.de/.

Randall, Frederick ("Freddy") James (b. East London, England, May 6, 1921; d. Teignmouth, Devonshire, England, May 18, 1999). English trumpeter and bandleader. Randall began playing the trumpet at age fifteen and was self-taught. He never learned to read music but managed to eventually become one of England's greatest jazz musicians. His first professional experiences were with Albert Bale's Darktown Strutters and Will De Barr's Band.

Randall formed his first band, the Saint Louis Four, in 1939. He joined the Army Rifle Brigade in 1940 and was released from military service in 1943; he then formed his own Dixieland band. He also joined John Dankworth and Freddie Mirfield's Garbage Men, a comedy group that garnered numerous prizes and recorded for Decca. They held a residency at Cooks Ferry Inn at Edmonton for many years and became one of the most popular groups in the country. Randall was a guest soloist with Ted Heath, Henry Hall, Harry Parry, and Bert Ambrose.

Freddy Randall formed his own groups and made numerous guest solo appearances during the 1940s and 1950s. He made many Dixieland recordings between 1948 and 1957, performing in a Chicago style similar to that of Wild Bill Davison and Muggsy Spanier. Saxophonist and colleague Bruce Turner once said of Randall that He bounced around that stage like a rubber ball, exuding charm. He didn't merely attack a thirty-two-bar chorus, he positively violated it...[He] had more technique and brash self-confidence than all of us others put together.

As one of England's leading jazz musicians, Randall often performed with American jazz artists visiting the U.K. Some of the better-known artists were Wild Bill Davison, Bud Freeman, Pee Wee Russell, Sidney Bechet, Bill Coleman, and Jimmy and Marian McPartland. As part of a 1956 cultural exchange program, Randall visited the United States and performed in New Orleans and throughout the South. (Louis Armstrong participated in the exchange by touring England.)

Serious lung problems plagued Randall in 1958, and he was forced to stop playing. In order to make a living, he purchased and ran a hotel. He also ran a nursing home for a while and invested in property conversions. But, in 1963 he was persuaded to return to playing on a part-time basis. After two years, he stopped playing again until 1971. However, when Britain's Greatest Jazz Band was assembled during the early 1970s, Randall could not refuse an invitation to join this group. He also co-led the Freddy Randall-Dave Shepherd Jazz All-Stars for several years, performing live radio and television shows and making a live recording at the 1973 Montreux Jazz Festival. He was also notorious for firing band members by letter or telegram. In semiretirement from 1975, he quit performing in 1993.

Some of Freddy Randall's LP recordings include Freddy Randall-Dave Shepherd Jazz All-Stars (Black Lion), Live at Montreux (Black Lion) and Benny Waters-Freddy Randall Jazz (Jazzology). He and his wife Ivy had one son and one daughter. Randall died at the age of seventy-eight.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Vacher, Peter. "Freddy Randall" (The Guardian, May 26, 1999); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Freddy Randall, Trumpeter, Bandsman" (The Scotsman, 1999); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Randolph, Irving ("Mouse") (b. St. Louis, Missouri, June 22, 1909; d. New York, New York, Dec. 10, 1997). American trumpeter. Randolph started his career around 1920 when he played in Fate Marable's band aboard various riverboats near St. Louis. He later toured with several territorial bands including those of Walt Farrington (1923-24), Willie Austin (1925-26), Art Sims-Norman Mason (1926), King Oliver (1927), Floyd Campbell (1927-28), Alphonso Trent (1928), and J. Frank Terry (1929-30). From 1931 to 1933, he was in Kansas City as part of Andy Kirk's Twelve Clouds of Joy.

Randolph moved to New York in 1934 and soon joined Fletcher Henderson's orchestra (1934). He also played with Benny Carter, Luis Russell, Cab Calloway (1935-39), Ella Fitzgerald (1939-42), Don Redman (1943), Edmond Hall (1944-47), and Eddie Barefield (1950), and toured with Marcellino Guerra's Latin American Orchestra. He was with Chick Morrison's orchestra from 1958 into the early 1970s, but also played and recorded with Harry Dial's Bluesicians in 1961.

Randolph chose to hang on to the swing style of music even though it went out of fashion during the early 1950s. As a result, he ended up in obscure bands that never recorded or toured, and his reputation soon faded away. Influenced by Red Allen, he had a big tone and a keen sense of melody. His best solo was on Tea for Two, recorded with Teddy Wilson (1936), and he participated in the Zodiac Suite recorded by Mary-Lou Williams in 1945.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Randolph, Zilner T[renton] ("Randy") (b. Dermott, Arkansas, Jan. 28, 1899; d. Chicago, Illinois, Feb. 2, 1994). American trumpeter and arranger. Randolph attended Briddle University (now Johnson C. Smith University), the Krueger Conservatory, and the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music. He played with various territory bands during the 1920s, including that of Bernie Young (1927-31). He moved to Chicago in 1931 and became Louis Armstrong's musical director (1931-32, 1933, 1935); he participated in several of Armstrong's recordings and composed the tune, Old Man Mose. During the mid 1930s, he played with Carroll Dickerson and Dave Peyton. He led his own band in the late 1930s, and his own jazz quartet during the 1940s.

As an arranger, Randolph worked for Earl Hines, Woody Herman, Fletcher Henderson, and Duke Ellington, as well as Armstrong. He devoted himself mostly to teaching during the 1950s through the '70s, recorded as a pianist in 1951, and led the house band at the Indiana Theater (on and off during the 1950s).

Randolph's children include vocalist Hattie Randolph (b. 1932) and trumpeter Lucious Randolph (b. 1935).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Zilner Randolph" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Zilner_Randolph).

Ranger, Louis D. (b. Syracuse, New York, Mar. 29, 1949). American and Canadian trumpeter (dual citizenship). Ranger began playing trumpet at the age of nine, and his first private teacher (at age ten) was Harold Back, the same person who had taught Edward Tarr to play the trumpet. His first band director was Anthony DeAngelis at the Lyncourt School in Syracuse, New York, and his band director at Nottingham High School in Syracuse, was John Ianotta. Ranger also studied with Armando Ghitalla at Boston University's Tanglewood program, now called the Tanglewood Institute, during the summer of 1966, the first year of that program.

After graduating from high school in 1967, Ranger enrolled at Boston University in order to continue his studies with Ghitalla, and also performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra while studying there. In 1969, he won a position with the American Brass Quintet, moved to New York City, and transferred to The Juilliard School where he took lessons from William Vacchiano, principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic, graduating with a bachelor of music degree in 1972. In addition to playing with the ABQ, he was an active New York freelance performer from 1970 to 1978, appearing with the New York City Ballet Orchestra, Berlin Philharmonic, Prague Chamber Orchestra, The Bach Aria Group, The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble led by Arthur Weisberg, Speculum Musicae, and many others. He was a regular member of the American Symphony Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski, the Musica Aeterna Orchestra under Fritz Waldmann, and was coprincipal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic under Pierre Boulez during the 1977-78 season. He also played with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, and recorded with Gerard Schwarz.

Ranger played with the American Brass Quintet until 1978 when he accepted a professorship at the University of Victoria in Canada. He has periodically subbed as first trumpet in the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, and is a founding member of Aventa, a contemporary music ensemble based in Victoria. In 1985-86, he spent a year in Paris, France, during which time he had the opportunity to play first trumpet in a performance with the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande in Geneva, Switzerland. He has also performed in the Casals Festival Orchestra in Mexico City, and has been principal in Aspen Festival orchestras since 1970. An active recitalist, he has released a solo CD titled The Trumpet Comes of Age: 1940-1980 on the Crystal Records label.

Ranger and his wife, violinist Kathryn Appleby Ranger, have been married since 1974, and have two children: Abigail (b. 1979) and Katelyn (b. 1983). His hobbies include motorcycling, fishing, and building scale model cars.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Louis Ranger" (www.wedgemouthpiece.com/wedge-heads/louis-ranger.html); "Louis Ranger" (www.aspenmusicfestival.com); personal interview, Sept. 11, 2011.

Rankin, Kitty [Mrs. Katherine Williams] (fl. c1900-1935). American cornetist. Kitty used the stage name "Miss Kitty Rankin" and was a fine cornet soloist. During her youth, she lived in Brockton, Massachusetts, where she studied with Mace Gay. When she married the famed cornetist Ernest S. Williams, she changed her name to Mrs. Katherine Williams. They performed concerts together and played solos as well as duets. In 1913, they toured and performed throughout Europe, Australia, India, and Egypt. She was an exceptional performer, as indicated in the following quote from Jacobs' Band Monthly magazine (Aug. 1923):

[The writer] was amazed to see a little lass step out on the platform and play the "Russian Fantasia," considered at that time a very showy piece of work for cornetists. It is often said of girl performers, "She plays well for a girl," but in her case such qualification was not necessary for she played excellently and could be compared with any of the noted soloists of the day. Her tone was of the finest, her technic was perfect, her phrasing left nothing to be desired, and we were safe in predicting at that time a grand future for her. She has fulfilled her early promise, is musicianly in every respect, and today stands without peer.

Throughout the 1920s and early 1930s, Kitty was a member of Gloria Trumpeters, the popular women's ensemble. They made several recordings for the Columbia Phonograph Company, and were often heard on radio broadcasts. In 1941, she was honored by Brockton's Enterprise newspaper as one of the town's most famous citizens.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rapa, Adam (b. Boston, Massachusetts, Mar. 31, 1980). American trumpeter. Rapa began playing the trumpet at age eleven, and studied with Scott Aruda from age thirteen to fifteen. His professional career began at age thirteen, and at age sixteen he was playing lead trumpet in some of the bands at the Berklee College of Music. From age fourteen to twenty, he was a member of the East Coast Jazz drum and bugle corps.

From 2001 to 2007, Rapa was the featured soloist in the touring production of Blast!, which traveled throughout the United States, Japan, and the United Kingdom. He has played with Nicholas Payton, Roy Hargrove, Mnozil Brass, Wycliffe Gordon, Cyrus Chestnut, Christian McBride, Robert Glasper, Thomas Gansch, The Army Blues, Alice in Chains, Otto Sauter's Ten of the Best trumpet ensemble, and was a featured artist at the 2008 International Trumpet Guild Conference. His amazing and seemingly effortless upper register has made him a popular guest soloist and clinician worldwide. He has recorded two CDs, Life on the Road and Rebelión, both on the DutDut Records label that he cofounded in 2008. He has also recorded several "Bollywood" soundtracks for A.R. Rahman, as well as American films recorded in Seattle (with Allen Vizzutti and Anthony DiLorenzo, trumpets).

Rapa and his wife Elisabeth Breines Vik, a vocalist and ethnomusicologist, have been married since 2010. Of equal importance to his musical achievements, are his interests in Yoga and the cultivation of spiritual and physical well-being, cooking, hiking, and generally being outdoors, and in ultimately assimilating the qualities of various cultures throughout the world that improve his own life: exploring and developing an understanding of their social customs and interactions, their spiritual practices, foods, architectures, the sounds and origins of their languages, and the visual highlights of their natural landscapes. He feels that composing, arranging, studying, playing music, and exploring the healing/balancing qualities that are created when vibrations are produced with pure intentions, is a way of life—neither hobby nor work.

After living in Seattle (2006-09), New York (2010-11), and spending nearly a year in Japan (2011-12), Adam and Elisabeth moved to Vienna, Austria, where Adam continues to work as a freelance musician and educator.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Adam Rapa's official website: www.adamrapa.com; personal interviews, Sept. 20, 2011 and Nov. 15, 2012.

Rapier, Leon (b. Tyler, Texas, Aug. 8, 1922; d. Jan. 15, 1988). American trumpeter. Rapier (born Leon Raper) grew up in Tyler, Texas. He began playing the trumpet at age nine; beginning at fourteen, he studied with Samuel Krauss for three summers at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Michigan, and continued studies with him on and off for several more years. Rapier attended the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Pattee Evenson. During his senior year at Eastman, he played with the Rochester Philharmonic and performed Quiet City by Copland in 1942. He took lessons from Vincent Bach and Gilbert Johnson; Georges Mager and William Vacchiano also strongly influenced his playing.

Rapier was drafted into military service, and played in the Air Corps Band and Dance Band from 1942 to 1946. Upon discharge, he studied with Bernard Fitzgerald at the University of Texas, but returned to Eastman in September of 1946 to finish his bachelor of music degree. He continued his studies at Eastman, earning a master of music degree in 1948.

Rapier joined the New Orleans Philharmonic in 1948, but left a year later to become a professor at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge. During this period, he played with the Baton Rouge Symphony Orchestra, and in 1949-50 with the North Carolina Touring Orchestra. He became principal trumpet of the Louisville Orchestra in 1954. Beginning in 1953, he performed at the Fish Creek Music Festival under Thor Johnson during many summers, and also taught at the National Music Camp in Interlochen for many summers. He served on the faculty at the University of Louisville from 1954 to 1987, and was a charter member of the Louisville Bach Society and Louisville Brass Quintet (that toured South Africa). He was considered to be one of America's finest teachers. Among his pupils were John Aley, Clifford Blackburn, Stacy Blair, Richard Burkart, Norbert Carnovale, Carl Fontana, Pat Harbison, Nat Paella, John Rommel, Byron Stripling, Marc Ullrich, and Allen Vizzutti.

Rapier's recordings are on the Louisville Orchestra First Edition Series. They include Ernest Bloch's Proclamation, Alan Hovhaness's Avak the Healer, Chou Wen-Chung's Soliloquy of a Bhiksuni, and John Addison's Trumpet Concerto. Rapier received the University of Louisville's Distinguished Teaching Award, the Louisville chapter of the American Federation of Musicians Musician of the Year Award, and the Award of Merit from the International Trumpet Guild (posthumously in 2006).

Rapier and his wife, Mary, a professional pianist, had two daughters—Mary Julian (a harpist with the Louisville Orchestra) and Beth (a cellist with the Minnesota Orchestra). He was director of music at Highland Presbyterian Church in Louisville for twenty-five years.

Bibl.: ITG website: www.trumpetguild.org; Tunnell, Michael. "Leon Rapier: A Tribute" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1988).

Rasey, Uan (b. Glasgow, Montana, Aug. 22, 1921; d. Los Angeles, California, Sept. 26, 2011). American trumpeter. For fifty years, Rasey was considered by many to be the top Los Angeles studio trumpeter.

He recorded over 2,500 film and television soundtracks. He began playing the trumpet in Glasgow, Montana, at the age of seven. His inspirations came from hearing radio recordings of Louis Armstrong and Cootie Williams, then Del Staigers. He contracted polio at age ten and permanently lost the use of both legs. He was first chair in the Montana All-State Band in Butte during his freshman year, but moved to Los Angeles with his family while in high school (1937). There, he became a member of the All-City Symphony Orchestra, and took private lessons from Louis Maggio (1938-39) and Harold "Pappy" Mitchell (1937).

Rasey joined the musicians' union while in high school, and began performing in dance bands and various theater orchestras. At times, his playing was very demanding and required ten to twelve hours of work each day. In 1939, he had trouble with his lower lip, and developed a blister that began to bleed. The scab continually cracked, and eventually formed a bad callous. A doctor removed the dead tissue, but a deep scar formed. This forced him to change from a Bach 10.5 C mouthpiece to a Bach 1C, which he played for the rest of his career. After graduating from Huntington High School in 1940, he performed with the bands of Benny Goodman (1939-43), Sonny Dunham (1940), Jack Armstrong, Warner Bros, Alvino Rey, Bob Crosby, and Paul Whiteman. In 1943, he became a staff musician for the Mutual Radio station, and played on regular shows such as Kraft Music Hall, Bing Crosby Show, Phil Harris Show, Jack Benny Show, George Burns Show, Bell Telephone Hour, Ozzie Nelson Show, Sound Off, Old Gold, and California Melodies. He played with Frank Diveri, Kay Kaiser, Benny Carter, Billy May, Victor Young, Lyn Murray, Jeff Alexander, Frank Devol, Nelson Riddle, André Previn, Lenny Hayton, Johnny Green, Miklos Rozsa, David Raksin, David Rose, Alfred Newman, Hugo Freidhoffer, Arthur Vinegar, Leo Arnaud-Vauchant, Tommy Dorsey, Gordon Jenkins, and John Scott Trotter.

During the late 1940s, Rasey occasionally played with the MGM studio orchestra next to the first trumpet, Rafael Méndez. There were times when a jazz trumpet solo was needed, and Rasey was given the opportunity to showcase his immense abilities. His big break came when he recorded (as first trumpet) the film Ben-Hur under the baton of the composer, Miklos Rozsa. When Méndez left MGM in 1949, Rasey became first trumpet at MGM from 1948 to 1979. Rasey performed on soundtracks of hundreds of major motion pictures including On the Town (with Mannie Klein), High Society, Pennies from Heaven, Rocky, Chinatown, Cleopatra, Gigi, Quo Vadis, West Side Story, Showboat, Singing in the Rain, Bye Bye Birdie, Mutiny on the Bounty, My Fair Lady, and An American in Paris.

Rasey was a champion of the rights of members of the musicians' union. During World War II, he became dissatisfied with the union, and tried to form another one with a group of musicians, which resulted in his expulsion from the union for two years. He later rejoined the union, but continued fighting for better conditions and pay. He attempted to form a new union again in 1962, but failed, causing him to be expelled a second time.

One of Rasey's legacies is his participation on the album titled Tutti's Trumpets that featured several of the top Los Angeles studio players. He was given the Honorary Award by the International Trumpet Guild in 2009. He and his wife Margaret—who died in 2008—were married for fifty years, and had one son and two daughters. He was an avid sports enthusiast, who was especially fond of the Olympic games.

Bibl.: Hood, Boyde. "Ten Outstanding Trumpet Players in the Los Angeles Area" (Brass Bulletin, no. 41, 1983); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Knudsvig, Peter. "Uan Rasey: A Life in Radio and Films" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2009); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rava, Enrico (b. Trieste, Italy, Aug. 20, 1939). Italian trumpeter. A major figure in the jazz trumpet world, Rava started on trombone and played in a Dixieland group during much of his teens. When he was eighteen, he switched to trumpet after hearing a live concert by Miles Davis in Torino. After only four years on trumpet, he began touring with Mal Waldron's group, and made a 45 rpm record under his own name in March 1960 with pianist Maurizio Lama. Rava took lessons with Nino Culasso in Rome (1961) but was mostly self-taught; he studied many jazz recordings when he was young. He was especially influenced by Chet Baker. His only formal trumpet lesson was with Carmine Caruso, who helped him develop his embouchure. In 1964, he played with Gato Barbieri and later with Don Cherry in Milan (1966).

Rava moved to New York City in 1967, and soon played with Steve Lacy. He also led his own groups. In Europe, Rava played with Giorgio Gaslini, Henri Texier, and Michel Portal (1968), and recorded with Lee Konitz (1966, 1968) and Manfred Schoof (1969). He returned to the United States, playing with Roswell Rudd, who was enormously influential (1969-71), Jazz Composers Orchestra (1971), and Bill Dixon (summer of 1971). Rava's first album, Katcharpari, won an award in Germany for best jazz album of the year. By 1970, his career was taking off.

During the 1970s, Rava composed a great deal of film music and released more albums. In 1982, he joined Gil Evans's group and toured with Cecil Taylor's big band in 1984, 1988, and 1985. During the 1990s, he worked with Carla Bley, Archie Shepp, and Abdullah Ibrahim, among others. He has won many awards including Musician of the Year at the 2000 Barga Jazz Festival in Tuscany.

Today, Enrico Rava is considered to be the father of Italian jazz. He has released thirty solo albums for such labels as Soul Note, Between the Lines, Label Bleu, EGEA, Via Veneto, ECM, Japo, Four Leaf, BASF, Inakustik, CamJazz, Neuber Challenge, Black Saint, and Gala. He has performed and recorded with hundreds of leading jazz artists including Cecil Taylor, Barry Altschul, Chet Baker, Civica Jazz Band, Marc Ducret, Gas Mask, Globe Unity Orchestra, Marcello Melis, Giocchi Proibiti, European Trumpet Summit, Dollar Brand, Salvatore Bonafide, Bella, Karl Berger Orchestra, Roberto Gatto, Steve Lacy, Battiste Lena, George Gruntz, Sigi Finkel, European Jazz Ensemble, Tiziana Ghiglioni, and Ivano Fossati.

Bibl.: Erdmann, Tom. "Enrico Rava: Playing with Jazz" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ray, Michael Arthur (b. Trenton, New Jersey, Dec. 24, 1962). American trumpeter. Ray began his career by playing in rhythm & blues bands such as Patti LaBelle's orchestra, the Delfonics, and the Stylistics. He then joined Sun Ra's Intergalactic Arkestra (1978-93), recording nearly two dozen albums with the flamboyant group. During the period from 1979 to 1989, he also played with the R&B group, Kool and the Gang.

Michael Ray moved to New Orleans in 1989 and founded Cosmic Krewe in 1991. He also formed a second group by the same name that is based in Burlington, Vermont. In New Orleans, he also played with Charles Neville (1990). He carries on in the Ra tradition by sporting wildly colorful clothing, exotic hats and headdresses, and electrifying his audiences with dancing and vocal solos. His trumpet playing is extremely exciting, mixing jazz and funk styles.

Ray's Cosmic Krewe has received numerous awards and Grammy nominations. His albums as leader include Michael Ray and the Cosmic Krewe (Evidence) and Funk If I Know (Monkey Hill). He has also played with PHISH.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Book); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Michael Ray" (www.answers.com).

Raymondis, Gerassimos (b. Korfu, Greece, Mar. 5, 1949; d. Athens, Greece, Aug. 14, 1999). Greek trumpeter. Considered to be a very talented trumpeter as a child, Raymondis became one of the leading trumpet teachers and performers in Greece. He founded the Raymondis Conservatory in 1978, and was a founding member of the Orpheus Brass Quintet (from 1990). He was an active clinician, and principal of the Athens Radio Orchestra from 1990 until his early death in 1999 at the age of forty-nine.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Recker, George (b. c1945). American trumpeter. Recker comes from a musical family spanning three generations. He attended Florida State University for his bachelor's degree, and George Peabody College for his master's degree. His primary teachers were Armando Ghitalla, William Vacchiano, Adel Sanchez, and Arnold Jacobs.

Recker's career began when he became a member of the US Army Band in Washington, D.C. (1969-71). After his service years, he freelanced in the Washington area, playing principal trumpet with the Kennedy Center Opera Orchestra (1972-83), extra with the National Symphony Orchestra, principal of the National Gallery Orchestra and Washington Brass Quintet, and performing in over forty-five Broadway show productions. His interest in the instruments and music of the 19th century led to many performances and recordings with the Smithsonian Chamber Players, including albums such as Nineteenth Century Ballroom Music (Nonesuch), Our Musical Past (Library of Congress), and Rose Marie (Smithsonian). He can also be heard on The Colors of the Baroque (Summit) with Anthony Plog, Nick Norton, James Thompson, Michael Sachs, and others. In 1985, he formed the cornet and piano duo, Old Brass and Ivory, with pianist Arthur Maddox.

Recker joined the faculty at the University of Oregon in 1983. Before his retirement in 2003, he served as principal of the Oregon Bach Festival Orchestra and Oregon Coast Music Festival. He has also played at the Cabrillo Festival and with the Pioneer Brass (quintet). He is currently principal of the Eugene Symphony Orchestra and the Oregon Brass Quintet.

Bibl.: "George Recker—Associate Professor Emeritus" (http://pages.uoregon.edu/music/people/emeriti/recker.htm).

Reece, Alphonso Son ("Dizzy") (b. Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 5, 1931). Jamaican trumpeter. Reece's father was a silent film pianist. Alphonso attended the Alpha Boys School, well known for producing fine musicians. After spending a few years on the baritone horn, Reese switched to trumpet at age fourteen. He turned professional two years later, performing with Jack Brown's swing band in 1947.

Reece moved to Europe in 1948 at the age of eighteen. He played with Don Byas (1949-50), and other jazzmen such as Bill Coleman, Django Reinhardt, and Hot Lips Page. In 1954, he moved to London where he played with Kathy Stobart, Terry Shannon, Kenny Graham's Afro-Cubanists, and Tony Crombie's big band. He began to record quite a bit, mostly on 78 rpm discs for the Tempo label. He lived for a while in Paris, Portugal, and again in London. He also performed with Victor Feldman (1955), Martial Solal, and Jacques Hélian (1958). In 1958, he recorded the album Blues in Trinity with Donald Byrd for the Blue Note label.

Through the encouragement of Donald Byrd, Miles Davis, and other Americans, Reece moved to New York City in October of 1959. His arrival caused an immediate splash of publicity, followed by two more albums for Blue Note (1959-60), and one album for Prestige/New Jazz in 1962. However, sales were not as expected, and the trumpeter struggled to stay in the limelight. He returned to Europe and toured with Dizzy Gillespie's big band in 1968.

Over the years, Dizzy Reece has performed with numerous musicians, building a solid and loyal following of fans. He participated in the Paris Reunion Band in 1985, and played with Clifford Jordan's big band in the early 1990s. He also recorded with Victor Feldman, Tubby Hayes, Philly Joe Jones, Dexter Gordon, Ted Curson, Duke Jordan, Paris Reunion Band, and John Gilmore. Reece's albums as leader include Mosaic Select: Dizzy Reece (MS), A New Star (Jasmine), Progress Report (Jasmine), Blues in Trinity (Blue Note), Star Bright (Blue Note), Comin' On! (Blue Note), Soundn' Off (Blue Note), and Asia Minor (Prestige/New Jazz). Considering his extraordinary talent, it is surprising that Reece has not become a star jazz performer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Dizzy Reece" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Dizzy Reece's official website (http://dizzyreece.blogspot.com); "Dizzy Reece" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Reed, Waymon (b. Fayetteville, North Carolina, Jan. 10, 1940; d. Nashville, Tennessee, Nov. 25, 1983). American trumpeter. Reed grew up in Nashville and played in his high school band. He attended the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, for one year and then played in carnival and blues bands for about a year. He moved to Miami, Florida, around 1960 and played with Ira Sullivan and Pee Wee Ellis, plus formed his own band.

Reed moved to New York City in the mid 1960s and soon joined James Brown's soul band (1965-69) and freelanced. He was twice a member of the Count Basie Orchestra (1969-73 and 1977-78). During these years, he also played with Frank Foster and the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Orchestra.

In 1978, Waymon Reed married singer Sarah Vaughan even though she was sixteen years his senior and had been married three times before. He led her backup band for two years but things did not work out between them. (For one thing, he hated being referred to as "Mr. Sarah Vaughan.") They divorced in 1980. Reed continued freelancing and appeared on B.B. King's album, There Must Be A Better World Somewhere in 1981.

Although Reed appeared many times on recordings as a sideman, he cut only one solo album (in 1977) titled 46th and 8th (Artists House) with his own quintet. He took part in an All-Star Trumpet Spectacular recording and can be seen on video with Count Basie in Montreux (1977). His career came to an early end when he died of cancer at the young age of forty-three.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Waymon Reed" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Reese, Marc B[rian] (b. Smithtown, New York, Apr. 4, 1970). American trumpeter. Reese grew up in Lake Grove (Long Island),

New York. He began playing trumpet at age eleven; his first teachers were two New York trumpet giants, Mel Broiles (Juilliard preparatory program for two years) and Mark Gould (Juilliard prep. for one year). After graduating from Sachem High School in 1988, he attended Boston University where he studied with Roger Voisin from 1988 to 1992, earning a bachelor of music degree. He then studied with Timothy Morrison at the New England Conservatory from 1992 to 1994, earning a master of music degree. During these years, he often performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops.

Reese joined the Empire Brass in 1996, and has since toured the world and appeared on NHK Television in Japan, as well as on the popular American television shows, Good Morning America and Evening at Pops. He has appeared at numerous music festivals including those of Marlboro, Tanglewood, and the Pacific Music Festival in Japan. He teaches at the Conservatory of Music at Lynn University in Boca Raton, Florida, and has served as head of brass since 2005 and assistant dean since 2007. His debut solo CD is titled The Other Trumpet. Reese has served as a judge for the National Trumpet Competition and the International Trumpet Guild, and is the contributing editor for the "Chamber Connection" column in the International Trumpet Guild Journal.

Reese and pianist Lisa Leonard have been married since 2003, and have two children, Carter (b. 2009) and Luke (b. 2011). His hobbies include basketball and chess.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); personal interview, Apr. 25, 2012.

Reeves, Bob (b. New York City, New York, Sept. 3, 1931). American trumpeter and designer. Reeves graduated from Glendale High School in Southern California in 1950. He earned an AA degree in Arts and Engineering at the China Lake Naval Ordinance Test Station, and apprenticed for six years as an experimental machinist and toolmaker. He began playing trumpet in 1959 at the age of twenty-eight, and from 1960 to 1963 studied with the well-known Los Angeles studio player, John Clyman, while attending Los Angeles City College. He went to work for the Benge Trumpet Company (1963-66) under Donald Benge, and also worked with Carroll Purviance as a mouthpiece maker for ten years.

Reeves started to make mouthpieces in 1964 (he purchased the Purviance workshop), and started his own company in 1968. He quickly became a leading mouthpiece maker and pioneer in custom precision valve alignment. His research has helped revolutionize the way instruments and mouthpieces are manufactured today.

Reeves is married to Gloria Reeves, a retired nurse. He continues to provide top-notch work on mouthpieces and valve alignments to retailers and the public out of his shop in Valencia, California.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bob Reeves" (www.bobreeves.com/company_info/aboutus.htm); personal interview, July 26, 2011.

Reeves, Reuben ("Red") (b. Evansville, Indiana, Oct. 25, 1905; d. New York, New York, Sept. 1975). American trumpeter. Reeves's mother was a pianist and insisted that young Reuben take piano lessons. However, in high school Reuben switched to trumpet in order to play in the school band. His professional career began during the summer of 1923 when he joined Bill Smith's group. His brother Gerald was an expert trombone player.

Reeves moved to New York in February of 1924, intending to study dentistry. However, he soon gave it up in order to freelance as a trumpeter. He lived in Chicago between 1925 and 1928 and worked regularly with Erskine Tate's orchestra. He also attended the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago where he earned a master of music degree. Reeves studied trumpet under Albert Cook and Ernest Pechin, among others.

In 1927, then again from 1928-30, he became a member of Dave Peyton's band and taught music at a local high school, the noted Wendell Philips School. In addition, he formed a band (1929) that played at the Royal Theatre. He recorded two tunes with Fess Williams's Joy Boys in 1928, but they drew little attention.

Vocalion records signed Reuben Reeves and his River Boys in 1929 in an attempt to capitalize on the commercial success attained by Louis Armstrong and the Hot Five. Reeves cut fifteen titles with them and even played in a bold and fiery style, imitating Armstrong. However, competing with those of Armstrong, Jabbo Smith, and Henry "Red" Allen (all of whom made recordings with this type of group), these records didn't sell particularly well.

During the Depression, Reeves's career as a hot soloist came to a standstill. He became a sideman with the Missourians (February 1930), with Jerome Carrington's band during early 1931, and with Cab Calloway's orchestra from 1930 to the summer of 1932. He participated on all of Calloway's recordings during that time and was given the opportunity to take occasional solos. In 1933-35, Reeves reorganized the River Boys as a twelve-piece swing band.

He returned to New York City in 1936. A few years later, he joined the National Guard and was assigned to the 369th Infantry Band that served in the Pacific during World War II. He was discharged in 1946 and began playing on a part-time basis with Harry Dial's Bluesicians until 1955. He played jazz during the next seventeen years or so, but gave up playing around 1975. From about 1973 until his death in 1975, he worked as a bank guard. Many of Reuben Reeves's recordings are now reissued on a CD called Reuben Reeves and Omer Simeon (RST).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Rehmann, Beny (b. Kaisten, Aargau, Bezirk, Switzerland, Sept. 11, 1936). Swiss trumpeter. Considering Rehmann's immense popularity and enormous record sales, it is surprising that little is known about this pop trumpeter. As a child, he learned to play the accordion, and began playing trumpet at age sixteen. He earned a degree in music at the Zurich Music Academy. In 1963, he formed his first pop group, Die lustigen Tiroler Musikanten. Over the years, he has led his own quintet, sextet, and show orchestra that has toured South Africa and Switzerland. Although not a flashy or technically brilliant trumpet player, his beautiful tone and lyrical quality have made him a star in the polka, waltz, and folk music arena in Switzerland. He has recorded dozens of albums including Romantic Memories (which sold over 100,000 copies and received the Walo Prize), Perlen Der Volksmusik, Das Grosse Abschiedskonzert, and Golden Trumpet.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Reiche, Johann Gottfried (b. Weissenfels, Germany, Feb. 5, 1667; d. Leipzig, Germany, Oct. 6, 1734). German trumpeter. Reiche went to Leipzig in 1688, and was accepted as a Kunstgeiger (string players guild) in 1700. In 1706, he became a Stadt-pfeifer (city piper), and in 1719 became Senior Stadt-pfeifer. When a period of public mourning was declared by the city of Leipzig in 1694, there were to be no weddings or festive occasions, leaving many musicians without much of their income. Reiche was so highly regarded as a virtuoso trumpeter, that in order to prevent him from seeking employment elsewhere, the City Council gave him a special bonus payment.

Reiche was J.S. Bach's first trumpeter for eleven years, from 1723 to 1734. Many of Bach's most difficult cantata and oratorio trumpet parts were written for him. However, this does not include Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto, which was written in Cöthen.

In 1727, on the occasion of Reiche's sixtieth birthday, the Leipzig council commissioned the famed artist Elias Gottlob Haussmann to paint a portrait of Reiche. Haussmann painted numerous portraits of public officials, but only two musicians—Reiche and Bach. The now famous Reiche portrait has been much studied and is on display in the Stadtgeschichtliches Museum in Leipzig. (See color pages.)

Reiche was a virile man who often rode to town on horseback from his room in the Stadtpfeifer-Allee. One evening, he passed out not far from his residence, and died of a stroke after returning home. Circumstances leading to his death have caused much controversy because he had performed Bach's physically demanding Cantata No. 215 in an outdoor concert the prior evening. Smoke from the oil torches used to provide light for the performers covered the orchestra during much of the performance, and may have aggravated his breathing. The following report was issued in Johann S. Riemer's chronicle on the evening of Reiche's death (translated):

On precisely this day the highly skilled and most artistic musician and Stadtpfeifer, Herr Gottfried Reiche, the Leucopetra-Misnicus and senior member of the municipal company of musicians in this place, suffered a stroke as he was going home and dropped dead in the Stadtpfeifer-Allee not far from his house where he was taken. The reason for this was on account of the enormous strain he suffered the night before while blowing [the trumpet] for the royal music, his condition having been greatly aggravated from the smoke given by the torch-lights.

Reiche composed numerous tower fanfares, including the one notated on the piece of music paper he held during the painting of his portrait by Haussmann. This fanfare (so-called Abblasen) has been recorded by Don L. Smithers, and is often heard as the opening music (recorded by Smithers, Severinsen, and Marsalis) to the television show, CBS Sunday Morning.

Bibl.: Smithers, Don L. Music and History of the Baroque Trumpet before 1721 (Syracuse University Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

See photo of Reiche in the color pages.

Reichstaller, Claus (b. Oberbergkirchen or Munich, Germany, May 25, 1963). German trumpeter. Reichstaller started playing trumpet at the age of nine, and within two years won an important local solo competition. From 1980 to 1984, he studied with Helmut Reinhart at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in Munich. After graduating, he gained experience playing in the big bands of Benny Bailey and Al Porcino, and after a brief period in the German Air Force, recorded with Peter Herbolzheimer, who helped create additional opportunities for him. Reichstaller then played with Porcino's band, the WDR Big Band, SDR Big Band, the Composers Improvisation Orchestra, Max Greger, Paul Kuhn, Dieter Reith, Klaus Doldinger, and Harald Rüschenbaum's Sax & Brass.

Reichstaller joined the Salsa band, Conexion Latina, in 1985, three of whose albums are Un poco loco, Mambo 2000, and La Conexion. He played with Charly Antolini's Jazz Power from 1987 to 1989, joined the Paris Reunion Band in 1989 (where he replaced Woody Shaw), and became a member of the German Jazz Orchestra in 1991. He founded the group, Conception, with Alex Kühn, which recorded albums such as Conception and Conception Live for its own Conception Records label. He joined the jazz faculty at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in 1992, and has recently worked as a studio musician in such films as Indiana Jones and Tatort. His own jazz quartet has released a CD titled Arrival (Narada Music Productions).

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Claus Reichstaller" (www.conception-records.de/htm/artists1.htm).

Reid, Edward Fraser (b. Oakland, California, Feb. 12, 1960). American trumpeter. Reid grew up mostly in Stratford, Connecticut, and began to play the trumpet at age twelve. His first trumpet teachers were John Pearson, Joe Farkas, and Richard Green. After graduating from Stratford High School in 1978, he attended the Eastman School of Music (1978-84) where he earned bachelor and master of music degrees, studying with Sidney Mear, Allan Dean, and Barbara Butler. He then took a job in the New York area for three years as a limousine driver.

Reid moved to Tempe, Arizona, in 1987 to pursue a doctor of musical arts degree at Arizona State University where he studied with David Hickman. During his first year there, he won a position as associate principal trumpet of the Tucson Symphony Orchestra. In 1989, he became principal and moved to Tucson before completing his degree. In 1990, he and Hannah Albrecht, a violinist in the orchestra, were married, and in 1994 he began teaching at the University of Arizona. The Reids had two children: Harrison (b. 1998) and Spencer (b. 2000). However, Ed and Hannah divorced, and Ed married Shu Ching Cheng in 2012.

Reid has distinguished himself as a fine teacher, having received the University of Arizona's Maestro Award in 2004 and the Putnam Award in 2008. He has performed with the New Sousa Band and at the Grand Teton Music Festival, as well as with numerous chamber groups in the Tucson area. He retired from the Tucson Symphony in January of 2010, after serving nearly twenty-four years with it. His hobbies include tennis, golf, running, and exercising.

Bibl.: personal interview, June 14, 2010.

Reinberg, Donald (b. San Francisco, California, Aug. 26, 1933). American trumpeter. Reinberg's father Herman (1898-1975) played assistant principal cello in the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra during the 1940s. Donald studied at The Juilliard School in New York City with William Vacchiano, and during the 1950s freelanced in New York as an extra with the New York Philharmonic and member of numerous Broadway show pit orchestras. He became principal trumpet of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra in 1957, but was reassigned by Maestro Seiji Ozawa as acting principal from 1976 to 1979, and then as associate principal during the 1979-80 season. Reinberg moved to third trumpet in 1980.

Reinberg participated in the album, Venetian Brass (Crystal) that included many of the principal players in the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the San Francisco Symphony. He retired from the orchestra in August of 1995.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2006); "Donald Reinberg" (www.stokowski.org/Principal_Musicians_San_Francosco_Symphony.htm).

Reindl, Rudolf ("Rudi") (b. Marbach am Neckar, Germany, Sept. 28, 1954). German trumpeter. Reindl studied with Heinz Burum at a music school in Stuttgart from 1971 to 1977. He led his own big band from 1971 to 1989, and played with Alexander's Ragtime Band and a group called Jazz Fusion. In 1981, he became a member of the Southwest German Radio Big Band, backing artists such as Tina Turner, Lee Konitz, Zoot Sims, Chet Baker, Bob Brookmeyer, Kai Wending, and the Gypsy Kings on over one hundred CDs. Since 1976, he has played lead trumpet in over fifty musical productions for the Württembergischen Staatstheatern and the Heilbronn Theatre.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Reiner, Thomas (b. Ludwigsburg, Germany, Oct. 24, 1969). German trumpeter. At age twelve, Reiner heard the great virtuoso Maurice André at a concert that changed his life. He developed a desire to play the trumpet, and took lessons from various local teachers in his hometown of Ludwigsburg, Germany. At the age of sixteen, Reiner became a pre-student at Würzburg University where he studied with Helmut Erb (1992-93), and later as a regular student there with Werner Heckmann (1993-94). Reiner then studied with Peter-Michael Krämer at the University of Music in Leipzig (1994-96). His final studies were in Weimar with Uwe Komischke (1996-98).

Reiner's first job was in a theater orchestra in Heilbronn (seven years). He soon decided that he wanted to be a soloist. He began recording solo albums and touring throughout Germany and France, performing as a guest soloist with numerous orchestras, and performing with organist Frank Oidtmann. His CDs include concerto fantistico (Animato), Fireworks (Animato), and Baroque Trumpet Concertos (Naxos). Reiner is a skilled performer on the Baroque (valveless) trumpet, as well as standard trumpets. He has performed in several countries, and is emerging as one of the leading classical soloists. He is also a member of the trumpet ensemble called Arta.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Thomas Reiner" (The Brass Herald, Feb. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Thomas Reiner's website (www.thomasreiner.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Reinhardt, Donald S[helley] (b. Allentown, Pennsylvania, Jan. 22, 1908; d. May 26, 1989). American trombonist and brass pedagogue. Donald was the youngest of four children born to Howard J. Reinhardt (1870-1945) and Estella Shelley Reinhardt (1872-1943). He began playing the violin and piano at age five, but switched to the French horn at age seven. Because of crooked teeth, his teacher told him he could never be successful playing horn, so he changed to trumpet, only to get the same advice from his trumpet instructor. He became successful playing trombone, but a few years later taught himself to play the horn and trumpet on his own. This gave him the idea that every person can learn to play any brass instrument if taught correctly.

In 1922, Reinhardt entered Haverford High School, where his band instructor was a choral director who asked Reinhardt to instruct all of the brass students. His early success as a teacher sparked his pursuit of a career as a leading brass pedagogue. He later attended the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia (on trombone), where he studied with Gardell Simons and Charles Edward Gerhard, while freelancing as a trombonist in several music theaters. After graduating many years later (delayed due to his performing career outside the school), he earned a master's degree in music from Combs College of Music in 1957. In 1960, Combs College awarded him an Honorary Doctorate. He also studied music composition in New York with Joseph Schillinger. He met his future wife Virginia in 1936, and they were married in 1938.

In 1939, the entire Fox Theater Orchestra was let go because live show music could not be afforded due to the Great Depression. With no immediate source of income, and with the encouragement of Harry James, Reinhardt decided to pursue his career in teaching. So Donald, Virginia, and daughter Gloria moved to Jackson Heights, Long Island, and he began teaching in a studio in New York City. In 1942, he published his Pivot System for Trumpet: A Complete Manual with Studies along with brass editions of Concone etudes. These publications were endorsed by Herbert L. Clarke and Charles Colin, two of New York's most respected players and teachers at the time. Soon, Reinhardt's studio was full of trumpet and other brass players. His second book, Trumpet Mechanisms, was published in 1946. He began teaching at the Teachers College of Columbia University, and gave numerous workshops at schools around the area.

Reinhardt began his seventeen-year relationship with the La Salle College High School in Philadelphia in 1956, and also began teaching dozens of military brass musicians. He published his Encyclopedia of the Pivot System through Charles Colin Publications in 1964. In the late 1960s, the Conn Corporation began distributing Reinhardt Mouthpieces through a company formed by Reinhardt and James McCloskey. The company produced Lexan mouthpieces, as well as brass mouthpieces called Arwin (contraction of Art and Wind). By the early 1970s, Reinhardt was teaching seven days per week from 9:00 AM to 10:30 PM. Students came from all over the United States and Europe to study with him. He was famous for quickly analyzing each student's difficulties and physical embouchure type, and assigning exercises to correct problems.

During the spring of 1973, Colin published Reinhardt's The Augmented Encyclopedia of the Pivot System. In that same year, Reinhardt retired from La Salle, but continued teaching at his private studio. In 1975, he gave the keynote address at Colin's New York Conference for Brass Scholarships, and was a special guest at the International Trombone Association's workshop in Nashville.

Because of his cigar smoking and playing on raw brass mouthpieces, Reinhardt developed serious medical problems during the early 1980s. He developed cancer of the face, but refused medical treatment because of his faith as a Christian Scientist. He died at the age of eighty-one. He had taught thousands of students, many of whom continue to be devoted advocates of his teachings. His teaching materials and personal archives were donated to the Streitwieser Foundation and are now catalogued in the Instrument Museum, Schloß Kremsegg in Kremsmünster, Upper Austria.

Bibl.: Dudgeon, Ralph. "Credit Where Credit is Due: The Life and Brass Teaching of Donald S. Reinhardt" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2000); Wilken, David M. "An Introduction to Donald S. Reinhardt's Pivot System" (www.trombone.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Reinhart, Carole Dawn (b. Roselle, New Jersey, Dec. 20, 1941). American trumpeter. Reinhart's parents named her Carole Dawn after hearing a group of people singing Christmas carols at dawn shortly before her birth. Coming from a musical family, Carole Dawn began playing the slide cornet at age three-and-a-half. Her teacher was her mother Mabel, a trombonist. By age seven, Reinhart was performing cornet duets with her older brother Rolfe, and at age ten she began playing with the local Salvation Army Band; she became its leader at age seventeen. Reinhart attended The Juilliard School's preparatory division, and studied with Edward Treutel from age ten through sixteen.

Receiving a full symphony orchestra scholarship to the University of Miami, Reinhart studied with Jack Pinto, and graduated in 1963 (cum laude). A beautiful, talented, and intelligent young woman, she was selected as the 1960 National College Queen. She moved to New York City where she began a career as a freelance musician, performing with Slide Hampton (as fourth trumpet), at Radio City Music Hall (regularly for three years), with Stokowski's American Symphony Orchestra, and with the Orchestra de Camera (Haydn Concerto). She received a Fulbright Scholarship to study with Helmut Wobisch in Vienna where she also met and married a fellow trumpet student named Manfred Stoppacher, lead trumpeter with the RIAS Dance Orchestra. In Vienna she was the first female brass student at the Academy, where she finished her studies with distinction.

Reinhart returned to New York and received a bachelor of music and master of science degree from Juilliard. She continued working with the Salvation Army Band, and began to develop her career as a soloist. She became a clinician for the Getzen Company, and appeared with thirty or so high school or college bands each year. She also soloed with the Miami Philharmonic, and the Utah Symphony Orchestra under Maurice Abravanel. She toured Australia as a soloist with the Salvation Army Band, performing for a many as 100,000 people in Melbourne. In the late 1960s, she appeared on Johnny Carson's The Tonight Show, the Mike Douglas Show, and Al Hirt's television show, Fanfare.

In 1971, Reinhart and her husband moved to Berlin where she accepted a one-year position as principal trumpet of the Deutsche Oper Orchestra, replacing Konradin Groth who had moved to the Berlin Philharmonic. She appeared on television with the Southwest Radio Orchestra in Kaiserslautern. The conductor helped her find an agent, Hans Fehr, who promoted her as "The Princess of the Trumpet." In the 1970s she appeared in one hundred solo concerts per year with various orchestras. Reinhart was elected to the first Board of Directors of the International Trumpet Guild, and appeared at the 1976 International Brass Congress in Montreux, Switzerland. Her first solo album (with piano accompaniment) was released on Deutsche Grammophon's Debut Series in 1974.

In 1983, Reinhart was named professor of trumpet at the famous Academy of Music and Visual Arts in Vienna where she also became chair of the department of winds and percussion from 1996 to 1998. She ended her solo career in 1996 while continuing to teach at the academy. She has released additional recordings on the BASF label with the Munich Philharmonic, German Bach Soloists, Amsterdam Chamber Orchestra, and the Württemberg Chamber Orchestra. Her book, Carole Dawn Reinhart—Aspects of a Career, was published by the Vienna University Press in 1994 (recently revised). Her awards include the Women's Brass Congress Pioneer Award (2003) and the Award of Merit from the ITG (2007). She has also served as a judge for international trumpet solo competitions.

Bibl.: Card, Robyn. "A Life of Firsts: An Interview with Carole Dawn Reinhart" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2006); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rejlek, Vladimír (b. Tábor, Czech Republic, July 2, 1953). Czech trumpeter. Although he first played accordion, Rejlek studied trumpet with Václav Junek at the Royal Academy of Music in Prague, beginning in 1978. In that same year, he won the "Prague Spring" international trumpet competition, and two years before that, the Toulon International Trumpet Competition in France.

Rejlek was first a member of the Karlina Theater Orchestra before becoming principal trumpet of the Prague National [Opera] Theatre Orchestra, and since 1994 has been on the faculty of the Academy of Musical Arts in Prague (full professor in 2009). He is a leading European soloist and has toured extensively and recorded solo works by Neruda, Hummel, Stamitz, Martinů, and many others. He has given world premieres of several trumpet solos including Sonatine by Jiří Drořáček (b. 1928), Concerto by Václav Trojan (1907-83), and Sonate by von Josef Fiala (1748-1816). He has served as a judge at numerous competitions including the 2012 Prague Spring trumpet competition.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Vladimír Rejlek" (www.stnicholas.cz/en/interpreters/vladimir-1.html); "Vladimír Rejlek" (www.bachbeforeandafter.com/?page_id=652).

Remsen, Lester ("Les") Ernest (b. Akron, New York, June 7, 1918; d. Los Angeles, California, Jan. 31, 2007). American trumpeter. As a young student, Remsen was an exceptional cornet player; at age seventeen Herbert L. Clarke selected him as winner of the National Cornet Solo Contest. Remsen received a full scholarship to attend the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Pattee Evenson, and graduated in 1940. He then served as cornet soloist of the US Marine Band in Washington, D.C. (1941-47), and after his military years, became principal trumpet of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra (1947-50), and then the Los Angeles Philharmonic (1950-54).

Remsen earned a master of music degree and a doctorate in music from the University of Southern California while serving as trumpet professor there (1950-62). Three of his best-known students are Thomas Stevens, Mario Guarneri, and Ronald Romm. He was a pioneer in brass chamber music; he formed and played in the Los Angeles Brass Quintet (starting in 1955), and founded and conducted the Los Angeles Brass Society (1960) which made numerous recordings and commissioned several notable composers to write music for it.

Remsen became a recording engineer, and formed his own record label during the 1960s (later sold to Crystal Records). He was director of music at Wilshire United Methodist Church in Los Angeles for over twenty years. He was a tall and handsome man, and often described as a "gentleman's gentleman." Remsen made a large Japanese garden on the hillside behind his home, was president of the Hollywood Dell Community Association in Hollywood Hills, and received the Outstanding Citizen Award in 1999. He and his wife Dorothy, a harpist, were married for nearly sixty-five years, and had a son, Eric Remsen.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Lester Remsen" (www.gulfwindmusic.com/lremsen.html); "Lester Remsen Trumpeter Dies" (obituary, The Los Angeles Times, Feb. 4, 2007).

Rena [René], Henry ("Kid" "Little Turk") (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Aug. 30, 1899; d. New Orleans, Louisiana, Apr. 25, 1949). American trumpeter. His brother Joe was a drummer, and his nephew Merv Campbell is a trumpeter active in New Orleans. Rena studied clarinet then cornet at Joseph Jones's Colored Waifs' Home during the same period as Louis Armstrong. He later studied trumpet with Manuel Perez. When Armstrong left to join Fate Marable's group aboard riverboats near New Orleans in 1919, Rena took his place in Kid Ory's band in 1919. He was also a member of the Zulu Band led by Punch Miller that included Louis Armstrong. Rena led his own Dixieland band from 1921.

Rena traveled with Ory's band to Los Angeles in 1922, but mostly stayed in New Orleans. He also made a few short visits to Chicago in late 1922, 1923, and 1924. Rena declined the offer to join King Oliver in Chicago, so his friend Louis Armstrong took the job and made history as a great trumpeter.

Rena became a member of the Tuxedo Brass Band. He took over the leadership of the Eureka Brass Band but left it when he founded and led the Pacific Brass Band in 1932, a group that remained very popular in New Orleans through the remainder of the 1930s. The Depression years lessened the number of gigs, however, and he began to abuse alcohol. Although he was once known for his big sound and strong high register stamina (he reportedly played around high-C for as long as eight minutes!), his lip weakened and he struggled to play in the middle register. From 1931 to 1947, he had somewhat steady employment performing at the Gypsy Tea Room (also known as the Brown Derby). He declined an offer to join Don Redman's band.

Bad health due to alcoholism made Rena a second-rate player by 1940. Unfortunately, it was on August 21 of that year that Rena led a remake of his former Dixieland band for a day of recordings produced by Heywood Hale Brown Jr. as a revivalist project documenting New Orleans jazz of the 1920s. Rena led the band in the recording of eight tunes by WWL Radio at the Hotel Roosevelt. This was the only chance Rena ever had to record, and his trumpet playing, while still good, was a shadow of its former self. Nonetheless, the four 78-rpm discs released on the Delta label are extremely collectable today because they were among the first recordings made of the revivalist period in New Orleans. Fortunately, they are reissued on CD as Prelude to the Revival, Vol. 2: Kid Rena 1940 (American Music, AMCD-41). Rena, who retired from performing in 1947, influenced young Louis Armstrong (use of upper register), Wingy Manone, Sharkey Bonano, the Prima brothers, Ricard Alexis, and T-Boy Remy. He was the teacher of Coco Talbert.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Lewis, Uncle Dave. "Henry 'Red' Rena" (www.redhotjazz.com); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Resenberger, Johann Baptist (b. Schlehdorf-Untertau, Austria, July 17, 1700; d. Salzburg, Austria, Apr. 15, 1781). Austrian trumpeter. Resenberger was a famed trumpeter in Salzburg during the late Baroque period (Court and Field Trumpeter 1725-42, Chief Trumpeter 1742-81, Spielgraf 1733-81). He was especially noted for his fantastic upper register. In 1757, Leopold Mozart wrote of him: He is a fine trumpeter who has made himself very famous...particularly in the high [register], through the extraordinary purity [of his tone], through his quickness in runs, and through his good trills. He performed trumpet concertos by Michael Haydn, among others.

Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Reyman, Randall ("Randy") G. (b. Feb. 12, 1952). American trumpeter, composer, and jazz arranger. Reyman received his bachelor of music degree studying with Keith Johnson at the University of Northern Iowa. His master of music degree was from the University of Illinois where he studied with Raymond Sasaki and David Hickman. He also earned a doctor of music degree at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), studying with John Haynie and Keith Johnson. Additional studies were with William Adam, Vincent Cichowicz, and Susan Slaughter. His jazz mentors were Ashley Alexander and Rich Matteson.

Reyman has taught at North Texas State University (UNT), Fort Hays State University, and is currently on the faculty of Millikin University in Decatur, Illinois, where he teaches trumpet and is director of jazz studies. He has performed with the Illinois Symphony Orchestra, Illinois Chamber Orchestra, Millikin-Decatur Symphony Orchestra, Brass Ensemble of Illinois, North Texas State Faculty Brass Quintet, Illinois State Faculty Brass Quintet, and Millikin University Faculty Brass Quintet, and has backed celebrities such as Bob Hope, George Burns, The Platters, Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, the Mills Brothers, Dave Brubeck, and David Liebman. He is leader of his own West End Trio.

Reyman has published numerous compositions and jazz arrangements through Kendor Music including Technical Drills for the Jazz-Commercial Trumpet Player. His solo CD is titled Hard at It (First Step Records).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Randall Reyman" (www.kendormusic.com).

Řezanina, Lubomír (b. Bosonohy or Brno, Czechoslovakia, June 20, 1932; d. Leinfelden-Echterdingen, Germany, Oct. 26, 2003).

Czechoslovakian trumpeter and flugelhornist. Řezanina began his career in the Gustav Brom band (1959-66), and was later first trumpet in Erwin Lehn's Südfunk-Orchester from May 1966 to 1997. He was a fine ballad player who played dance music, Dixieland, and big band jazz. Beginning in 1991, he played flugelhorn for Elmar Wolf. Řezanina is featured on fourteen LP and CD recordings.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rhoten, Bruce (b. Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 26, 1943). American trumpeter. Rhoten came to the trumpet at eleven years of age and studied with Sidney Mear at the Eastman School of Music from 1962 to 1966. He received a Fulbright scholarship to study at the Vienna Academy of Music under Helmut Wobisch (1966-68), and from 1968 to 1971 was principal cornet of the US Military Academy Band at West Point. After competing his service years, he returned to Germany to assume duties as principal trumpet of the Landesorchester of Schleswig-Holstein in Flensburg (1971-72). He has also played with the German Opera Orchestra in Rhein (from 1971), NDR Radio Philharmonic, and the NDR Pops Orchestra. A versatile performer, he toured Germany as a trumpeter and flugelhornist with Ray Charles and Paul Anka, and has recorded several solo pieces for trumpet and orchestra, as well as pieces with his wife Sharon, a pianist. He recorded a solo album with organ in 1975.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: (From left to right) Bud Herseth, John Taber, Bruce Rhoten, and Michael Hesse attending a Bud Herseth seminar in 1977.

Riazantsev [Ryazantsev], Pyotr Vasilyevich (b. Timokhino, Russia, June 23, 1881; d. Moscow, Russia, Sept. 3, 1966). Russian trumpeter. After graduating from the Kharkov Music College, Riazantsev became a member of the Kharkov Opera Orchestra from 1895 to 1914, and also played principal trumpet in the Preobrazhensk division band from 1904 to 1906. From 1917 to 1933, he was a member of the Ukraine National Opera Orchestra in Kiev, and from 1934 to 1951 was principal trumpet of the Moscow Radio and Operetta Theatre Orchestra. He then became principal of the Moscow Conservatory Opera Orchestra from 1951 to 1959, and continued to perform for two more years until age eighty.

Riazantsev taught at the Kiev Conservatory from 1920 to 1932. His top student, Georgy Orvid, said of him, He did not have a strong sound, but had a good technique and precise phrasing which helped him overcome difficulties. According to Anatoly Selianin, he was also a professional billiards player, and constructed a device made with rubber bands that would hold his mouthpiece to his lips for buzzing while he played billiards or cooked. Riazantsev also composed numerous trumpet exercises, and transcribed solo works for trumpet, including Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E Minor. Most of his teachings, however, stemmed from the Arban cornet method.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Richard, Jean-Luc (b. Bourg en Bresse, France, Jan. 27, 1965). French trumpeter. Richard studied with Maurice Chiarinelli and Jack Assante before earning a bachelor's degree in music studying with Guy Touvron at the Conservatorie National de Région de Lyon, and later studying with Bernard Soustrot. After graduating in 1992, he eventually became a charter member of the trumpet ensemble, Les Trompettes de Lyon, in 1997, which has become one of the leading musical entertainment ensembles in the world. (The other trumpeters include Pierre Ballester, André Bonnici, Didier Chaffard, and Ludovic Roux.) In addition to his performing duties, Richard serves as head of the Vincent d'Indy music school that includes six hundred students and forty faculty members. He is also the school's trumpet instructor.

Richard and his wife Marie Loïodice Richard, an oriental medicine therapist, have a son, Jean-François (b. 1999). Richard's hobbies include economic sciences and history.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); www.lestrompettesdelyon.com; personal interview, Oct. 8, 2012.

Richardson, Rex (b. Martinez, California, Feb. 27, 1966). American trumpeter and composer. After being mostly self-taught through high school, Richardson graduated from Northwestern University under Vincent Cichowicz in 1992. From 1994 to 1997, he was the lead trumpeter and soloist with the Chicago Jazz Ensemble and trumpet teacher at Columbia College. He joined the brass and percussion group, Rhythm & Brass, in 1995 and has toured the world since then with this excellent and versatile ensemble. Equally skilled in jazz and classical playing, Richardson played with Joe Henderson's band from 1997 to 1998.

Continuing his education, Richardson was a graduate teaching assistant in jazz at Louisiana State University (1999-2001) where he earned a master of music degree under James West. Richardson also taught at Delgado Community College (2000-01) and Loyola University (1999-2001) in New Orleans. He accepted a visiting professorship at Ithaca College in New York during 2002, and became a fulltime faculty member at Virginia Commonwealth University (since 2002) where he teaches trumpet and jazz improvisation. He also earned a doctorate in music at Louisiana State University in 2006. His dissertation is titled Structural Elegance and Harmonic Disparity in Selected Solos by Jazz Trumpeters Freddie Hubbard and Woody Shaw.

Dr. Richardson has composed and arranged numerous works, many of which are for trumpet. His compositions include Concerto for Jazz Trumpet (2006), Rhapsody Hijaz (for six trumpets), Sara Song (jazz combo), Shisha Lounge (jazz combo), 016 Fantasy (trumpet and piano), Samba Saroura (solo trumpet with big band), and The Claim of the Ideal (big band), and he is known as a champion of commissioning new works for trumpet. Richardson's albums include Masks (Summit), Very Strange Night (Giggity), Inside the Blue Suitcase (Bear Claw, with Rhythm & Brass), Jazz Upstairs (Summit), Pandora's Pocket (Summit), Magnum Opus (Summit), and The Powers That Be (Summit).

Richardson plays first E-flat trumpet with the Brass Band of Battle Creek and is in demand as a guest jazz and classical soloist/clinician throughout the world. He is considered to be one of today's leading crossover trumpet players. He has performed at many leading jazz festivals, as well as playing at conferences of the International Trumpet Guild.

Bibl.: Biggs, Philip. "Rex Richardson" (The Brass Herald, Aug. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Meckler, Adam. "Getting to Know Rex Richardson" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2010); "Rex Richardson" (www.vcu.ed/arts/music/dept/faculty/richardson.html.).

Richter, Theodor [Fyodor] Bogdanovich (b. Dessau, Saxony [Germany], Mar. 29, 1826; d. Moscow, Russia, Jan. 10, 1901). German cornetist, trumpeter, and conductor. Richter went to Moscow sometime during the 1840s, and began playing cornet and trumpet with the Imperial Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra. Then he conducted the military band of the Life Guard of "Tsarina Catherine" Regiment in Yekaterinoslav. He was the first trumpet teacher at the Moscow Conservatory (1866-1900, becoming full professor in 1879), and also taught arranging. (He was succeeded by Vasily Brandt.)

Richter was best known as a conductor of military bands and orchestras, and was considered one of the top three Russian conductors during his days. He reportedly conducted a European tour with a Russian orchestra with soloist Max Schlossberg on trumpet. His book, Instruction Manual for Military Bands (title translated), was published in Moscow in 1877, and was the first of its kind. Among his pupils are Ivan Mikhailovich Meshchanchuk and Sergey Ilyich Riazantsev.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ricquier, Michel (b. Leforest, France, Oct. 2, 1949). French trumpeter. Ricquier began his studies at the National Conservatory in Douai where he studied with Marius Robart. At age fifteen, he enrolled at the Paris Conservatory (1964-68), studying with Ludovic Vaillant. At age twenty, he became the trumpet professor at the Conservatoire National de Musique in Chambéry. (He is now retired.) He played in the Municipal Band in Chambéry, and in the Chambéry Brass Quintet as well.

As a teacher, Ricquier was intrigued by the relationship between the body and the mind, and has extensively studied yoga, martial arts, hypnosis and relaxation therapy, natural medicine (graduate of the Heilpraktiker-Fachschule of Saabrücken), traditional Chinese medicine (graduate of the National Federation of Traditional Chinese Medicine), and acupuncture (graduate of the Institute of Acupuncture and Hong Kong Institute of Medicine). He is an active guest speaker and clinician, and has published numerous books of exercises to improve mind control and relaxation: Traité Méthodique de Pédagogie Instrumentale (1976), L'utilisation de vos ressources intérieures (1984, 1999, Billaudot), Vaincre le trac grâce à une meilleure connaissance du fonctionnement mental (2000, 2008, éd. Guy Tredaniel), Le guide et le musicien. Roman initiatique (1998, Exergur), Je ne manque pas de souffle (1991, Billaudot). His first book made a sensation in France when introduced.

Ricquier was a member of the community of the Guilde Française des Trompettistes (1978-80).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; version 1, 2005; version 2, Oct. 2008).

Ridenour, Mark A. (b. Kittanning, Pennsylvania, June 6, 1959). American trumpeter. Ridenour grew up on his family's farm outside of Rural Valley, Pennsylvania, and began playing trumpet at age ten. He was mostly self-taught, and played trumpet, tuba, and baritone at Shannock Valley High School where he graduated in 1977. He attended Asbury College from 1977 to 1981 under Richard Illman and Chris Swainhart, earning a bachelor of arts degree, and studied with Eugene Blee and Philip Collins at the Cincinnati Conservatory from 1981 to 1985, receiving a master of music degree. During his senior year of college, he played third trumpet in the Lexington Philharmonic, and while in graduate school, was a member of the Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra.

Ridenour was acting principal trumpet of the Memphis Symphony Orchestra during the 1985-86 season, and spent six years as principal of The Florida Orchestra (1988-94). He joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra as assistant principal in 1994, and was acting principal from 2003 to 2005. In addition to playing with the CSO, Ridenour has been teaching at Roosevelt University since 1997. His own company, Mastromba LLC, sells music accessories including Tweekers, sterling silver clips that can be attached to various parts of brass instruments to modify tone and response. He has also performed as principal trumpet of the Taipei Philharmonic Festival Orchestra and the Sarasota Opera Orchestra, and has played concerts with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Cincinnati Pops, Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the New York Philharmonic. He is on the advisory board of the CSO (since 1994), and is a member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Brass Quintet.

Mark has been married to Linda Ridenour since 1981. Their children are Michele, Amanda, and Matthew. He enjoys golf and taking care of his ninety-one-acre farm located fifty miles southwest of Lexington, Kentucky. He and his family are modern homesteaders who have built the farm from scratch, including a small house. They have an orchard, gardens, horses, and plan to add other livestock so that they can become completely self-sufficient within a few years. Mark says, Nothing puts life in perspective like spending days taking care of livestock, and growing our own food.

Bibl.: "Mark Ridenour" (http://cso.org/About/Performers/Performer.aspx?id=4994); "Mark Ridenour" (www.newmusicschool.com/advisory-board/mark-redenour); personal interview, Jan. 9, 2012.

Riedl, Joseph Felix (b. before 1786; d. c1840). Austrian instrument maker. In Vienna, Riedl was an important brass instrument maker who produced natural trumpets, but he is better known for his collaboration with Josef Kail in the patenting of the "Vienna valve" in 1823, and the modern rotary valve in 1835. Riedl was also the first to apply keys to the trumpet, producing a keyed trumpet played by the Viennese court trumpeter, Anton Weidinger. It was Weidinger who commissioned the concertos by Franz Joseph Haydn and Johann Nepomuk Hummel, two of the most important works in the trumpet repertory.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W.W. Norton).

Rimmer, William (b. Birdale, England, c1862; d. Southport, England, Feb. 9, 1936). British cornetist and conductor. Rimmer came from a musical family that included his brother Robert, and his father, a bandmaster of the Lancashire Volunteer Rifles band. William joined his father's band at age fifteen as a drummer, but after he started playing the cornet, he became the band's cornet soloist. His fame as a soloist spread throughout England, and he was engaged as a guest performer with all of the best bands in the country by the age of twenty-five. His teacher was Alex Owen. His pupils included that great doyen of the brass world, Harry Mortimer. Rimmer became music editor of the Liverpool music publishing firm, Wright and Round, in 1913. He eventually gave up the cornet in favor of conducting and composing. Among his many works for brass band are The Cossack, Hailstorm (cornet solo), Punchinello, Cross of Honour, Slaidburn, and Wild Horses.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "William Rimmer" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Rinner, Erich (b. Schwaz [Tyrol], Austria, Oct. 23, 1960). Austrian trumpeter. Rinner's early music studies were with his father, Adi Rinner, a composer, arranger, and wind band conductor. When he was thirteen, he became a member of the Innsbruck band and received trumpet instruction at the music school there. At age fifteen, Erich enrolled in the youth program of the Innsbruck Conservatory, studying with Hans Zorn, and later with Walter Uhlemann at the Musikhochschule für Musik in Munich. He played for a while with the Frankfurt Opera Orchestra in Germany, and from 1981 to 1983 was principal trumpet of the Hessian State Theatre Orchestra in Wiesbaden. His orchestral career flourished when he joined the Munich Philharmonic (1983-2002) as assistant principal trumpet, then principal.

Rinner has taught at the Tyrolean State Conservatory since 1992 (becoming professor in 1999). He also enjoys playing in small ensembles. In 1996, he founded Brass Connection Tyrol, and has published several books for trumpet including 44 Etudes, Lehrbuch für Trompete, Bks. 1 & 2, My First Solo Studies, 20 Duets, and Etüden für Leicht Fortgeschrittene.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Rippas, Claude (b. Zieten, Switzerland, Mar. 25, 1946). Swiss trumpeter. Rippas studied in Bern with Carlo Poggi, in Zurich with Henri Adelbrecht, and in Paris with Pierre Thibaud. He was a member of the Musikkollegium Winterhur from 1970 to 1973, the Sinfonieorchester des Bayerischen Rundfunks from 1973 to 1975, the Munich Philharmonic from 1975 to 1976, and the Tonhalleorchester Zürich from 1976 to 1981.

Since 1970, Rippas has been an important teacher in Zurich, from 1984 at the Musikhochschule. Among his best-known students are Otto Sauter, Kurt Brunner, Immanuel Richter, Ralph Oggier, and Heinz Sauter. He is also known as a top soloist who specializes in Baroque and Classical music. Rippas often performs on Baroque (valveless) trumpet, keyed trumpet, hunting horn, alto trumpet, flugelhorn, cornet, posthorn, piccolo trumpet, and modern B-flat and C trumpets in the same concert. He can be heard on numerous albums including solo CDs such as Trumpet Concertos (Sony Classics), Barocke Kostbarkeiten (Hänssler Classics), and Festive Baroque Music at the Monastery of Münsterlingen (JPMC). He has also recorded Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto (1976, with Frans Brüggen, flute, and Gustav Leonhardt, harpsichord/director), and often performs with the Rippas Trumpet Ensemble.

For many years, Rippas was a member of Trio Armin Rosin (with Armin Rosin, trombone, and Rippas's wife, Susie, on piano and organ), and a member of the group, Ten of the Best, which features ten of the world's finest classical trumpeters.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rittenhouse, Kenneth ("Kenny") (b. c1966). American trumpeter. Rittenhouse earned a bachelor of music degree at West Virginia Wesleyan College in 1988, studying with Tim DeWitt. He also did graduate work at the Eastman School of Music and Duquesne University (the latter studying with Roger Sherman). He completed his master of music degree in May of 2006 in jazz performance at the University of Maryland where he studied with Chris Gekker.

Rittenhouse has been a member of the US Army Band ("Pershing's Own") in Washington, D.C. since 1990, and currently performs with The Army Blues Jazz Ensemble. He has also led his own jazz quartet since 1995. He has performed with Ralph Peterson, Don Braden, Buck Hill, Steve Wilson, the Cannonball Adderley Tribute Band, Billy Taylor, Jimmy Heath, Antonio Parker, and the Smithsonian Jazz Masterworks Orchestra, among others. He has played on numerous recordings, and has released the solo album, The Francis Suite, on Kaela Records. He is an adjunct faculty member at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Kenny Rittenhouse" (www.facebook.com/pages/The-US-Army-Blues); Kenny Rittenhouse's official website: www.kennyrittenhouse.com.

Rixer, Adám (b. Budapest, Hungary, May 18, 1975). Hungarian trumpeter. Rixer began playing the trumpet after being inspired to play music by his father, a professional trombonist, and studied at the Budapest Conservatory from 1989 to 1993. He then enrolled at the Franz Liszt Musikhochschule in Budapest where he studied with György Geiger, graduating in 1997, and winning trumpet solo competitions in 1994 and 1996. During his student years, he often performed with the Budapest Festival Orchestra and radio orchestra. In 1997-99, Rixer studied in Karlsruhe, Germany, with Reinhold Friedrich. He won second prize in the 1998 International Trumpet Competition in Pilisvörösvár, Hungary, and the principal trumpet position with the Philharmonic Orchestra of Luxembourg in 1999. He has also served as professor of trumpet at the State Music Conservatory of Luxembourg since 2005, and is an active chamber musician in Berlin and Vienna.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Robertson, Christopher ("Chris") (b. Vancouver, Alberta, Canada, Oct. 9, 1955). Canadian trumpeter and conductor. Robertson studied with Vincent Cichowicz in Chicago (1975-77), Maurice Murphy in London, England (1983-84), and received his bachelor of music degree from the University of Victoria in Canada in 1977. His orchestral career includes being a member of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra (1976-83), Vancouver Opera Orchestra (1977-83), Joffrey Ballet Orchestra in New York City (1976), Royal Ballet of London (Ontario, 1977), Royal Winnipeg Ballet Orchestra

(1977-83), Pacific Northwest Ballet in Seattle (1978-81), Orchestra of the Teatro alla Scala in Milan, Italy (1986 and 1988), Kirov Ballet Orchestra (1986-88), and the Covent Garden Chamber Orchestra in London, England.

As a chamber music performer, Robertson has played with Touch of Brass (1984-89), Cornucopia (1989-97), and currently plays with Cosmos Brass. He has served as director of the chamber music department of the Delta Youth Orchestra, and is the former conductor of the Richmond Community Orchestra (1994-2007). He has released two CDs with organist Bryn Nixon: Encores for Trumpet and Organ and Regal and Romantic (with trumpeter David Crist). He has taught at the Central Valley Academy, Delta Community Music School, and the Richmond Music School in Vancouver (1994-2007). He has published the trumpet book, Finding Your Own Voice (self-published).

Chris is married to Jean Robertson. His hobbies include cooking, gardening, and traveling.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Robertson, Clarence Herbert ("Herb") (b. Plainfield, New Jersey, Feb. 21, 1951). American trumpeter. One of today's leading avant-garde trumpeters, Robertson began playing the trumpet at age eleven.

While in high school, he led a student combo that performed at dances. He attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1969-72) and afterwards embarked on a two-year tour of Canada with a rock band. By the end of the tour, Robertson had completely blown out his chops, which forced him to play in a softer and more lyric manner.

Robertson moved to New York City around 1975 and developed his free-jazz playing style with Tim Berne, Rashied Ali, Lou Grassi, David Sanborn, Paul Motian, Ray Anderson, Bobby Previte, Joe Fonda, Dewey Redman, Wayne Horvitz, Mark Helias (1972), Elliot Sharp, Simon Nabatov, Andy Laster, John Zorn, Bill Frisell, Charlie Haden Liberation Music Orchestra, and others. He also formed several jazz trios, The Double Infinitive, and the Herb Robertson Brass Ensemble. His musical trademark is tonal distortion via playing with various mutes. He has recorded numerous albums as leader, including Transparency (JMT), Shades of Bud Powell (JMT), Certified (JMT), Little Motor People (JMT), Sound Implosion (CIMP), Falling in Flat Space (Cadence), The Legend of the Missing Link (Splasch), Music for Long Attention Spans (Leo), Knudstock 2000 (Cadence), Rituals (CIMP), "X"Cerpts: Live at Willisau (JMT), and The Little Trumpet (JMT).

In 2000, Robertson and Ana Isabel Ordonez formed a business partnership to create Ruby Flower Records, a label devoted to promoting avant-garde jazz. Their partnership, however, dissolved in 2009. Robinson continues his career as a trumpeter, flugelhornist, composer, arranger, and producer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Herb Robinson's official website page: www.herbrobertson.com.

Robertson, John (b. Wesport, New Zealand, Mar. 1908; d. June 22, 1974). New Zealand trumpeter. Robertson studied with Arch McMasters, Percy Code, Robert McAnnally, F.C. "Massa" Johnston, Jack Mackintosh, and Walter M. Smith. He played with the Westport (New Zealand) Band, and reportedly won fifteen soloist medals at the New Zealand Championship & Champion of Champions. He played in the Melbourne (Australia) Capitol Theatre for two years, as well as with Leon Rosebrook, St. Hilda Colliery Band, Jack Payne, and Teddy Joyce, and gave recitals at the BBC on trumpet, cornet, and posthorn.

Robertson was principal trumpet of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra (three years), the principal cornet of the 48th Highlander Band, conductor of the Toronto Police Band, and soloist for the NBC Network Corporation's symphony orchestra while touring New Zealand with Arthur Fiedler in a series of "Prom" concerts (1968). He also played with the Colgate-Palmolive Radio Unit (1945), Melbourne ABC Orchestra, Melbourne Symphony Orchestra (principal), and the Sydney Symphony Orchestra (approximately twenty-four years).

Robertson was an unusually strong trumpeter with an extraordinary range, technique, and style similar to that of Carl "Doc" Severinsen. He recorded the concertos of Raymond Hanson and William Lovelock (RCA Victor, 1969; Lovelock dedicated his concerto to him) both in the same day. He also made recordings of popular music with studio orchestras conducted by Tommy Tycho.

Robertson was professor of trumpet at the New South Wales State Conservatory in Sydney (c1948-c1972). His students reported his fantastic showing-off in lessons; one report is that he played Arban's Characteristic Study No. 6 on B-flat trumpet an octave higher than written. They also say that he was a good man, full of personality, and a practice maniac. He was known as a fine big band lead trumpeter who sometimes played lead trumpet with local jazz bands after symphony orchestra concerts. He was also a serious gambler. He died of cancer at the age of sixty-two.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Robertson, John. New Concertos for Trumpet (RCA Victor, 1969); "John Robertson" (Trumpet Herald (www.trumpetherald.com); Montz, Richard Dennis. "The Brass Section of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra: A Survey of the Most Significant Players from 1927 to 1986, Pt. 2" (excerpts from dissertation, Mouthpiece, May 2000); personal interview with Paul Goodchild, a former student of Robertson, July 9, 2010.

Robinson, Cynthia (b. Sacramento, California, Jan. 12, 1946). American trumpeter and vocalist. As a child, Robinson played various instruments before settling on the trumpet. During her teens, she played in various gig bands, but at age twenty joined a new soul and funk band led by Sly Stone. The group was soon named Sly and the Family Stone, and became a leading rock band during the late 1960s and early 1970s, producing eleven hit albums for the Warner Brothers, Thunderbolt, and Epic labels. Robinson was one of the first Afro-American females to play trumpet in a major rock band. Although the band broke up in 1975 due to substance abuse by several members of the group, especially the leader, Sly and the Family Stone was later inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

In 1974, Robinson and fellow band member Larry Graham began to work together outside the Stone band, and formed a group known as Graham Central Station. Robinson also recorded for labels such as Columbia, Sony, Priority, and Sanctuary with artists such as Robert Cray, Funkadelic, and others. In 1993, she was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. In 2006, Robinson reunited with the original Family Stone for a performance at the Grammy Award ceremonies.

Cynthia has two daughters: Laura Marie, and Sylvette Phunne. (Sylvette's father is Sly Stone.)

Bibl.: Erdmann, Thomas. "Cynthia Robinson's Journey from Humble Beginnings to Rock Stardom" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2011); "Cynthia Robinson" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Rock, George (b. Farmer City, Illinois, Oct. 11, 1919; d. Champaign, Illinois, Apr. 12, 1988). American trumpeter. Rock was not only a great trumpet player, but also a true comic. He attended Illinois Wesleyan College on a football scholarship, but by the age of twenty decided to leave school and become a professional trumpet player. He played in various small groups in the Midwest before joining the comedy music group, Freddie Fisher's Schnickelfritz Band, with which he made his first recordings (for Decca) and appeared in several movies.

When Spike Jones heard a Schnickelfritz Band program in 1944, he immediately knew that he needed to hire Rock as his trumpet player. This turned out to be a perfect musical marriage because both performers were great entertainers and each person's humor inspired the other. Rock played with Spike Jones and His City Slickers for nearly twenty years, although he spent a short amount of time with the Charlie Barnet band when Jones went on a USO tour during World War II. Rock's best trumpet solo was Minka, a tune taken from his solo, Trumpet Blues, which he had played with Fisher's group. However, Rock's biggest-selling tune was All I Want for Christmas (Is My Two Front Teeth), which sold over two million copies. Other trumpet features were I'm Captain of the Space Ship, I'm the Angel in the Christmas Party, and Happy New Year.

The City Slickers performed a Command Performance for President Truman. The highlight of the show was Rock's performance of I'm Forever Blowing Bubble Gum. Rock, a 250-pound, six-foot-tall man was dressed in a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit. The Jones band made numerous recordings for RCA and appeared many times on television during the late 1950s.

As the Jones group's popularity began to diminish during the early 1960s, Rock left to play in Las Vegas and Reno, Nevada, with his own group. For a short while, he played with Turk Murphy, but later formed a new group, the New Society Band that consisted mostly of former City Slickers members. They made one LP recording.

Near the end of his life, Rock sold used cars in Las Vegas during the day, and played with Merle Koch's jazz band at a steakhouse at night. While his name was mostly unknown to the general public, Rock was one of the best trumpeters in the business. He was admired by many musicians, including Al Hirt.

Bibl.: "George Rock" (www.allmusic.com).

Rockwell, Bland Sidney ("Rocky") (b. St. Joseph, Missouri, Mar. 2, 1923). American trumpeter and vocalist. Rockwell studied music at Maryville State Teachers College (now Northwest Missouri State University). During World War II, he played with the 865th American Air Force Band, after which he toured with the territorial bands of Harry Collins, Sonny Dunham, Jimmy Caton, and Elmer Hall. While he was performing with the Royal Bohemians on a radio show in Grand Island, Nebraska, bandleader Lawrence Welk heard him and invited him to audition for an opening in his band; from March 2, 1951 to March of 1962, Rockwell served as one of the Welk Orchestra's most popular trumpet soloists and vocalists. His crew-cut hair and impish face, combined with a comedic flair, made Rockwell a hit with television audiences. His musical skits included performing the Christmas tune Rudolph for children while utilizing a hand puppet to press the valves, impersonating Elvis Presley, and playing trombone with the trombone section until his slide got away from him and was flung across the stage.

Rockwell formed his own band in 1962, which played the Las Vegas-Reno-Tahoe circuit, and featured jazz, comedy, and standard dance tunes; it sometimes opened for Louis Prima. Rockwell returned to his hometown of St. Joseph, Missouri, in 1970 when his father became ill, and performed in the area until 1983. He then played in various cruise ship bands before retiring to Sun City, Arizona, near Phoenix.

Rockwell lost his wife, Pauline Wood, in 2000. They were high school sweethearts, and were married in 1943 while he was on leave from the Air Force. Their children, Wynona and Jeff (Jeff is now deceased), appeared on some Welk Christmas television shows. Rockwell hosted a 2002 PBS Television special on the Welk Orchestra, and after retiring, occasionally performed and recorded with Steve Cooper's band in Chicago. He ceased playing the trumpet due to a mouth infection, switching to valve trombone and playing in the Arizona swing band, Rte. 66. Despite some recent health problems, he remains an upbeat and witty person who enjoys model railroading and watching baseball and western movies.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Rocky Rockwell" (http://petekellysblog.blogspot.com/2008/09/rocky-rockwell.html).

Rodenkirchen, Christian H. (b. Honnef, Germany, Feb. 19, 1858; d. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Feb. 6[5?], 1915). German trumpeter and cornetist. Rodenkirchen was born near Cologne, Germany. He became a member of the city orchestra, and also played cornet in a local regimental band in 1883. He appeared as a cornet soloist with the Men's Singing Society of Cologne on August 28, 1882 in Cleve, and is also listed as third trumpet on the February 20, 1883 payroll for a concert by the Concert Society of Cologne.

Rodenkirchen came to America from Antwerp, Belgium, on the ship Waesland, and arrived in New York on October 18, 1883. He traveled to St. Paul, Minnesota, and applied for citizenship, which he eventually received in 1904. His first documented playing job in the United States was in 1890 with the Aamold Concert Company, a midwest touring orchestra led by August Aamold. He also played with the Siebert Orchestra in Minneapolis. He then became principal cornet of the newly-formed Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Theodore Thomas, beginning in its first season in 1891. He remained in this position until 1902, when his contract was not renewed due to an ongoing dispute between him and the principal trumpeter of the CSO, Albert Ulrich. [It seems that both men were rivals in contracting orchestra players for their own summer orchestra concerts in Lincoln Park. Because Ulrich had become an assistant conductor and manager of the CSO, most of Rodenkirchen's orchestra players left his orchestra in order to keep their jobs in the CSO.]

Rodenkirchen moved to New York where he joined the New York Symphony as principal trumpet for the 1903-04 season under Maestro Walter Damrosch, and was principal trumpet of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra for the 1904-05 season. He then became principal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic during the 1905-06 and 1906-07 seasons. In 1907, while still in New York, Rodenkirchen married his second wife, Maria MacNally, who was twenty years younger than he. The Philadelphia Orchestra engaged Rodenkirchen as principal trumpet from 1907 to 1909, but he returned to the New York Philharmonic under Gustav Mahler from 1909 to 1911. From 1911 until his death in 1915, he played second trumpet in the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Like Max Schlossberg, Rodenkirchen was a fine teacher who helped establish the American school of trumpet playing. He taught at Columbia College in Chicago. His most famous pupil was Harry Glantz.

Rodenkirchen composed Lake Harriet Polka, and recorded the cornet solo, Florida Waltz, on the Columbia and U.S. Zonophone labels. His most famous recording as a soloist is Remembrances of Prague. Rodenkirchen played a Conn Wonder cornet.

He died in Philadelphia on February 6, 1915, just two weeks before his fifty-seventh birthday, and was buried in New York.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Crown, Thomas. "Christian Rodenkirchen and the First Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section, » (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2010); (www.Stokowski.org/Philadelphia_Orchestra_Musicians.htm).

Roderick, Stan (b. April 6, 1919; d. Mar. 26, 1994). British trumpeter. Roderick was raised in the town of Barrow-in-Furness in the northwest part of England. He took up the cornet at age ten. One of his brothers was his first teacher. He played in local brass bands and by age fourteen was playing in dance halls in Barrow. His older brothers, Fred and Joss, were also brass players.

Roderick moved to London during the mid 1930s where he played in the big bands of Henry Hall and Bram Martin. Later, he joined Jack Hylton, the early Ted Heath Band, and Ambrose. He was drafted into the army in 1939, serving with the Black Watch Regiment at Dunkirk. He suffered severe shell shock and was released. However, his medical problem caused him to have several nervous breakdowns during his career.

Back in London, Roderick played with the trumpet bands of Harry Hayes, Kenny Baker, and Ted Heath, and became a top studio and big band lead player. Although his upper register was not extraordinary, and he was not a jazz improviser, his solid accuracy, beautiful big tone and sweet ballads made him a star in the post-World War II years in England. He was considered to be London's version of Bernie Glow (New York) or Conrad Gozzo (Los Angeles). Roderick played and recorded with Cyril Stapleton, the BBC Radio Show Orchestra, Vern Lynn, Robert Farnon, Jack Parnell, Geoff Love, Johnny Gregory, 101 Strings, George Chisholm, the Black & White Minstrels (which he directed), Eric Jupp, the London Palladium Orchestra, Dizzy Gillespie, Tony Bennett, Ella Fitzgerald, Nat "King" Cole, Judy Garland, Henry Mancini, Sammy Davis Jr., Louis Bellson, Frank Sinatra, Johnny Mathis, and many others.

Stan Roderick was described as a kind-hearted man (even though he had a stern face) who liked to tell jokes. He had a caustic wit, and often gave fellow musicians humorous nicknames behind their backs. His wife May passed away near the end of his life. After retiring, he spent his time fishing.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); MacKenzie, Colin. "Stan's the Man...The Adaptable Mr. Stan Roderick" (www.hallowquest.com/sroderick.htm); Simmonds, Ron. "Stan" (www.jazzprofessional.com/interviews/Stan%20Roderick_3.htm).

Roditi, Claudio [Braga] (b. Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, May 28, 1946). Brazilian trumpeter and flugelhornist. Roditi began learning music at the age of five by studying the piano. He soon learned to play bongos and other percussion instruments. He took up the trumpet at age nine and later attended the Escola Nacional de Musica and the National Conservatory of Music in Rio de Janeiro. His trumpet teachers were Rubins Waldomiro, Aurino Ferreira (in Graz, Austria), and Herr Koerner (1966). His first work was as a studio player in Brazil. He made his first recording with piano player Antonio Adolfo (1964).

In 1967, Roditi moved to Mexico City to become part of the contemporary music scene. He later enrolled in the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1970-71). There, he studied under Ray Kotwica and Lennie Johnson. He soon freelanced in the Boston area while teaching at the School of Contemporary Music. At that time, he played in a Brazilian quintet led by Amaury Tristao. Roditi developed his own personal style that combines Brazilian music and American bebop.

Roditi moved to New York City in 1976. Since that time, he has played or recorded with Bob Mover, Charlie Rouse (1976), Herbie Mann (1978-80), Dizzy Gillespie's United Nations Orchestra (1988-92), Slide Hampton's Jazz Masters, Paquito D'Rivera (since 1983), Tito Puente, Joe Henderson, Dave Valentin, Jimmy Heath, Ricky Ford, Gary Bartz, Mark Murphy, Jeannie Bryson, Jim Hall, Horace Silver, McCoy Tyner, and many others.

Roditi's solo performance on Symphonic Bossa Nova with Ettore Stratta and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra earned him a Grammy Award nomination in 1995. His many solo albums include

Claudio (Uptown), Day Waves (Terra Musica), Mind Games (Summit), Gemini Man (Milestone), Slow Fire (Milestone), Red on Red (Greene Street), Who's Smokin' (with D'Rivera on Candid), Two of Swords (Candid), Samba Manhattan Style (Reservoir), Milestones (Candid), Free Wheelin'—the Music of Lee Morgan (Reservoir), Jazz Turns Samba (Groovin' High), Double Standards (Reservoir), Claudio, Rio & Friends (Groovin' High), Light in the Dark (Nagel Heyer), Three for One (Nagel Heyer), Reflections (Nagel Heyer), and Smile (Nagel Heyer).

Claudio Roditi is known for his spirited trumpet playing and mellow flugelhorn solos. He is probably the only known famous jazz trumpeter to play on an instrument with rotary valves. He is also an excellent composer and arranger.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Claudio Roditi" (www.jazztrumpetsoloists.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rodney, Red [Cudnick or Chudnovsky, Robert] (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Sept. 27, 1927; d. Boynton Beach, Florida, May 27, 1994). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Rodney received his first trumpet at the age of thirteen as a bar mitzvah gift. He soon played in a bugle and drum choir, and attended the Mastbaum Vocational School. At the age of fifteen, he began playing professionally in Jerry Wald's orchestra.

The World War II draft took many trumpeters off to war during the early 1940s. This left many openings in name big bands. Fortunately for Rodney, his teen years garnered him a great deal of early experience during brief stays in the bands of Jimmy Dorsey (film, Four Jills in a Jeep, 1944), Les Brown, Elliot Lawrence (1945), Georgie Auld (1946), and Benny Goodman. Rodney's biggest influence was Harry James, but he soon adopted Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker as his musical heroes.

In 1946, Rodney played with Gene Krupa's band and appeared with Krupa in the film, Beat the Band, in 1947. He also played for a while with Buddy Rich (1946-47), Claude Thornhill (1947), and Woody Herman's Second Herd (1948-49). A turning point in his career came when Charlie Parker invited him to replace Miles Davis in his quintet (1951-53). He also played with Charlie Ventura.

Because several Southern states forbade the mixing of black and white musicians working together, whenever touring with Parker's all-black group he claimed to be an albino. This earned him the nickname "Albino Red." However, despite his climbing notoriety in the jazz world, he became addicted to heroin during the early 1950s. He was busted for drugs in 1951 and spent most of that year in and out of jail. He managed to lead five record dates during the 1950s and eventually gave up drugs. He spent the latter part of the decade playing in various bands and working as a booking agent in Philadelphia.

Red Rodney spent the 1960s in Las Vegas playing in pit orchestras at the Flamingo hotel and other casinos. He was a featured soloist in several showrooms and became close friends with celebrities such as Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., as well as with prizefighter Sonny Liston and mob boss Johnny Roselli. However, in 1972 he moved to New York where he soon began recording albums for the Muse label, doing some of his best work as a bop player between 1973 and 1980.

A chance meeting with Ira Sullivan led to the formation of a new quintet by the two men. Sullivan was adventurous and liked to perform new styles of music. On the other hand, Rodney had been stuck in an older bebop style and was looking for a way to break into something new. Their musical union sparked a new trend in Rodney's career, giving him a fresh start after being relatively out of the jazz scene while playing shows in Las Vegas. Rodney recorded for Muse, Steeple Chase, Savoy, Elecktra Musician, and other labels, releasing a string of LPs that brought new life to his career.

Among Red Rodney's twenty-plus albums are Red Rodney 1957 (Signal), The Red Arrow (Onyx), Superbop (Muse), The 3 Rs (Muse), Alive in New York (Muse), Hi Jinx at the Vanguard (Muse), Live at the Village Vanguard (Muse), Night and Day (Muse), Sprint (Elektra Musician), Red Rodney Returns (Argo), Fiery Red Rodney (Savoy), Broadway (Status), The New Sounds: Red Rodney (Prestige), Red Tornado (Muse), Social Call (Uptown), Red Giant (Steeple Chase), One for Bird (Steeple Chase), Red Snapper (Steeple Chase), Red Alert (Continuum), and Then and Now (Chesky).

Rodney's popularity also increased through several television appearances including Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. He was inducted into Playboy's Jazz Hall of Fame during the 1980s and appeared in a live television special from The White House during a concert hosted by President Bill Clinton in 1993. His first marriage yielded two sons, Mark Rodney (a professional musician) and Jeff Rodney. At the time of his death at age sixty-six, Red was married to Helene Rodney. He died from lung cancer resulting from a four-pack-per-day cigarette habit. Red Rodney was a highly respected jazz musician, known for his fine sense of humor and ability to tell jokes.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Watrous, Peter. "Red Rodney, Jazz Trumpeter and Big Band Leader, Dies at 66" (The New York Times, May 28, 1994); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rodriguez, Bobby (b. Los Angeles, California, Nov. 13, 1950). American trumpeter. As a boy growing up in East Los Angeles, California, Rodriguez was inspired when he saw a television broadcast of Harry James. He began playing the trumpet at age ten, and was influenced by the music of Lee Morgan and Freddie Hubbard. He was drawn to Latin jazz through many leading groups in his area.

Rodriguez's first studies were at the Career Academy of Broadcasting in Hollywood (1968), and he worked as a disc jockey at station KBCA in 1969. He also attended Rio Hondo Community College (1973-74), earned a bachelor of music degree from California State University-Long Beach under Robert Winslow and John Prince (1975-76), a master's degree in music at California State University–Los Angeles (1999-2001), and a doctorate from UCLA under Jens Lindemann (2003-06).

Rodriguez has performed or recorded with the Don Ellis Orchestra, Ray Charles, Louie Bellson, Herbie Hancock, Arturo Sandoval, Jon Faddis, Quincy Jones, Wynton Marsalis, Jack Sheldon, Willie Bobo, Poncho Sanchez, Tito Puente, Snooky Young, Gerald Wilson, Lalo Schifrin, the Brothers Johnson, Maurice White, Alex Acuna, Kenny Burrell, Ed Jones & Familia, Maxine Weldon, Billy Mitchell, Rickey Woodard, Bobby Bryant, Clayton-Hamilton Jazz Orchestra, and others. His own albums include A LatinJazz Christmas, LatinJazz Romance, Celebration, Trumpet Talk, Bobby Rodriguez Plays Duke Ellington, and Grammy-nominated Latin Jazz Explosion (all on his own LatinJazz Productions label).

A leading jazz educator in Southern California, Rodriguez teaches part-time at the University of California-Irvine, UCLA, and Pasadena City College. He has received numerous awards for teaching excellence, as well as contributions to Latin culture and jazz. He appeared in the films Rich Man, Poor Man and Harlem Nights, and has also published the texts ABC's of Brass Warm-Up—One Note Approach and ABC's of LatinJazz. Bobby Rodriguez also serves on several Los Angeles-area arts councils and boards.

Rodriguez is married to Yvonne DeBourbon-Rodriguez. Their children are daughter Robin (b. 1981) and son Robert (b. 1987). His hobby is golf.

Bibl.:Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bobby Rodriguez Biography" (www.ethnomusic.ucla); Bobby Rodriguez's official website: www.bobbyrodriguez.com; personal interview, Sept. 12, 2010.

Rodriguez, Galindo (b. Weslaco, Texas, Feb. 24, 1955). American trumpeter. Rodriguez is the son of Perfecto (a musician) and Josefina Meave Rodriguez (a retired nurse's aid), and is the oldest of five children that include Salvador (b. 1957), Perfecto (b. 1960), Marcie (b. 1964), and Magdalena (b. 1975). Rodriguez began playing the trumpet at age twelve, and while in high school performed with the Bell Airs, a popular local Latin group. His first teachers were band directors Larry Jones and Henry Rodriguez.

After graduating from Weslaco High School in 1973, Rodriguez attended the University of North Texas where he studied with John Haynie and Leonard Candelaria, earning bachelor and master of music degrees. He then joined the Civic Orchestra of Chicago and studied with Adolph Herseth of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Concurrently, he attended Northwestern University where he studied with Vincent Cichowicz, and received a Certificate of Performance. After graduation, he became the principal trumpet of the Boise Philharmonic in Idaho, and taught part-time at Boise State University.

Rodriguez joined the faculty at Northwestern State University in Natchitoches, Louisiana, in the fall of 1988, and is currently an associate professor of trumpet and coordinator of the Annual Jazz Concert Series. He established the annual NSU Jazz Festival that developed into the Louisiana State Jazz Festival and Competition. He was inducted into the Louisiana Association for Jazz Education in 2008, and is currently serving as its treasurer and past president. His jazz orchestra has performed with Allen Vizzutti, Mike Tomaro, Mike Vax, Byron Stripling, Bill Watrous, and Ellis Marsalis.

An active freelance musician, Rodriguez has played numerous shows for celebrities including Bob Hope, the Temptations, Four Tops, Jim Nabors, Elvis Presley World Tour, Don Rickles, Nelson Riddle, Regis Philbin, and others. He has also played with the Shreveport Symphony and the American Chamber Symphony. He and his wife, Sue Erwin Rodriguez, a violinist, have a daughter, Margaret Josefina (b. 1988), also a trumpeter. His hobbies include jazz improvisation, world history, reading, and physical exercise.

Bibl.: "Rodriguez Joins Northwestern State University" (news item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1989); "Louisiana Association for Jazz Education" (www.lajelouisiana.org); "Profile: Galindo Rodriguez" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2003); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Aug. 12, 2010.

Rodriguez, Michael ("Mike") (b. Queens, New York, July 14, 1979). American trumpeter. Rodriguez's family is musical: his father is a jazz drummer, and his brother Robert is a jazz pianist. Michael moved with his family to Miami, Florida, when he was nine years old, and began playing classical guitar at age ten. A year later, he also began studying trumpet, and eventually attended the New World School of the Arts, graduating in 1997. Rodriguez was enrolled at the University of Miami for two years (studying with Alan Hood and Alfredo Perez, 1997-99), but transferred to New School University in New York City where he completed his bachelor's degree in 2001.

Rodriguez has built an impressive career in New York City, performing with such artists as Eric Reed, Clark Terry, Quincy Jones, Chico O'Farrill, the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, Carnegie Hall Jazz Band, Jessica Simpson, Carla Bley, Harry Connick Jr., Smithsonian Jazz Orchestra, Bob Mintzer, the Toshiko Akiyoshi Jazz Orchestra, and many others. He has recorded with Charlie Haden and Gonzalo Rubalcaba, among others.

Rodriguez recalls two pivotal experiences that helped shape him as a trumpet player. The first was when he was twelve and his mother managed to arrange a lesson for him with Arturo Sandoval who suggested some changes to his embouchure that gave him the basis for his strong upper register and endurance. The second was when he was fourteen and played in a master class for Wynton Marsalis who taught him to focus on melody, something that is now a prime feature of his playing. Additionally, Rodriguez studied in New York with Laurie Frink, Lew Soloff, Ryan Kisor, and Joe Magnarelli who also aided in his development.

In 2003, Rodriguez and brother Robert recorded their first CD, Introducing the Rodriguez Brothers (rodbrosmusic), and later, Conversations for the Savant label. Michael toured the U.S. and Europe with the Liberation Music Orchestra in 2006, and recorded the album Not In Our Time with them. He also recorded with Charlie Haden on the Grammy Award-winning CD, Land of the Sun. He has also recorded for other labels including Blue Note and Tippin' Records.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Michel Laplace. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jazz Trumpet Player Michael Rodriguez of New York City" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/michaelrodriguez.html); Michael Rodriguez' official website: www.rodbrosmusic.com/mike-rodriguez-trio.html; personal interview, July 21, 2011.

Rogers, Shorty [Rajonski, Milton Michael] (b. Great Barrington, Massachusetts, Apr. 14, 1924; d. Van Nuys, California, Nov. 7, 1994). American trumpeter. Rogers began playing the bugle at age five and performed in a drum and bugle corps in Lee, Massachusetts, and in New York. At the age of nine, his family moved to New York City. For a bar mitzvah present at age thirteen, his father bought him a fifteen dollar used trumpet at a pawnshop. The following year, Rogers was playing in a hotel band for five dollars per week plus food and a room to sleep in with the other band members.

Rogers attended the New York High School of Music and Art from 1939 to 1942. Immediately after graduating, he joined Will Bradley's orchestra and later played with Red Norvo's group from 1942 to 1943. He was drafted into the army and served with the 379th A.S.F. Band. Upon discharge in September of 1945, Rogers joined Woody Herman's First Herd band where he first began arranging. The trumpet section included Conrad Gozzo, Pete Candoli, and Marky Markowitz. When Herman broke up the band in 1947, Rogers played with the bands of Charlie Barnet and Butch Stone.

In 1949, Rogers played in Herman's Second Herd band. He composed several tunes for Herman including Keen and Peachy, Lemon Drop, More Moon, That's Right, and Keeper of the Flame. Between 1950 and 1951, he was a member of Stan Kenton's Innovations Orchestra. With Kenton, he composed tunes such as Jolly Rogers, Art

Pepper, Round Robin, and Viva Prado. By this time, Rogers was well known as a "cool jazz" trumpeter and a brilliant jazz composer and arranger.

Rogers moved to Los Angeles in 1951 and played with Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All-Stars (1951-53). In 1953, he formed the group, Shorty Rogers and the Giants, where he mostly played flugelhorn. Soon, he became one of the leading West Coast trumpeters and studio players, recording for labels such as Capitol, Victor, Atlantic, and MGM. He also helped to get jazz music introduced into movies. He began doing a great deal of music arranging for movie soundtracks and appeared in several movies including Hit Parade of 1947 (with Herman's band), The Glass Wall (1953), Dementia (with his Giants, 1953), and The Man with the Golden Arm (1955). His music is also featured in Three in a Row (1954) and Martians Go Home (1955).

From 1962 to 1982, Rogers did little trumpet playing. His time was spent as a composer and arranger, and serving as a studio contractor. But, in 1982 he began to play more and more as a jazz flugelhorn soloist, toured with the West Coast Giants (1985), and in 1989 became the leader of the newly formed Lighthouse All-Stars band. He was one of the leading musicians in the Los Angeles scene up until his death in 1994 at the age of sixty-nine.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rogers, Walter B[owman] (b. Delphi, Indiana, Oct. 14, 1865; d. Brooklyn, New York, Dec. 24, 1939). American cornetist. As a boy, Walter B. Rogers studied the violin and cornet with his father. He later took cornet lessons from Captain John Lathrope, before attending the Cincinnati Conservatory, where at age seventeen he studied harmony, composition, and theory. He worked as a cornet soloist, and performed with the Indianapolis Municipal Band and Lathrope's Cornet Band. He also directed the Goshen, Indiana, town band.

Rogers grew up in the same town as Herbert Clarke; they were close friends. Together, they formed the Schubert Brass Quartet, which played in church (1884). They also played together in the When Clothing Store Orchestra and Bellringers, and Biessenhertz's English Opera House Orchestra of Indianapolis.

In 1885 at the age of twenty, Rogers joined Cappa's Seventh Regiment Band of New York as cornet soloist and personal assistant to Cappa, who dubbed him the "Boy Wonder." When Cappa died, Rogers assumed leadership of the band in 1894 until 1897. The following year, Rogers substituted for Clarke in Sousa's band, and in 1900 he and Clarke shared solo duties during a European tour with the Sousa Band. Rogers continued with the Sousa organization until after the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair.

In 1904, Rogers moved to Camden, New Jersey, where he accepted an offer from the Victor Phonograph Company to be Musical Director. He was responsible for the band and orchestra that accompanied all of the leading instrumentalists and vocalists of the day. He recorded for Enrico Caruso, Nellie Melba, Tetrazzini, and McCormack. He played in the ensembles, and recorded many solos and duets with them, many of which were his own compositions and arrangements, including Auld Lang Syne, Echoes of the Catskills, Concert Waltz, In Dixie-Polka, The Harp of Tara, Land of the Free, Luelle Waltz, Old Black Joe, Minnehaha Waltz, A Soldier's Dream, Souvenir of Naples, The Volunteer, War Song, The Bugler, and Yankee Doodle with Variations.

In 1916, Rogers became Recording Manager of the Paroquette Record Company, and in 1919 was named Music Director of both the Paramount Record Company and the Emerson Phonograph Company. From 1922 through 1929, he was director of the band for the Brunswick Phonograph Company.

In 1929, Rogers temporarily retired from playing and devoted his time to teaching, but his old friend Clarke called him and urged him to become soloist with Clarke's Anglo-Canadian Leather Company Band in Huntsville, Ontario. Clarke said that Rogers was the most affable chap I ever met in my whole musical career [and that he was] my ideal cornet player, whose ease of playing I was striving to imitate. Rogers played in New York theatres until 1932.

Rogers played on hundreds of recordings as a band and orchestra musician. He recorded a total of twenty-two cornet solos and thirteen duets (mostly with trombonist Arthur Pryor), many of which were his own compositions. He also recorded Three Solitaires by Victor Herbert, featuring three giants of the cornet world—Rogers, Clarke, and Bellstedt Jr.—accompanied by the Sousa Band.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Roland, Gene M. (b. Dallas, Texas, Sept. 15, 1921; d. New York, New York, Aug. 11, 1982). American trumpeter, composer, arranger, and multi-instrumentalist. Roland attended North Texas State Teachers College (now the University of North Texas) from 1940 to 1942. He joined the Stan Kenton Orchestra in 1944 as fifth trumpet and arranger, also playing valve trombone and mellophonium, and worked briefly with the bands of Lionel Hampton and Lucky Millinder before re-joining the Kenton organization in late 1945 as a trombonist and arranger. In 1946, he played piano and worked as composer and arranger for a combo that included Stan Getz, Zoot Sims, Jimmy Giuffre (his college roommate), and Herbie Steward. During the late 1940s, he played trombone with Georgie Auld, and trumpet with Claude Thornhill, Count Basie, Charlie Barnet, and Artie Shaw. In 1950, he led a rehearsal band that included Dizzy Gillespie on trumpet and Charlie Parker on tenor saxophone. He again played with Kenton from 1951 to 1953, and in 1954 joined Dan Terry's band. Between 1956 and 1958, he played trumpet with Woody Herman's band, contributing sixty-five arrangements.

Roland is well known as one of the members of Stan Kenton's mellophone section during the early 1960s. He continued writing for Kenton into the late 1970s, and also wrote for the Radio Orchestra of Copenhagen in 1967, and for Dan Terry's band. He led several of his own groups, playing trumpet, piano, and tenor sax. He invented the Four Brothers saxophone group, consisting of four tenor saxes or three plus a baritone sax. Having perfect pitch, he often composed and arranged music while on the tour bus.

Despite being considered a musical genius, Roland was also a totally irresponsible person who often left his instrument on the bandstand after boarding the bus for the next town. He was often chastised for sneaking women onto the bus (he was quite the ladies man!) and having no money. He used drugs constantly, but despite Kenton's rules about them, the bandleader always turned a blind eye to Roland's use of them. Roland was a modest man, but reportedly lacked common sense about simple things like tying his shoes and paying bills. Nonetheless, today's serious music students of the big band genre often study his compositions and arrangements.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Gene Roland" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gene_Roland); "Gene Roland A Composer" (http://home.comcast.net/~nwedder/roland2page.htm).

Rolfe, B[enjamin] A[lbert] (b. Brasher Falls, New York, Oct. 24, 1879; d. Walpole, Massachusetts, Apr. 23, 1956). American cornetist and trumpeter. Both of Rolfe's parents were musicians; his father played the cornet and his mother played clarinet and piano. When he was five years old, his family moved to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, where his father ran a sawmill, and also started his own band. During his childhood, B.A. heard the cornet virtuoso Jules Levy, and decided to become a cornetist.

In 1888, the family toured as clown musicians with the Spank's Brothers Circus. After three seasons, they began performing in vaudeville shows that often featured young Rolfe performing Levy's cornet solo, Leviathan Polka. At age twenty, B.A. left the company of his parents and joined the Majestic Theatre Orchestra and became the cornet teacher at the Louis Lombard's School of Music in Utica, New York. After one year, he went to New York City to seek fame and fortune as a cornetist. Rolfe developed an exceptionally high register on the cornet, often ascending to double-high c''' and beyond (from the age of sixteen!). He also had a knack for lip trills, which became an important part of his solo performances.

In 1915, Rolfe turned his talents to the fledgling motion picture industry, and established his own production company in Fort Lee, New Jersey. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. made several popular films that were distributed through MGM in Hollywood, California. He produced more than fifty silent movies such as Four Horsemen with Rudolph Valentino, as well as other movies with Ethel and Lionel Barrymore and Francis X. Bushman. One of his last films was a fifteen-part series called The Master Mystery starring Harry Houdini. His company had financial difficulties and folded in 1919, but Rolfe continued producing and directing for other companies. He played in the Vincent Lopez Orchestra (1924-25), and his way of playing a song in the upper register of the cornet influenced young Louis Armstrong. Rolfe then went into the radio business in 1926. The following year, he started his own dance orchestra, which performed live NBC radio broadcasts from the famous Palais d'Or restaurant in New York City. The show was picked up by the Lucky Strike (cigarette) Corporation, which signed a ten-year contract with him. At the outset of World War II, he started an all-female orchestra, which performed patriotic songs.

At the height of his career, Rolfe's orchestra made $12,000 for a single night's work. The orchestra made numerous recordings that featured 1920s and 1930s dance music for the Edison Phonograph Company. During these years, Rolfe switched to trumpet; Charles Colin was impressed and influenced by Rolfe's upper register.

When Herbert Clarke retired as conductor of the Long Beach Municipal Band, Rolfe was selected as his successor. He and his wife Edna moved to California, and stayed with the band through 1945. They decided to leave Long Beach because of all the war related activities there, and returned to Mansfield, Massachusetts, where they lived in Edna's mother's home after she died.

Retirement did not suit Rolfe, so he organized a young band in Boston, and wrote children's songs and stories that were aired on NBC Television. From home, he even broadcast his own radio show that featured his music and commentary called At Home with B.A. Rolfe. He died of cancer at the age of seventy-nine.

Bibl.: "B.A. Rolfe." (Wikipedia: www.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. Extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Rolfs, Thomas C. Jr. (b. Sioux City, Iowa, Aug. 12, 1958). American trumpeter. Rolfs grew up in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He began playing the trumpet at age ten, and studied with Chuck Olsen, Mike Brandt, and Don Hakala. After graduating from Park Center High School in 1977, he attended the University of Minnesota, studying with David Baldwin and Charles Schlueter, and earned a bachelor of music degree in 1981. He was a Fellowship student at the Tanglewood Institute during the summer of 1978. He studied with Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University, where he received a master of music degree in 1983. Additionally, he studied with Arnold Jacobs and Manny Laureano.

Rolfs has performed with the Minnesota Orchestra, Vienna Philharmonic, Empire Brass, St. Petersburg Philharmonic, Lyric Opera Orchestra of Chicago, and the American Ballet Orchestra. He was a member of the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra from 1986 until 1991 when he became fourth trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He moved to associate principal, and then became principal of the BSO as well as the Boston Pops in 2006. He has taught at Boston University since 1996, and the New England Conservatory since 2004. He recorded the John Williams Grammy Award-nominated trumpet solo on the soundtrack of the film, Saving Private Ryan.

Rolfs and his wife Ann, a physician, have three children: Benjamin (b. 1987), Emily (b. 1988), and Eric (b. 1996). His hobbies include gardening, hiking, fishing, and traveling.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom: Oct. 2008); "Thomas Rolfs" (www.bso.org/bso/mods/bios_details.jsp?id=2100246); personal interview, Apr. 20, 2011.

Photo credit: Michael Lutch.

Roller, Jan David (b. Tulsa, Oklahoma, Apr. 21, 1949). American trumpeter. Roller grew up in Amarillo, Texas. He began playing trumpet at age ten; his first teachers were George Bledsoe, John Thyssen, and Daniel Patrylak. He attended Pittsford Central High School in Pittsford, New York, for two years, and spent his last two years of high school at Memorial High School in Houston, Texas, graduating in 1967. He studied at the University of Houston with James Austin (1968-72), earning a bachelor of music degree, and at the Eastman School of Music with Sidney Mear (1973) where he received a master of music degree. He also studied with Vincent Cichowicz, Seymour Rosenfeld, and John Marsteller, among others.

Roller played extra trumpet with the Houston Symphony Orchestra, Houston Grand Opera, Houston Ballet, and the Rochester Philharmonic before joining the San Antonio Symphony in 1973. In addition to serving as third/assistant principal trumpet in the orchestra, he has taught each summer at the Interlochen Arts Camp since 1976, and has also taught at the University of Texas-San Antonio (c1983 to present) and at Trinity University (c2000-09). He is an active recitalist throughout the Southwest.

Roller and Lindsey Van de Kirk, an actress, soprano, and voice teacher at St. Mary's Hall in San Antonio, have been married since 1996, and have a son, Benjamin (b. 2001). His hobbies include photography, automobiles, and traveling.

Bibl.: "Jan Roller" (www.sasymphony.org/2011/02/jan-roller); "Jan Roller" (http://camp.interlochen.org/person/jan-roller); personal interview, July 29, 2012.

Roman, Roy (b. Brooklyn, New York, Dec. 10, 1945). American trumpeter. Roman began playing the trumpet at the age of nineteen. After an injury to one of his front teeth, he took lessons with Roy Stevens of the Brooklyn Conservatory who helped him develop an impressive upper register. He has played lead trumpet for many celebrity musicians and entertainers including Bob Hope, Gene Krupa, Count Basie, Sammy Davis Jr., Franki Valli, the Four Freshmen, Clark Terry, Dizzy Gillespie, the Andrews Sisters, Lee Morgan, Tito Puente, Machito, and Philly Joe Jones. He has recorded with Lionel Hampton, Eddie Palmieri, and under his own name. He has performed for Queen Elizabeth and Princess Grace of Monaco, as well as for Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, and Ronald Reagan. As a classical player, he has soloed with the New Jersey Symphony and the Ohio Symphony Orchestra.

Roman and his wife Kathryn, a public school music teacher, founded the Trumpet of Hope Ministries, and live in Miami, Florida.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Roy Roman" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Roy_Roman); Roy Roman's official website: www.royroman.com.

Romm, Ronald [Murray] (b. New York, New York, Dec. 4, 1946). American trumpeter. A star member of the world famous Canadian Brass from 1971 through 2000, Brass Bulletin magazine named Romm one of the top twelve brass players of the twentieth century. His father Sam was a semi-professional percussionist and jazz drummer, and his mother Sylvia, a semiprofessional clarinetist and saxophonist. His parents led the family dance band, a quartet named, "The Romm-Antics." The personnel included Ron playing trumpet, and his sister Eileen playing piano, singing, and writing songs. While growing up in Los Angeles, the family group performed at all types of festivals, social events, schools, churches, and other venues, and on live radio and television shows— even at funerals.

Romm studied with trumpeters Al Ruby, Eddie Ehlert, and Lester Remsen. He attended the University of Southern California where he studied with James Stamp (1964-67), before transferring to The Juilliard School in New York City where he studied with William Vacchiano, and received a bachelor of music degree in 1970 and a master of science degree in 1971. Although he was well known as a successful freelance artist both in Los Angeles and New York, his first fulltime orchestral job was with the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra in Canada, where he played from 1971 to 1977.

Romm was a founding member of the Canadian Brass, an ensemble that began in 1970-71, and as a group joined the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra as principal players. The Canadian Brass became headliners of the Hamilton Philharmonic's outreach to schools program, but eventually broke away from the orchestra as a result of having developed its own unique musical personality, not only as an excellent ensemble, but also as a highly entertaining group. Romm performed over 4,500 concerts and made sixty recordings, videos, and DVDs with the quintet. The Canadian Brass established itself as the most famous brass ensemble in the world. It performed in every major venue, and appeared with numerous major orchestras. Some of its television appearances included The Today Show, The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson, Sesame Street, Good Morning America, The Merv Griffin Show, CBS Sunday Morning, The Regis Philbin Show, as well as numerous television specials in Japan, Australia, Switzerland, Germany, and Austria.

Romm has been an artist-in-residence at the University of Toronto. He has also taught at the Banff Centre of the Arts in Canada, and after holding the B.A. Nugent Professor of Trumpet and Brass Chamber Music position from 2001-02, became professor of trumpet at the University of Illinois. He is a member of the Illinois Brass Quintet and is a founding member of both the New York Brass Society and the Los Angeles Brass Quintet. He has been a member of the Summit Brass since 2007, and teaches each summer at the Rafael Méndez Brass Institute. His many awards include Honorary Doctorate degrees from the New England Conservatory of Music, McMaster University, and Hartwick College, as well as the Honorary Award from the International Trumpet Guild (2012). He has recorded for BMG/RCA, CBC, Hal Leonard, Polstar, BWE Classics, Philips, Sony/CBS, Umbrella Records, Vanguard, Summit, Opening Day, and MMG.

As CEO of Romm Enterprises, Romm has released two solo albums in his Wellness of the Soul series. Volume 1, Living the Dream, and Volume 2, Seeing the Light, both recorded with wife Avis Fedge Romm, a pianist he met and married while both were students at Juilliard. They have two sons, Orlan and Aaron.

In 2004, Romm was told that he had colon cancer. After urgent surgery followed by full recovery, he resumed his normal activities as a musician, teacher, composer, producer, editor, and arranger.

Romm is also an instrument-rated private pilot. He owns residences in Urbana, Illinois and Sarasota, Florida.

Bibl.: Champouillon, David. "Living the Dream: Ronald and Avis Romm" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2006); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Romm Enterprises website (www.musicromm.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rommel, John D. (b. Louisville, Kentucky, Apr. 25, 1958). American trumpeter. Rommel grew up in Louisville, Kentucky. He began playing trumpet at age seven; his first teachers were his father John P. Rommel, Leon Rapier, Louis Davidson, and J. Jerome Amend. After graduating from Waggener High School in Louisville in 1976, he attended the University of Louisville, studying with Rapier and graduating in 1980. He also studied with William Adam, Vincent Cichowicz, and William Scarlett.

Rommel was a member of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra from 1979 to 1988 and the Nashville Contemporary Brass Quintet from 1980 to 1988, and was principal trumpet of The Louisville Orchestra from 1988 to 1996. He also worked as a commercial recording artist in Nashville. He was on the faculty of the Blair School of Music at Vanderbilt University, and in 1993 joined the faculty of the Jacobs School of Music at Indiana University. During his career, he has performed with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Indianapolis Chamber Orchestra, Summit Brass, and the Saint Louis Brass Quintet, and was a commercial recording artist in Indianapolis.

Rommel and his wife Lorin, an administrative assistant, were married in 1992, and have two children, Anna (b. 1997) and Nicholas (b. 2001). His hobbies include golf and reading.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "John Rommel" (http://info.music.indiana.edu/sb/paghe/normal/855.html); personal interview, Apr. 17, 2011.

Roney, Wallace (b. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 25, 1960). American trumpeter. Roney has become a top jazz artist in recent years. His father was a US Marshall, union leader, and boxer who loved listening to jazz trumpet recordings. At age five, Roney began playing piano and cornet. (He also boxed for a while). At age ten, he took trumpet lessons from Sigmund Hering of the Philadelphia Orchestra (two years) and began playing professionally at the age of thirteen. His first recording was as a sideman at age fourteen. He attended the Duke Ellington School of the Arts and graduated from the public schools in the District of Columbia area. His teacher during high school was Langston Fitzgerald III, but he also had brief lessons with Clark Terry and Dizzy Gillespie, and studied with Fred Irby III. At age sixteen, Roney played with Philly Joe Jones and was a member of the Ellington School of the Arts Band conducted by Mickey Bass.

Roney attended Howard University (1978) and the Berklee School of Music for a short while (1980), and played with several local big bands in the late 1970s. His most significant influences were recordings of Miles Davis, Clifford Brown, Lee Morgan, and Freddie Hubbard. After dropping out of college, he struggled to make a living, spending many nights sleeping on couches at friends' apartments. He also needed to sell his trumpet in order to survive, so he often borrowed trumpets from various music stores "on trial," returning them the next week and borrowing a different one.

Roney played with Abdullah Ibrahim's band (1979), but his big break occurred in the following year when he substituted for Wynton Marsalis for six months in Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1981-82). He also worked with Chico Freeman, Ricky Ford, and freelanced in various Latin bands in New York City. He began playing with the Tony Williams Sextet 1985-86, and became a regular member of the Jazz Messengers (1986-89) and also served as its music director from 1986 to 1987. He toured Europe with the George Gruntz Concert Jazz Band (1991) and finally got to meet his idol Miles Davis when he performed with Davis at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland. Davis took a personal interest in Roney and became his mentor, even giving him one of his own trumpets. After Davis died, Roney participated in a Miles Davis tribute band.

By the early 1990s, Roney's career was established. He released his first solo album, Verses, on Muse and followed it with other successful albums including The Standard Bearer (Muse), Seth Air (Muse), Crunchin' (Muse), Intuition (Muse), Misterioso (Warner Bros.), The Wallace Roney Quintet (Warner Bros.), and Village (Warner Bros.). His newest CDs are Mystikal (2005) and Jazz (2007), both on HighNote Records. He also has participated on hundreds of other recordings as a sideman with Marvin "Smitty" Smith, Elvin Jones, Philly Joe Jones, Randy Weston, Kenny Garrett, Tony Williams, Gerry Mulligan, Kenny Barron, Christopher Hollyday, James Spaulding, Vincent Herring, Art Blakey, Herbie Hancock, Ornette Coleman, Sonny Rollins, Chris Fuller, Carole King, Joni Mitchell, McCoy Tyner, David Murray, Lionel Hampton (1994), Helen Merrill (1995), Manhattan Project, and many others. Roney states that the best band he ever played with was the VSOP (Very Special One-time Performance) band, which he played with for six months. He also toured with Chick Corea's Tribute to Bud Powell Band (1996).

Roney received Downbeat magazine's award for "Best Young Jazz Musician" (1980), and won the Downbeat Critic's Poll for "Best Trumpeter to Watch" (1989, 1990). His style of playing is similar to that of the late Miles Davis. He is a modest man who is very respectful of his older idols of jazz. It is interesting to note that the famous film director Quentin Tarantino is an admirer of both Roney and Wynton Marsalis. In his film Pulp Fiction, a central character is named Marsallus Wallace. Roney is married to Geri Allen, a jazz pianist, and his younger brother Antoine Roney, is a well-known jazz saxophone player.

Bibl.: LaBarbara, John. "Wallace Roney" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1997); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Erdmann, Tom. "Wallace Roney: Finding His Own Way" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2005); "Wallace Roney" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rosati, Gabriel Oscar (b. Modena, Italy, Aug. 4, 1966). Italian trumpeter, flugelhornist, valve trombonist, and composer. Rosati started playing trumpet at the early age of seven under the guidance of his father, Giuseppe. At age twelve, he studied at the National Conservatory, and by age seventeen had learned music theory, harmony, pedagogy, solfeggio, trumpet, and trombone. From ages nineteen to twenty-one, he served in the Italian Army, playing in a band of carabinieri in Rome. There, he studied jazz trumpet with Cicci Santucci.

Rosati began his touring career in 1985, performing in various jazz groups, salsa bands, and Brazilian groups, and forming his own group, Gabriel Rosati & The Salsa Connection, that toured Italy and most of Europe. From 1990 to 1997, he lived and worked in San Francisco where he studied with David Hardiman, John Coppola, Bobby Shew, and Stan Mark. He worked with many leading musicians, including Fred Bongusto, Billy Preston, Santana, John Lee Hooker, Bob Mintzer, the Checkmates, and Rique Pantoja. He worked in Las Vegas for three years (1995-98), and for three months was the opening act at the Osaka Ritz-Carlton Hotel (June-Sept. 1997). He has recorded eleven CDs and presented workshops and master classes in Las Vegas and California since 2000. He often tours the U.S. and Europe with Johnny Polanco y su Conjunto Amistad, performing a show titled The James Brown Tribute.

A prolific author, Rosati has published books such as The Salsa Trumpet (Mel Bay), Latin American Trumpet Music (Mel Bay), The Latin Brass Soloist (ADG Productions), Il Trombettista Autodidatto (Carisch), Claudio Roditi Solos Transcriptions (Colin), and Brazilatafro Play-Along CD (Jazz Player magazine). His CDs are released through Brazilatafro Records/Publications Las Vegas.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Gabriel Rosati" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gabriel_Rosati); Gabriel Rosati's official website: www.gabrielrosati.com.

Rose, Jochen (b. Göttingen, Germany, Aug. 2, 1941). German trumpeter. As a boy, Rose learned to play classical violin and rock guitar, but in 1958, switched to trumpet and learned to play it himself. He later played with the Storyville Jazz Band in Hanover, with which he appeared in the 1961 television movie, Liebe 61. From 1968 to 1977, he toured with his own Store Evil rock band, and from 1975 to 1982 played with the Joe Viera Big Band, which toured Africa. He also played with the Joe Viera Sextett from 1976 to 1986, performing mainstream jazz and bebop. He was a member of the Harvey Cooper Rock Band from 1976 to 1977.

Rose turned his attention to swing music during the 1980s, playing with the Hot Pepper Orchestra. Since 1986, he has been a member of the Old Merry Tale Jazz Band in Hamburg. He also plays with the Hanover Big Band (since 1998) and the Six Sounds from Bremen. From 1990 to 1997, he was a member of the soul band, Blue Note, and from 1993 to 1997, a member of the Adderley Memorial Band. From 1999 to 2002, he played numerous concerts dedicated to Duke Ellington. Rose played the trumpet solos in the film, Männerpension (1996).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Jochen Rose" (www.oldmerrytale.de/index/php?id=en_musicians).

Rosebrook, David C[obb] (b. Portland, Maine, Jan. 19, 1874; d. Oakland, California, Mar. 31, 1937). American cornetist. Little is known of Rosebrook's early life other than that he played cornet in Boston and New York City before moving to San Francisco in 1899 at the age of twenty-five. It is said that he could play a wide range of four octaves. Henry Ohlmeyer hired him there as a special cornet soloist—alongside Herbert Clarke—for a west coast tour with his band (1910). In 1911, he joined the San Francisco Symphony as assistant principal trumpet, and moved up to principal in 1912, a position he retained for seventeen years (1912-30); he played second trumpet in the orchestra, occasionally serving as guest conductor (1930-34), until the Depression forced a suspension of the 1934-35 season. From 1916 to 1925, he was also the soloist with the Golden Gate Band, and occasionally appeared throughout the 1920s with the Oakland Municipal Band.

Rosebrook conducted the Islam Shrine Band from 1919 to 1925. Concurrently, he was a violinist and leader of the Court Theater Orchestra in San Francisco. In addition, he had a studio in the Sherman Clay & Company Music Store, where he taught all of the brass instruments.

When Del Staigers left the Goldman Band (due to alcoholism) in 1934, Rosebrook became the soloist. However, after only five weeks of touring, Rosebrook became ill, returned home to San Francisco, and never performed again. He died about three years later from a lingering illness at the age of sixty-three. Bandmaster George Brenner said of him, Mr. Rosebrook was not only a great artist, but a fine gentleman and deserves high classification for what he gave music during his life.

Rosebrook composed two cornet solos with band accompaniment, Fantasie Caprice and Flight of Fancy.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "David Cobb Rosebrook" (www.stokowski.org/Principal_Musicians_San_Francisco_Symphony.htm).

Rosenfeld, Seymour (b. May 13, 1923; d. Penn Valley, Pennsylvania, Mar. 8, 2005). American trumpeter. Rosenfeld started playing the trumpet at age eight, and studied with Max Schlossberg and Ernest Williams. He graduated from the Arts High School in Newark, New Jersey, before attending the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia (1940-41) where he studied with Saul Caston. He was drafted into the army in 1942, and played in the 102nd Infantry Band at Camp Maxie, Texas, but was discharged after eighteen months because of a medical condition that caused him to pass out in the 115-degree heat.

In 1943, he became a member of the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo, which was followed by a job as principal trumpet in the St. Louis Symphony at age twenty-one. During the summers, he played at Robin Hood Dell East. In 1946, Rosenfeld accepted his final position as second trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra where he played for forty-two years. He also taught at Temple University for forty years.

Rosenfeld was a charter member of The Philadelphia Brass Ensemble comprised of the principals of the Philadelphia Orchestra. They recorded several albums including A Festival of Carols in Brass, Catch the Brass Ring, The Glorious Sound of Brass, and The Antiphonal Music of Gabrieli. The latter two of these won Grammy Awards for "Best Instrumental Ensemble." A dedicated teacher whose students numbered in the hundreds, Rosenfeld published A Daily Routine for the Busy Trumpeter, 36 Progressive Studies, and A Method for Trumpet. He retired in 1988.

Rosenfeld and Judi Rubenstone were married in 1948, and had two daughters and two sons. Rosenfeld died in his home due to a stroke at the age of eighty-two. His body was donated to science.

Bibl.: Sims, Gayle Ronan. "Seymour Rosenfeld, Longtime Trumpeter with Philadelphia Orchestra, Has Died Aged 82" (Philadelphia Inquirer, Mar. 13, 2005); "Seymour Rosenfeld." (International Trumpet Guild website: www.trumpetguild.org); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Rosner, Adolf [Adi, Ady, Eddy] (b. Berlin-Friedrichshain, Germany, May 26, 1910; d. East Berlin, Germany, Aug. 8, 1976). German trumpeter and bandleader. Born as Adolf Roznir (known in the Soviet Union as Eddie Ignatievich Rosner), the son of a Polish-Jewish shoemaker, Rosner attended the Stern Conservatory of Music in Berlin and studied trumpet and violin. He was a pupil of the cornet virtuoso Alfred Mathes. He began playing jazz in 1928, and in the following year performed in Willi Rose-Petösy's jazz group and the legendary Weintraub Syncopators (1930-33), which performed in the famous film, Der blaue Engel, which made Marlene Dietrich a star.

When the Nazi regime began to take over Germany, Rosner moved to the Netherlands in 1933, Belgium in 1934-35, and finally settled in Krakow, Poland. He led a band at various nightclubs and later opened his own, Chez Adi. He traveled throughout most of Europe and recorded four titles for French Columbia records with his swing orchestra in Paris (1938). He was an amazing jazz trumpeter who once participated in a cutting contest with Louis Armstrong (1934). Although Armstrong won the battle, the two trumpeters gained a great deal of respect for each other, and in good humor, exchanged photos; Armstrong's was signed "To the white Louis Armstrong," and Rosner's was signed "To the black Adi Rosner."

Nazi Germany invaded Poland in 1939, so Rosner, being of Jewish descent, and his wife fled to White Russia where he was quickly approached by the Soviet government and asked to form a swing band (State Jazz Orchestra) that would perform for Russian troops. Although Stalin outlawed jazz, swing music was considered modern and stylish. He accepted the offer and toured various military bases from 1940 to 1946. His band, the Bierlorussian State Jazz Orchestra, playing repertoire by Harry James, Duke Ellington, and Benny Goodman, recorded for the Russian Melodiya label, becoming the largest selling group in the nation, and Rosner became the most important and highest paid jazz musician in Russia. In 1944, he received the title of Honored Artist of the Bierlorussian Republic.

After World War II, Stalin decided to rid Russia of all non-Russian-born people. Rosner and his wife were arrested and sent to a Siberian gulag in Magadan for nine years (1947-55). The director of the labor camp allowed Rosner to form a symphony orchestra that could perform classical music. He was allowed to rehearse the orchestra as much as needed for it to be a highly polished ensemble, and it ended up playing so well that it was allowed to perform outside the camp, as well as at other labor camps. By 1953, Rosner's captors considered him "rehabilitated" and contemplated releasing him, but when Stalin died two years later, the political climate had relaxed enough for him and his wife to leave.

From that time, Rosner built up his career in Moscow, playing classical music for the rest of his life. In 1970-72, he was persecuted and silenced because of his wish to emigrate. He finally moved to East Berlin in 1973 and died there at the age of sixty-five. It is ironic that the government that made him the most famous jazz musician in Russia also incarcerated him for being born outside of the country. Natalia Sazonova and Pierre Henry Salfati made a film of his life, Le Jazzman du Goulag. Dr. med. Irina Prokofieva-Rosner (Frankfurt am Main), Eddie Rosner's daughter (from his second marriage to a well-known Russian ballerina), put together in 2006 a three-CD set of her father's recordings, entitled Homage (IPR Media Group); it contains numbers from all the periods of his life.

Bibl.: Starr, S. Frederick. Red and Hot: The Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union 1917-1980 (NY & Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1983); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Ross, Rashawn (b. Saint Thomas, US Virgin Islands, Jan. 16, 1979). American trumpeter. While in high school, Ross began playing with several local dance and calypso bands. He attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston from 1996 to 2000. He performs in a wide variety of styles including rock, jazz, funk, hip hop, gospel, and even country. He has performed or recorded with such groups as Taj Mahal, Lettuce, The String Cheese Incident, Baaba Maal, the Yerba Buena Band, Soulive, and DJ Quik, as well as artists including Willie Nelson, Nicholas Payton, Roy Hargrove, and Stevie Wonder.

Ross is best known for his touring and recording with the Dave Matthews Band, a group he has played with since 2005, and as a full member since 2006. In addition to feature trumpet solos, he sings as a backup vocalist.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Shott); http://davematthewsband.com/band/members/rashawn-ross; "Rashawn Ross" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rashawn_Ross).

Rossbach, Franz (b. Adorf, Vogtlandkreis, Germany, Sept. 15, 1864; d. Vienna, Austria, June 1, 1941). German trumpeter. Rossbach studied trumpet and violin at the Leipzig Conservatory. In 1881-82, he was a trumpeter and violinist in the municipal orchestra in Meißen, and then until 1887 he was principal trumpet and sometimes section violin in the Infantry Regiment 134, first trumpet in the Kurkapelle Bad Elster and in the Zoological Gardens Orchestra in Frankfurt. From 1890 to 1892, he was the city music director and conductor at a school in his hometown of Adorf, and beginning in 1892 was principal trumpet of the Vienna Court Opera Orchestra and the Vienna Philharmonic. He gave a performance of Joseph Haydn's Concerto in E-flat with the Vienna Philharmonic in 1908. He was also a member of the Vienna Hofmusikkapelle (starting in 1896) and the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra (summers since 1896).

Rossbach was a famous teacher who taught at the Vienna Conservatory from 1907 to 1908, and at the Vienna Music Academy as professor from 1909 to 1931. He edited a book of orchestral excerpts from works by Richard Strauss.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Haydn's Trumpet Concerto" (http://abel.hive.no/trumpet/haydn).

Rosso, Raffaele Celeste ("Nini") (b. Turin, Italy, Sept. 19, 1926; d. Rome, Italy, Oct. 5, 1994). Italian trumpeter and composer. Although his parents wanted him to attend college, Rosso ran away from home at age nineteen to pursue a career in music. He returned home after police found the underage Rosso playing in a nightclub, thus terminating his employment. Nonetheless, he eventually became a leading jazz performer, as well as financially secure, when the Ken Thorne Orchestra in England recorded his composition (cocomposed with Guglielmo Brezza) under the title The Legion's Last Patrol (1964). This composition, Il Silenzio (The Silence, 1964), went to number one on the record charts and sold over ten million copies, earning him a gold record.

Rosso played at the RAI in Rome (1950s) with Louis Armstrong (1962), and with Chet Baker (1962), among others. He was Italy's most popular trumpet recording artist during the 1960s. His solo albums include The Jewels of the Madonna, Nini Rosso and His Golden Trumpet, Russian Folk Songs, Christmas 1968 with Nini Rosso, The Great Desire Concert (in three volumes), Trumpet Dreams, Bella Italia, Napoli, Super Disco Trumpet, Golden Melodies, Liebestraum, and Trumpet Gala. He was also a popular actor during the 1960s. Rosso died of severe respiratory problems at age sixty-eight.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Nini Rosso" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Tofanelli, Andrea. "Remembering Nini Rosso" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2013).

Rossum, Kelly (b. Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Nov. 11, 1970). American trumpeter and composer. Rossum came from a musical family, which moved around a lot while he was still a child. He began playing the trumpet at the age of eleven in Davenport, Iowa, under his band director, Bob Brown. In 1982, his family then moved to Omaha, Nebraska, where he took a few lessons with Craig Bircher. After graduating from high school in 1988, Rossum attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln where he studied with Dennis L. Schneider from 1988 to 1993. He then earned a master of music degree at the University of North Texas, studying with Keith Johnson, Leonard Candelaria (natural trumpet), and John Holt (one semester). He earned a doctor of musical arts degree at the University of Minnesota from 1996 to 2005, studying with David Baldwin and Gary Bordner (one semester). While in Minneapolis, he co-led the electric improvisational group Electropolis, as well as the Out to Lunch Quintet.

Rossum moved to New York in 2009, where he has performed with Anti-Social Music, Billy Fox's Blackbirds and Bullets, Chico O'Farrill's Afro-Cuban Jazz Orchestra, Gary Morgan's PanAmerican Latin Jazz Orchestra, Georger Gee's big band, J.C. Hopkins Biggish Band, Jeremy Walker's Bootet, Joshua Schneider's Easy Bake Orchestra, and Michael O'Brien's Greater Than Five, among others, as well as off-Broadway shows.

Rossum has released four jazz albums as leader that include Family, a CD selected as "Best Local Jazz Album of 2008" by the Mpls.St. Paul Magazine. In 2007, he was selected as a jazz scholar to head Looking At: Jazz, America's Art Form for the Minneapolis Public Library. As an educator, he was the jazz director and visiting trumpet professor at Jacksonville State University in Alabama. He founded and directed the jazz program at the MacPhail Center of Music from 2002 to 2009 and composed Welcome Home as a commissioned work to open its new flagship building. He is currently the jazz program director at Christopher Newport University in Alabama. He has also composed for film, dance, and avant-garde jazz. His composition Toxic Fruit (2006) was included in a television commercial. In addition to his four solo albums for the 612 Sides and Yebo Productions labels, Rossum has performed on over forty other albums.

Currently freelancing and performing jazz in New York City, Rossum is one of the leading avant-garde musicians in the country. He has performed with numerous artists including Ron Miles, Lars Jansson, Bob Mintzer, Denis Colin, Ted Nash, Barbara Dennerlein, Darin Pantoomkomol, Phil Hey, Jun Miyake, Woody Witt, Bengt Eklund, Ignacio "Nachito" Herrera, Joe LoCascio, Vyacheslav Shumilov, Anthony Cox, Sir David Wilcox, Alexander Serguencko, Wessell "Warmdaddy" Anderson, Eric Miyashiro, Juini Booth, and others. He is married to the modern dancer and choreographer Suzanne Wiltgen. His hobby is fishing.

Bibl.: "Kelly Rossum" (www.krossum.com); "Biography: Kelly Rossum" (www.allaboutjazz.com); personal interview, May 2, 2010.

Photo credit: Vera H. Olcott.

Rotondi, James ("Jim") Robert (b. Butte, Montana, Aug. 28, 1962). American trumpeter. Rotondi comes from a musical family. He began taking piano lessons from his mother at age eight, but switched to trumpet at the age of twelve. His first trumpet lessons were with Larry Cragwick. After graduating from Butte High School in 1980, he attended the University of Oregon for two years, but transferred to North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), graduating in 1985. His main teacher was Don Jacoby. In 1984, he won first place in the International Trumpet Guild's Jazz Competition.

Rotondi moved to Florida and freelanced. He played on several cruise ships before moving permanently to New York City in 1987. He toured with various Broadway shows, and then joined Artie Shaw's band. He became a member of the Ray Charles Orchestra (1991-92) and also performed with Junior Cook, Cecil Payne, Charles Earland, Lionel Hampton (1995-2001), George Coleman, Michael Weiss, Lou Donaldson, Curtis Fuller (1997), Toshiko Akiyoshi, Bob Mintzer, Ray Vega, and many others. Rotondi is also a member of the One For All sextet, and leads his electronic group, Full House. He teaches privately and at various workshops (including Jamey Aebersold jazz camps).

An active recording musician, Jim Rotondi has played on albums with Eric Alexander, Randy Johnston, Eric Delmark, John Pizzarelli, Charles Earland, David Hazeltine, Giacomo Gates, and many others. His own albums include Introducing Jim Rotondi (Criss Cross), Jim's Bop (Criss Cross), Excursions (Criss Cross), New Vistas (Criss Cross), The Pleasure Dome (Sharp Nine), Too Soon To Tell (Sharp Nine), and Optimism (Sharp Nine).

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jim Rotondi" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Jim Rotondi's official website: www.jimrotondi.com; "Jim Rotondi" (www.trumpetplayerprofiles.com/jimrotondi.html); "Jim Rotondi" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Roux, Ludovic (b. Narbonne, France, Dec. 9, 1968). French trumpeter. Roux studied trumpet with Maurice Benterfa, Guy Touvron, and Bernard Soustrot. After graduating from the Conservatoire National de Région de Lyon under Touvron in 1989, he helped form the quintet, Les Trompettes de Lyon, a popular music and entertainment ensemble, which performs regularly in Lyons, and has presented concerts around the world including performances at the International Trumpet Guild conferences in Fort Worth, Texas (2003), and Sydney, Australia (2010). Other members of the group are Pierre Ballester, André Bonnici, Didier Chaffard, and Jean-Luc Richard. As a soloist, Roux has won first prize in the European competition in Lunéville (1993) and in the Kiwanis Club competition (1994). He teaches at the Lezignan Corbière Conservatory.

Roux and his wife Christel Roux, a nurse, have three daughters: Manon Berger (b. 1997), Sasha (b. 2004), and Marie (b. 2007). His hobbies include watching movies.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompettes, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); www.lestrompettesdelyon.com; personal interview, Sept. 26, 2012.

Rowe, [James] Carlton ("Carl") (b. Norfolk, Virginia, Mar. 1, 1948). American trumpeter. Rowe grew up in East Point, Georgia (a suburb of Atlanta). He studied with Richard Hansbury (trombone) and Jimmy Taylor (trumpet), both of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. He graduated from Princess Anne High School in Virginia Beach, Virginia, in 1966, and attended Shenandoah University from 1968 to 1969 and Catholic University of America from 1970 to 1971. His teachers were Ed Cooper and Lloyd Geisler.

After completing his bachelor of music education and master of music degrees, Rowe joined the US Marine Band in 1971. He was principal trumpet for nineteen of his twenty-two years with that organization, retiring from the band in 1993. He has also been a member of the Brass Band of Battle Creek (ten years), The New Sousa Band (since 1997), and the Washington Symphonic Brass (ten years), and has performed with the Jack Daniels Silver Cornet Band, National Symphony Orchestra, Washington National Opera, Baltimore Opera, National Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Harrisburg Symphony. He is currently the coprincipal trumpet of the Chesapeake Orchestra. He has taught at Shenandoah University since 2002.

Rowe is married to Grayce O'Neill Rowe, an Episcopal priest. His children (from a previous marriage) are Kelli (b. 1971) and Kasey (b. 1975). His hobbies include gardening, yoga, and reading.

Bibl.: "Carlton Rowe" (www1.su.edy/cf/faculty/_faculty_profiles1.cfm?uid=jrowe); personal interview, Aug. 8, 2011.

Rowles, Stacy (b. Los Angeles, California, Sept. 11, 1955; d. Burbank, California, Oct. 27, 2009). American trumpeter, flugelhornist, and singer. Rowles began playing the piano at age four, drums at seven, and trumpet at twelve. Her father Jimmy Rowles (1918-96) was a well-known jazz pianist and composer, and her mother Dorothy was a dancer. Stacy's siblings included sister Stephanie, and brother Gary.

At age twenty, Rowles performed with Clark Terry. During her career she also played regularly with groups such as Maiden Voyage, DIVA, Jazz Birds, Swing Sisters, Jazz Tap Ensemble, the Clayton-Hamilton Orchestra, Jimmy Rowles (1985), Harry Edison, Alden-Barrett Quintet (1989), Al Grey-Bill Watrous (1989), and the Swinging Ladies (with Lindy Huppertsberg on bass, 1994). She toured Europe many times (2002-09) with Witchcraft. Her recording debut was in 1984, and although she recorded on several of her father's albums, she only recorded one CD as leader—Tell It Like It Is (Concord Jazz). Albums with her father include Me and the Moon (American Jazz Symposium), I'm Glad There Is You, and Looking Back.

Rowles was severely injured in a head-on automobile accident in mid October 2009. While recovering at home, she died two weeks later at the age of fifty-four. She was known for her warm tone and restful style of playing.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mergner, Lee. "Trumpeter Stacy Rowles Dies at 54" (JazzTimes, Nov. 2, 2009); Ratliff, Ben. "Stacy Rawles, Jazz Musician, Is Dead at 54" (New York Times obituary, Nov. 6, 2009); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace. Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Royal, Ernest ("Ernie") Andrew (b. Los Angeles, California, June 2, 1921; d. New York, New York, Mar. 16, 1983). American trumpeter. Royal came from a musical family. He began playing the trumpet at age ten and was playing professionally by age fifteen. His early experiences were in Los Angeles with Les Hite (1937-38) and Cee Pee Johnson (1939). Along with his older brother Marshall (alto sax), Ernie played with Lionel Hampton's orchestra (1940-42).

Royal joined the navy in 1942 and played in a band until his release in 1945, after which he moved to San Francisco and worked with Vernon Alley, and then later in Los Angeles with Phil Moore. He was the lead trumpet (screamer) with Count Basie (1946), and with Woody Herman's Second Herd (1947-49). He played for a short while (1950) with Charley Barnet and Duke Ellington, but settled in Paris for two years (1950-52) where he performed and recorded with Jacques Helian.

Royal returned to the United States in 1952 and played with Wardell Gray, and in the following year, toured with the Stan Kenton Orchestra. He produced his only solo album in 1954, recording Accent on Trumpet for the Urania label. (He is also featured rather prominently on Coleman Hawkins's album for Urania, Accent on Tenor Sax.) He rejoined Kenton's band in 1955.

Royal toured and recorded with Gil Evans (from 1957), including a European tour (1958). He also recorded numerous productions for Quincy Jones (1955-64), Oliver Nelson (1961-67), and Friedrich Gulda (1966). Most of his work was as a staff musician for ABC studios in New York (1957-72). He toured Germany with Pepper Adams (1972) and the USSR with Super Satch (1975), appeared at the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, played Broadway shows (Raisin', and others), and played in Monaco with Sy Oliver's band (1980).

Royal was one of the world's greatest lead players and high note screamers. He was also a fine, but underutilized jazz improviser.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Rubin, Alan P. (b. Brooklyn, New York, Feb. 11, 1953; d. New York, New York, June 8, 2011). American trumpeter. Rubin entered The Juilliard School on a scholarship at the age of seventeen, graduating in 1974. He worked as a studio player and freelance artist in the New York area, but was best known for his many television appearances as part of the house band for the television show, Saturday Night Live. His association with celebrities Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi led to his playing the role of trumpeter Mr. Wonderful in the 1980 film, The Blues Brothers, as well as the 1998 sequel. His playing was heard millions of times on the hit recording of Spinning Wheel, made by the group, Blood, Sweat and Tears, in 1968.

Rubin, "Mr. Wonderful," played with an impressive list of celebrity musicians, including Frank Sinatra, Duke Ellington, The Rolling Stones, Eric Clapton, Billy Joel, Frank Zappa, B.B. King, Ray Charles, Dr. John, James Taylor, Frankie Valli, Ewair Deodato, Sting, Aerosmith, Miles Davis, Yoko Ono, Peggy Lee, Aretha Franklin, and James Brown. He performed during the closing ceremonies of the 1996 Olympic Games. He recorded with Duke Ellington (1970), George Benson, Freddie Hubbard, and Steve Gadd (1988).

Rubin died at the age of sixty-eight from lung cancer. He was married to Mary Moreno Rubin.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Alan Rubin" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Alan Rubin" (www.discogs.com/artist/Alan+Rubin); Nelson, Valerie. Alan Rubin dies at 68: Blues Brothers Trumpeter (Los Angeles Times obituaries, June 11, 2011).

Rudd, Wortley Fuller Jr. ("Wiff") (b. San Antonio, Texas, Apr. 6, 1955). American trumpeter. Rudd began playing the trumpet at age twelve. His early teachers were Bill Brawn (band director) and William Snyder (private trumpet teacher). He attended Dobie High School in Houston for two years, Alamo Heights High School in San Antonio for two years, and was selected for the American Youth Performs Orchestra. After graduating in 1973, he attended Baylor University where he studied with Michael Ewald (first three years) and Ronald Fox (senior year), earning a bachelor of music education degree in 1977. He then attended the University of Northern Colorado where he studied with William Pfund from 1977 to 1978, receiving a master of music degree.

Rudd's first teaching post was at Oklahoma Baptist University (1978-85), and while there, he also performed as third/assistant principal trumpeter in the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra. He relocated to Dallas in 1985 to become a member of the Dallas Brass, and began teaching at Dallas Baptist University and Southwestern Theological Seminary (1985-87). After touring with the Dallas Brass for eight years, Rudd became a founding member of Rhythm & Brass (1993), a brass quintet with percussion. The group has toured the world and released numerous CDs.

Although he continues to tour with Rhythm & Brass, Rudd accepted a fulltime teaching position at the University of Arkansas in 1998. He was also principal of the North Arkansas Symphony Orchestra and a member of the Boston Mountain Chamber Players. However, a call from Baylor University in 2002 led to his current positions as professor of trumpet, brass area coordinator, and member of the Baylor Brass. In 2010, he was selected to receive the Outstanding Faculty Award in Teaching, and was named the Centennial Professor. He is principal of the Waco Symphony Orchestra, and has performed with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Houston Symphony, and Harrisburg Symphony.

Rudd and his wife Jeanette (his high school sweetheart), were married in 1976 and have three children: Joshua (b. 1978), Andrew (b.

1981), and Taylor (b. 1985). He enjoys hiking, fishing, kayaking, and spending time with his grandchildren.

Bibl.: "Wiff Rudd" (www.baylor.edu/about/vision/index.php?id=62918); Wiff Rudd's official websites: www.wiffrudd.com; www.rhythmandbrass.com; personal interview, Sept. 4, 2011.

Rudoy [Roudy], Nikolay [Mykola] ("Niko") Vasilyevich (b. Pechera, Ukraine, June 2, 1919; d. Kiev, Mar. 3, 1999). Ukrainian trumpeter. Rudoy, whose name appeared on his passport as Mykola Roudy, preferred to be called by the nickname Niko Roudol. From 1932 to 1936, he studied first baritone, then trumpet, in a music school of the Sixth Liaison Regiment. He then studied with Wilhelm Yablonsky at the Kiev Music College Conservatory before and after World War II (Sergey Bolotin gives the dates as 1936-39 and 1955). During and after the war, he served in the military, and played in a song and dance ensemble (1941 to 1950). He was a versatile player who could play many styles of music including jazz.

When the war ended, Rudoy participated in a joint concert celebration with U.S. and Soviet troops. At a reception following the concert, he performed variations on Moonlight Serenade with piano, which elicited tremendous applause from the American soldiers. When told that he must be the finest trumpet player in all of the Soviet Union, Rudoy replied, I am just the second trumpeter from Vinnitsa. You should hear the first trumpeter!

After the war, Rudoy played in the Kiev Conservatory Opera Orchestra (1951 to 1958) and the Ukrainian Symphony Orchestra (from 1958). He composed works for trumpet, wrote daily trumpet exercises, and arranged music for band.

Bibl.: Bolotin, Sergey. Biographical Dictionary of Musicians Performing on Wind Instruments (Kiev, 1969); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Ruecktenwald, Philip J. (b. Milwaukee, Wisconsin, July 27, 1954; d. Branchburg, New Jersey, Apr. 3, 2005). American trumpeter. Ruecktenwald was the principal trumpet with the New York City Opera at Lincoln Center from 1986 to 2003, and taught for five years at The College of New Jersey in Trenton. His friend and colleague, Wilmer Wise, said of him, We worked together on many jobs. Phil played that shining piccolo trumpet part on the "West Side Story" recording with Bernstein...I spoke with Phil shortly before he died. He was, as always, cracking bad jokes and breaking himself up. Phil was a super human being.

Ruecktenwald, who loved golfing, fishing, cooking, and working in his garden, died at the age of fifty. He was survived by a wife and three sons.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete. Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Philip J. Ruecktenwald 1954-2005" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/news05/356ruecktenwald.htm).

Photo: Ruecktenwald at age sixteen, from The Milwaukee Journal, Mar. 15, 1971.

Ruffins, Kermit (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Dec. 19, 1964). American trumpeter and singer. Ruffins has become a New Orleans legend. He started playing the trumpet in eighth grade, and by age fifteen was playing in a local parade band. While attending Joseph S.

Clark Senior High School, he cofounded and led the Rebirth Brass Band (1983-92), which mostly performed in the streets of New Orleans. In 1992, he formed the Barbecue Singers, a five-piece group that featured him as trumpeter and vocalist. A distinctive feature of its shows is that Ruffins cooks during the program, a skill he learned from his grandmother. He also formed his own big band during the late 1990s.

Over the past twenty years, Ruffins has played with hundreds of top performers in New Orleans, and has released an impressive list of CDs, including Big Easy (Basin Street), The Barbecue Singers Live (Basin Street), World on a String (Justice), 1533 St. Philip Street (Basin Street), The Big Butter and Egg Man (Justice), Hold on Tight (Justice), Swing This (Basin Street), Livin' a Treme Life (Basin Street), Live at Vaughan's (Basin Street), Have a Crazy Cool Christmas (Basin Street), and Throwback (Basin Street). Ruffins has also appeared in several films, including New Orleans in Exile, Treme (HBO Television series), After the Catch, and The Real World of New Orleans.

Ruffins is a very outgoing and popular person. In 2003, his band was nominated for the Big Easy Entertainment Award, and in the same year won the "Best Traditional Jazz Band" award from Offbeat magazine's Best of the Best Awards. Ruffins and Karen "Juicee" James have been married since 2007 and have a daughter named Kaylin Orleans Ruffins. (Ruffins also has children from a previous marriage.)

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Thevenot, Brian. "Return to Splendor" (American Way magazine, Dec. 15, 2009); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Kermit Ruffins" (www.satchmo.com/nolavl/kermit.html; "Kermit Ruffins" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

Ruhe [Ruge], Ulrich Heinrich Christoph (b. Halberstadt, Germany, July 29, 1706; d. Leipzig, Germany, June 8, 1787). German trumpeter. Ruhe was the successor to Reiche as J.S. Bach's first trumpeter in Leipzig, and performed these duties for sixteen years from 1734 to 1751. (The more famous Reiche played only eleven years for Bach.) Ruhe's playing must have been equal to that of Reiche, for Bach's trumpet writing did not change when Ruhe took over. Ruhe performed dozens of difficult Bach cantatas, plus his Christmas Oratorio, Ascension Oratorio, and many of his earlier works. Nevertheless, in his later years, Ruhe preferred to play the violin.

Ruhe, whose baptismal certificate gives the name Ruge, was the son of musician Johann Valentin Ruge. Ruhe's older brother, Johann Friedrich Ruhe, was a teacher and Kantor at the cathedral Gymnasium in Magdeburg from 1733 to 1776. U.H.C. Ruhe was a city piper in Leipzig and was the first violinist and trumpeter in the so-called Grosses Konzert and the Gewandhaus Orchestra (founded in 1743 and at that time consisted of only sixteen musicians).

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Russo, Antoine ("Tony") (b. Menton, France, July 18, 1948). French trumpeter. Russo studied with Ludovic Vaillant at the Paris Superior Conservatory of Music (first prize in 1967) and became a top bebop and lead trumpet player. He began his career in a pop group, the Sharks, then went to Paris where he joined the Jazz Club de France Big Band led by Raymond Fonsèque (c1965). Since the late 1960s, he has worked as a studio musician, recording as backup with hundreds of celebrity musicians including Liza Minelli, Paul Anka, Michel Sardou, Henri Salvador (1985), Paul Mauriat (1969, 1976, 1998), Slide Hampton (1970), Martial Solal (from 1980), Claude Bolling (1992), Jay McShann (1989 with Clark Terry and Carmell Jones), Charmaine Neville (1991), and Claude Nougaro. He has also played with the Paris Jazz Big Band (2005 in Marciac), Jef Gilson (1966-70), Eddie Louiss (1983), and Henri Guedon (1977-78, 1982). He was one of the noted French lead trumpets with Michel Barrot during the 1980s.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. mp3; Oct. 2008).

Rux, Hannes (b. Velbert-Neviges, Germany, June 1, 1965). German trumpeter. Rux, who started trumpet at age eight, studied at the Musikhochschulenin Cologne and Düsseldorf from 1984 to 1989 with Edmund Buschinger (modern trumpets) and Friedemann Immer (historical trumpets). The tone of the historic trumpet fascinated him so much that he decided to perform exclusively on it. A virtuosic specialist on the Baroque (valveless) trumpet, he can be heard on over seventy recordings, and has performed with numerous historical period ensembles such as Concerto Köln, Musica Antiqua Köln, Das neue Orchester, Das kleine Konzert, La Stagione Frankfurt, Collegium Karthusianum, Musica Fiata, Bachorchester Hannover, Akademie für Musik Berlin, Freiburger Barockorchester, Main Barock, Leipziger Barockorchester, and Capella Augustina.

Hannes is married to trumpeter Almut Rux.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Ryg, Jørgen (b. Denmark, Aug. 11, 1927; d. Denmark, Aug. 28, 1981). Danish trumpeter and actor. Ryg started playing music only at the age of eighteen. After a stint in the Danish Army, he freelanced in Denmark, recording the first of four albums in 1954-55. His style of playing was similar to that of Chet Baker. He sat in with Slide Hampton's band, and performed and recorded with Clifford Brown. His albums, recorded for EmArcy and distributed worldwide by Mercury, are Jørgen Ryg Quartet, Vols. 1-3, and Brüel & Rye Quartet. In the film Koerlighedens Melodi (1959), his quartet plays the blues.

Ryg gave up trumpet playing in the late 1950s in order to become a screen actor. He appeared in thirty-seven Danish films between 1954 and 1978. Very little is known of his life after that. He died just two weeks before his fifty-fourth birthday.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jørgen Ryg" (http://en.wikipedia.org).

S

Sabarich, Raymond (b. Toulouse, France, July 23, 1909; d. Paris, France, Apr. 5, 1966). French trumpeter. Sabarich studied with Joseph Albus until he entered the Paris Conservatory, where he studied with Eugène Foveau (1927-28). After his army years in the 46th Infantry Regiment Band (cosoloist with Roger Aureggi, 1928-30), he spent his early career mostly by playing in various dance bands, jazz bands, show bands, and as a studio player for films. But he was also principal trumpet of the Opéra Comique in Paris (principal trumpet as early as 1933), and played in the Raymond Legrand Orchestra (1940-42). He had a fantastic career in the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire Orchestra as fourth trumpet (Oct. 19, 1937 to May 10, 1939) and as principal trumpet (unofficially from May 1939 to June 1942, then officially from May 1942 to 1966). During this time, only Sabarich, Paolo Longinotti, Adolf Scherbaum, and Ludovic Vaillant were performing the works of J.S. Bach in Paris. Sabarich and Vaillant typically performed Bach's Magnificat in D and the B Minor Mass on trumpets in D. Sabarich was considered to have one of the most beautiful tones on the trumpet during the twentieth century.

Sabarich was professor of trumpet at the Paris Conservatory (1947-66, assisted by his son-in-law Louis Menardi, and later by Roger Delmotte). He also taught privately and at the Selmer shop. Among his best-known students are Maurice André, Gaêtan Berton, Albert Calvayrac, Yves Couëffé, Fred Gérard, Roger Guérin, Jacques Jay, Bernard Jeannoutot, Marcel Lagorce, Gérard Millière, Gérard Roussel, Fred Sautter, Pierre Sellin, Henri Van Haeke, Claude Vassé, and Loulou Vezant. Sabarich's trumpet playing also influenced some of his part-time students, such as Pierre Pollin, Roger Delmotte, and Pierre Thibaud. Like Thibaud, Sabarich favored a very strict and demanding teaching style. [See biography on Maurice André as example.] According to many of the French symphonic trumpet players, Sabarich is one of the three most important founders (along with Merri Franquin and Eugène Foveau) of the French school of trumpet playing.

With Louis Menardi, Sabarich made educational recordings for the Selmer Company for which he was an advisor, and composed Dix Etudes for trumpet (published by Selmer).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel : "Les Fondateurs de l'Ecole Française de Trompette: Merri Franquin, Eugène Foveau et Raymond Sabarich," Brass Bulletin, No. 29, 1980; Pipers 12, (Japan); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpts on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Sabo, Scott William (b. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Apr. 14, 1970). American trumpeter. Sabo grew up in Pittsburgh. He began playing trumpet at age nine; his first teacher was Daniel Rose, and he later took lessons during late high school from Roger Sherman. After graduating from Brentwood Junior-Senior High School in 1988, he studied with Byron Pearson at Oberlin College for three years (1988-91) before transferring to the Cleveland Institute of Music where he studied with James Darling and Michael Sachs, completing his bachelor of music degree in 1992, and master of music degree in 1994.

Sabo joined the US Marine Band "The President's Own" in 1994. After four years with the band, he became a member of the "Pershing's Own" Army Band in Washington, D.C. (1998-2007). He has also been principal trumpet of the Maryland Symphony Orchestra and Annapolis Symphony Orchestra, as well as second trumpet of the Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra. He has been a member of the Washington Symphonic Brass, and has played with the National Symphony Orchestra, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Houston Symphony Orchestra, Charleston Symphony Orchestra, Brass Band of Battle Creek, and the Baltimore Chamber Orchestra.

Now residing in Boston, Massachusetts, with his wife Traci Neptune (married in 2005), Sabo works as a freelance musician. His hobbies include sports, hunting, archery, mountain biking, and home remodeling projects.

Bibl.: "Scott Sabo" (www.wsbrass.com/personnel-sabo.html); personal interview, Jan. 25, 2012.

Sachs, Michael (b. Los Angeles, California, Nov. 27, 1961). American trumpeter. Sachs grew up in Santa Monica, California. Among his teachers are Ziggy Elman, Anthony Plog, and James Stamp. In 1983, he received a degree in history from the University of California-Los Angeles. It was during a summer at the Aspen Music Festival that he decided to make orchestral playing his career. He enrolled at The Juilliard School in New York, studying with Mark Gould, and during his third year in 1986, won a position as fourth trumpet in the Houston Symphony Orchestra and the Houston Grand Opera orchestra. He also taught as an adjunct professor at Rice University.

Sachs became principal trumpet of the Cleveland Orchestra in September 1988, a position he has held for nearly twenty-five years. He is chair of the brass department at the Cleveland Institute of Music, and presents master classes around the world. He has taught at numerous summer festivals including the Grand Teton Festival, Aspen Music Festival, Eastern Music Festival, National Orchestral Institute, Domaine Forget Festival, Summer Brass Institute, Blekinge International Brass Academy (Sweden), and others. He has performed with the Summit Brass and taught at the Keystone Brass Institute.

As a soloist, Sachs has performed with the Cleveland Orchestra, New York Philharmonic, Houston Symphony Orchestra, Louisiana Philharmonic, Auckland Philharmonia, New York Chamber Symphony, San Diego Mainly Mozart Festival Orchestra, and many other leading ensembles. He premiered Concerto for Trumpet by John Williams in 1996. As a recitalist, he has performed in the United States, Europe, and Asia. His 2005 solo CD with organist Todd Wilson is titled Live from Severance Hall.

Sachs has published Daily Fundamentals for Trumpet and Mahler Symphonic Works for Trumpet (International Music Company), as well as 14 Duets for Trumpet and Trombone (Carl Fischer) with Joseph Alessi III, principal trombone of the New York Philharmonic. He also published an orchestral excerpt book with a CD of him playing many excerpts titled The Orchestral Trumpet (Tricorda).

Sachs is married to Yolanda Kondonassis, a harp soloist and principal of the Cleveland Orchestra. His hobby is broadcasting as a licensed ham radio operator.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Michael Sachs" (www.stokowski.org/Principal_Musicians_Cleveland_Orchestra.htm); Michael Sachs's official website: www.michaelsachs.com.

Sachse, Ernst [Friedrich Ludwig Jr.] (b. Eisenberg, Germany, Jan. 25, 1813; d. Weimar, Germany, Oct. 5, 1870). German trumpeter and cornetist. Ernst Sachse with all three first names was named after his father. Along with his older brother Friedrich, Ernst was one of Germany's finest trumpeters in the mid nineteenth century. Hector Berlioz in 1844 wrote that he did not know to which brother he would present the palm of victory, but that Ernst played with "extraordinary force."

Sachse worked mainly as a court trumpeter and chamber musician in Weimar. Around 1850, he published his Etudes for the alto E-flat trumpet, now published as 100 Etudes, and commonly used today as transposition studies. At least seven of these etudes appear in Wilhelm Wurm's Method for Playing the Cornet, although Wurm does not identify Sachse as the composer. In 1841 or 1842, he performed two of his own compositions in Weimar; a newspaper review (Allemeine Musikalische Zeitung) stated, "He is most excellent on his own difficult instrument." Another review, after a performance in London (1844) stated, The power, the charming songlike style, and the surprising agility with which he handles his instrument brought him universal recognition (Neue Zeitschrift für Musik). It is remarkable that in 1950, he performed in Leipzig a Concertino für einfache Trompete, i.e. a concertino for natural (valveless) trumpet. Other compositions by Ernst Sachse include his popular Concertino in D for Trumpet and Orchestra that is often played in a transposed version to E-flat with brass band, Variationen für Trompete & Pianoforte in Es-Dur, and Concertino für Posaune und Orchester in B-Dur.

At age twenty-one, Sachse left the city of Eisenberg (where his father was a municipal musician) and moved to Leipzig where he won a position as first trumpet in the Weimar court orchestra under Johann Nepomuk Hummel. (Hummel described Sachse as a "first-rate musician.") Sachse played in this orchestra until at least 1869. He also taught students, one of whom was Christian Ferdinand Weischenk who became an influential teacher at the Leipzig Conservatory. Sachse died of dropsy.

Bibl.: Reine Dahlqvist. Bidrag till trumpeten och trumpetspelets historia (Ph.D. dissertation, University of Gothenburg, 1988); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); additional information provided by Edward Tarr.

Sachse, Friedrich (b. Bendeleben [near Schwarzburg-Sondershausen], Germany, July 24, 1809; d. Hanover, Germany, Jan. 15, 1893). German trumpeter. Friedrich, along with his younger brother Ernst, was considered to be one of Germany's finest trumpeters in the mid nineteenth century. Hector Berlioz wrote that he did not know to which brother he would present the palm of victory, adding that Friedrich was a most excellent trumpeter.

Friedrich Sachse trained at first with a musician named Löscher, and at twenty years of age entered the music corps of the 7th infantry regiment of the Hanover army. In 1832, he became a staff trumpeter of the Celle dragoon regiment. He was First Staff Trumpeter and member of the court orchestra of the royal Hanovers, from 1833 to 1865. Because of his virtuosity on the trumpet, he received many decorations. After leaving military service in 1866, he made concert tours of south Germany and Switzerland; in 1871-73 he performed in the U.S., mainly in New York, Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

On November 12, 1842 he performed Ferling's Introduction und Variationen with the Leipzig Gewandhaus orchestra. An enthusiastic reviewer wrote in the Allgemeine Musikalische Zeitung: ...We have never heard such a beautiful trumpet tone, very mellow and elastic, nor such a consistent, truly amazing dexterity on this difficult instrument...In particular we must praise Mr. Sachse's delicate, tasteful performance [and] the beautiful shading of his tone even in the highest...register. Another reviewer for the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik praised his technique and musicianship: What Mr. F. Sachse accomplishes on the valve trumpet is unusual; at least up until now we have not heard anything similar. He can compete with almost any other wind instrumentalist in virtuosity, and in his performance he displays taste and artistic education. Similar reviews from 1843-65 survive in Berlin, Riga, Frankfurt am Main, Lüneburg, Vienna, and Hanover. The only criticism was that by its nature the trumpet, like the trombone, serves to blow down city walls rather than evoke delicate feelings, so that the latter, despite all one's admiration, seems unnatural!

Bibl.: Reine Dahlqvist. Bidrag till trumpeten och trumpetspelets historia (Ph.D. dissertation, University of Gothenburg, 1988); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Sahagún, Adolfo (b. Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico, Dec. 8, 1939). Mexican trumpeter. Sahagún began playing trumpet at the age of twelve under the direction of his father, Leopoldo. Adolfo displayed an unusual talent for the trumpet at an early age, and within two years was playing professionally in Tijuana. For the next fifty years, he played with more than one hundred different jazz groups, touring the world many times, and appearing on over a thousand recordings. The most notable groups he played with were the Manuel Gil Big Band and the Pérez Prado Orchestra (1979-85). He also toured with well-known Mexican artists such as Lupita Dalessio, Marco Antonio Muñiz, José José, Juan Gabriel, Armando Miguel, and Diego Berdaguer.

Sahagún retired completely in 2005, but played a fine performance during the Third Annual Rafael Méndez Trumpet Festival in Mexico City (November 2010). His love of music, the trumpet, and life are clearly evident in his playing and personality.

Sahagún and wife Celia were married in 1970, and have three daughters. His hobbies include jogging, karate, and sports.

Bibl.: "Adolfo Sahagún" (program booklet for the Third Annual International Trumpet Festival "Rafael Méndez," 2010); personal interview, Nov. 19, 2010.

Saint-Jacome, Louis-Antoine (b. Paris, France, May 13, 1830; d. London, England, July 15, 1898). French cornetist. Saint-Jacome's father died when he was five years old. His mother remarried a bandmaster, who gave Louis his first musical instruction on the violin and piano. By age seven, he showed a remarkable talent for music, and began playing the cornet. He attended the Paris Conservatory as a trumpet student under F.G.A. Dauverné, and graduated in 1858.

Saint-Jacome worked as a musician in Paris for five years before joining the Chasseurs à Cheval de la Garde Impériale (1855-58) as a cornet and keyed bugle soloist. In the late 1850s, he moved to England, and became a member of the orchestra at the Alhambra in London. He earned a reputation as a virtuoso cornet soloist and a player of the now obsolete flageolet.

In 1870, Saint-Jacome worked as an arranger for Messrs. La Fleur, a London publishing company. It was at this time that he composed and published his Grand Method for Cornet, a book still used extensively today, and widely considered to be second only to Arban's method. Herbert Clarke said, Had St. Jacome written out all the examples for each exercise...this book would be five times its size of 366 pages. Saint-Jacome also composed and published one cornet solo, Fée des Eaux ("Water Fairy").

Saint-Jacome began working as a cornet tester for the Besson Company in London, and also conducted the company band until his health prevented him from doing so. He tended to be a loner and had few friends or relatives. The well-known teacher T.C. Edwards wrote of him, His days as a soloist were passed, but although he had no set task, he could come and go when he pleased. He could and did play scales and arpeggios indefinitely from low G to high C. He had a little sanctum for himself, a small soundproof room. There he would sit, a little old man, with a rug wrapped over him, tooting away tirelessly, and he had not a tooth in his mouth and preferred to play without artificial teeth. Edwards went on to say, He was a very touchy old fellow and one had to be careful in trying to draw him out...When he shuffled off home in the evening, a foreman would send a man to shadow him until he was on the [trolley] car for home. But he resented the imputation that he was old and infirm, and woe betide anyone whom he caught watching over him...He was a little old man, tortured by rheumatism. His pet aversion was for anyone to take notice of his infirmities or to sympathize with him. He would at once break out furiously in French, a language I am told placed a wealth of abuse at his command.

Saint-Jacome died a lonely death at the age of sixty-eight.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium Supplement (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Salentin, Hans-Peter (b. Mechernich, Germany, June 16, 1961). German trumpeter, flugelhornist, and composer. After studying at the Cologne Musikhochschule, Salentin became one of Europe's finest jazz trumpeters. He has performed with James Carter, Chick Corea, Billy Elgart, Branford Marsalis, Bob Mintzer, John Scofield, and many others, and has recorded with the Cologne Big Band, Harry Beckett, John Riley, and Purple Schulz, among others. His solo albums include Rockin' Cats (TTM), Wake Up (TTM), Voces Caribes (Tropical Music), Rituales (Tropical Music), It's Up To You (Mons), Recall, All John, and My Funky Salentin(e). He is a professor of jazz at the Würzburg Musikhochschule, and has presented workshops in Holland and Poland under the auspices of the Goethe Institute.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Hans-Peter Salentin" (www.jazzrecords.com/musicians/hp-salentin.htm).

Samonikov, Jovan ("Vanca") (b. Stip, Republic of Macedonia [Yugoslavia], Dec. 10, 1939). Macedonian trumpeter. Samonikov began to play the trumpet at age thirteen, and later studied in Zagreb at age thirteen with Jaroslav Kubiček, and in Skopje with Metodi Dokuzov. He started his career as a member of the Zagreb Philharmonic Orchestra, but in 1967 went to Paris to study with Maurice André at the Paris Conservatory. In 1970, he became principal of the Belgrade Radio and Television Orchestra, and in 1973 became assistant principal of the Berne Symphony Orchestra in Switzerland, also teaching at the Lausanne Conservatory. In 1994, he took on Swiss nationality. In 2004, after attaining compulsory retirement age, he was retired from his two Swiss positions.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sanborn, Chase (b. Summit, New Jersey, Sept. 3, 1956). American trumpeter. Sanborn grew up in New Jersey. He began playing trumpet at the age of nine under the tutelage of José Loreti and Nelson Keller. While in high school, at the urging of his band director Angelo Merola, he traveled to Philadelphia to take lessons from Dr. Donald Reinhardt. Sanborn then attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston.

Sanborn began his professional career in San Francisco where he performed and recorded with the Full, Faith and Credit Big Band, and toured with Ray Charles. He eventually relocated to Toronto, Canada, where he became a top studio and freelance player, recording hundreds of sessions for radio, television, and film, and performing with Gil Evans, Aretha Franklin, Natalie Cole, and Diana Krall. He leads his own jazz quartet and has been a guest soloist with the Dave McMurdo Jazz Orchestra, Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Boss Brass, and the Brass Connection.

A prolific author, Sanborn has published (through his own publishing company) several books including Brass Tactics, Jazz Tactics, The Brass Tactics Companion, Tuning Tactics, and Music Business Tactics. On his own label (Brass Tactics), he has released five solo albums, Good to the Last Bop, Sweet and Low, Perking Up, Double Double, and Cut to the Chase. He has designed a signature trumpet mouthpiece for GR Mouthpieces, and writes a brass column for Canadian Musician magazine. A dedicated educator, Sanborn is on the faculty at the University of Toronto and the National Music Camp of Canada. He has presented hundreds of clinics throughout Canada and the United States.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Chase Sanborn" (www.trumpetguild.org/2003conference/bios.htm); Chase Sanborn's official website: www.chasesanborn.com; personal interview, June 17, 2011.

Sanchez, Adel M. (b. c1941). American trumpeter. Sanchez began playing the trumpet at age nine. While Adel's father, Alfredo (a cigar roller in their hometown of Tampa, Florida), encouraged his musical studies, his mother did not. When Adel turned eleven, his father died, and his mother did not want to keep paying for trumpet lessons. Fortunately, Adel's trumpet teacher convinced her that he should continue taking lessons. Adel eventually earned a full scholarship to The Juilliard School where he studied with William Vacchiano. Additionally, he studied with James Chambers, Madam Réne Longée, Adolph Herseth, and Arnold Jacobs.

Sanchez became principal trumpet of the Kansas City Philharmonic in 1966. In 1969, he became assistant principal of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., and principal from 1973 to 1983, and back to assistant principal in the fall of 1983. He also played as a member of the NSO Principals Brass Quintet. He has performed and recorded on occasion with the American Symphony Orchestra (under Leopold Stokowski), New York Philharmonic, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In addition, he performed and recorded with the Empire Brass when the quintet needed to be augmented, such as in the recording American Brass Band Journal (New World).

As a soloist, Sanchez has appeared many times with the National Symphony Orchestra. He has also been a guest soloist with other orchestras under the batons of Antal Doráti, Rafaél Druian, Christopher Hogwood, Sir Neville Marriner, Howard Mitchell, Michael Tilson Thomas, Mstislav Rostropovich, Norman Schneider, Gerard Schwarz, and Vittorio Negri. He toured the Far East as a member of the Philharmonia Virtuosi of New York.

Sanchez served as assistant to the director of the American Youth Philharmonic from 1990 to 2006. He taught at Catholic University of America during those same years. Two of his best-known students are Chris Gekker and George Recker.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Dempsey, Patricia E. "The Trumpeter" (The Washington Post Magazine, May 17, 2006); "Adel Sanchez" (www.kennedy-center.org).

Sandau, Kurt (b. Klein Engersen, Altmark, Germany, Jan. 8, 1939). German trumpeter. Sandau studied with Oskar Kollarzcik at the Halle Conservatory. From 1960 to 1970, he played in theater orchestras in Rudolstadt, Gera, and the National Theater Orchestra in Weimar, and from 1970 to 2003 was principal trumpet of the Sächsische Staatskapelle Dresden. His name has been closely associated with that of trumpeter Ludwig Güttler, appearing on many of the latter's Baroque recordings. Sandau has performed and recorded with the Ludwig Güttler Brass Ensemble, and has also been a guest with Semper Brass. He is a founding member of both the Semper House Band, a Dixieland band composed of members of the Staatskapelle, and the chamber orchestra Camerata Musica Dresden, composed of members of both the Staatskapelle and the Dresden Opera Orchestra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Sandke, Jay Randall ("Randy") (b. Chicago, Illinois, May 23, 1949). American trumpeter and composer. Jay is the younger brother of trumpeter Jordan Sandke (b. 1946). Jay began playing the trumpet around the age of eleven or twelve, and later attended Indiana University from 1966 to 1969. In 1968, he formed a rock band, including sax player Michael Brecker, which performed several concerts in the Midwest. During one summer, the band gathered to party at Sandke's apartment in Chicago, but tragedy struck when an intoxicated guest committed suicide. The police questioned Sandke and each of his friends, one of whom was abused by the police, and who later killed himself. The effect on Sandke and the others was devastating and Sandke soon dropped out of school. Around the same time, he developed a large cyst on his larynx that had to be surgically removed. The operation was a success, but Sandke lost his confidence and quit playing trumpet for nearly a decade.

After 1969, Sandke moved to Bennington, Vermont, where he made his living by accompanying dance classes on piano at Bennington College (1970-73). He moved to New York City in 1973 and eventually began playing the trumpet again in 1979. He became a skilled traditional jazz player, working with Vince Giordano's Nighthawks (five years), Bob Wilbur (1983-85), the Benny Goodman Orchestra (1985-86), the Newport All-Stars, Buck Clayton's big band (1986-91), Dizzy Gillespie's band, Jon Hendricks, and the New York All-Stars.

Sandke has toured the world and has been to Europe over forty times. He played the parts of Louis Armstrong and Bix Beiderbecke on an album titled Re-Discovered Louis and Bix (Nagel-Heyer). He also recorded an album with his brother titled The Sandke Brothers (Stash). Altogether, Sandke has played on hundreds of recordings, including his own solo albums such as Stampede (Jazzology), I Hear Music (Concord Jazz), Get Happy (Concord Jazz), The Chase (Concord Jazz), Calling All Cats (Concord Jazz), Awakening (Concord Jazz), New York All-Stars Plays More Music of Louis Armstrong (Nagel-Heyer), Inside Out (Nagel-Heyer), and Remembered (Arbors). He also appears in the video, Flip Phillips' 80th Birthday Party (Arbors). Sandke has recorded with Michael Brecker, Mel Lewis, Benny Goodman, Dick Hyman, Cab Calloway, Art Garfield, Rosemary Clooney, Frank Wess, Wycliffe Gordon, Warren Vache, Gregory Hines, and many others. He has also backed numerous celebrity performers such as Bette Midler, Sting, Billy Joel, Elton John, James Taylor, Chaka Khan, Ruth Brown, Joe Williams, and Billy Eckstine.

As a studio player, Sandke has recorded dozens of movie soundtracks, including The Cotton Club, Black Bottom, Brighton Beach Memories, American Splendor, The Curse of the Jade Scorpion, and five Woody Allen films. He has appeared on television in Japan, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, and the United States in shows such as The Late Show with David Letterman, and a PBS special on the life of Benny Goodman.

Sandke is a noted composer and arranger who has written for many name bands and solo performers. He has published many scholarly articles plus the text, Harmony for a New Millennium (Hal Leonard), which has become a bestseller in the theory world. He has presented numerous workshops on this method.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Randy Sandke" (http://jazz.about.com).

Sandke, Jordan Lewis (b. Chicago, Illinois, Feb. 20, 1946). American trumpeter. Sandke started playing the drums at age eleven, but switched to trumpet at thirteen. His early influences were Louis Armstrong and Bix Beiderbecke, but he later enjoyed hearing Charlie Parker, Clifford Brown, Roy Eldridge, and Coleman Hawkins. Sandke earned degrees in ancient history and classical languages at the University of Chicago (1962-68), and studied trumpet privately with Renold Schilke. After graduating, he decided to pursue a career in music. He played in the Chicago area with various blues bands, including Johnny Ross & The Soul Connection (1968), Mighty Joe Young (1969-70), Junior Parker (1970-71), and Howlin' Wolf.

Sandke attended the New England Conservatory of Music from 1974 to 1977 where he studied with Charles Lewis. He worked in the Boston area from 1977 to 1978, but moved to New York City in 1978 where he worked with the Widespread Depression Orchestra (1980s), Vince Giordano's Nighthawks, Jaki Byard's Apollo Stompers (1985-87), Buck Clayton's big band (1988-91), Panama Francis, and Walt Levinsky's Great American Swing Band (1987-89). He led his own band at Roseland from 1991 to 1992, and appeared with his own quintet in Saratoga, Ottawa, and New York from 1991 to 1994.

Sandke recorded an album with his trumpet-playing brother, Randy (b. 1949), titled The Sandke Brothers (Stash). Both are active New York jazz musicians.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sandor, Edward P[aul] (b. 1948). American trumpeter. Sandor earned a bachelor of music degree at The Ohio State University, a master of music degree at the University of Illinois, studying with Haskell O. Sexton (1974), and a PhD from The Ohio State University. He was also a Fulbright Fellow in 1985 and 1990.

Sandor has played with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, Columbia (Ohio) Symphony, Georgia Brass Quintet, and taught at the New England Music Camp during the summers of 1977, 1988, and 2009. He began teaching at the University of Georgia in 1979, but has recently retired after serving as a trumpet professor and assistant administrator. He also taught in Taiwan (1985) and Beijing (2000). He has recorded five solo CDs: American Influences (Summit), Trumpet in the Winds (Musical Showcase), Trumpet & Stops (MSR Classics), *The Art of Trumpet and Percussion (*Aca Digital), and Sonatas Suites and Meditations (with Ashley Sandor Sidon, cello).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Edward Sandor" (http://nemc.bluekeyinc.com/v.php?pg=11).

Sandoval, Arturo (b. Artemisa, Cuba, Nov. 6, 1949). Cuban trumpeter, pianist, and composer now living in the United States as an American citizen. Sandoval grew up in the small town of Artemisa near Havana. His father, Arturo Sr., was an automobile mechanic. As a child, Sandoval joined his school's band and experimented with several instruments including flute, clarinet, percussion, and others before discovering an instant love for the trumpet. He dropped out of school at the age of twelve and soon began playing in the village band. He also joined an orchestra that played Cuban music. His progress on the trumpet was extraordinary and he won a scholarship to attend the Cuban National School of the Arts in Havana where he studied classical music for three years. His early influences were Rafael Méndez, Clifford Brown, Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and later Maurice André.

Sandoval's early career was spent playing in various circus bands, Latin bands, and concert orchestras in Havana. In 1971, he was drafted into the military, spending the next three years playing in the Qrquesta Cubana de Musica Moderna. After his service duties in 1974, he formed a band with saxophone player Paquito D'Rivera and pianist Chucho Valdes called Irakere that became very popular and made several hit recordings in Cuba. The group was allowed to tour internationally, and performed in New York's Carnegie Hall during the late 1970s. Sandoval and the members of the group became upset when the Cuban government took nearly all of the concert profits. Sandoval also felt limited by the music that the Cuban government required the group to perform.

In 1980, Sandoval left Irakere in order to form his own band. He debuted the group on February 14, 1981. His high-powered solos in the style of Maynard Ferguson, bebop improvisations in the style of Dizzy Gillespie, and his ability to perform on percussion and piano earned him the title of Cuba's Best Instrumentalist by the national hit parade from 1982 through 1990. The Cuban Ministry of Culture also named him to the highest Professional School. Despite these honors, he still felt that his music was restricted and he began to dream about leaving Cuban rule.

Sandoval met the love of his life, a woman by the name of Marianela (nickname Carmen). They were married in 1975. They produced a son who they named Arturo Junior. Although Sandoval had opportunities to defect from Cuba when he toured Europe, he knew that his family would not be permitted to travel with him. However, the close personal friendship he developed with Dizzy Gillespie when the jazz legend performed in Cuba and studied Afro-Cuban music led to an invitation for Sandoval to tour with Gillespie's United Nations Orchestra in 1990. In order to persuade the Cuban government to allow his wife and son to tour with him, Sandoval became a member of the Communist Party. The ploy worked, and they were allowed to travel with Gillespie. When the band performed in Rome, Sandoval (accompanied by Gillespie) went to the US Embassy and requested political asylum in the United States. The Consulate was quite skeptical at first, especially in light of Sandoval's recent affiliation with the Communist government in Cuba, but a telephone call to Vice President Dan Quayle granted Sandoval's request. He was immediately flown to America, and his family was permitted to join him after an intense delay. They settled in Miami and started a new life. After several applications and years of struggle, Arturo was granted permanent citizenship in 1998 by President Clinton.

Sandoval began work in the U.S. as a professor at Florida International University. He also started to record for GRP and released a string of best-selling recordings including Flight to Freedom, Dreams Come True, Arturo Sandoval Plays Trumpet Concertos (which includes a Grammy Award-nominated concerto of his own composition), Danzón, Tren Latino, and Swingin'. He won Grammy Awards in 1995 and 1998 for "Best Latin Jazz Performance" and in 2000 was the subject of an HBO Television movie titled For Love or Country—The Arturo Sandoval Story. The film starred Andy Garcia (who also produced the film) whose own family fled Cuba during the 1960s. Sandoval served as the film's consultant and also composed or arranged music for the entire soundtrack. Sandoval received an Emmy Award for "Best Soundtrack" in 2001. The film brought him to international fame.

Many world tours followed, and Sandoval's powerful playing was heard during the halftime ceremonies of Super Bowl XXIX. More recordings were produced, including Hot House (N-Coded Music), Americana (N-Coded Music), L.A. Meetings (Cubop), Arturo Sandoval—The Classical Album (BMG/RCA), My Passion for the Piano (Columbia), The Best of Arturo Sandoval (Milan/Latino), and many others. To date, Sandoval has released over forty-seven CDs, including the 2003 album Trumpet Evolution that demonstrates his incredible versatility to play jazz, scream trumpet, and classical music, and pays tribute to many of the world's greatest trumpeters through renditions of their most famous solos. His most recent albums include A Time for Love and Dear Diz: Every Day I Think of You. Altogether, Sandoval has received six Grammy Awards and ten nominations, six Billboard Awards, and one Emmy Award. Composer John Williams selected him to record his Trumpet Concerto with the London Symphony Orchestra.

Sandoval has performed with hundreds of the world's leading musicians. Among them are Dizzy Gillespie, Woody Herman, Michel Legrand, Bill Conti, Stan Getz, Johnny Mathis, Frank Sinatra, Paul Anka, Rod Stewart, Alicia Keys (during the televised Latin Billboard Awards Show), Bill Cobham, Herbie Hancock, Allen Vizzutti, Maynard Ferguson, John Williams (with the Boston Pops), Justin Timberlake (during the televised Grammy Awards Show), Tony Bennett, Patti LaBelle, and Céline Dion (during the televised Oscar Awards Show).

As a composer, Arturo Sandoval was commissioned by the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. to write Pepito's Story, a ballet for children, as well as the ballets Soul Possessed and Oman O Men. His song*, Mambo Caliente* (for the film Mambo Kings) was nominated for a Grammy Award. He has composed numerous works featured on his plentiful albums. As a trumpeter, his playing is also featured in many film soundtracks including The Perez Family, Havana, Random Heart, 61, Mr. Wrong, Knockout, and Rango.

Sandoval has presented hundreds of clinics, workshops, and teaching residencies at leading colleges and universities throughout the world. He has published three volumes of Playing Technique and Performance Studies with Hal Leonard, as well as Brass Concepts (for all brass instruments) by Editions BIM. He has taught at the Bremen Trumpet Days in Germany, given lectures at the Paris Conservatory, and presented concerts and lectures for the International Trumpet Guild and the Rafael Méndez Trumpet Festival in Mexico City.

Recently, Arturo Sandoval was the featured soloist on the National Anthem during the nationally televised 2009 Orange Bowl football game in Miami. From April of 2006 until 2009, he owned The Arturo Sandoval Jazz Club in Miami, a nightclub and restaurant that was a popular place for jazz aficionados. In January of 2010, the Sandoval family moved to Los Angeles where Arturo is becoming a leading studio performer and private teacher. He continues to tour with his jazz group and is a popular guest soloist with bands and orchestras worldwide. Sandoval is an affable and generous man who has a deep respect for famous pioneering trumpeters such as Louis Armstrong, Maynard Ferguson, Dizzy Gillespie, Adolph Herseth, Maurice André, Timofei Dokshitser, Rafael Méndez, Clifford Brown, Harry James, and others.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Arturo Sandoval or the Magic Trumpet" (Brass Bulletin, No. 65, 1989); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Biography of Arturo Sandoval" (www.arturosandoval.com); "Arturo Sandoval" (http://en.wikipedia.org); personal interview, Sept. 29, 2010.

Santucci, Francesco ("Cicci") (b. Rome, Italy, Apr. 21, 1939). Italian trumpeter. Santucci began playing trumpet at age thirteen. During the 1950s, he was a member of the Modern Jazz Gang, which often performed at local and national jazz festivals. He also played with the Enzo Scoppa Quintet and with Romano Mussolini. In 1967, he joined the swing and dance band of Marcello Rosa, and from 1970 to 1990 played with the RAI Big Band in Rome. During his career, he has also performed with Lionel Hampton, Kenny Clarke, Brass Samba (concerts in France in 1979), Archie Shepp, and Irio De Paula, and is currently with the Roman Dixieland All Stars.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sarin, Irving Morton (b. September 23, 1921; d. Lake Ann, Michigan, Oct. 10, 2010). American trumpeter. Sarin began playing the trumpet at age nine, taking lessons from Robert Yagel, a vaudeville musician. He later attended the New England Conservatory in Boston where he studied with Georges Mager, principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He played with the Boston Pops orchestra and attended the Tanglewood Music Festival. He was offered a full scholarship to The Juilliard School in New York City from which he received his degree. While in New York, he played at Radio City Music Hall.

After graduating, Sarin auditioned for Maestro Fritz Reiner to become principal of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. He described the audition by stating, The trumpet felt like it was made of lead, and my lips felt like frozen shoe leather. Nonetheless, he won the position, and played first chair in Pittsburgh from 1943 to 1960. From 1964 to 1965, he was principal of the Israel Philharmonic. During Sarin's career as an orchestral musician, he also performed with the MGM Concert Orchestra, Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, National Symphony, and Wichita Symphony. He performed under many conductors, including Leopold Stokowski, Erich Leinsdorf, Eugene Ormandy, Howard Hanson, Leonard Bernstein, Arthur Fiedler, William Steinberg, and Sergey Koussevitzky.

Sarin taught at various high schools, as well as at the University of Wichita (now Wichita State University), Michigan State University, Wayne State University, the Chautauqua Institute, American Symphony Orchestra League Festival, and Berkshire Music Center. He died at the age of eighty-nine, and was survived by his wife of fifty-two years, Anne E. Sarin, daughters Elizabeth A. Sarin, Jennifer G. Loewenstein, and sons Charles H. Sarin and Edward P. Sarin.

Bibl.: Piskor, Laura. "Living Music Interview" (www.sitemaker.umich.edu); "Irving Sarin Dies" (www.trumpetherald.com); "Irving M. Sarin" (http://record-eagle.com/obituaries/x1099037962/Irving-M-Sarin).

Sasaki, Ray (b. Fresno, California, Oct. 22, 1948). American trumpeter. Sasaki grew up on a family raisin farm near Fresno. He began playing the trumpet at age eleven, taking lessons from James Winter (horn professor at Fresno State University). Subsequent teachers were Robert Nielsen (principal trumpet of the Fresno Philharmonic Orchestra) and Charles Brady in Bakersfield. He attended Fresno State University from 1966 to 1972, earning a bachelor of music degree, before beginning graduate work at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), where he studied with John J. Haynie. While working on his master's degree (1972-75), Sasaki served as a graduate trumpet teaching assistant.

Sasaki began teaching at the University of Illinois in the fall of 1975. He played with the Illinois Brass Quintet, Illinois Jazz Quintet, Champaign-Urbana Symphony, and various jazz groups. In 1981, he was a founding member of the Tone Road Ramblers, a contemporary music ensemble comprising several UI faculty members. He also played with the Condition Blue Jazz Quintet (Chicago), Chicago Jazz Members Orchestra, Illinois Contemporary Chamber Players, Sinfonia da Camara, and One Plus One. He replaced Anthony Plog in the Saint Louis Brass Quintet in about 2001. He has recorded for labels such as Arabesque, Crystal, DRI, Deutsche Gramophon Gesellschaft, TR001, UBRES, Einstein, New World, CRI, and Summit. He received the University of Illinois's "Outstanding Faculty Award" in 1996.

Sasaki accepted a position as professor of trumpet at the University of Texas in Austin in 2001. He was inducted into the University of Texas Academy of Distinguished Teachers in 2007, and has served two terms as a board member of the International Trumpet Guild. Among his many former students are Paul Merkelo, Joan Retzke, Thomas Siders, Amanda Pepping, P. Bradley Ulrich, John Carroll, Daniel Gosling, and Amy Gilreath.

Sasaki and his wife Jeanne, a staff accompanist for the UT Butler School of Music, have been married since 1986, and have two children, Sara (b. 1988) and Mikio (b. 1990). Ray's hobby is cooking.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ray Sasaki" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Ray Sasaki" (www.music.utexas.edu/directory/details.aspx?id=96); personal interview, Mar. 28, 2011.

Sattler, Christian Friedrich (b. Jan. 20, 1778; d. 1842). German manufacturer. Sattler apprenticed under Johann Gottfried Moritz from 1799 to 1805, and became an important brass instrument designer and manufacturer. He established his workshop in 1809, and is mainly known for inventing the "Vienna valve," as well as a trigger mechanism for the trombone (1839). (See accompanying sketch of a trumpet made by Sattler, published in the AMZ in June of 1821.) Although Sattler's trumpets with this particular shape of rounded valve slides were not particularly successful, they were built in this way until mid century. The transition from Sattler's form to the standard form of Vienna valve was made by Josef Kail and Joseph Riedl in Vienna in 1823; a further improvement was made by Leopold Uhlmann in 1830.

After Sattler's death in 1842, the shop was taken over by Johann Christoph Penzel who had married Sattler's daughter in 1845. The workshop closed in 1880.

Bibl.: Heyde, Herbert. Das Ventilblasinstrument (VEB Deutscher Verlag für Musik); "Types of Trombones" (http://wapedia mobi/en/Types_of_Trombone); "Christian Friedrich Sattler" (www. viennahornsofScotland.com/history.

Saul, Oscar (b. Boston, Massachusetts, 1868; d. [date unknown]). Saul's father William and older brother Theodore were musicians. Oscar Saul was coprincipal trumpet of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in New York City (alternating with colleague Herman Basse) from 1899 to 1905. He was a private musician during the 1920s and '30s.

Bibl.: "Principal Musicians of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra (www.stokowski.org).

Saunders, Carl. English cornetist and conductor. Saunders began playing the trumpet in his native city of Cardiff in South Wales at a very early age. His first solo appearance was at age five with the Cardiff Canton Brass Band. He eventually joined the band and worked his way up to the position of cornet soloist. Carl was the principal cornet player and soloist in the Canton band from 1988 until his appointment as Bandmaster in 2007. He has performed in numerous countries, and appeared as a featured artist during the 2002 International Trumpet Guild Conference in Manchester, England. Saunders stepped down from his position as principal cornet of the Tongwynlais Temperance Band (Wales) in November of 2010 due to his appointment as bandmaster of the Household Troops Band of the Salvation Army.

Saunders is conductor of the Young People's Band of Cardiff Canton. His wife Christine is the youth group leader and pianist with the band. Carl and Christine have a daughter, Abbie. Saunders is featured on numerous recordings as a featured cornet soloist.

Bibl.: https://www.facebook.com/pages/The-Household-Troops-of-the-Salvation-Army/11557222230, "2002 ITG Conference Biographies" (www.trumpetguild.org/2002conference), https://www.facebook.com/pages/Tongwynlais-Temperance-Band/196258630759.

Saunders, Carl (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, Aug. 2, 1942). American trumpeter. Saunders comes from a family of jazz musicians. His mother sang with the big bands of Stan Kenton, Bobby Sherwood (Carl's uncle), and others. When Carl was five, he and his mother moved to Los Angeles. He was strongly influenced by the recordings of trumpeters Don Fagerquist, Kenny Dorham, and Bobby Sherwood, and began playing the trumpet at age eleven. He learned to play by ear, and had no formal lessons. After graduating from high school, he joined Stan Kenton's band as a mellophonium player (1961-63). He later played drums (!) with Bobby Sherwood's band (1962-63), and, after moving to Las Vegas in 1963, played trumpet with Si Zentner, Perez Prado, Harry James (1966), Maynard Ferguson, Charlie Barnet, Buddy Rich, and Benny Goodman (1967). Buddy Rich fired him three times because of his stand against the leader's abuse of musicians.

Saunders toured with singer Paul Anka for almost two years (1970-71). He performed with numerous show bands for over twenty years, including those of Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, and Robert Goulet, but moved to Los Angeles in 1984 to become a key player in Bill Holman's orchestra as lead trumpet. He also worked with Supersax, Dave Pell's octet, Bob Florence's Limited Edition, Gerald Wilson's big band, the Phil Norman Tentet, John Williams, Johnny Mandel, and many small groups.

Carl Saunders is currently lead trumpet with the Bill Holman Orchestra. He also leads his own Carl Saunders Be Bop Big Band, sextet, and quartet. He began recording as leader in 1995, releasing albums such as Out of the Blue (SNL), Eclecticism (SNL), Earth (MAMA, with Bob Florence), Yesterday's Gardenias (Sea Breeze, with the Phil Norman Tentet), Live at the Lighthouse (Sea Breeze, with the Phil Norman Tentet), Be Bop Big Band (Sea Breeze), Can You Dig Being Dug? (ItsusJazz), and The Lost Bill Holman Charts (MAMA). Saunders is also a fine arranger who has written charts for numerous big bands and jazz soloists.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Carl Saunders's official website: www.carlsaunders.com.

Saunders, Thomas ("Tom" "Tommy") William (b. Detroit, Michigan, Apr. 21, 1938; d. Grosse Pointe, Michigan, Feb. 13, 2010). American cornetist and bandleader. Saunders began playing the cornet at age seven, and by nine was a member of his older brother's band that appeared on the radio program, Ted Mack's Original Amateur Hour. At age thirteen, Saunders led his own group called The Six Saints of Dixieland.

Saunders served in the navy from 1956-57, attending the Navy School of Music. After his service years, he held various jobs but became a fulltime musician during the early 1960s when he joined Pee Wee Hunt's band that toured the Midwest (1959-62). He settled in the Detroit area and formed the band Surf Side Six that performed regularly for twenty-two years. The band derived its name from the Surfside Lounge in Detroit, where it performed for the first three of those years.

Saunders's biggest music hero was cornetist Wild Bill Davison. He met Davison in Detroit around 1965, and the two become close friends for life. When Davison was dying in a California hospital, Saunders flew there to see him. During the last moments of Davison's life, Saunders played his muted cornet at his bedside. After that, Saunders put together the Wild Bill Davison Legacy All Stars, a group of the finest traditional jazz performers in America. Their most popular album is Call of the Wild (Arbors).

A prolific performer and recording artist, Tom Saunders worked with such artists as Peanuts Hucko, Bobby Hackett, Eddie Condon, Ralph Sutton, Arvell Shaw, and Herb Hall. His albums as leader include Live at the Firefly, vols. 1-2 (PKO), Detroit Jazz All Stars (Parkwood), Exactly Like You (Nagel-Heyer), and Surfside Jazz (with guest Wild Bill Davison, on Jazzology). He also recorded for labels including Fat Cat Jazz, Arbors, Timeless, and Bountiful.

Tom Saunders was known for his great sense of humor, and often joked with his audiences. "Are you there, John?" he would ask a band member. "I know how old you are! Your Social Security number is 3!" Saunders was predeceased by his wife Mathilde ("Tillie") and son Matthew. His other children include Deborah Burton, Tim Saunders, Jeanne Weaver, and stepdaughter Ann Elisa Strong.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Thomas Sanders" (obituary, The News-Herald, Feb. 24, 2010).

Saunier, Clément (b. Surgères [near LaRochelle], France, Jan. 2, 1979). French trumpeter. Saunier began his musical studies at the Ecole de Musique Municipale de Surgères, then attended the École National de Musique de La Rochelle. He also attended the Georges Bizet Conservatory where he studied with Pierre Gillet (and had occasional lessons with Gérard Boulanger). At age seventeen, he entered the Paris Conservatory where he studied with Clément Garrec and Jens Mac Manama. He received his diploma in 2000 (First Prize for both chamber music and trumpet).

Saunier developed his solo career by winning prizes at a series of international trumpet competitions, including those in Porcia, Italy (2002), Prague (2003), Jeju (South Korea, 2004), Brussels (2005), Paris (Maurice André Competition, third prize in 2006), and Moscow (third prize in 2011). He formed the well-known trumpet ensemble, Trombamania, which has won prizes at international competitions (2003, 2004, and 2005) and appeared at various festivals worldwide. Saunier has toured the world and performed for French radio and television.

As an ensemble player, Saunier joined the Pasdeloup Orchestra (Paris, 2001), Orchestre de Gardiens de la Paix de Paris (2003), became principal trumpet of the Police Orchestra of Paris (2002), and was appointed principal cornet of the Æolus Brass Band (2003). He teaches at a conservatory in the 13th district of Paris, and coformed the Académies de Cuivres de Percussions de Surgères (1998), a summer workshop for aspiring brass players. His CDs include André Jolivet (Maguelone), Clément Saunier (Crystal), Trombamania (self-released) and Trombamania Solea (Crystal).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Clément Saunier's official website: www.clementsaunier.fr/Biography.

Saurer, Heinz (b. Zurich, Switzerland, Feb. 15, 1972). Saurer studied with Claude Rippas at the conservatory of his hometown, and with Anthony Plog at the Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg, Germany. He has been principal trumpet of the Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra since 2000, and is a member of the Sirius Brass Ensemble, Swiss Brass Consort, and eifachs.ch (a nineteenth century peasant band). Since 2003, he has been a guest lecturer for orchestral studies and audition training at the Music Academy of Basel, and since 2011, a lecturer at the ZHdK Estate, specializing in piccolo trumpet and Baroque music.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Heinz Saurer" (www.eifachs.ch/de/eifachsch/musiker.html).

Sauter, Otto (b. Tengen, Germany, June 23, 1961). German trumpeter. Guided by his father, Sauter began playing the trumpet at the age of four. He later studied with Heinrich Wilkins, and at age sixteen attended the Winterther Conservatory in Switzerland where he studied with Claude Rippas, graduating with a diploma in 1984 and a solo performer's certificate in 1985. He also studied with Bo Nilsson in Sweden and Pierre Thibaud in France (1985-87).

From 1988 to 1998, Sauter was principal trumpet of the Bremen Philharmonic, and beginning in 1991 taught at the Hochschule für Künste in Bremen. In 1994, he established the Bremen Trumpet Academy and hosted several annual Bremen Trumpet Days festivals that engaged many of the world's leading trumpet virtuosos as faculty. In 1995, he was a guest teacher at the Toho Gakuen School of Music in Tokyo.

Having abandoned the regular B-flat and C trumpets, Sauter is now a leading piccolo trumpet soloist, and has performed for royalty in several countries. He has recorded dozens of CDs for the EMI label since 1995, and has performed Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 over one thousand times! He is considered to be one of the world's finest performers on the piccolo trumpet, specializing in music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. He is also dedicated to modern music for the trumpet, and has commissioned and premiered several new compositions.

Always an entrepreneur, Sauter is the founder of the international trumpet ensemble, Ten of the Best, which has performed at several huge sporting events and concerts around the world. He is also founder of Musica Sacra a Roma, a choir and music festival that takes place in Rome and in Vatican City. In 2006, he initiated Little Amadeus & Friends Aktionstag that won an award for best children's television programming. It is a popular cartoon.

Sauter has been married to concert manager and promoter Sabine Kierdorf since 2007. He has two children from a previous marriage: daughter Ariane (b. 1993) and son Benedict (b. 1997). His hobby is raising and breeding horses.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Otto Sauter" (http://kammerorchester.com/en/artists/view?id=4158); personal interview, Nov. 14, 2011.

Sautter, Fred (b. Montclair, New Jersey, Nov. 28, 1940). American trumpeter. Sautter took up the trumpet at age fourteen and studied under John Haynie at North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas) from 1958 to 1963. He received his master of music degree at the University of Washington under Ward Cole in 1967-67. Other studies were with Ronald Modell, Claude Gordon, and Christopher Leuba in the U.S., and with Erwin Wolf in Hanover, Germany. For a while in 1963, he was lead trumpeter in the Paul Guenther Big Band. He then switched to classical music.

Sautter performed as principal of the Philharmonia Hungarica (1964-66), and in Northern Germany with the Philharmonisches Staatsorchester Hamburg (1966-67). He was later named principal of the Portland Opera Orchestra (1968-84) and Oregon Symphony Orchestra (1968-2006).

Fred Sautter taught as an adjunct professor at Portland State University from 1980 to 1994. He also taught numerous high school students who went on to important careers as trumpeters, including Chris Botti and Timothy Morrison. He authored the book, Sound the Trumpet, and produced the video, How To Play The Trumpet. His record albums include A Frescobaldi-Fantini Concert in Rome and The Baroque Trumpet and Organ. Now retired from symphony work, Sautter is an adjunct faculty member at Marylhurst University in Oregon.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Fred Sautter" (www.marylhurst.edu/music/bio-fsautter.php).

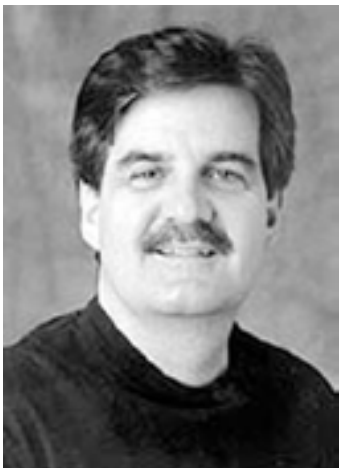
Savard, Philip R. (b. Cheverly, Maryland, May 8, 1972). American trumpeter. Savard grew up in College Park, Maryland. He began playing the trumpet in fifth grade; his early teachers were Terry Alvey, Steven Hendrickson, and David Fedderly. In seventh grade, he was selected for the DC Youth Orchestra and won a scholarship to DeMatha High School, graduating in 1990. He also participated in the National Symphony Orchestra's Young Apprentice Program and Summer Youth Ensemble Orchestra. Savard attended Northwestern University where he studied with Vincent Cichowicz and Luther Didrickson from 1990 to 1994, earning a bachelor of music degree. He then studied with William Fielder at the Peabody Conservatory, earning a master of music degree in 1996. Additionally, he studied with Armando Ghitalla.

During his early professional career, Savard performed with the Monumental Brass Quintet and freelanced in the Washington-Baltimore area. He has played with the National Symphony Orchestra and the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, and is an active private teacher. He has authored a book titled Some Really Cool Bach Transcriptions and Other Stuff for Trumpet, and joined the US Army's Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps in 2002.

Savard and Diane Savard have been married since 1994, and have a daughter named Alyssa (b. 2001). His hobbies include wine tasting, cooking, and watching movies.

Bibl.: Philip Savard's official website: www.philipsavard.com; personal interview, July 6, 2011.

Sawchuk, Terry M. (b. Detroit, Michigan, July 18, 1954). American trumpeter. Sawchuk began playing the trumpet at age eleven. His first teachers were Neil Nidack and James Tamburini. He attended the University of Michigan, studying with Clifford Lillya, earning a bachelor of music degree in 1977, and a master of music degree in 1978. During that time, Sawchuk also studied trumpet with Donald Green (principal trumpet of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra), and then with Charles Schlueter (principal trumpet of the Minnesota Orchestra). He began his career immediately after graduating, teaching at the University of Wisconsin-River Falls (1978-79), University of Northern Illinois (1979-82), University of Missouri-Kansas City (1982-83), and the University of Kansas (spring 1983) before accepting his current position at the University of Colorado at Boulder in the fall of 1983.



A highly versatile and active performer, Sawchuk was a member of the Dallas Brass (1989-90). He recorded with Dallas Brass II, was acting assistant principal of the Colorado Symphony Orchestra (1991-92), and has been principal of the Central City Opera Orchestra, American Chamber Ensemble, Denver Chamber Orchestra, and the Colorado Ballet Orchestra. He has performed and recorded with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Colorado Symphony Orchestra, and Summit Brass. He is currently a member of the Boulder Brass, Colorado Brass Quintet (faculty), and first trumpet for the Buell Theater in Denver. He has toured as a soloist (including performances with the Ukrainian National Orchestra in Kiev in 2000), and has performed with Broadway national touring companies for Carousel and Miss Saigon. He is also an active jazz performer. Sawchuk has taught at the Rafael Méndez Brass Institute, served on the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild (1989-93), and has been a judge for competitions held by the International Trumpet Guild and National Trumpet Competition.

Sawchuk and his wife Susanne, an oboist with the Colorado Springs Philharmonic Orchestra, have three children: Peter (b. 1989), Patrick (b. 1991), and Sarah (b. 1993). His hobbies include electronics.

Bibl.: "Terry Sawchuk" (http://music.colorado.edu/faculty/terry-sawchuk); personal interview, May 4, 2011.

Sax, Antoine-Joseph ("Adolphe") (b. Dinant, Belgium, Nov. 6, 1814; d. Paris, France, Feb. 4, 1894). Belgian manufacturer. Adolphe's father, Charles Joseph Sax (1791-1865), was a cabinetmaker who developed a small musical instrument shop. Adolphe's mother was Maria-Joseph Masson (1813-61). Adolphe was the oldest of eleven children. He began working in his father's shop, showing a genius for making and playing various musical instruments. At age sixteen, he displayed some of his flutes and clarinets at the Industrial Exhibition in Brussels.

Sax's childhood was plagued with all sorts of misfortunes; he fell three stories, and hit his head on a large stone, rendering him barely able to stand for weeks; accidently swallowed poison and a pin; was severely burned by a gunpowder explosion; fell onto a hot cast iron skillet; nearly died from asphyxiation in his bedroom while sleeping near newly varnished items that were drying; and, when hit in the head by a stone, fell into a river and nearly drowned. Later in life, from 1853 to 1858, he suffered from lip cancer but made a full recovery after being healed by a doctor who was educated in the use of certain Indian herbal remedies.

Sax opened his own shop in Belgium. He was a fine workman with an ingenious nature, but his early instruments did not sell well. He fled creditors in 1842 when he moved to Paris to open a new shop (rue Neuve Saint Georges). He improved on many common instruments, but was highly criticized by other makers when he claimed to have invented certain technologies. He was often accused of bribing judges at expositions and politicians who purchased instruments for the French military. His jealous rivals became furious when he landed a huge contract to outfit numerous army bands with new instruments. Attempts were made to nullify his patents, and several competing companies filed lawsuits against him. Nonetheless, Sax expanded his company into the largest instrument company in France, employing hundreds of workers (exactly two hundred before 1845). He developed a family of "Saxhorns" in 1843 (patented in 1845), which contained various-sized valve bugles. In 1845, he produced the "Saxotromba" family. He also designed the upright-bell tenor and bass tubas. His most important invention was the saxophone. Sax was the first saxophone teacher at the Paris Conservatoire.

Beginning in 1845, most of the French makers protested against the use of Sax's instruments in military bands—among them were Antoine Courtois, François Périnet, Halary, Raoux, G. Besson, Guichard, and Labbaye. Sax produced forty-five percent of the brass instruments in Paris. In 1849, his workshop was located at 50 Rue Saint Georges. Because of ongoing litigations against him, Sax went bankrupt three times (1856, 1873, and 1877). He was able to recover each time, however, in part because of the scoring of Hector Berlioz, who utilized many of Sax's instruments. He designed a six-valve "independent" system for brass, and was the first to build a "petit Saxhorn" (piccolo B-flat trumpet), in 1851. His regular B-flat Saxhorn was essentially the first flugelhorn. The great cornetist J.B.L. Arban collaborated with Sax, producing the Arban "compensator" cornet. [See biography on Arban for details.] Sax was also an editor (from 1846), and published several of Arban's works. From 1878 to 1885, he was located at 39 Rue de Dunkerque, and 26 Rue de Rocroy. Then, he worked at 56 Rue Laffitte, and in 1890 at 6 Rue Lallier. In 1893, his shop was located at 11 Rue Viollet-Le-Duc.

Sax never married, although he and his partner Louise-Adèle Maor (died at the age of thirty) had five children. Their oldest child, Adolphe Edouard Sax, continued the business after Adolphe's death in 1894, and the company was relocated to 51 Rue Blanche (from 1896). In 1900, he received a medal at the Universal Exhibition. In the 1920s, Adolphe Sax & Cie were at 84 rue Myrha. The company was purchased on October 20, 1928 by Selmer.

Adolphe Sax was interred in the Cimetière de Montmartre. Today, a Belgian banknote bears the image of Sax, and has been in circulation since 1996.

Bibl.: Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W. W. Norton); Baines, Anthony. Brass Instruments (Faber and Faber); M. Haine : Adolphe Sax, sa vie, son œuvre, ses instruments de musique (1980, éd. l'Université de Bruxelles); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008). Adolphe Sax" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Adolphe Sax" (www.dinant.be/index.htm?lg=3&m1=288&m3=293).

Saxton, Judith ("Judy") A[nn](b. Vestal, New York, Oct. 6, 1964). American trumpeter. Saxton grew up in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and graduated from Central Dauphin East High School in 1982. Her father Wayne was founder, President and CEO of Saxton Air Systems: design, build, and contractors for air pollution control systems, and her mother Ada Mae was a music teacher and homemaker. Her brothers are Stephen (b. 1957) and Curtis (b. 1960), and her sister is Carol (b. 1959).

Judith began playing the trumpet at age nine, and also learned to sing and play the piano and recorder. Her first trumpet teachers were Mark Enge, Rodney Miller, and Tim Erdman. She attended Mansfield University under Michael Galloway as a music education student, earning a bachelor's degree in 1986. She received her master of music degree in performance at Northwestern University (1987) where she studied with Vincent Cichowicz. She freelanced and taught privately in the Chicago area for four years after graduating, and took lessons from Arnold Jacobs and William Scarlett. She was also a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago during the 1994-95 season (although she played with them on and off from 1986 through 1990) where she studied with Adolph Herseth. While in Chicago, she performed with the Millar Brass Ensemble. Later studies were with Susan Slaughter.

In 1990, Saxton became the principal of the Hong Kong Philharmonic and a teacher at the Hong Kong Academy of Performing Arts. After three seasons, she returned to Chicago and became principal of the Illinois and South Bend (IN) symphonies and Chicago Chamber Orchestra. She also played with the Grant Park Symphony, Chicago Chamber Musicians, seven Chicago-area orchestras, and taught at Illinois Wesleyan University and Northeastern Illinois University. In 1999, she accepted a position as professor of trumpet at Wichita State University, and principal of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra and Wichita Brass Quintet. Since 1997, she has spent her summers as artist/faculty of the Eastern Music Festival in Greensboro, North Carolina, and is also principal and soloist with the Shenandoah Valley Bach Festival in Harrisonburg, Virginia. She occasionally played as an extra or substitute trumpeter with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Chicago Brass Quintet. She performed principal on a subscription set with the Saint Louis Symphony in 2010, and in 2011 her CD, Concert and Contest Music for Trumpet, was a complimentary CD given to the membership of the International Trumpet Guild.

Saxton joined the faculty of the University of North Carolina School of the Arts in 2006, and tours with the trumpet ensemble, Tromba Mundi, the brass ensemble, Monarch Brass, and was principal with the Key West Symphony. She has recorded for the Crystal, Koss, Proto, Novitas, MSR, International Trumpet Guild, and Moravian Music Foundation labels. She has participated as an artist-faculty member at the Lieksa Brass Week in Finland (2008), is a member of the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild and the International Women's Brass Conference, and is on the advisory committee and artist/faculty for the National Trumpet Competition. She is a clinician for Conn-Selmer, and was an Excellence in Teaching nominee at Wichita State University. She was inducted into the Music Alumni Honor Role from Mansfield University, and Pi Kappa Lambda at Northwestern. Her hobbies include hiking, traveling, listening to jazz, and singing.

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "ITG Profile: Judith Saxton" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2002); "Judith Saxton" (http://faculty.uncsa.e andu); "Judith Saxton" (2010 ITG Conference program book biography); personal interviews, Mar. 15, 2010 and July 5, 2010.

Scarlett, William ("Will") H. (b. Chicago, Illinois, c1935). American trumpeter. Scarlett grew up in Chicago, and as a boy, played cornet in a local Salvation Army brass band. He attended Northwestern University (c1953-57), studying with Renold Schilke, Arnold Jacobs, and Adolph Herseth, and performed in the Civic Orchestra of Chicago. After graduating, he enlisted in the Army, and served from 1957 to 1958 in the 7th US Army Symphony Orchestra in Germany.

Upon returning to Chicago in 1958, Scarlett joined the trumpet section of the Lyric Opera of Chicago, and performed with the Grant Park Orchestra during the summers (1956, 1962-64). In 1964, he became the fourth trumpet of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and from 1966 to 1994 was promoted to third/assistant principal. He performed as second trumpet from 1994 until he retired in 1997. He also taught at Roosevelt University.

Scarlett is an avid collector of antique cornets, and is an expert on the instruments used by Salvation Army bands. Since retiring, he spends much of his time teaching young brass players, and repairing brass instruments for inner city schools in the Chicago area. In 2011, he was awarded the Elgin Youth Symphony Orchestra Award for exceptional music education in the schools.

Scarlett and his wife Peggy have three children and several grandchildren.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Fredericksen, Brian. Arnold Jacobs: Song and Wind (WindSong Press); "William Scarlett Receives Annual EYSO Award." (http://triblocal.com/mchenry/calendar/2011/03/20/2011-eyso-music-educator-of-the-year-announced-william-scarlett-receives-annual-eyso-award).

Schachtner, Heinz (b. Eichendorf, Niederbayern, Germany, Jan. 14, 1920). German trumpeter. Schachtner came from a musical family and studied at the Trapps's Conservatory in Munich from 1935 to 1940.

After first performing in local coffee houses, from 1949 to 1983 he was solo trumpet in Adalbert Luczkowski's dance orchestra in Cologne, and played with Bert Kaempfert and Attila Zoller. He was a top ballad player (in the style of Ralph Marterie and Georges Jouvin), and recorded numerous albums including Trumpet Fascination (Polydor), Golden Trumpet Hits (Polydor), Songs of Old Germany (Capitol), Trumpet in Gold (Polydor), Trumpet in Gold 2 (Polydor), and Trumpet Encores (Polydor). He was also a well-known studio trumpet player who was featured on the soundtracks for films such as From Here To Eternity, Soldier Blues, and High Noon. His single LP with the theme song of the film From Here to Eternity on Side One and the bugle call Taps plus Soldaten-Blues on Side Two, was a spectacular hit in 1954.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schachtner, Johann Andreas (b. Dingolfing, Bavaria, Mar. 9, 1731; d. Salzburg, Austria, July 20, 1795). Austrian trumpeter of German birth. Schachtner studied with the Jesuits in Dillingen, and from 1750 in Ingolstadt. He then moved to Salzburg, and became a student of Johann Caspar Köstler, and was a Hof-und Feldtrompeter at the Salzburg court in 1754. He also played the cello and was noted as being a fine violinist and an author as well. He became a close friend of the Mozart family (also playing violin in a string quartet in Mozart's home). He likely performed Leopold Mozart's Trumpet Concerto in D, originally written as part of a serenade, in August 1762. Leopold Mozart wrote of him that he was quite an elegant player and one with good taste. In 1781 he became a Spielgraf.

In a letter from 1792, Schachtner reported on an incident in which he had attempted to cure Wolfgang Mozart's fear of the trumpet, stating, Until he was nearly ten years old, Wolfgang Amadeus had an unconquerable fear of the trumpet when it was played alone, without other instruments, as if one were to point a loaded pistol at his heart. Papa [Leopold] wanted to rid him of this childish anxiety, and ordered me at once, despite his [i.e. Wolfgang's] refusal, to play [the trumpet] in his direction, but—my God! if I only had not allowed myself to do this—Wolfgangerl had hardly heard the blasting tone that he became pale and began to sink to the earth; and if I had continued any longer, he certainly would have contracted the "Fraise" [i.e. fever cramps].

Bibl.: Smithers, Don L. Music and History of the Baroque Trumpet before 1721 (Syracuse University Press); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Schäfer, Holger (b. Wertingen, Germany, Apr. 29, 1974). German trumpeter. Holger's early trumpet lessons were with his father, Manfred Schäfer. From 1989 to 1993, he studied with Wolfgang Guggenberger at the Richard Strauss Conservatory in Munich and with Paul Lachenmeir at the Musikhochschule in Munich. He also studied with Max Sommerhalder in the Detmold Musikhochschule.

Schäfer was a member of the Berlin Orchestra Academy from 1998 to 1999. Since 1999, he has been assistant principal trumpet of the Southwest Radio Symphony Orchestra in Baden-Baden and Freiburg. He is also a member of the German Brass Quintet, and has been a guest trumpeter with symphony orchestras in Munich, Berlin, and Stuttgart.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Schäfer, Joachim (b. Dresden, Germany, May 20, 1973). German trumpeter. Schäfer studied at the Hochschule in Schwerin, the Hans Eisler Musikhochschule in Berlin, and the Carl Maria von Weber Musikhochschule in Dresden (1990-94). His ability as a soloist on the piccolo trumpet was evident from an early age. He received tutelage from Ludwig Güttler, Maurice André, and Wynton Marsalis, and has embarked on a successful solo career with as many as 170 concerts per year.

In 1994, Schäfer formed his own chamber orchestra that he uses as an ensemble to feature his solo skills in Baroque concertos. He also formed the Joachim Schäfer Trumpet Ensemble, which has released CDs such as Pomp & Circumstance for the Christophorus label. Solo CDs for Christophorus include Il Barocco Concertante, The Trumpet Shall Sound, Concertos for Piccolo Trumpet, ...quiet, please!, The Sound of Baroque, Clarino e Organo, and Fireworks & Water Music. He has composed several pieces for his instrument. He has also been a guest soloist with numerous ensembles, including touring as soloist with the Chicago Chamber Orchestra in the United States in May of 1999.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Joachim Schäfer's official website: www.joachim-schaefer.com.

Schagerl, Karl [Sr.] (b. Mank, Austria, 1929). Austrian instrument maker. Schagerl grew up in a family of farmers, and apprenticed as a cheese maker and dairyman. As a boy, he played trumpet in his school band, and by 1952 was directing wind bands and dance bands. His love for music and the absence of music stores near where he lived motivated him and wife Josefa to open a music store in 1961, catering mostly to students and amateur players. They had five children (three boys and two girls), four of whom eventually joined the family business.

In 1989, Schagerl turned the business over to his oldest son, Karl. Jr. (b. 1962), who had joined the enterprise in 1979. One of his daughters, Elizabeth (b. 1961), had also joined the business in 1979. Sons Johann (b. 1963) and Robert (b. 1966) joined the business in the early 1980s. Karl Jr. and Robert quickly expanded sales by including professional instruments. Karl Jr. was particularly involved in building trumpets, and his lifelong friend Hans Gansch [Jr.] (principal trumpet of the Vienna Philharmonic) worked closely with him to develop what is now one of the world's foremost rotary valve trumpets.

Bibl.: Mathez, Jean-Pierre. "Werkstatt & Schagerl" (Brass Bulletin No. 107, Mar. 1999); Schagerl Instruments official website: www.schagerl.com.

Photos: Upper photo is Karl Schagerl Sr. Lower photo is Karl Schagerl Jr. (center).

Schartz, Philippe (b. Esch-Alzette, Luxembourg, Nov. 29, 1969). Luxembourg trumpeter. Schartz studied at the Esch-Alzette Conservatory with euphonium player Robert Weiland, and later with trumpeter Joël Sand. He then attended the music conservatory in Nancy, France, where he studied with Dino Tomba, his lifelong friend and mentor. He continued his studies at the Royal College of Music in London with David Mason. After graduating, he participated by invitation in the Special Student program at the Eastman School of Music from 1994 to 1995 under the guidance of professors Charles Geyer and Barbara Butler. In 1994, two prizes had been bestowed on him at the RCM: the Arthur Davidson Prize as best brass player and the David Mason Prize as best trumpeter.

Schartz began his orchestral career in the Gustav Mahler Youth Orchestra in 1995 until 1997, and was a founding member of the Mahler Chamber Orchestra in 1998. From 1995 to 1998, he also performed as principal trumpet of the Flemish Chamber Orchestra of Antwerp. In 1998, he was selected as principal of the British Broadcasting Corporation National Orchestra of Wales, a position he occupied through the summer of 2002 (becoming the first European to hold such a position in a British orchestra).

A skilled soloist and chamber musician, Schartz has released several albums including De Lux Trumpet (Doyen), Trumpet Renaissance (Chandos), The Magic of Brass (Doyen), Cool Lips and Hot Fingers (Artevents AE), Golden Window (Artevents Classics), and Concertos pour Trompette et Orchestre (Soloists Europeéns). He is on the faculty of the Royal Welsh College of Music.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Shook, Brian. "The British Broadcasting Company National Orchestra of Wales Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2011); Philippe Schartz's official website: www.philippeschartz.net.

Scheck, Rudi (b. Stuttgart, Germany, Nov. 9, 1958). German trumpeter. Scheck began playing trumpet at age eleven, and later studied privately with Dale Marrs, Robert Bodenröder, Jean-François Michel, Reinhold Lösch, and Anthony Plog. He also participated in master classes with Edward Tarr, Pierre Thibaud, Bo Nilsson, and Roger Delmotte. From 1983 to 1989, he was principal trumpet of a student orchestra in Tübingen that toured South America, and in 1985 he formed the Stuttgart Baroque Collegium (two trumpets and organ). A fine performer on the modern piccolo trumpet and Baroque (valveless) trumpet, Scheck has released several CDs including Music for Trumpet and Organ and Festive Trumpet, both on the Hänssler label. He has performed with the Stuttgart Bach Collegium led by Maestro Helmuth Rilling, Berlin Chamber Philharmonic, and Stuttgart Philharmonic.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schendel, Amy (b. Canton, South Dakota, Aug. 28, 1973). American trumpeter. As a young trumpeter growing up in Canton, South Dakota, Schendel (maiden name Amy Minor) was self-taught on trumpet, as well as being inspired by her high school band director, Glenn Siverson. She attended the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire where she studied with Robert Baca, and earned a bachelor of music degree. She then attended Indiana University where she studied with John Rommel. Doctoral studies were with John Aley at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. She has also studied with Manny Laureano of the Minnesota Orchestra.

Schendel has performed in a variety of ensembles including the Civic Orchestra of Chicago (1999-2000), National Repertory Orchestra (summer 2000), Wisconsin Brass Quintet (2005-07), Dubuque Symphony (2006-08), Madison Symphony Orchestra (2007-08), Las Colinas Symphony (2008-09), Wisconsin Chamber Orchestra, and the Minnesota Orchestra (extra). In addition, she attended the Tanglewood Music Festival during the summer of 1999, and the Spoleto Festival USA during the summers of 1999, 2000, and 2003-05. In 2001, she won a position with the United States Marine Band, but was unable to enlist due to a minor medical problem. Likewise, in 2003, she successfully auditioned for a position with the US Air Force Ceremonial Band in Washington, D.C., but was unable to accept the position. She has also been a member of the Bach Dancing and Dynamite Society (2008) and is a recipient of a 2004 Fulbright Scholarship that enabled her to study with Uwe Kleindienst in Augsburg, Germany.

Currently, Schendel is an assistant professor of trumpet at the University of Iowa where she is a member of the Contrapunctus Brass Trio. She is married to trombonist Todd Schendel. Her hobbies include running, knitting, reading, horseback riding, skiing, and sewing.

Bibl.: Dorer, Robert. "Amy Schendel to University of Iowa" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010); personal interview, Jan. 10, 2010.

Schenker, Daniel (b. Stäfa, Switzerland, Mar. 25, 1963). Swiss trumpeter. Schenker began taking trumpet lessons at age ten, and later studied with Rudolf Suter at the Zurich Conservatory. He earned a diploma in 1985, studying with Bert Joris at the Swiss Jazz School in Bern, and participated in master classes with Wynton Marsalis, Randy Brecker, Tom Harrell, Bob Mover, Jack Walrath, and Malte Burba.

Since 1979, Schenker has been performing jazz with numerous leading musicians including James Moody, Pepe Lienhard, Daniel Schnyder, Joe Lovano, Bill Holman, and George Gruntz. He is a teacher at the jazz schools in Berne and Zurich (Hochschule der Künste ZHdK) as well as the Musikschule Konservatorium in Zurich (MKZ). He has toured with groups such as Herbie Kopf's hip-noses, the Brigitte Dietrich/Joe Haider Jazz Orchestra, and the Schenker-Schnermann Quintet. He can be heard on nearly fifty CD recordings, including solo albums such as Daniel Schenker Quartet, Soundlines, iridium, Blumen, Fire, and Earth.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Daniel Schenker's official website: www.danielschenker.ch.

Schepers, Nico (b. Turnbout, Belgium, July 19, 1974). Belgian trumpeter and flugelhornist. Schepers plays a wide variety of jazz—pop, Latino, big band—and is a very active combo performer. He has been a member of the J-Horns, Brussels Jazz Orchestra, El Tartoo Del Tigre, High Voltage, Blue Blot, and other groups including his own quartet. He has also recorded with dozens of artists including Kenny Werner, Tutu Puoane, Amina Figarova, John Kelly, and Bart Peeters. Schepers frequently appears at jazz festivals throughout Europe.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Scherbaum, Adolf (b. Eger, Österreich-Ungarn [Czech Republic], Aug. 23, 1909; d. Heilsbronn, Germany, Aug. 2, 2000). Czech trumpeter. Scherbaum was the best known of the first soloists to record Baroque trumpet concertos and one of the early specialists of Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2; he also popularized the use of piccolo trumpets in solo playing. Many great artists followed in his ground-breaking footsteps including the great French soloist Maurice André who stated, I am being followed by many, but I had a single predecessor, Adolf Scherbaum, to whom I owe it all—it was his playing that set the standard and shaped my style.

Scherbaum began playing the trumpet at age eight. From 1923 to 1928, he studied at the Military Music School in Prague, and in the following year studied with professor Dengler in Vienna. After the army his first playing job was at an opera theater in Brno from 1929 to 1939, followed by summer employment in a spa orchestra in Moravia. He played in the Czech Philharmonic in Prague from 1939 to 1941, was principal trumpet of the Berlin Philharmonic from 1941 to 1945, was interned in Prague by the Czech government at a detention camp in Pfalz in 1945, and was solo trumpet at the Pressburg Radio and professor at the Pressburg Conservatory of Music from 1946 to 1951.

During the year 1951, Scherbaum received assistance from the Red Cross to obtain a passport that allowed him to leave and enter Czechoslovakia as he pleased. He then moved to Hamburg where he accepted a position as solo trumpet of the Hamburg Radio Orchestra where he played from 1951 through 1967. In 1955, he began working as an international soloist, recorded Festlisches Weihnachtskonzert under his own name with Karl-Heinz Loges, and premiered the Concerto by Bernd Alois Zimmerman in Hamburg under Ernest Bour. In 1956, he caused a sensation by easily performing Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in Paris. From 1956 to 1972, he successfully worked as a soloist with the Paul Kuentz Chamber Ensemble with second trumpeter, Stanislav Simek. From 1960 to 1969, he recorded a prestigious series of LPs on the noted DGG label that drew worldwide attention and were constantly on the best-seller list in Germany. In 1963, he formed his own Barock-Ensemble based in Hamburg (later in Munich) that successfully toured until 1972.

Scherbaum developed a method of playing that utilized a low mouthpiece pressure on the embouchure and highly compressed air. He built great strength in the diaphragm, chest, and cheeks, which gave him an unusually well developed upper range. He and his son Matthias developed a piccolo trumpet with a detachable bell, and a three-part mouthpiece with interchangeable cups. Together, they formed the Scherbaum & Göttner company. Scherbaum was the first to record extremely high and difficult concertos like the one by Michael Haydn in D Major. During his career, he also performed Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 over four hundred times, and recorded it thirteen times! During that time, Scientific American magazine featured him in an article dealing with the physical stresses of playing trumpet in the extreme high register. Time magazine stated that he was ...perhaps the best classical trumpeter in Europe.

Scherbaum gave a huge number of concerts between the years 1965 and 1972. He toured Germany, Russia, England, France, Italy, Austria, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, and the United States. He released over thirty solo albums, and recorded all of Bach's difficult oratorios and cantatas for trumpet. He won five Grand Prix du Disque awards and one Edison award and performed as soloist with numerous major orchestras including the Berlin Philharmonic, London Symphony Orchestra, Santa Cecilia Orchestra in Rome, and the Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig. Some of the leading conductors he appeared with are Karajan, Klemperer, Münchinger, Scherchen, Baumgartner, Furtwängler, Knappertsbusch, Schmidt-Isserstedt, Richter, Casals, Menuhin, and Oistrakh.

From 1966 to 1977, Scherbaum was a professor at the School of Music in Saarbrücken, and was considered by his students to be a kind and fatherly person, but very demanding and uncompromising when it came to musical matters. Among his students were Josef Bayer and Albrecht Eichberger.

Some of the awards Scherbaum received are the Culture Award from the city of Amberg (1968), Prize for Cultural Achievement from the city of Sulzbach-Rosenberg (1979) for his service to teaching young students at a municipal school in that city from 1977 to 1986, and the Albert Schweitzer Peace Medal (1979).

Scherbaum became quite famous throughout Germany. He was a short and stocky person. He had a great wit and a friendly personality, and was always modest about himself. His wife was a physician. He died on August 2, 2000 just a few days before his ninety-first birthday. His widow deposited from his estate nine instruments, music, newspaper reviews, and posters in the Bad Säckingen Trumpet Museum.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. Extracts on mp3 and video clips; Oct. 2008); "Adolf Scherbaum." (www.asamnet.de/~bayerj/scherbe/index.htm); "Adolf Scherbaum." (O.J.'s Page: http://abel.hive.no/trumpet/interview/scherbaum).

Scherzer, Johannes (b. Erlbach, Germany, Aug. 10, 1922). German maker. Scherzer apprenticed with his uncle, Kurt Knoth, an instrument maker who himself had trained under Phillip Reichel (1884-1900) in Markneukirchen. Not to be confused with a Scherzer instrument maker in Augsburg, Johannes Scherzer opened a shop in Markneukirchen, and became a master in 1951.

Scherzer instruments are highly regarded throughout Germany and beyond. A picture of one of his instruments appears on a German postage stamp. His piccolo B-flat/A rotary trumpet, developed in conjunction with trumpeter Willi Krug (1925-2000), has become extremely popular throughout the world because of its warm tone quality.

Scherzer integrated his company with the B&S Group (Blechblas- und Signalinstrumente) in 1984. The Scherzer firm is now at home in the J.A. Musik Group. Johannes Scherzer is retired, living in good health in Markneukirchen.

Bibl.: "Johannes Scherzer" (www.b-and-S.com); personal information about Scherzer gathered by Friedel Keim and provided through Edward Tarr on Nov. 12, 2010.

Schetsche, Walter (b. Sommersdorf, Germany, Apr. 10, 1935). German trumpeter. Schetsche studied trumpet with Franz Richter and Georg Beyer and percussion with Siegfried Fink at the Georg Philipp

Telemann Music School in Magdeburg, as well as the trumpet with Hans Bode in Berlin. His first playing job was in Magdeburg as a steady extra as trumpeter and percussionist in the city Theatre Orchestra. He then held a similar but permanent position in the city of Brandenburg, and with the Folk Theater in Rostock from 1954 to 1957. He played with the Radio in the American Sector (RIAS) Symphony Orchestra in Berlin from 1957 to 1960, the Stuttgart Radio Orchestra from 1960 to 1975, and the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra from 1961 to 1975.

Schetsche also began performing a great deal of chamber music after 1970, mostly Baroque trumpet ensemble music that he recorded with Edward Tarr, Maurice André, Walter Holy, Heinz Zickler, and other leading classical trumpeters during the 1970s but also with his Trio con Voce (soprano, trumpet, and organ), with which he made several CDs. His wife, Ingrid Wünning, is a painter.

A disastrous accident occurred around 1975 when Schetsche was entering a bus to go on vacation. He fell backwards, injuring his head so severely that he could hardly move. He has lived in a wheelchair since then, slowly regaining the possibility of moving his fingers and arms, and learning to talk again.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal information received from Edward Tarr via email on Mar. 15, 2013.

Schiefen, Dirk (b. Altenkirchen, Westerwald, Germany, Oct. 4, 1979). German trumpeter. Schiefen took to the trumpet at age five and quickly became a leading pop trumpet artist after studying at a music school in Hennef. In 1992, he received the Herbert Roth Award in Suhl for best young artist, and in 1993 won a national championship for young musicians as best trumpeter. He attended a music school in Aachen, and in 1996 at age seventeen, received the Grand Prix for Folk Music in the Rheingold Hall in Mainz. He also studied with Urban Agnes in the Cologne Musikhochschule in 2004.

Schiefen has appeared on numerous German television programs including Musikantenstadl, Achim's Hitparade, Goldene Hitparade, Volkstümliche Hitparade, Lustige Musikanten, and 100 Grad. Although he does not display dazzling technical virtuosity or a wide range, his good looks and clean cut appearance, combined with a beautifully lyric tone quality and style, have made him a star among the new generation of trumpeters in Germany.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Dirk Schiefen" (http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dirk_Schiefen).

Schilke, Renold O[tto] (b. Green Bay, Wisconsin, June 30, 1910; d. Sun City, Arizona, Sept. 5, 1982). American trumpeter and manufacturer. Schilke was born into a musical family. His father was a fine singer, and his mother was an organist. He began playing the cornet at age eight, and by age eleven was playing as a soloist with the Holton factory band comprised of adults. Because of his cornet-playing abilities and his small size, he was billed as the "Boy Wonder." He also played cornet and trumpet on the Orpheum Vaudeville circuit. His first teacher was Del Wright. Later, he took lessons from Ernest Moore, Max Schlossberg, Georges Mager, and Herbert L. Clarke.

When Schilke was fourteen, he developed an interest in guns and worked in a gun shop in Green Bay. He learned to use a metal lathe there, and at age seventeen made his first trumpet mouthpiece at the gun shop. He was also allowed access to the Holton factory and spent many days learning the basics of instrument making.

Schilke may have played with the Sousa Band (c1929) but his name does not appear on any Sousa rosters. He moved to Chicago in 1931 in order to study with Edward B. Llewellyn, principal trumpeter of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. He earned money working part-time in a mouthpiece-making shop. From 1932 to 1936 he was a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, where he met Alice Lowry, a trombonist; they were married in 1936.

Elden Benge joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1933 as first trumpet, and Llewellyn moved to third trumpet. It turned out that Benge and Schilke lived in the same neighborhood, and the two men spent many hours working on improving trumpets in Schilke's home shop. (It should be noted that Schilke made many of the first tools and dies for Benge when he started his own instrument company.) In 1936, Schilke became the CSO's third trumpet, when Llewellyn was killed in an automobile accident in Texas. When Benge left the CSO in 1939 to work at WGN Radio as a staff musician, Schilke was appointed principal of the CSO for the 1939-40 and 1940-41 seasons. However, he left the orchestra in 1941 to do war work, returning to the CSO in 1942 as third trumpet until 1951. During his last season with the orchestra (1951-52), he performed as the fourth trumpeter. After that and until 1962, he occasionally played extra trumpet with the orchestra.

Schilke was a founding member of the CSO Brass Ensemble (quintet) in 1949, playing second trumpet to Adolph S. Herseth, who had become the new principal trumpeter with the CSO the previous year. The group performed concerts and made recordings, in addition to presenting numerous school clinics. Schilke remained in the ensemble until 1962. He was also a member of the Grant Park Symphony (1951-53) and the Chicago Lyric Opera Orchestra (1954-64). He taught at several Chicago-area universities from the late 1930s to the mid 1960s, including Northwestern University (1939-58), De Paul University (1953-58), and Roosevelt University (1945-68). Some of his most famous students include Vincent Cichowicz, Thomas Crown, William Scarlett, and Scott Laskey.

Schilke's interest in firearms and machining led to his work for the military during World War II. He worked for the Douglas Tool & Die Company in developing a quicker and more reliable trigger mechanism for the M-1 military rifle. (He and his son Renold E. Schilke competed in many state and national pistol target shooting competitions. It is often stated that Schilke Sr. qualified as a pistol shooter for the US Olympic Team in 1932 and 1936, but this is not true.) He also developed a system of interchanging bells on trumpets that formed the basis of his tunable-bell design many years later. He had a great interest in the trumpets of Victor Mahillon; he studied Mahillon's nodal intonation theories and later consulted with physicist Dr. Willi Aebi in Switzerland.

During the early 1930s, Schilke formed Schilke Musical Products Corporation, and in the early 1950s partnered with the late Philip Farkas, principal horn of the CSO at the time. Together, they formed a company that produced and sold brass mouthpieces. They also distributed Holton instruments and manufactured music stands. (Trumpets were manufactured by Schilke possibly as early as 1947.) In 1956, Farkas sold his half of the company to Schilke and it was named The Schilke Company. By the early 1950s, Schilke had perfected his trumpet designs but was unsuccessful in convincing large instrument companies to produce them at reasonable costs due to his exacting specifications. Fortunately, he was able to purchase some excellent equipment from the William Frank Company when it was dissolved in 1956. He moved the equipment into his Evanston, Illinois, home and began making professional-model trumpets. He moved the shop to Chicago in 1959, and back to Evanston (at a new address) in 1963. He finally moved the shop to Wabash Avenue in downtown Chicago in 1967. Being close to Orchestra Hall, the Wabash shop became a popular place for brass players to visit on a regular basis.

From 1974 to 1981, Schilke opened a factory in Winfield, Illinois, where his trumpets were manufactured and assembled. They were then sent to the Wabash shop for final finish work. His tunable-bell trumpets, patented in 1970, and his excellent piccolo trumpets helped establish Schilke as a leading brand. He was approached by the Yamaha Corporation (Japan) to be a design consultant, a collaboration that eventually made him very wealthy through royalties on sales of Yamaha trumpets he designed. He transferred the patent on the sliding-bell to Yamaha because he felt that it had the financial resources to protect the patent from copyright infringement.

Renold Schilke was a generous man who contributed money to many worthwhile causes and educational programs. He was an outstanding supporter of the International Trumpet Guild during its infancy, and loved to entertain guests for lunch each day at the Chinese restaurant located on the ground floor of his eight-story office building on Wabash. (The Schilke showroom was on the seventh floor, and the shop was on the eighth floor.) However, he was very strict (even mean) with his employees; once in a rage he fired everybody on a Friday and was mad again when most didn't show up for work the following Monday.

During the early 1980s, Schilke's health began to decline due to the many years of long workdays and constant traveling around the world. He retired in 1982 and moved to the retirement town of Sun City, Arizona, near Phoenix. However, his retirement was short-lived; he died of kidney failure within a few months. His son Renold E. and daughter Joan took over the company and moved it to its current location in Melrose Park, Illinois (a suburb of Chicago), in 1989. They sold the company to Andrew and Julie Naumann in October of 2002. Posthumously, Renold O. Schilke was given the Honorary Award by the International Trumpet Guild.

Bibl.: Fladmoe, Gary Gardner. The Contributions to Brass Instrument Manufacturing of Vincent Bach, Carl Geyer, and Renold Schilke (Ph.D. diss., University of Illinois-Champaign-Urbana, 1975); Tarr, Edward H. "Schilke, Renold," The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (2001); Crown, Thomas, John Hagstrom and Joe Lill. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1933-1948" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2013); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schlabach, John (b. Carthage, Illinois, July 13, 1957). American trumpeter. Schlabach grew up in Macomb, Illinois, and began playing the trumpet at age nine. His first teachers were Gerald Webster and William DeJong. After gradating from Macomb High School in 1975, he attended Western Illinois University in Macomb, where he studied with DeJong, and graduated in 1980. In 1980, he entered Northwestern University where he studied with Vincent Cichowicz, and earned a master of music degree in 1981.

Schlabach's first job was as third and assistant first trumpet of the Symphony Orchestra in Toluca, Mexico (1981-83). He was the professor of trumpet at Murray State University in Murray, Kentucky (1983-98), and was selected as University Teacher of the Year in 1995. He married Christine ("Tina") Schlabach, a substitute teacher, with whom he has two children, Jessica (b. 1989) and Kelly (b. 1993).

In the fall of 1998, Schlabach joined the faculty at Ohio University, and began playing with the OhioBrass, the faculty brass quintet. He has performed with the Columbus Symphony Orchestra and the West Virginia Symphony. He received the Distinguished Teacher Award from the Ohio University School of Music in 2001. His hobbies include physical fitness and traveling.

Bibl.: "Schlabach to Murray State" (News Item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1984); "John Schlabach" (www.finearts.ohio.edu); personal interview, May 11, 2010.

Schlossberg, Max (b. Libau, Latvia, Nov. 5, 1873; d. Bethlehem, New Hampshire, Sept. 23, 1936). Latvian trumpeter. Schlossberg is considered to be the father of the American school of trumpet playing. He was the greatest teacher of his day.

Schlossberg was born in what is now Latvia, and moved to Moscow when he was nine years old in order to study the trumpet with his brother Joseph, a student at the Imperial Conservatory. From 1885 to 1889, he studied with August Marquardt and Franz Puttkammer at the Russian Musical Society. He moved to St. Petersburg in 1889, and reportedly studied at times in Berlin with Julius Kosleck between 1889 and 1905. He also toured Europe as a member of an orchestra during this time.

Schlossberg commenced his mandatory military service in the city of Riga, and was assigned the job of bandmaster of the 171st Regiment Band from 1897 to 1898. His father had moved to New York in 1888, so Schlossberg requested a leave in order to visit him. Permission was granted, but his grandfather was held hostage in a prison until his return from America. Upon his return, he married Jenny Lohak, a girl from Riga.

Since military duties were to last twenty-five years in Russia, Schlossberg decided to defect from the army, and move with his wife to New York, where they arrived on October 1, 1902. Schlossberg was granted U.S. citizenship in 1914. He worked as a freelance musician and contractor, and was hired by Patrick Gilmore as a brass teacher at the Hebrew Orphan Asylum in Manhattan. He also played in the Gilmore Band during the summer seasons. In 1910, he accepted a position in the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, known as the New York Philharmonic until the 1928 merger. He generally played fourth trumpet, but played second trumpet from 1921 to 1928. He remained in the orchestra until his death in 1936.

Schlossberg began teaching at the Institute of Musical Art (now The Juilliard School) in 1923. He usually taught the lessons in his home. One of his students, William Vacchiano, described meeting Schlossberg for the first time around 1930: The name Max Schlossberg was magic when I came to New York. The managers of all the orchestras, bands and theaters would consult Schlossberg whenever they needed a replacement. When you walked into the room to study with him, you immediately felt like you were in the presence of a great man. He was very handsome and looked more like European royalty than a musician. He wore a fur-lined coat, walked with a cane and had a waxed moustache with turned up corners.

When I studied with him, he lived on Walton Avenue in the Bronx. His apartment was up on the top floor in the back and it was more or less soundproof. His studio walls were covered with all the famous players of the day, many of whom were his students. He would periodically point to them and tell you what desirable qualities each of them possessed; then he would say, "Pretty soon I'll have your picture up there!" He knew how to encourage a student and make him feel he was going to make it. Not once in my six years of affiliation did I ever hear him say an unkind word about anyone. He was above jealousy and never bragged about himself; he left that to others. He was a very kind man, I can't say enough about him.

Schlossberg's partial list of famous students includes Sol Caston, Louis Davidson, Harry Glantz, Bernie Glow, Mannie Klein, Vladimir Drucker, Renold Schilke, Charles Colin, Seymour Rosenfeld, Nate Prager, James Stamp, Charlie Margulis, Jimmy Smith, Edward Treutel, Elden Benge, Isidor Blank, Harry Freistadt, Daryl Gibson, Sigmund Hering, Abe Katz, Max Kaminsky, and William Vacchiano. He primarily used three books in his teaching, Arban's Complete Conservatory Method, St. Jacome's Grand Method, and Sachse's 100 Studies in Transposition. He also wrote his own exercises for any particular difficulties a student might have. Many of these exercises were compiled by his son-in-law Harry Freistadt, and published as Schlossberg's Daily Drills and Technical Studies for Trumpet (1937). The book is widely used today.

Bibl.: Briney, Bruce. The Development of Russian Trumpet Methodology and Its Influence on the American School (unpublished DM diss., Northwestern University, 1997); Shook, Brian. William Vacchiano: His Career as a Trumpet Player and Pedagogue (unpublished DMA diss, Arizona State University, 2006); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Schlosser, Axel (b. Aalen, Baden-Württemberg, Germany, Sept. 18, 1976). German trumpeter. Although relatively young, Schlosser has already achieved a lifetime's worth of performances, recordings, and awards. He grew up in Oberkochen, and as a child developed an interest in New Orleans jazz and brass band music. He began studying music at age six, playing flute and clarinet, and trumpet at age twelve. At age seventeen, he was a member of Peter Herbolzheimer's Bujazzo (1994-98) and Bernd Konrad's Youth Jazz Orchestra of Baden-Württemberg (1994-97). After winning the music prize at Schiller High School in Heidenheim, he studied jazz at the Hochschule für Musik und darstellende Kunst in Mannheim in 1997, earning a degree with distinction in 2001. During 2000-01, he was lead trumpeter in the German-French Jazz Ensemble that was led by Albert Mangelsdorff. Since graduating from college, he has been a cofounder and member of the quintet L 14, 16 that won the 2002 global Hoeilaart Jazz Contest in Belgium and was awarded the Prize of the German Record Critics in 2003 and 2007. Since then, he also experienced a renewed interest in composing. In 2002, he became the lead trumpeter of the Frankfurt Radio Big Band, and since 2003 has also been a professor of jazz at Johannes Gutenberg Musikhochschule in Mainz.

Schlosser is leader of three jazz quartets and a trio, and since 2004 has been a member of the Jazz Baltica Ensemble. In 2006, he became lead trumpeter of the European Broadcasting Union Jazz Orchestra. He has performed and recorded with dozens of top jazz artists including Clark Terry, Maria Schneider, Michael Brecker, Bob Florence, Bobby Shew, Phil Woods, Till Bronner, Ack van Rooyen, Don Menza, Bob Brookmeyer, Roy Hargrove, Peter Erskine, Carla Bley, Randy Brecker, Toshiko Akiyoshi, and Bob Mintzer, as well as ensembles such as the Al Porcino Big Band, Summit Jazz Orchestra, SWR Big Band, RIAS Big Band, HR Big Band, WDR Big Band, and Peter Herbolzeimer's Rhythm Combination & Brass. Solo CDs include Secrecy (Jazz4ever), Sounds from My World (Jazz4ever), and Touching the Moon (Jazz4ever). From 2008 to 2010, he taught jazz trumpet at the Musikhochschule in Frankfurt. Other teaching posts include the Musikhochschule of Lucerne in Switzerland (2009-10).

Bibl.: Alex Schlosser's official website: www.axelschlosser.de. Photo by Hagen Wiemann.

Schlueter, Charles ("Charlie") (b. Du Quoin, Illinois, Apr. 20, 1939). American trumpeter. Schlueter became a true icon of orchestral trumpet playing. He studied cornet with Charles Archibald at age ten, from 1953 to 1955, trumpet with Don Lemasters and later with Eddie Brauer in Saint Louis. His band director at Du Quoin Township High School was Mel Siener. Schlueter attended The Juilliard School where he studied with William Vacchiano, graduating in 1962. His first position was as principal trumpet of the Kansas City Philharmonic (1962-64). He also performed with the American Ballet Theatre (1961 on tour) and the Cap Code Melody Ten (1962). He was then principal of the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra (1964-68) and an adjunct professor at Wisconsin State University. In 1967, he became associate principal of the Cleveland Orchestra (Bernard Adelstein, principal) and professor at the Cleveland Institute of Music. He left that organization to become principal of the Minnesota Orchestra in 1972, a position he enjoyed for ten years.

After two exhaustive years of auditions to find a replacement for principal trumpeter Armando Ghitalla, the Boston Symphony Orchestra named Schlueter its new principal trumpet in 1981. Maestro Seiji Ozawa was so pleased with Schlueter's performances that he awarded him early tenure after only six months. However, Ozawa attempted to fire Schlueter a few months later, claiming that he played too loudly much of the time. A protracted legal battle ensued between Schlueter and the BSO, but in the end, Schlueter remained with the orchestra for twenty-five years until his retirement in 2006. Only Georges Mager, principal trumpet of the BSO from 1920 to 1950, exceeded Schueter's tenure.

Schlueter has taught at the Tanglewood Institute, New England Conservatory, University of Minnesota, and the University of Connecticut. Among his best-known students are Andrew Balio, Matthew Sonneborn, Roderick Macdonald, Jeffrey Work, and David Bamonte. The Boston Musicians' Association named him "Musician of the Year" in 2006. He was a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Chamber Players, and performed and presented master classes throughout the world. He was given the International Trumpet Guild's Honorary Award for highest achievement.

Schlueter recorded several CDs for the Kleos Classics label, including Bravura Trumpet, Trumpet Works, Trumpet Concertos, Virtuoso Trumpet, and Song from the Heart.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Charles Schlueter" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Charles Schlueter" (www.trumpetguild.org/news05/434schliueterret.htm).

Photo credit (color): Vera H. Olcott, courtesy of the International Trumpet Guild.

Schmeisser, Otto Kurt (b. Pössneck, Germany, June 4, 1883; d. Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 1, 1970). German trumpeter. Schmeisser received his musical training from Ferdinand Weinschenk at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Leipzig, where his father was a music director, and later studied conducting privately in Hamburg with Felix Woyrsch. During his illustrious career, he played in numerous German and American orchestras including the Gewandhausorchester Leipzig (Aug. 1908 to Aug. 1909), spa orchestra in Karlsbad, Stadtorchester in Hamburg, Sinfonieorchester in Baden-Baden, Philharmonische Staatsorchester in Krefeld, Boston Symphony Orchestra (1923-26), and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1926-28). In addition, he was active as a conductor and director of the German Conservatory in Hamburg, later teaching at the New England Conservatory in Boston. He also performed for years at the United Artists Theaters in Detroit, and taught at Wayne State University there. He was a member of the committee that designed the Martin "Committee" trumpet. He died in Hamburg during a summer vacation in his home country.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmelzer, Josef (b. Mies [near Petschau], Germany, Sept. 13, 1927). German trumpeter. Schmelzer was born in the same geographical area in Bohemia where Adolf Scherbaum and Franz Willy Neugebauer came to life. He attended the Petschau Music School from 1939 to 1943, where he learned to play trumpet, piano, violin, and viola. After his military service and having been expelled from the Sudetenland, he continued his trumpet studies in 1950 with Albert Naumann at the State Hochschule for Music and Visual Arts in Frankfurt. His early posts during his student years were with the Wetzlar Symphony Orchestra and Operetta Orchestra in Diez. In 1952, he became principal trumpet of the City Orchestra of Trier. In the following year, he held a similar position with the City Orchestra of Münster in Westphalia, and from 1954 to 1956 played with the City Opera House and Museum Orchestra in Frankfurt. Most of his career, however, was as principal trumpet (later assistant principal) of the Duisburg Symphony Orchestra and German Opera Rhein in Düsseldorf from 1956 until his retirement in 1990. He also taught for eighteen years at the Folkwang-Hochschule in Essen. In 1962, he was named Chamber Musician.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmid, Bernhard (b. Wettingen, Switzerland, Nov. 13, 1940). Swiss trumpeter. Schmid first became a book printer; thereafter he studied with Louis Duquénoy and Henri Adelbrecht at the Zurich Conservatory from 1961 to 1965. He began his career as a substitute trumpeter in the Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra, alternating between the concert and opera formations, and in 1967 became principal trumpet of the Frankfurt Radio Symphony Orchestra. In 1969, he returned to Switzerland where he was assistant principal of the Tonhalle Orchestra, and in 1971 went back to Frankfurt, Germany, to rejoin the Radio Orchestra, first as principal, then from 1987 as assistant principal until his retirement at the end of the 2003-04 season. He took an interest in performing Baroque music, and played for many years in the Stuttgart Bach Collegium, during which time he also studied privately with Pierre Thibaud in Paris, and James Stamp during his many master classes in Switzerland as well as privately.

Schmid has been an active brass chamber music coach since the 1970s (Frankfurt Brass Soloists, 1976-81). He succeeded Adolf Scherbaum as professor at the Musikhochschule of the Saarland (1977-80), and in 1977-2004 taught at the Hochschule for Music and Visual Arts in Frankfurt (professor h.c. in 1987); in 1981-2006 he also taught at Dr. Hoch's Conservatory in Frankfurt. He is also a soloist who has recorded several Baroque and Classical trumpet concertos. He performed as principal of the Swiss Festival Orchestra of the Lucerne Festival (in the summer of 1982), and in 1985, together with trumpeter Reinhold Friedrich, was a founding member of hr Brass, remaining until 2000.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmid, Peter (b. Zug, Switzerland, Apr. 7, 1958). Swiss trumpeter. Schmid studied at a music school in Zug at age eleven before commencing studies with Henri Adelbrecht, first 1981-86 at the Zurich Conservatory, then 1986-90 at the Zurich Musikhochschule. From 1989, he was second trumpet of the Aargauer Symphony Orchestra, principal in 1996, and founded the Zug Trumpet Trio (with Corrado Bossard and Willi Röthenmund) in 1991. Since 1997, Schmid has been a member of the Lucerne Trumpet Ensemble ("LTE" with three trumpets, flugelhorn, bass trumpet, and organ) that has produced several CDs including Heaven's Trumpet, on which Krzysztof Penderecki's spectacular commissioned work, Lucerne Fanfare, is to be heard. He also teaches part-time at music schools in Zofingen, Cham, and Hünenberg.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmidhäusler, Francis (b. Fribourg, Switzerland, Jan. 30, 1946). Swiss trumpeter. Schmidhäusler studied with Philippe Jules Godard at the Fribourg Conservatory, receiving a teacher's diploma 1964 and a concert diploma in 1966. He was principal trumpet with the Rheinische Philharmonie Koblenz from 1967 to 1969, principal of the St. Gall Symphony Orchestra from 1969 to 1972, and principal of the Berne Symphony Orchestra from 1972 to 1994. He has also been an active soloist and chamber musician with groups such as the Berne Brass Quintet.

Schmidhäusler taught at the Fribourg Conservatory from 1969 to 1974. Since 1978, he has taught at the professional department and general music school of the Berne Conservatory, and in 1994 rejoined the music faculty at the Fribourg Conservatory, retiring in 2005. He made solo recordings with his twin brother René, a trumpeter and colleague in the Berne Symphony Orchestra.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmidt, Alexander Nikolaeyevich (b. Strelnya, Russia, July 25, 1889; d. Leningrad, Russia, July 15, 1955). Russian trumpeter. Schmidt graduated from the St. Petersburg Conservatory in 1910, having begun his studies with Wilhelm Wurm and finishing with August V. Johanson. He played principal trumpet in a military band of the Preobazhensky Regiment from 1910 to 1914.

Schmidt was principal of the Petrograd-Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra from 1915 to 1946. He performed the premiere of Dmitri Shostakovich's Piano Concerto No. 1 with the Leningrad Philharmonic on October 15, 1933 with the composer at the piano.

Schmidt was an important teacher who taught at the Leningrad Cappella College from 1920 to 1936. From 1936 until his death in 1955, he taught at the Middle Special Music School of the Leningrad Conservatory, and from 1937 to 1953 taught at the St. Petersburg Conservatory (full professor in 1948). His pupil Yury Andreyevich Bolshiyanov said of him: In the thirty years of his pedagogical activity, he taught many wonderful trumpeters. He taught them to love their profession. His most famous student was Veniamin Margolin, his successor as principal of the Leningrad Philharmonic (1947-74).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmidt, Eckhard (b. Stuttgart, Germany, May 28, 1963). German trumpeter. Schmidt learned the trumpet at age twelve and studied the instrument at the Musikhochschule in Stuttgart where he earned teaching and soloist diplomas in 1989. His teachers include Heinz Burum, Dale Marrs, and Heribert Rosenthal. From 1985 to 1988, while still a student, he was principal trumpet of the Berlin Symphony Orchestra, and in 1988 assumed duties as principal trumpet of the Hamburg State Opera Orchestra, a position he still holds. He has been a guest trumpeter with the North German Radio Orchestra, Berlin Philharmonic, Bamberg Symphony, Gürzenich Orchestra Cologne, Stuttgart and Heilbronn Chamber Orchestras, Opera Orchestra of Barcelona, Real Filharmonica de Galicia, and other ensembles. He has taught since 1994 at the Musikhochschule in Hamburg (part-time professor in 2000) and is a lecturer at the Bach Academy in Stuttgart. He has toured internationally and recorded CDs and television performances of works by J.S. Bach with Maestro Helmuth Rilling.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo: Hamburg Opera trumpets: Matthias Höfs, Martin Fries, Schmidt, Jochen Dittmann, Larry Elam, Christoph Baerwind

Schmidt, Ingus (b. Leidsen, Germany, Apr. 26, 1933). German trumpeter. Schmidt studied with Hermann Passel (1949) and Walter Holy, and attended the Academy of Music and Theatre in Hannover. Through Holy, he acquired an interest in performing on the Baroque (valveless) coiled trumpet. In 1958, they became the first two trumpeters in Cappella Coloniensis, the early music group and chamber orchestra of the Cologne Radio. Schmidt played in this group for thirty years, making him one of the pioneers of the Baroque music revival.

Schmidt was principal trumpet of the Northwest German Philharmonic in Herford (1954-58), and became a member of the Beethoven Orchestra in Bonn (1958-60) and the North German Radio Orchestra (1960-90).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schmutzler, Mathias (b. Chemnitz, Germany, July 23, 1960). German trumpeter. Schmutzler grew up in what used to be East Germany. He studied at the music school in Chemnitz before attending the Carl Maria von Weber Musikhochschule in 1980-84, studying with the famous soloist, Ludwig Güttler. Schmutzler became principal trumpet of the Dresden Philharmonic in 1984. He also played in the Philharmonic Brass Quintet, Ludwig Güttler Brass Ensemble, Virtuosi Saxoniae, Berlin Chamber Orchestra, and the Ludwig Güttler Trumpet Ensemble. He was also a soloist (playing the Baroque trumpet) in the Cappella Sagittarriana, an early music consort. Schmutzler became principal of the Dresden Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra in 1991, and since 1994 has been the artistic director of the Semper Brass ensemble. He was appointed principal of the Dresden Staatskapelle in August 1999.

A prolific soloist and chamber musician, Schmutzler can be heard on dozens of recordings, many of which are albums by Güttler. He has given recitals and master classes all over the world, and is a member of the Dresden Trumpet Consort. He is currently teaching at the Carl Maria von Weber Musichochschule.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schneebiegl, Rolf [Roland Richard Gottfried Leo] (b. Rodisfort [near Karlsbad], Czechoslovakia, June 8, 1924; d. Brühl, Germany, Aug. 10, 2004). Czech trumpeter. Schneebiegl studied horn, piano, violin, and harmony at a local music school at age ten. At age seventeen, he became a horn player in a municipal orchestra of Brüx. During World War II, he served in the military, playing piano, accordion, and double bass in officers' casinos, and was wounded in 1943. After the war, he moved to Bavaria (Germany) where he began playing jazz trumpet with various groups. During his career, he played with groups led by Max Greger (1948), Kurt Edelhagen (1950), Hugo Strasser, Eddie Sauter (1957), and Rolf Hans Müller (1958), as well as several of his own combos. He founded the hit group, Original Black Forest Musicians, in 1952. He could also prove himself as a high note blower, a fact that the author Friedel Keim experienced himself in the Mainz Electoral Castle in 1958, during a guest presentation of Chet Baker.

Schneebiegl was an accomplished composer and arranger, and had numerous hit recordings during the 1970s. He also released five albums under his own name.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Rolf Schneebiegl" (www.multilingualarchive.com/ma/de/wik/Rolf_Schneebiegl).

Upper photo: Max Greger Dance Orchestra 1951 from left: Rolf Schneebiegl, Max Greger, Hugo Strasser, and Kary Barnet.

Schneider, Dennis ("Denny") L. (b. McCook, Nebraska, Apr. 12, 1931). American trumpeter. Schneider studied with William Adam at Indiana University before joining the Air Force, and being stationed at Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska. After his military obligation, he taught at Falls City High School in Falls City, Nebraska. He became a professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1965, and for many years conducted the university jazz band. A versatile performer, Schneider was equally at home in jazz, solo, chamber, or orchestral settings. He was principal of both the Lincoln and Omaha symphonies, as well as the Omaha Opera orchestra (twelve years) and the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra. He also played under Dennis Russell Davies at the Cabrillo Festival in California for several summers, and performed on numerous occasions with the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra. He later studied with Roger Voisin and Carmine Caruso.

An active member of the International Trumpet Guild, Schneider was a frequent judge and panelist during its annual conferences. He recorded with the Mannheim Steamroller, and performed and recorded with Summit Brass. During the 1960s, he authored a brass column for a monthly newsletter published by Kolokny Music in Denver. For many years, Schneider was heavily involved with the Lincoln musicians union. He received the Mayor's Arts Award from the City of Lincoln for his work with the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra, and the Award of Merit from the ITG.

In 1986 and 1995, Schneider received the Distinguished Teacher's Award from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, where he had taught for thirty-five years. Among his best-known students are Steven Erickson, Allan Cox, Grant Peters, Michael Anderson, Laurie Frink, Joyce Johnson-Hamilton, and David Hickman.

Schneider's hobbies include playing golf and vacationing at his second home in Green Valley, Arizona. He and his wife Judy have four children: Cecelia (b. 1956), Dennis Michael (b. 1960), William (b. 1962), and Elizabeth (b. 1967).

Bibl.: Official Ballot biographies (International Trumpet Guild, 1987); "Dennis L. Schneider Retirement Celebration" (www.unl.edu); personal interview, June 5, 2010.

Schneider, Siegfried (b. Lomske [near Luppa], Germany, Dec. 30, 1952). German trumpeter. Schneider studied with Rudolf Haase at the Hochschule für Musik in Dresden from 1969 to 1973. He was principal trumpet of a theater orchestra in Bautzen from 1973 to 1977, and principal of another theater orchestra in Cottbus from 1977 to 1984. From 1984 to 1989, he played principal in the Robert Schumann Philharmonic in Chemnitz, and since 1989 has been third/assistant principal of the Sächsische Staatskapelle Dresden. He is an active chamber musician and member of the large ensemble directed by Mathias Schmutzler, Semper Brass Dresden.

Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schneidewind, Hellmut (b. Großleiningen, Germany, Feb. 1, 1928; d. Bergisch Gladbach, Apr. 4, 2011). German trumpeter. Schneidewind studied with Heinrich Täubig (1882-1962), principal trumpet of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra. Schneidewind played with the Wittemberg Elbe-Elster Theatre (1950-51), Altenburg Landestheater (1951-52), and joined the Leipzig Gewandhaus orchestra in 1953, before moving to West Germany in 1956 to become principal trumpet of the Cologne Radio Symphony Orchestra (until 1984). He began teaching at the Detmold Music Academy in 1968, and became a full professor there in 1969. Schneidewind made numerous solo recordings for Vox and other labels, as well as recording on live radio. Following

Roger Delmotte in France in the 1950s, Schneidewind was one of the first, along with Adolf Scherbaum, Roger Voisin, and Heinz Zickler, to record Baroque and Classical solo repertoire for trumpet during the 1960s.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schnitzer, Anton (the elder) (b. Munich?, Germany, before 1524/25; d. Nuremberg, Germany, Mar. 28, 1608). German maker. The Schnitzer family of brass makers was one of the most highly regarded during the late Renaissance and early Baroque periods. The founder of this dynasty was Albrecht Schnitzer (b. Augsburg; d. Munich, 1524 or 1525), a Stadtpfeifer and maker in Munich. He had at least six sons, one of which (Anton) became the most famous of the family of makers. [There is another Schnitzer family of woodwind makers, but it is not completely certain that the two families are related. Also, there is no evidence that a trombone made by Erasmus Schnitzer (d. 1566) has any relation to the Schnitzer family discussed here.]

When Albrecht died, his widow, Anna, and son, Anton, moved from Munich to Nuremberg. Anna married Georg (Jörg) Stengel, a brass instrument maker. Anton apprenticed under Stengel and later succeeded him in 1557. Anton Schnitzer became a master in 1562. He married and raised three sons—Anton II (b. Apr. 20, 1564), Jobst, and Hans. Of these, Anton II became a brass instrument maker and was considered to be one of Nuremberg's top ten.

Anton the elder built some of the most exquisite trumpets ever made. Not only did he construct an elaborate long silver trumpet in E-flat with gold-plated ferrules, but he also made the famous pretzel-shaped trumpet for Cesare Bendinelli (see biography) that was later donated by Bendinelli to the Accademia Filharmonica of Verona in 1614. Anton I is buried in the St. Roch's cemetery in Nuremberg. His elaborate E-flat trumpet is now in the Kunsthistorisches Museum in Vienna.

Bibl.: Baines, Anthony. Brass Instruments (Faber & Faber); Raquet, Markus and Klaus Martins. "The Schnitzer Family of Nuremberg and the Newly Discovered Trombone" (Historic Brass Society Journal, June 2007); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions); Tarr, Edward. "Schnitzer" Grove's Dictionary of Musical Instruments (Macmillan).

Scholz, Adolf (b. 1823; d. 1884). Prominent German trumpeter from Breslau. Around 1850, he was one of the first to perform solos on the modern B-flat trumpet. During the next twenty years, he became well known for his performances of Bach works, first on the B-flat trumpet, then on the soprano F flugelhorn. He probably performed under the famous Bach conductor Johann Theodor Mosevius (1788-1858) during the latter's final years. Scholz was the teacher of Hermann Eichborn, a respected trumpeter and musicologist.

Bibl.: Reine Dahlqvist. Bidrag till trumpeten och trumpetspelets historia (Ph.D. dissertation, University of Gothenburg, 1988). Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Scholz, Walter [Günther] (b. Arolsen, north Hesse, Germany, Apr. 15, 1938). German trumpeter and composer. Scholz comes from a musical family, and is known as one of the greatest pop trumpeters in Germany. As a boy, he played for six years in his father's trombone choir, and studied in Cologne with Franz Willy Neugebauer. Already at seventeen years of age he joined the National Theater Orchestra in Detmold. He later became a member of the theater orchestras in Mainz and Darmstadt, and the Munich Philharmonic. In 1962, he became principal trumpet of the Southwest Radio Symphony Orchestra in Baden-Baden where he was often featured as a soloist until 1998. He recorded a solo album with the Original Schwarzwaldmusikanten in 1972, The Devil Tongue, which became a hit and led to numerous television appearances, launching his career as a soloist.

Scholz composed hundreds of solos, and arranged many folk songs for trumpet. Starting in 1984, he released a string of hit singles that made him famous throughout Germany. He received a Grand Prix in 1987 for popular music, followed by numerous awards such as the Herman Löns Medal, Robert Stolz Award, Gold Medal from the Confederation Musicale de France, Gold Medal of Merit from the Blasmusikverband Austria, Federal Cross of Merit from the German government in 1993, and the World Peace Prize in 2008. He has performed for several Catholic popes and the Dalai Lama. The great trumpeter Adolf Scherbaum once said of Scholz, I bow before his skill.

Scholz has released over forty record albums including Die schönsten Trompete, Eine Reise durch die Südsee, Sehnsuchtsmelodien, Traum Melodien, Bolero der Herzen, Brennende Herzen, Das Allerbeste, Il Silenzio, Welthits, and The Golden Trumpet. He has sold over fifteen million records worldwide, and has ten gold and three platinum albums.

Scholz and his wife Silva have been married since 1984, and have a son named Alexander. He also has two sons, Uwe and Roger, and a daughter, Heike, from a previous marriage. Now retired, Scholz and Silva live in Achern, Germany.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Walter Scholz" (http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Walter_Scholz); Walter Scholz's official website: www.walter-scholz.de.

Schoof, Manfred [Gustav Walter] (b. Magdeburg, Germany, Apr. 6, 1936). German trumpeter and flugelhornist. Schoof studied piano and trumpet at the Music Academy in Kassel (1956-58), and at the Music Conservatory in Köln. His career began with Harald Banter (1962), and continued with Joe Haider, Gunter Hampel's quartet (1964-65), Woody Herman (1965), his own combo (1965-68), Alex Schlippenbach's Global Unity Orchestra (1966 into the 1980s), George Russell (1969-71), the Francy Boland-Kenny Clarke big band (1968-72), his own New Jazz Trio (1969-73), Michel Pilz (1974-79), Mal Waldron (1974-80), Albert Mangelsdorf, and George Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band. He was among the first free-jazz performers in Germany. He also played with John Surman (1970), Enrico Rava (1970), Kenny Wheeler, Tomasz Stanko (1970), Dusko Gojkovic (Ljubliana, 1971), Michael Sell's Brass Ensemble (1976), Paul Kuhn (1976), and the Michael Sell Trumpet Workshop (1977).

Schoof led his own big band during the 1980s, and organized the European Jazz Ensemble in 1987. He also toured South America with the German All Stars. His albums include Happening Now! (Hat Art, with George Gruntz), First Prize (Enja, with George Gruntz), Voices (L&R), The Early Quintet (FMP), European Echoes (FMP), Distant Thunder (Enja), Live in Wuppertal (FMP), Hamburg 1974 (FMP), Scales (JAPO), Horizons (JAPO), Resonance (ECM), and Light Lines (JAPO).

Manfred Schoof, who some feel resembles actor Charles Bronson, was involved in the German musical rights association (Union Deutscher Jazzmusiker), becoming chairman in 2007. Since 1990, he has been a professor at the Jazz School in Köln. He is also a fine composer and arranger and has written for many other musicians, including Kurt Edelhagen and Erwin Lehn.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Manfred Schoof" (http://en.wikipedia.org); "Manfred Schoof" (www.answers.com).

Schorge, John (b. c1930). American trumpeter. Schorge grew up in New Hartford, New York, and attended Ithaca College. After graduating, he taught in the public schools of upstate New York for nine years before commencing duties as a professor of trumpet at the Crane School of Music at the State University of New York in Potsdam. He was a member of the Potsdam Brass Quintet (faculty) for many years.

Schorge and Ann Parsons, a viola player, were married in 1950. Their daughter, Diana, married David Mathie, the son of Gordon Mathie, who was the other trumpet professor at SUNY-Potsdam. John and Ann have another daughter, Lori. In 1985, John and Ann retired to Florida where they lived for the next twenty-two years. They moved back to northern New York in 2008. John continues to perform in the Riverside Brass Quintet.

Bibl.: "Mr. and Mrs. John Schorge—60 Years" (Watertown Daily Times, Sept. 4, 2010).

Schreiber, Johann Ludwig (fl. c1715; d. Mar. 1723). German trumpeter. Schreiber was the principal trumpeter at the court in Cöthen while J.S. Bach was there (from Dec. 1717 to April or May 1723). There is speculation that Bach intended his Second Brandenburg Concerto to be performed in 1717 or 1718 by Schreiber, but there is no evidence that this work was ever performed by Bach's orchestra. However, considering that the Six Brandenburg Concertos consisted of six previously composed works by Bach, and that Bach never wrote works without a performance in mind, Schreiber's abilities no doubt influenced Bach's writing of the difficult trumpet part, and one could argue that Schreiber likely performed this work. Nonetheless, the collection was given to the Margrave of Brandenburg in 1721 in exchange for a large commissioning fee.

Bibl.: Smithers, Don L. Music and History of the Baroque Trumpet before 1721 (Syracuse University Press); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Schreiber, Louis (Coblenz, Germany, Jan. 13, 1827; d. Los Angeles, California, Aug. 4, 1910). German cornetist. Little is known about Schreiber's early life, other than that his father played the oboe, that he then learned to play the cornet, violin, and piano, and that he composed (probably in Berlin). Louis toured Europe as part of a small ensemble including the famous singer Adelina Patti, and taught at the Cologne

Conservatory (until 1854). He came to America around the year 1854 with the noted pianist Thalberg and settled in New York City, where he joined the New York Philharmonic Society (1856 to 1865). Schreiber was also principal trumpeter in the Brooklyn Philharmonic Society during the 1864-65 season, and then played principal trumpet (or cornet) with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in 1872-73.

In 1858, Schreiber played three solos with the Fiske Cornet Band conducted by the great cornetist Matthew Arbuckle. In the same year, he established the Schreiber Cornet Manufacturing Company, and began making brass instruments. He had worked with several designers and manufacturers while in Germany, and had always had a knack for improving brass instruments. At first, the company was very successful, and even won a First Prize Medal for entries at the Universal Exposition of Paris in 1867. Schreiber also designed cornets with circular bells pointing somewhat upwards and forward—sometimes referred to as "rain catchers." Schreiber obtained a patent on an improved type of rotary valve, and incorporated this into his instruments. He also patented steel bell mandrels used in the forming of bells. Despite his innovations, the company eventually failed in 1870.

Sometime later, Schreiber became the sole United States sales agent for brass instruments made by the Besson Company of London, which he represented at the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

He was a marvelous cornet soloist and composer during the 1850s, '60s, and '70s. Herbert Clarke once said, If I had been able to study with Louis Schreiber as a young man starting out on the cornet, I would have saved myself much hard work both musically and physically, because Schreiber could have demonstrated to me how easily one can play the cornet, and it took me many years to find this out. Schreiber retired from active playing in 1881 in order to devote all his time to teaching the process of manufacturing brass instruments.

Louis Schreiber's cornet solo compositions and arrangements include *Concertino, Fantasy on Katy Darling by Stephen Foster, Grand Concerto *, Souvenir de Leamington, Song Without Words, Fantasie Capriosa *, Fantasiestück , and Romance by Beethoven (arr. Schreiber) *. [Works with * indicates that they were performed by him with the New York Philharmonic Society orchestra.]

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schrello, Mark (b. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Mar. 29, 1945). American trumpeter. Schrello studied with Anthony L. Pasquarelli, and later attended Carnegie-Mellon University from 1963 to 1968, receiving bachelor of music and music education degrees. He joined the US Marine Band "The President's Own" in Washington, D.C. from 1968 to 1972, and while there earned a master of music degree at Catholic University of America. For the next year, he freelanced in the D.C. area, and played in the house band at the Shoreham Hotel. He spent the summer of 1973 as lead trumpet with the Glenn Miller band.

Schrello's orchestral career began as principal of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra in Israel. In 1978, he was appointed acting principal of the Swedish Radio Orchestra, and became the regular principal in 1980. Since 1985, he has also been teaching at the Royal University of Music in Stockholm. He is an active chamber music and chamber brass performer who appears on numerous recordings.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schubert, Mark (b. c1951). American trumpeter. Schubert graduated with honors from the New England Conservatory of Music in 1973 where he studied with Armando Ghitalla. He has also studied with Roger Voisin and Arnold Jacobs. He attended the Tanglewood Institute during the summers (1974, 1975) and freelanced in Boston, subbing in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston Pops, and the Opera Company of Boston. He held positions in the Boston Ballet Orchestra, Atlantic Wind Ensemble (1974-76), and participated in the Robert Shaw Choral Institute.

Schubert became associate principal trumpet of the Honolulu Symphony Orchestra in 1976, and in the same year was a cofounder of the Honolulu Brass. During the summers, he worked as principal in the Filarmónica de las Américas in México City (1976-82). He has taught at the University of Hawaii (since 1992) and spent several summers during the mid 1990s performing and teaching at the Brevard Music Center in North Carolina. An active soloist and chamber musician, Schubert has been a board member of Chamber Music Hawaii for many years.

Bibl.: "Mark Schubert" (www.hawaii.edu/uhmmusic/faculty/Schubert.htm).

Schubert, Otto (b. Germany, 1881; d. summer 1912). German trumpeter and cornetist. Schubert played in the Allgemeine Musikgesellschaft orchestra in Basel, Switzerland (1899-1901), before immigrating to the United States in 1907 when he became principal trumpet of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra (later called the Chicago Symphony Orchestra), replacing Paul Handke who moved to second trumpet. Schubert played in the orchestra for five years and subsequently performed as cornet soloist with the orchestra at Ravinia Park in Chicago. Concerning one of his performances, a reviewer for The Musical Leader (July 30, 1908) wrote, Otto Schubert, who stands today the peer of any trumpeter now living, offered a "Polka Brilliante" of his own. It is naturally a composition of the order to display his remarkable facility and is immensely difficult. Schubert composed numerous other cornet solos, including Polka Virtuoso, Alpen Klänge, My Darling, and Ein Virtuosenstück. His solos have a higher tessitura than most cornet solos of the day, sometimes reaching high D concert.

Schubert died at the age of thirty-one. The cause of his death is unknown.

Bibl.: Crown, Thomas. "The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Trumpet Section 1902-32." (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2011); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schuh, Hans Peter (b. Pinggau, Austria, Sept. 2, 1956). Austrian trumpeter. Schuh studied at the University of Music and Visual Arts in Graz with Hans Meister, graduating in 1976. He then studied repertoire with Helmut Wobisch at the Vienna Musikhochschule. Schuh joined the Bruckner Orchestra in Linz (1976-78), and became a member of the Vienna State Opera Orchestra and Vienna Philharmonic in 1978; he became principal trumpet in these orchestras in 1993.

Schuh has been a member of the Vienna Trumpet Choir, and is a current member of Ensemble 11, an eleven-piece chamber group that has made numerous recordings and toured the world. He began teaching at the University of Music in Graz as an assistant to Hans Meister in 1981, and became a professor in 1991. He is an active soloist.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schultz, Erik (b. Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, Aug. 29, 1952; d. London, Ontario, Canada, Dec. 1, 2002). Canadian trumpeter. Schultz studied music at Calvin College in Michigan and then at the University of Western Michigan and the University of Calgary in Canada. His teachers included Heinz Zickler, Bruce Rhoten, and György Geiger. He played at various times in Canadian orchestras including the Calgary Philharmonic, Hamilton Philharmonic (guest principal trumpet in 1982), London (Canada) Orchestra (principal, 1985-86), Windsor Symphony Orchestra, Mozart Festival Orchestra, and the Toronto Pops Orchestra. He also performed with several chamber groups such as the Canadian Chamber Ensemble, Gabrieli Brass, Toronto Virtuoso Ensemble, and the International Brass Soloists. He was professor of trumpet at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ontario.

Schultz was best known for his solo recitals and recordings for the labels Cantabile, ESP, Arte Nova, EBS Records (Germany), IBS Records (Canada), and MTG (Norway). Among his recordings are eight Baroque albums for trumpet and organ. He was a specialist on the piccolo trumpet, and taught at the University of Western Ontario. Schultz died at the age of fifty after a long battle with cancer.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Erik Schultz (1952-2002)" (News Item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2003); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schulz, Robert ("Bob") (b. Wonewoc, Wisconsin, July 1, 1938). American cornetist and singer. Schultz comes from a musical family and grew up in the tiny town of Wonewac, Wisconsin. He began playing the cornet in elementary school and participated in his high school band and chorus. He was also an avid athlete in all sports. He attended the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse, studying music among other things, and was on the university track team. He became an elementary music teacher in Reeseville, Wisconsin (1961-62), before enlisting in the Army National Guard 32nd Division Band stationed in Ft. Lewis, Washington. While in the service, he cofounded the Riverboat Ramblers, a Dixieland band he would play with for eighteen years. He returned to Wisconsin and became a junior high band director in Lake Mills, Wisconsin (1968-72), and high school band director in Lake Mills (1972-79). Schulz earned a master of music degree at the University of Wisconsin-Madison by attending summer school for several years.

While performing at the St. Louis Ragtime Festival in 1979, Schulz was hired by Turk Murphy to replace George Rock. Schulz moved to San Francisco where he played with Murphy until Turk's death in 1987. He then played with numerous groups, including the Delta Jazz Band, Golden Gate Rhythm Machine, Jimmy Diamond's Nob Hill Gang, the San Francisco Starlight Orchestra (from c1985 and still active in 2010), Jelly Roll Jazz Band, Royal Society Jazz Orchestra, Minstrels of Annie Street, Frisco Syncopators, Down Home Jazz Band, and his own ensembles. Schulz patterned his cornet playing after Bob Scobey, and his singing style after that of Clancy Haynes.

Among Schulz's more than thirty albums are Bob Schulz and His Frisco Jazz Band (Jazzology), Thanks Turk! (Stomp Off), Travelin' Shoes (Stomp Off), Concert in the Park (Merry Makers, with Turk Murphy), Hambone Kelly's Favorites (Stomp Off), Yerba Buena Style (Stomp Off), San Francisco Jazz (Merry Makers, with Turk Murphy), Jazz@Filoli Live! (B.S. Miracle), Oh! Play That Thing (Jazzology), Remembering Clancy (Stomp Off), Live at the Temple (Little L.A.), and Together Again! (GHB). He was voted the number one cornetist in the Mississippi Rag polls from 1990 to 2000, and was also voted the number three singer in the same polls. Bob Schulz has performed throughout the world at various traditional jazz festivals.

After having been married to his first wife for fifteen years, Schulz married his second wife, Linda Jensen. They have two daughters, Lisa and Penny, and two sons, Tim and Chance. Bob's hobbies include pets and model trains.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bob Schulz" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Bob Schulz's official website: www.bobschulzjamm.com.

Schuster, Anton ("Tony") (b. Munich, Germany, Nov. 22, 1936). German trumpeter, pianist, and composer. As a boy, Schuster learned to play the piano and organ, and began studying composition. At age fourteen, he also began playing the trumpet, and played piano and trumpet with local big band jazz groups. In 1953, he toured Europe with Bernard Etté's band, and from 1954 to 1957 was a member of the Walter Kern Combo. He also played with the Fritz Becker orchestra in 1958, remaining until 1970.

Schuster learned some advanced breathing techniques from the American trumpeter, Joe Newman, who was touring Europe with the Count Basie Orchestra. Schuster then played in the bands of Max Greger, Hazy Osterwald, Kai Warner, Peter Grützner, and the ARD All-Stars. From 1969 to 1981, he was a member of the large radio dance orchestra in Saarbrücken, and did a great deal of studio work for film soundtracks. He also played in the shows Café Oriental starring Bill Ramsey, Musik geht rund with Connie Francis, and Der goldene Schuß with Lou van Burg.

Schuster settled in Luxembourg in 1964, and in the following year was the featured trumpet soloist with the famed Luxembourg Singers. He toured Europe with various shows until 1978, and in 1969 joined the classical ensemble, Quatuor de Trompettes Luxembourgeois. He composed for film and theater, was a professor at the music conservatory in Esch/Alzette from 1974 to 1997, and led the Esch/Alzette Big Band. From 2001 to 2002, he performed in a trio with Sascha Ley and Claude Mangen that performed cabaret shows.

Schuster has received numerous awards, among them the Chevalier de l'Ordre de Mérite du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg (1984), a diploma from the Union Grand-Duc Adolphe (1989), the Gold Medal from the Luxembourg Music Society (1989), and was promoted by Grand Duke Henri to Chevalier de l'Ordre Grand-Ducal de la Couronne de Chêne in 2003.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Schutza, Gary ("Chip") (b. c1960). American trumpeter. Schutza received his bachelor of arts degree from Southern Methodist University, and a performer's certificate and master of arts degree from the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia where he studied with Frank Kaderabek. Schutza began his orchestral career as acting principal trumpet of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra, replacing Steven Erickson who was on a sabbatical leave (1981-82). In the fall of 1982, Schutza became principal of the Kansas City Symphony, a position he still holds, as well as being a member of the Kansas City Brass. He has taught at Baker University in Indianapolis, and is also a composer and arranger.

Bibl.: "Chip Schutza" (www.butleru.edu/extrernal/departments/music/faculty_bios/schutza.html).

Schwartz, Richard Isadore (b. St. Louis, Missouri, Mar. 11, 1951). American clarinetist, composer, and author. Schwartz grew up in St. Louis. He began playing the piano at age eight, and the clarinet a year later. After graduating from University City High School in 1969, he earned a bachelor of music education degree at the University of Michigan in 1973. He returned to St. Louis where he attended Washington University, earning a master's degree in clarinet in 1975, and a PhD in music theory in 1982. He played clarinet with the Saint Louis Philharmonic and other area bands and orchestras. Schwartz joined the music faculty at Virginia State University in Petersburg in 1976, and is now head of the theory division and teaches clarinet, saxophone, woodwind classes, and conducting. He is also a published composer through Warwick Music.

In recent years, Schwartz has become passionate about the cornet. He plays cornet in the Richmond Brass Consort, Richard Bland College Community Wind Ensemble, and on historical cornets in the Appomattox Brass Band. He has authored The Cornet Compendium and Supplement to the Cornet Compendium (both self-published), which are excellent sources of information on historical cornetists and cornet makers. He and Iris Joy Schankman were married in 1976, and have jointly published Bands at the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904, a 457-page text (self-published).

Bibl.: Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); "Richard Isadore Schwartz" (www.vsu.edu/pages/1448.asp).

Schwarz, Gerard ("Gerry") [Ralph] (b. Weekawken, New Jersey, Aug. 19, 1947). American trumpeter and conductor. Schwarz began taking trumpet lessons at the age of eight, and attended the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan, during the summers of 1958, 1959, and 1960 before attending the New York High School of the Arts. He studied with William Vacchiano from 1962 through 1968, and continued studying with Vacchiano at The Juilliard School where he received his bachelor of science degree in 1972. While in school, Schwarz was a member of the American Brass Quintet from 1965 to 1975, and the American Symphony Orchestra from 1966 to 1972.

As a member of the Lincoln Center Chamber Players, Schwarz played in a great many contemporary music performances while attending Juilliard, many of which were conducted by composer/conductor Pierre Boulez. He premiered works by Henry Brant, Willie Hellermann, and many others. He also played with the Aspen Music Festival Orchestra. When Vacchiano retired from the principal chair of the New York Philharmonic, Boulez invited Schwarz to audition for the position. Subsequently, Schwarz became coprincipal trumpet of the New York Philharmonic (with John Ware as the other coprincipal) from 1972 to 1975. During those years, Schwarz founded the New York Trumpet Ensemble, and was a pioneer of a short cornet revival period. He recorded several solo albums, including Cornet Favorites, which won a Grammy Award (Nonesuch), Turn-of-the-Century Cornet Favorites (Nonesuch), Cousins (Nonesuch), The New Trumpet (Nonesuch), Gerard Schwarz Plays New Music for Trumpet (Desto), A Baroque Trumpet Festival (Nonesuch), Haydn Concertos (Turnaround), Gerard Schwarz (Music Minus One), and A Festival of Trumpets with the New York Trumpet Ensemble (Nonesuch). He also took part in a recording with Ornette Coleman.

Schwarz presented recitals at the 1971 and 1972 National Trumpet Symposiums in Denver, Colorado. He taught at Juilliard from 1972 to 1975; some of his more prominent students include Stephens Burns, Edward Carroll, Chris Gekker, Stephen Jones, Barbara Butler, and Ralph Dudgeon. He was also a member of the Casals Festival Orchestra, and continued to play in the Aspen Festival Orchestra. He was the first wind player to receive a Ford Foundation Award that granted him funds to commission numerous works for trumpet including a concerto by Gunther Schuller.

Schwarz gave up playing the trumpet after leaving the New York Philharmonic in 1975 in order to pursue a career as a conductor. Although his conducting debut was in 1966, his conducting career exploded in 1975. By 1976, he was appointed director of the Erick Hawkins Dance Company, Waterloo Music Festival, Eliot Feld Dance Company, and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. In 1977, he and Omus Hirshbein cofounded the 92nd Street Y Chamber Orchestra (later renamed the New York Chamber Orchestra) and Schwarz was named its conductor.

Schwarz established the Music Today series of contemporary music concerts in 1981, remaining its director until 1989. In the following year, he guest conducted the Washington Opera at the Kennedy Center, and presented concerts with the Seattle Symphony, San Francisco Opera, Juilliard Opera Theatre, and the Kirov Opera in St. Petersburg, Russia. He was also appointed director of the Mostly Mozart Festival in 1982. He was named Artistic Advisor to the Seattle Symphony in 1983, and became its Music Director in 1984.

From 1994 to 1997, Schwarz was the Artistic Advisor to the Tokyo Bunkamura's Orchard Hall. He was selected as the "Conductor of the Year" by Musical America magazine, the first American conductor to receive this honor. He has recorded over one hundred CDs with the Seattle Symphony, plus hundreds more with orchestras such as the Philadelphia Orchestra, London Symphony Orchestra, Scottish Chamber Orchestra, English Chamber Orchestra, Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra, New York Chamber Symphony, Czech Philharmonic, Tokyo Philharmonic, Berlin Radio Orchestra, Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. In addition, from 2001 to 2006 he was the music director of the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra, and is the current musical director of the Eastern Music Festival. He has received thirteen Grammy Award nominations and three Emmy Award nominations (winning two). He was awarded the Ditson Conductor's Award from Columbia University, an Honorary Doctorate in Music from The Juilliard School, and honorary degrees from Fairleigh Dickinson University, the University of Puget Sound, and Seattle University. Other awards include six ASCAP awards including the IMPACT Lifetime Achievement Award.

Bibl.: "Gerard Schwarz" (www.bach-cantatas.com; "Gerard Schwarz" (www.americancomposers.org); "Gerard Schwarz" (www.naxos.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Schwebel, Heinz Karl (b. Brazil, c1972). Brazilian trumpeter. Schwebel began his trumpet studies at age nine under the direction of his father Horst, a trumpet professor. He completed a degree in music in 1993 (with his father) at the Federal University in Bahia, and in 1990 studied for a while at the Hochschule für Musik in Karlsruhe with professors Adolf Weresch and Reinhold Friedrich. In 1994, with scholarships from two Brazilian sources, he enrolled at the New England Conservatory where he studied with Charles Schlueter, earning a master of music degree in 1996 (with High Distinction), and winning the annual concerto competition and Honors Brass Competition.

Schwebel became principal trumpet of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Zubin Mehta in 1997, but again with scholarship returned to Boston in 1998 to begin studying with Schlueter toward a DMA in trumpet, which he completed in May of 2000. In the U.S., he had opportunities to perform orchestral music under several distinguished conductors, and make several concerto appearances. He returned to Brazil in 2001 where he gave the South American premiere of Eric Ewazen's Concerto for Trumpet and Strings (2001), and in 2006 gave the world premiere of Concerto for Trumpet by José Guerra Vicente. In October 2006, the Charles Schlueter Foundation supported his trip to Boston to premiere Symphonic Memories by Ewazen, with the composer at the piano.

Schwebel is the trumpet professor and director of the School of Music at the Federal University of Bahia, and is principal trumpet of the Bahia Symphony Orchestra. He is a guest clinician at many music schools in his country, and has released a CD (in 2003) titled Polychrome: Modern Music for Trumpet, becoming Brazil's first trumpeter to record several significant contemporary works for the instrument.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Heinz Karl Schwebel" (www.festival.musica.ufcg.edu.br/eng/listaProfessores.html); "Heinz Karl Schwebel – Trompete" (http://heik02.multiply.com).

Scimonelli, Frank J. (b. Winsted, Connecticut, Oct. 29, 1912; d. District Heights, Maryland, Nov. 18, 1996). American trumpeter and cornetist. Scimonelli played in the College Band in Winsted, then in the Hartford City Band, and won many competitions from 1934 to 1940. He attended the Ernest Williams School of Music, graduating in 1940. As one of Williams's prize students, Scimonelli won a position as solo cornetist with the United States Navy Band in Washington, D.C. He held this position until he retired from the military in 1966.

While in the service, Scimonelli studied with Sigmund Hering of the Philadelphia Orchestra and Lloyd Geisler of the National Symphony Orchestra. He earned bachelor and master of music education degrees from Catholic University of America in 1950 and 1954, respectively, and a PhD in upper educational administration from the same institution. He was an active soloist throughout New England and Eastern Canada, and was noted for his skilled solo playing on the straight posthorn in A. Scimonelli was featured with the Goldman Band and taught at the Catholic University of America (Washington, D.C.). He received a citation from the State of Maryland for his outstanding contributions to music in the schools. School Musician magazine named him as a person who made a lasting impact on school music programs.

Scimonelli was featured annually at the Sudetendeutschland Musiktag in Germany. His compositions were published by the Hal Leonard Corporation. He was on the board of directors of the Streitwieser Trumpet Museum in Pennsylvania, and his posthorn is now in the Streitwieser collection in Austria. Before dying of a heart attack at the age of eighty-four, Frank Scimonelli served as chair and professor of the department of music at Prince George's Community College in Largo, Maryland. He is responsible for establishing the music curriculum there.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); "Frank Scimonelli, 1918 [sic] - 1996" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1997); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2010).

Scobey, Robert ("Bob") Alexander Jr. (b. Tucumcari, New Mexico, Dec. 9, 1916; d. Montreal, Quebec, Canada, June 12, 1963). American trumpeter. Scobey took up the cornet at age nine while being brought up in Stockton, California. He switched to trumpet at the age of fourteen and played in various dance bands during the second half of the 1930s. He became second trumpet in Lu Watters's Yerba Buena Jazz Band (1938-42) and then joined the Army, playing in a band. After his service, he rejoined Watters from 1946 to 1949.

In 1949 Bob Scobey formed and led the Frisco Jazz Band, a seven-member Dixieland group. The group recorded for Good Time Jazz, Verve, and Victor, and appeared on the Rusty Drufel Show on television in 1952. On the side, he recorded with Sidney Bechet (1953) and Bing Crosby (1957). His band performed at the biggest ballrooms in the Bay area, and he became a key person in the San Francisco revival of traditional jazz on the West Coast.

Scobey moved to Chicago in 1959 and opened his Club Bourbon Street. He also worked in Las Vegas and New York. During the prime of his career, he was stricken with cancer and died at the age of forty-six. His wife, Jan Scobey, wrote a book on his life titled He Rambled! 'Til Cancer Cut Him Down (Hal Publishing, 1976). She also oversaw the reissuing of his recordings on CDs, including Bob Scobey, Vols. 1 & 2 (Jazzology), The Scobey Story, Vols. 1 and 2 (Good Time Jazz), Bob Scobey's Frisco Band (Good Time Jazz), Scobey and Clancy (Good Time Jazz), and Frisco Band Favorites (Good Time Jazz). Scobey can be seen in the film, Living Venus (1961).

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Bob Scobey" (http://en.wikipedia.); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Scodwell, Tony (b. Beloit, Washington, Dec. 10, 1942). American trumpeter and instrument maker. Scodwell began playing trumpet at age twelve; his first teachers were Clyde Bachand and Arnold Jacobs. After he graduated from Beloit Memorial High School in 1961, Downbeat magazine provided him with a full scholarship to attend the Berklee School of Music in Boston where he studied with Ray Kotwica. He left school after just one year to join the Stan Kenton Orchestra in the fall of 1962 as lead mellophone and jazz soloist, and a year later, toured Europe with the Tommy Dorsey band under Sam Donahue. He also spent a short time with the Jimmy Dorsey band.

Scodwell moved to Las Vegas in 1964 to play with the Harry James Orchestra (1964-65). After a year and a half, he returned to the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, but rejoined the James organization when the Dorsey group disbanded. In 1966, he lived in Germany where he played with the Kurt Edelhagen-Cologne Television and Radio Band, but within a year moved back to Las Vegas to assume the lead trumpet position with the Buddy Rich Band. From late 1966 to 1968, Scodwell worked in Reno, Nevada, at Harrah's Club. He then toured with Harry James out of Las Vegas from 1968 to 1970. In 1970, he lived in Germany again, this time as lead trumpet with the Max Greger band. Later that year, he returned to Las Vegas and joined the Johnny Haig Relief Orchestra for six years at Caesar's Palace. He also became the orchestra contractor for the Frontier Hotel.

During his long and distinguished career, Scodwell has performed with many celebrities including Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, Elvis Presley, Sammy Davis Jr., Doc Severinsen, Roy Clark, Maynard Ferguson, Diana Ross, Stan Kenton, Ann-Margret, Tom Jones, Shirley Bassey, and Anthony Newley. He also made many recordings with Harry James and Buddy Rich. Today, he fronts his own Tony Scodwell Big Band. For many years, he was first trumpet and road manager for Doc Severinsen.

Scodwell began designing and building his own brand of trumpets in 1988, SCODWELL USA, a business that produces high quality instruments for many professional players. He and his wife, Mary Walter Scodwell, are professional photographers who specialize in portraits, interiors and exteriors, and catalogs. They live in Las Vegas where Tony's hobbies include restoring vintage sports cars (several Alfa Romeos, one Ferrari, and one Maserati) and winemaking.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Tony Scodwell" (www.warburton-usa.com/index.php/customer-endorsements/257-tony-scodwell); Frink, Jerry. "Reason to toot his own horn" (Las Vegas Sun, Apr. 30, 2009); "Tony Scodwell" (www.middlehornleader.com/Scodwell%20Interview.htm); personal interview, Aug. 1, 2011.

Scott, Betty Joanne [Joann] (b. Detroit, Michigan, Feb. 9, 1937). American trumpeter. Scott grew up in Columbus Grove, Ohio, until she was around twelve years old. She and her family then moved to Archbold, Ohio, where she began playing cornet, taking lessons from her band directors, Don Parlette and Frank Menichetti. Her early idols were Harry James and Rafael Méndez. She attended the University of Michigan, studying with Clifford Lillya for two years (1955-57), but transferred to the University of Arizona (1957-60) in Tucson where she studied with cornet soloist Frank Simon. Although she had no official title, she served as Simon's teaching assistant, teaching all of the trumpet students when he was away. She graduated cum laude in trumpet performance, with minors in botany and Southwestern history.

In 1960, Scott moved to Tallahassee, Florida, for graduate work at Florida State University. She worked on and off, eventually completing a master of music in trumpet studying with Robert Braunagel, and a PhD in humanities in 1974. She minored in art history, anthropology, music history, and photography. (!) During her graduate years, she studied trumpet with William Vacchiano in New York, was a graduate assistant to John F. Spratt in music history, was a lab assistant in the photography department, and taught brass at Valdosta State College in Valdosta, Georgia. She assumed a fulltime trumpet professorship at the University of Missouri-Columbia in 1975, a position she distinguished herself in until retiring in 2001.

Scott taught during eight summers at The Classical Music Seminar in Eisenstadt, Austria. She has also taught at the Brevard Music Center in North Carolina, Florida State University's Summer Music Camp, the Missouri Scholars Academy, the Columbia (Missouri) Adult Education Program, and at various brass conferences including those of the Women's Brass Conference and the International Trumpet Guild.

As a performer, Scott has performed with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra (extra/substitute), The Classical Music Seminar in Eisenstadt, Austria (principal), University of Missouri Faculty Brass Quintet, and the Clarion Brass Quintet. She has been a featured performer at numerous international brass conferences, and has been conductor of the MU Brass Choir, MU Trumpet Ensemble, Old Pueblo Brass Band, and the Southern Arizona Symphony Orchestra. She has presented lectures and workshops at leading music and hypnotherapy conventions, universities, and colleges throughout America.

Scott has training and certification in many forms of alternate healing modalities including hypnotherapy, neuro-linguistic programming, emotional freedom technique, spiritual response therapy, quantum-touch, therapeutic touch, pranic healing, and crystal healing. She is a spiritual counselor certified by Doreen Virtue and Huna. In addition, she has taught classes for The American Board of Hypnotherapy and The National Guild of Hypnotists.

Scott has received numerous awards and honors, including the University of Missouri Alumni Teaching Award, Alumnae Anniversary Award for Outstanding Teaching, Honors Professor of the Year, and Honors Faculty Mentor (seven times). She also belonged to The Friends of Photography, founded by Ansel Adams (with whom she studied for one summer in Asilomar, California). Her photography has been featured on University of Missouri posters, record album covers, and books.

Scott currently resides in Tucson, Arizona, where she is an active trumpeter, conductor, and author. Her hobbies include reading, traveling, hiking, movies, and continuing her work as a musician and lecturer on a huge range of subjects.

Bibl. Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Blackmore, Lisa. "The Road Not Taken: The Personal Journey of Betty Scott" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2004); personal interview, Dec. 5, 2010.

Scott, Christian (b. New Orleans, Louisiana, Mar. 31, 1983). American trumpeter. Jazz trumpeter Christian Scott began playing the trumpet around the age of eleven or twelve. He comes from a musical family and is related to the trombone pioneer Jean-Baptiste Delisle (1868-1946). His mother, the sister of jazz saxophone player Donald Harrison Jr., taught him the basics of music. He also studied under Jonathan Bloom. Christian excelled at a rapid rate and was accepted into the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, the same high school that produced jazz trumpeters such as Wynton Marsalis, Terence Blanchard, Nicholas Payton, Irving Mayfield, and Larry Jones. There, Christian studied trumpet with Clyde Kerr Jr., and jazz with Kent Jordan. He also took several lessons on the side with Ron Benko. After graduating, Christian won a full scholarship to study with Charles Lewis at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, earning bachelor and master of music degrees.

Scott's professional career has skyrocketed. He played with his uncle Donald Harrison Jr. (from 1997), Marlon Jordan (2001), McCoy Tyner, and Prince (in Las Vegas). Scott's first solo album (on the Concord label) was Anthem. It was named one of Billboard's "Top 15 Jazz Albums," and was nominated for a Grammy Award. Over the next several years, other albums followed including Live at Newport, A New Generation Goes Back to Cool, Rewind, and his most recent Yesterday You Said Tomorrow (all on Concord). He has also recorded with David Benoit, Erin Boheme, Nnenna Freelon, Global Noize, Donald Harrison Jr. (2002), Ledisi, Prince (Planet Heart), Karin Williams, and X-Clan. Scott's unique "whisper technique" of playing, a dolce style meant to mimic his mother's light singing voice, has become a trademark of his playing. Billboard magazine named him as one of the "Top Ten to Watch in 2006."

An unselfish fundraiser and community supporter, Scott has appeared in the films Leatherheads, Rachel Getting Married, and The Roe Effect. His television credits include Travis Smiley and Late Night with Jimmy Fallon. He continues to lead the Christian Scott Quintet.

Bibl.: Erdmann, Thomas. "Finding His Own Way Through Hard Work: An Interview with Christian Scott" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2010); Christian Scott's official website (www.christianscott.net); "Christian Scott" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Scott, David (b. c1961). American trumpeter and conductor. Scott earned his bachelor of music degree at the University of Iowa in 1982, studying with John Beer. He began freelancing in the Los Angeles area in 1983 and has performed with the Glenn Miller Orchestra, Redlands Symphony Orchestra (principal), Riverside County Philharmonic (principal), and the San Bernardino Symphony. In 1986, he was selected to participate in the Los Angeles Philharmonic's Institute orchestra. He formed Desert Winds Brass, as well as a brass quintet called Brazzmatazz, which was featured in 1986-92 at Disneyland under the name, Fantasyland Brass. He has performed and recorded with the Civil War styled band, the Americus Brass Band, and the Golden Gate Symphony. He has also recorded several film soundtracks, including Hildago, Geronimo, Son of the Morning Star, Glory, and The Alamo, as well as the CBS Television series, Dr. Quinn Medicine Woman. He is currently associate principal of the New West Symphony.

Scott has taught at the University of the Redlands since 1998. In addition to teaching trumpet, he leads the studio big band and conducts the concert band. Prior to teaching at the University of the Redlands, he taught at Utah State University as assistant director of bands.

Scott and his wife Janis have four children: Chuck, Greg, Gina, and Jacob. His hobbies include boating, home improvement, and cooking.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "David Scott" (www.redlands.edu/academics/school-of-music/2538.aspx).

Scott, David ("Dave") R. (b. Louisville, Kentucky, Dec. 9, 1957). American trumpeter. Scott grew up in Jeffersontown, Kentucky, near Louisville. He began playing the trumpet at age eight; his first teachers were James Depth, Russell Plylar, Leon Rapier, and Del Hoon. After graduating from Seneca High School in 1976, Scott earned a bachelor of music education degree, studying with Robert Grocock at DePauw University in Greencastle, Indiana (1976-80), and attended the University of Washington in Seattle for a year (1980-81) where he studied with Roy Cummings and Manny Laureano. He then earned a master of music degree at the University of Louisville, studying with Leon Rapier (1983-85), and worked on a doctorate in music at the University of Texas in Austin with Raymond Crisara (1989-90). Additionally, he studied with Roger Voisin at the Tanglewood Institute.

Scott's performing experience includes the Spokane Symphony Orchestra (1982-83), Louisville Orchestra (1983-85), Kentucky Bach Society (1983-85), San Angelo Symphony Orchestra (1988-89), Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1985-88), Palm Beach Opera Orchestra (1994-95), the Rapides, Acadiana, Symphony of Southeast Texas, and Lake Charles Symphony Orchestra (since 1990). He has taught at the University of Idaho (1981-82), Kentucky State University (1984-85), and is now on the faculty of McNeese State University in Lake Charles, Louisiana (since 1990). He has also taught at the Lutheran Summer Music Academy and the Sewanee Summer Music Festival. He is a founding member of the chamber quartet, Pastiche, which has toured and recorded for the Innova and Centaur labels.

Scott and Jan F. Scott, a clarinet and double reed professor at McNeese State University, have been married since 1985, and have a daughter Robin (b. 1987), an oboist and budget analyst. His hobbies include travelling, hiking, and reading.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "David Scott" (www.mcneese.edu/performingarts); personal interview, Mar. 19, 2011.

Scott, Marshall L. (b. Elkins, West Virginia, June 19, 1959). American trumpeter. Scott began playing trumpet at age nine, studying early on with his band director Jack Basil and with Roger Sherman. He attended Ohio University (1977-81), studying with Ernest Bastin and receiving a bachelor of music education degree. He then became a graduate assistant at the University of Notre Dame (1981-83) and received lessons from Vincent Cichowicz at Northwestern University. He studied for a doctorate with John Aley at the University of Wisconsin in Madison (1984-86).

Scott began his career by teaching at the University of South Dakota (1986-90), and became professor of trumpet and director of jazz band at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green in 1990; he taught at the Interlochen Arts Camp for fourteen summers. He has performed with the Bowling Green Western Symphony, Sioux City Symphony, Wisconsin Brass Quintet, Canadian Brass, Dallas Brass, Kentuckiana Brass and Percussion, and Bowling Green Chamber Orchestra. He has backed artists such as Bob Hope, Red Skelton, Hal Linden, Aretha Franklin, Rosemary Clooney, the Four Tops, the Temptations, Natalie Cole, Steve Lipia, Burnadette Peters, and the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra. Scott can be heard on recordings with the Kentuckiana Brass, Louisville Trumpet and Brass Ensembles, the JMS Jazz Duo with guitarist John Martin, and performing his own compositions on the CD, The Marshall Scott Jazz Quintet. He is a current member of the WKU Faculty Brass Quintet, WKU Faculty Jazz Quintet, Lost River Cave Big Band, Martin/Scott JMS Jazz Duo, and the Doc Livingston Orchestra.

Scott and his wife Karen, an elementary school teacher, have three children: Lauren (b. 1985), Tyler (b. 1991), and Hannah (b. 1996). His hobbies include motorcycle riding.

Bibl.: "Marshall Scott" (www.wku.edu/Dept/Academic/AHSS/Music/facultyDetails.php?fac=62); personal interview, July 9, 2011.

Secrest, Andy (b. Muncie, Indiana, Aug. 2, 1907; d. Los Angeles, California, 1977). American cornetist and trumpeter. Secrest grew up in Indiana and played the cornet. His first musical experiences were with Freda Sanker's orchestra in Cincinnati, as well as with Ted Weems, Ray Miller, and Jean Goldkette (1927-28). His recording debut was with Hoagy Carmichael and His Pals on October 25, 1927.

Bandleader Paul Whiteman became impressed through various recordings with Secrest's playing. He was struck by how closely Secrest's playing style and sound resembled that of the famous Bix Beiderbecke. When alcoholism caused a mental breakdown for Beiderbecke in 1929, Whiteman contacted Secrest and offered him a temporary job as replacement. Secrest filled in perfectly. When Bix returned to the band, Whiteman kept Secrest on, and the two cornetists soon shared solo responsibilities. As Beiderbecke's playing ability diminished, Secrest was given more and more solo work, making it difficult for record collectors to know which soloist is playing at any given time.

About a year after Beiderbecke died, the twenty-five-year-old Secrest left Whiteman's orchestra. He played with Ted Weems from 1933 to 1934 and then moved to Hollywood, where he became a member of Victor Young's studio orchestra. Secrest continued in the studios for the next twenty years or so, occasionally playing jazz in Ben Pollack's Orchestra (1938) and Dixieland music at numerous jazz festivals and on obscure recordings. But, during the late 1950s he chose to give up music for good, making his living as a real estate agent. He died in 1977 having been out of music for nearly twenty years.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Greats (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Šedivý, Zdeněk (b. Prague, Czech Republic, Dec. 21, 1956). Czech trumpeter. Along with his trumpet playing twin brother Jiři, Zdeněk studied at the Prague Conservatory from 1972 to 1977 with Josef Svejkovsky. Zdeněk then enrolled at the Royal Academy of Music from 1977 to 1982 to study with Václav Junek. While in school, he played in a professional studio orchestra from 1975 to 1977, and from 1977 to 1985 was a member of the Prague Radio Orchestra. He won prizes at the Prague International Trumpet Competition in 1975, in the Music Festival "Prague Spring" in 1978.

A highly versatile performer, Šedivý is active in professional big bands as a lead trumpeter and jazz artist, and has been principal trumpet of the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra since 1985. (His brother is second trumpet.) He is also a member of the Prague Brass Soloists and the Prague Brass. In addition, he has played in the jazz and entertainment orchestras of Ernst Mosch, Ferdinand Havlik, and Milan Svoboda. His CDs include Trumpet Recital, Baroque Music for Two Trumpets (with Jiři, on the Rosa Classics label), and Sonatas and Concertos for Trumpet and Orchestra (Panton). He has been a professor at the Prague Academy of Music since 2000.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Lower photo: Jiři and Zdeněk Šedivý.

Seegers, Karl Ludwig Heinrich (b. Suttorf [near Hannover], Germany, Dec. 23, 1897; d. Hannover, Germany, summer 1977). German trumpeter. Seegers studied at a music school in Barsinghausen (near Hannover), and in 1918 joined the military where he played oboe in a military band. After World War I ended, he played trumpet in an opera theatre in Hannover. In 1920, he rejoined military service, at the same time studying in Hannover with Ludwig Teubig.

In August of 1929, Seegers became the first trumpet in the Magdeburg City Theatre, and from 1934 to 1937 was the first trumpet in a theater orchestra in Dessau. On April 1, 1937 he was appointed principal trumpet of the Leipzig Gewandhausorchester, replacing Franz Herbst, and from 1957 to July 31, 1963 played either second or third trumpet in that orchestra. He also taught at a music school in Naundorf near Leipzig.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott).

Segal, Jeffrey (b. Wollongong, Australia, June 22, 1969). Australian trumpeter. Segal began playing the trumpet at age fifteen. His first teacher was Daniel Mendelow. In 1990, Segal studied in Europe with Edward H. Tarr and Håkan Hardenberger. His first engagement was for the 1990-91 season in the Hof Orchestra, Germany. From 1991 to 1996, he was principal trumpet of the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra of Lausanne, and from 1996 until 2002 was principal of the Zurich Tonhalle Orchester. When he left the orchestra, he returned to Australia, where he is now a doctor of Chinese medicine (!). His title is Sifu Jeffrey Segal, and his specialties, which he teaches, are Shaolin Cosmos Qigong and Wahnam Taijiquan.

Segal was an active soloist on modern and Baroque (valveless) trumpets, and toured several countries. He released the CDs Baroque Trumpet and Baroque Trumpet Concertos on the Naxos label, as well as N. Moret's Concerto pour trompette (2003, Chamber Orchestra Lausanne), and concertos by Hummel and Haydn (Zurich Tonhalle Orchester Zurich directed by David Zinman) on the Arte Nova label.

Segal is married and has three children.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Jeffrey Segal" (www.naxos.com/person/Jeffrey_Segal/1655.htm).

Segers, Guido (b. Bree, Belgium, Oct. 3, 1963). Belgian trumpeter. In 1982, Segers attended the Royal Conservatory of Music in Brussels and Liège before studying one year with Pierre Thibaud at the Paris

Conservatory (1984-85). Thereafter, he immediately became, concurrently, principal trumpet of the National Orchestra of Brussels (1985-93) and an instructor at conservatories in Brussels (1985-93) and later Maastricht (1989-94).

Segers was appointed principal trumpet of the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra in 1994. He is a member of the Munich Philharmonic brass ensemble that performs worldwide each year, and a founding member of the Munich Philharmonic Brass Quintet and Trio Con Brio. Since 1996, he has served as a guest professor of trumpet and chamber music at the Academy of Music in Antwerp, and since 2000 has cochaired the annual International Auditions Academy in Munich, a training program for young professional musicians.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Guido Segers's website (www.guidosegers.de); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Seifert, Eduard [Friedrich] (b. Leipzig, Germany, Dec. 29, 1870; d. Dresden, Germany, Jan. 21, 1965). German trumpeter. Seifert studied with Christian Ferdinand Weinschenk in Leipzig (1887-89 and 1893-94) before becoming principal trumpet of the Cologne Theater Orchestra (1894-95). He was principal trumpet of the Dresden Royal Orchestra (now the Dresden Staatskapelle) from 1895 to 1935. He was a close friend of composer Richard Strauss, and Strauss composed many of his trumpet parts for Seifert, which were premiered with the composer conducting.

Seifert was known for his exquisite playing and amazing accuracy, leading to his being given the nickname "The Infallible." He performed the Dresden premiere of the opera The Trumpeter of Säckingen on October 15, 1897 as well as the 206th performance on October 22, 1918. (The world premiere had taken place on May 4, 1884 in Leipzig.) He is also known for his 1909 performance of the Haydn Concerto in E-flat in Dresden. (The concerto had been rediscovered and performed in 1908 by Franz Rossbach in Vienna.) Of Seifert's performance, a critic of the Mozart Society wrote, The artist played with a sound that was round and sweet, and his virtuoso élan was more reminiscent of the E-flat cornet than a trumpet...Mr. "Kammervirtuos" E. Seifert, one of the best wind players in the royal orchestra, has given a masterly performance of it. He played the concerto...on a long F trumpet. [In actual fact it was a high F trumpet.] *His brilliant technique, his impeccable intonation and his beautiful and warm sound (especially in the "Cantilena") won him the well-deserved acclamation of the audience*.

Seifert also premiered (in 1938) Oskar Geier's Concerto for Trumpet, op. 18 that was dedicated to him. As a teacher, he radiated a strong natural authority, and his relationships with students were characterized by a candid friendship. Seifert's instruments and music library were willed to his last student, Hans-Joachim Krumpfer, who donated the music and sold the trumpets to the Trumpet Museum of Bad Säckingen. Seifert died at the age of ninety-five.

Bibl.: Krumpfer, Hans-Joachim. "1796-1908: The Long Sleep of the Haydn Concerto" (Brass Bulletin No. 75, Mar. 1991); "Franz Joseph Haydn" (O.J.'s Trumpet Page: http://abel.hive.no); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sejpal, Stanislav Jr. (b. Mladá Boleslav, Czech Republic, Apr. 9, 1949). Czech trumpeter. Sejpal's father, Stanislav Sejpal Sr. (1920-91), was a professional orchestra trumpeter in Prague. Stanislav Jr. studied at the State Conservatory in Prague from 1964 to 1970, and then at the Prague Music Academy with Václav Junek from 1970 to 1975. From 1969 to 1970, Sejpal was a member of the Prague Cinema Orchestra (1969-70), and in 1973 won first prize in a music competition in Kraslice, and second prize in the "Prague Spring" international trumpet competition the following year.

Sejpal became a member of the trumpet section of the Czech Philharmonic in 1970, and was named principal trumpet from 1976 to 1980. He assumed the same position with the Kiel Opera Orchestra in 1980 until 1985. Starting in 1986, he worked on a freewill basis with the Lower Austrian Symphony Orchestras and developed a strong reputation as a teacher. From 1990-94, he was first trumpet of the Prague Radio Orchestra, and founded and taught at a private music school.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Selianin, Anatoly Dimitreyevich (b. Yungi-Yuli [near Tashkent, Usbekistan], Russia, Sept. 3, 1937). Russian trumpeter. Selianin attended the Musical College in Tashkent from 1956 to 1957, studying with A. Kaplan and graduating in only two years instead of the usual four. From 1957 to 1962, he studied with Vassily Pulatov at the Tashkent Conservatory, and for several years he commuted to Moscow for postgraduate studies with Timofei Dokshitser at the Gnesin Institute, finishing in 1978.

From 1960 to 1966, he played lead in the Tashkent Big Band. From 1962 to 1964 and 1966 to 1970, he was principal of the Uzbek Theater Orchestra in Tashkent. He was dean at the Astrakhan Conservatory from 1962 to 1970. He has been teaching trumpet at the Saratov Conservatory since 1972, becoming a full professor in 1987. Among his many students are Sergey Nakariakov, Igor Studensky, Shevket Teyfikov, Eugen Markin, Sergey Kryukov, and Nikolay Gudts.

Selianin formed the Brandt Brass Quintet in 1973, and was honored by the State in 1975. For many years, he has also been the conductor of the Saratov Municipal Band. In 1996, he organized the Brandt International Trumpet Competition in Saratov. He has been a valuable member of the International Trumpet Guild and has authored numerous articles for the ITG Journal. When Selianin was hospitalized for weeks in 1999 due to heart problems, ITG helped raise money to send him to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, where he was operated on for free due to his importance to the world music community. He was Vice President of the former Euro-ITG, and served as a board member of the ITG for many years. He received the ITG Award of Merit in 2004 for outstanding lifetime achievement.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press).

Selmer [Zelmer], [Chéry-]Henri (b. Mézières, France, Oct. 20, 1858; d. 1941). French manufacturer. The Zelmer family can be traced back to the eighteenth century in the rural Lorraine region of France, starting with Johannes Jacobus Zelmer. His son, Jean-Jacques Zelmer, changed his name to Selmer and played clarinet at the Corps Royal du Génie. Selmer's son was Charles-Frederic Selmer (died in 1878), who played clarinet at the Opéra in Algers and had sixteen children, five of whom survived to adulthood. His two most musically prominent sons were Henri and Alexandre-Gabriel (1864-1953).

Henri and Alexandre played the clarinet, and graduated from the Paris Conservatory. At the age of twenty-two, Henri joined the famed Garde Republicaine Band and the Paris Opera Comique. He also was in the orchestra of the Folies Dramatiques and played at the Lamoureux Concerts. Between 1895 and 1910, his brother (Alexandre) played principal clarinet in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Cincinnati Symphony, and New York Philharmonic.

In 1885, Henri opened a small shop at Place Dancourt in Paris, making and selling reeds and reed mouthpieces. He soon repaired clarinets and experimented with modifications to them. This led him to create his own clarinet designs and establish the Selmer Company. While in New York City, Alexandre opened a shop to distribute Henri's products in the United States. Selmer clarinets won a gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition of the 1904 World's Fair. Because of the company's surge in demand for high quality clarinets, Alexandre returned to Paris in 1918 to help Henri in the manufacturing of instruments. Alexandre hired George Bundy (who eventually bought the store from the Selmers) to manage the New York shop and oversee U. S. distribution. As early as 1916, Vincent Bach came to this shop to make brass mouthpieces.

In France, the Selmer Company turned its interest to brass instruments (from October 1928) when they acquired the Adolphe Sax Fils Compagnie. Selmer produced brass under the name of Sax until late 1933. It also produced brass under the name of Millereau. From 1934 until the 1950s, the Selmer Company produced the Louis Armstrong balanced model trumpet with great success. In 1941, Maurice Selmer, Henri's son, succeeded him. Maurice's three sons, Maurice-Jean, Georges, and Jacques acquired responsibilities in the company, and Maurice's youngest son Jacques incorporated the company in 1953. Henri Lefèvre was named president in 1961 and was succeeded by Georges Selmer in 1968. The shop at rue de la Fontaine-au-Roi had 650 specialized workers in 1985.

In the meantime, George Bundy was able to work with leading instrument designers to develop flutes, saxophones, pianos, and other musical instruments. He moved the U.S. branch to Elkhart, Indiana, in 1951, and began manufacturing all types of band instrument, including trumpets and cornets. Selmer acquired the Vincent Bach Corporation in 1962, and the Buescher Band Instrument Company in 1963, as well as many other instrument companies during this period.

Starting in 1958, Selmer worked with the famed French trumpeter Maurice André and produced a newly designed piccolo trumpet in B-flat and A (1960). A revised model was made in 1967. This trumpet remains a popular instrument for Selmer. At the beginning of 1970, Selmer briefly distributed Olds and Reynolds brass instruments. In 1983, Selmer-USA produced an extra-large bore B-flat trumpet designed with Claude Gordon. In 1986, Selmer-France designed a new C trumpet with Guy Touvron.

Selmer is world famous for its saxophones, but from the 1930s it has also been praised for its trumpets. Many great names played Selmer trumpets at one time or another, such as Maurice André, Louis Armstrong, Patrick Artero, Stéphane Belmondo, Charles Colin, Ted Curson, Nat Gonela, Roger Guérin, Bernard Hulin, Harry James, Leroy Jones, Clark Terry, Freddie Hubbard, Raymond Sabarich, Pierre Thibaud, and Guy Touvron.

Bibl.: The Selmer Company website (www.selmer.fr/histliste.php?page=debut); Pierre, Constant. Le Conservatoire de musique et de déclamation (Paris, Imprimerie Nationale, 1900); Sadie, Stanley, ed. The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments (Macmillan); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sennhauser, Marcel (b. Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 4, 1953). Swiss trumpeter. Sennhauser's early trumpet lessons were with his father; he later studied with Henri Adelbrecht at the Zurich Conservatory. From 1975 to 1989, he was principal trumpet of the Lucerne Symphony Orchestra, and from 1976 to 1989 was also principal of the St. Moritz Chamber Orchestra. Sennhauser taught at the Schweiz Music School from 1975 to 1990, where he was also director of brass studies.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sepúlveda, Charlie [Rivera, Charles Sepúlveda] (b. Bronx, New York, July 15, 1962). American trumpeter. Sepúlveda and his family moved to Puerto Rico when he was eight years old. He took up the trumpet around that age, and by the time he was a teenager, he was working locally as a professional musician. He studied at the School of the Arts in Caguas, the University of Costa Rico, and at City College in New York. He studied under Juan Pacheco in Puerto Rico.

Today, Charlie Sepúlveda is considered to be one of the hottest Latin-jazz trumpeters in the world. He has performed or recorded with Willie Rosario, Ralphy Levit (1978), Julio Castro (1978-79), Bobby Valentin (1980-83), El Cano Estramera (1983-84), Eddie Palmieri (1984-92), Ray Barretto (1985-86), Hector La Voe (1985-87), Tito Puente, Celia Cruz, Johnny Pacheco, Dr. John, the Fania All-Stars (1990-91), Dizzy Gillespie's United Nations Orchestra (1991), Wynton Marsalis, McCoy Tyner, Paquito D'Rivera, Michael Camilo, and many others. He also formed his own band, Charlie Sepúlveda and the Turnaround, in 1989. Sepúlveda appears in a video called Tribute to Chocolate Armenteros & Juancito Torres (2006).

Sepúlveda has received two Grammy nominations, and has released albums including The New Arrival (Antilles), Algo Nuestro (Antilles), and Charlie Sepúlveda and the Turnaround (Turnaround). He is a professor of music at the Conservatory of Music in Puerto Rico, and is an active performer at jazz festivals throughout the world.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Charlie Sepúlveda" (www.allaboutjazz.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Serna [Salvador], Juanjo (b. Albuixec, Valencia, Spain, July 20, 1970). Spanish trumpeter. Serna began his trumpet studies with Vicent Prats, José Salvador, and Manolo López, and won Spain's Youth Music Contest. He graduated from the Royal Conservatory, studying with José Mariá Ortí and receiving the Honor Award. He was a member of the Spanish National Youth Orchestra in 1987, and has performed with the Spanish National Orchestra, Spanish Radio and Television Orchestra, Madrid Symphony Orchestra, Euskadi Symphony Orchestra, Canarias Symphony Orchestra, and the Cadaqués Symphony Orchestra. He is also a former principal of the City of Granada Orchestra.

Serna is a specialist in jazz and salsa playing, and in 1989 was a founding member of the well-known brass quintet, Spanish Brass [Luur Metalls], which has become a leading brass ensemble throughout the world. The group won first prize in the 1996 International Brass Ensemble Competition in Narbonne, France, and has released over fifteen albums.

Serna enjoys watching football (soccer).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); concert program, Chautauqua Institution, Aug. 15, 2011; "Juanjo Serna Salvador" (www.stomvi.com/familia.php?&id=17&local=en).

Serostanov, Konstantin Yakovlevich (b. Novokhopiersk [Voronezh region], Russia, June 6, 1918). Russian trumpeter and conductor. Serostanov began his formal training in trumpet studying with Mikhail Tabakov at the Gnesin Institute (finishing in 1938), and was a prizewinner at the 1941 All-Union Competition of Performers. He graduated from the Moscow Conservatory in 1947, also studying with Tabakov.

Serostanov's orchestral career began in 1938 at age twenty, as principal trumpet of the large radio-television orchestra in Moscow where he played until 1950. From 1951 to 1955, he was a member of the Stanislavsky & Nemirovich-Danchenko Theatre Orchestra, and from 1962 to 1973 was the artistic director and conductor of the Moscow Chamber Orchestra ("Antonín Dvořák"). From 1956 to 1965, he taught at the Special Central Music School of the Moscow Conservatory, and in 1965 taught at the Moscow Conservatory. From 1965 to 1968, he taught at the Ippolitov-Ivanov Music College and from 1978 at the Moscow Military Music School. From 1965 to 1978, he taught at the military conducting department of the Moscow Conservatory (becoming a full professor in 1966). In 1988, he was honored by the state.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Severinsen, Carl [Hilding] ("Doc") [Jr.] (b. Arlington, Oregon, July 7, 1927). American trumpeter. Severinsen, recognized as the most popular American trumpeter during the 1970s and '80s, grew up in Arlington, Oregon (population 600). His parents were Carl and Minnie Mae Severinsen. He told Downbeat magazine, I was born in a cow town. Really, they had cattle drives down the main street, and you had to close your doors so the animals didn't come inside your house. My dad was a dentist and he played a little violin, so he started me on a junior-sized model. But I wanted to play trombone, so I refused to have anything to do with the violin. There weren't any music stores in Arlington, and thus no trombones, but a guy down the street had a cornet for sale, so that became my instrument.

Doc began taking cornet lessons at the age of seven. He studied under Leon Handzlik and Clyde Simpson. By the time he was twelve, he was playing in the Oregon High School Band under Clyde Simpson (1936-40) and won a regional cornet competition hosted by the Music Educators National Conference (1939). At age seventeen, he formed his first dance band, The Blue Notes, which performed for local dances and parties. He and his band had their broadcasting debut on KODL Radio in Dalles, Oregon. During his senior year in high school, he spent a great deal of time touring with Ted Fio Rito's orchestra, finishing his coursework by correspondence.

After graduating from high school, Doc was drafted into the Army. He was allowed to form a band for the Special Services that performed at officers' functions during World War II. After his discharge, he joined Sam Donahue, Benny Goodman, and Charlie Barnet's band where he was in a section with Maynard Ferguson and other trumpet stars (1947-49). Soon, he played in the big bands of Vaughn Monroe (1949), Tommy Dorsey (1949-51), and Noro Morales.

Doc Severinsen (who received the nickname "Little Doc" as a boy because his father was referred to as "Doc") moved to New York City in 1949. He took lessons from Benny Baker and joined the NBC radio studios, where he backed singers such as Dinah Shore and Anita O'Day. He switched to the NBC television studios in 1952 and became the lead trumpet in Skitch Henderson's band for Steve Allen's Tonight Show. When Johnny Carson took over the show in 1962, Severinsen took on the additional responsibility of being assistant conductor, as well as featured soloist.

Skitch Henderson abruptly left The Tonight Show in 1966. Doc was named the new orchestra conductor in 1967. He liked to dress up in fancy western outfits like he did as a boy in rodeos in Arlington. He received a great deal of attention from his elaborate wardrobe, and soon sported a different over-the-top outfit on each show. His witty banter with Carson cemented his popularity with television audiences, and he began to sometimes substitute for cohost Ed McMahon. During his thirty years with Johnny Carson, Doc Severinsen was a household name. He was voted "Top Trumpeter" by the Playboy Jazz Poll for ten years in a row.

Severinsen's performance life outside of television was just as impressive as his studio career. He made a series of LP albums for the Command label during the 1960s that took the trumpet world by storm. His appealing tone, wide range, and extraordinary technical skills seemed to combine the musicianship of Bunny Berigan (his boyhood idol), Rafael Méndez, and Maynard Ferguson into one player. He toured whenever possible, soloing with hundreds of high school and college bands and orchestras, and presenting concerts and clinics at national music conventions. Some of his Command albums include Tempestuous Trumpet, High Wide and Wonderful, Live!, Fever!, Torch Songs for Trumpet, The Great Arrival, and Doc Severinsen and Strings.

In the early 1970s, Doc recorded albums for RCA including Rhapsody for Now, Brass on Ivory (with Henry Mancini on piano), Doc, Brass Roots, and Brass Ivory and Strings. In 1975, he signed with Epic records and released two jazz-funk fusion albums, Night Journey and Brand New Thing. His albums for ABC Records are Trumpets and Crumpets and Things and Sixteen Great Performances. By 1985, he was recording for the Passport label with his fusion group, Xebron. Other recordings include I Feel Good (Juno) and A Concert in Jazz (Verve), as well as a guest appearance with Summit Brass, performing Five Episodes for Trumpet and Brass by Allen Vizzutti and Jeff Tyzik (ProArte) on a recording titled Episodes. Altogether, Doc Severinsen has released over thirty albums including the Telarc releases, The Very Best of Doc Severinsen, Unforgettably Doc, and Trumpet Spectacular with the Cincinnati Pops Orchestra. Other labels include Firstline, Audio Fidelity, MCA, Critique Records, The Right Stuff, ABM Entertainment, Azica Records, and Bluebird.

Doc signed with Amherst records in the mid 1980s. He began releasing CDs with The Tonight Show Orchestra that garnered a Grammy Award in 1987 for "Best Large Jazz Ensemble." His solo album, Facets, was a Top Ten jazz hit in 1988. Amherst released another Tonight Show Orchestra album in 1991, Once More With Feeling!, and in 1992 released Merry Christmas from Doc Severinsen and the Tonight Show Orchestra. But, in 1992 Johnny Carson decided to retire. Severinsen and the band were let go, but did manage to embark on a farewell tour that played to sold-out houses across the country.

After his stint with Carson, Severinsen reinvented himself as a guest soloist and pops conductor with major symphony orchestras. He made many appearances and quickly landed positions as Pops Conductor of The Phoenix Symphony, Minnesota Orchestra, Buffalo Philharmonic, Milwaukee Symphony, and Colorado Springs Symphony. He was the second trumpeter (following Don Smithers) to record the fanfare (abblasen) by Gottfreid Reiche used as opening music for the television news program, Sunday Morning. (A newer version has since been recorded by trumpeter Wynton Marsalis.)

Most trumpet players are aware that Severinsen is an equipment junkie. He owns hundreds of mouthpieces and has been searching for the perfect mouthpiece all his life. He has also designed many models of trumpet, starting with the Getzen Company back in 1961. He became Vice President of the Conn Corporation in 1981, and later helped design the "Bel Canto" trumpet for Dick Akright. In 2004, Doc launched Severinsen Custom Trumpets during the International Trumpet Guild Conference in Denver. His "Destino" B-flat and C trumpets were a big hit with professional trumpet players, and orders quickly outgrew production. Destino trumpets (codesigned with Byron Autrey) were first made in Germany by Franz Straub, but were later built by Zig Kanstul in Los Angeles. After having difficulties with distribution, Doc ended production in 2007. Recently, he has redesigned Destino trumpets with Steve Shires.

Carl Severinsen is a recovered alcoholic who overcame many obstacles to build his career as a celebrity trumpeter, bandleader, and entertainer. For years, he lived in Santa Barbara, California, where he raised dogs and racehorses, then lived in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico, with his third wife, Emily (Marshall) Severinsen. He performs regularly with a group called the San Miguel Five. Severinsen's children include Nancy, Allen, and Cindy (all from his first marriage), and Robin and Judy (from his second marriage). He is currently residing in Knoxville, Tennessee, and enjoys cooking and collecting American art.

Bibl.: Allen, Cain "Carl H. Doc Severinsen" Oregon Historical Society (www.ohs.org); Huey, Steve. "Carl Doc Severinsen" (www.allmusicguide.com); "Carl Doc Severinsen" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Oct. 9, 2011.

Severn, Eddie (b. Norwich, England, Apr. 1, 1963). British trumpeter and composer. Severn grew up near Oxford, England. He began playing the trumpet at age twelve. He was mostly self-taught, but at age sixteen did take a few lessons in London with Howard Snell. He joined the army at age seventeen, and played in the Band of Her Majesty's Life Guards (1980-87). In 1984, he enrolled at the Royal Academy of Music in London where he studied with the late John Wilbraham, earning a bachelor's degree. He received graduate degrees (DMA in 2011) from the University of Salford in Manchester, England, where he was the recipient of the James Morrison Jazz Masters Award. Other teachers include Bobby Shew and Vincent DiMartino.

Severn has developed an impressive career as a jazz artist, composer, and teacher since 1987. As a performer, he has played with Phil Woods, Dave Liebman, Maria Schneider, Joe Lovano, Kenny Wheeler, Ingrid Jensen, Bill Watrous, the Tommy Smith Sextet, Scottish National Jazz Orchestra (as lead trumpet), Scottish Composers Jazz Ensemble, New York Jazz Repertory Orchestra, Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, Glenn Miller Memorial Band, Tom Bancroft Orchestra, Bill Chase Tribute Band, and Andy Prior Big Band. He has worked as a studio player for the BBC, ITV, and various radio stations in England and Scotland, and has backed such artists as The Temptations, Kenny Rogers, Tammy Wynette, Connie Francis, Jay and the Americans, The Blues Brothers, Rat Pack, Legends of Swing, Rob Stonback Big Band, Guy Lombardo Orchestra (2009, with Rob Stoneback), Rich Szabo, and Clay Aiken. In addition to appearing at dozens of international jazz festivals, Severn is also a fine classical musician and has performed with the Royal Scottish National Orchestra, Royal Scottish Academy Brass, City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, and the English Symphony Orchestra. As leader, his recordings include The Prague Connection, Equilibrium (Gyro), and Moments in Time (Caber).

Severn's teaching credits include positions at Newbold College (1987-89), Lothian Regional Council (Scotland, 1990-97), Fettes College (1995-97), Strathclyde University (1995-97), Napier University (1995-2003), Royal Scottish Academy of Music (1995-2005), Birmingham Conservatory (2002-05), Wilkes University (Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, 2005-08), Stonequake Studios (Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania, 2007-08), Lewis & Son Music Studio (Quakertown, Pennsylvania, 2007-08), and Lock Haven University of Pennsylvania (since Jan. 2008). He has also maintained a private trumpet studio in his home since 2005. He has been a clinician and instructor of numerous youth jazz orchestras and jazz camps, and has presented lectures and master classes for the International Trumpet Guild, International Association of Jazz Educators, and the New York Brass Conference for Scholarships. His book, Trumpet Solutions (self-published), is widely used.

As well as composing music for his own quartet and quintet, Severn has received commissions from the Scottish National Jazz Orchestra, Scottish Composers Jazz Ensemble, Scottish Arts Council, and the Strathclyde Arts Centre Big Band. He was also commissioned to write a piece for renowned trumpeter, Kenny Wheeler, that was premiered at the Glasgow International Jazz Festival.

Severn and his wife Vivian, a trumpeter and Zumba dance instructor who assists him with his new mouthpiece company, Pro

Brass, were married in 2001 and have two boys: Gabriel (b. 2004) and Luke (b. 2007). They reside in Williamsport, Pennsylvania. His hobbies include classic cars (he owns a 1979 Corvette).

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Curriculum Vitae" from Eddie Severn's official website: www.eddiesevern.com; personal interview, July 10, 2012.

Sexton, Haskell O[rlando]. (Kentucky, 1917; d. Sarasota, Florida, Jan. 29, 1978). American trumpeter. Sexton was raised in Hamilton, Missouri, and studied briefly with Joseph Gustat of the Saint Louis Symphony. He attended Bethany College in Lindsburg, Kansas, but transferred to the University of Illinois, where he received a bachelor's degree in music education in 1939. He continued study there, and received a master of music degree in music education in 1941.

From 1941 through 1945, Sexton was a public school band director in Arthur and Urbana, Illinois, and from August of 1945 to June of 1947, instructor of trumpet at the University of Michigan. In the fall of 1947, he returned to Urbana, Illinois, as trumpet instructor and associate director of bands at the University of Illinois. He cofounded the Illinois Brass Quintet (America's first university faculty brass quintet) and performed as principal trumpet of the Champaign-Urbana Symphony Orchestra. For many summers, he taught at the Western Music Camp (Gunnison, Colorado), Music Camp at Bemidji, Minnesota, and the Illinois Summer Youth Music Camp (Urbana, Illinois). Sexton retired from teaching at the University of Illinois in 1974, and was succeeded by David Hickman.

Sexton was a kind and gentle man. Although he had been stricken by polio as a child, he was a tall and masculine man who walked with a noticeable limp. He insisted that his students call him by his first name. During his twenty-six years at the University of Illinois, he taught a legion of professional players and teachers including James Darling, Keith Johnson, and John J. Haynie.

Sexton and his wife Grace, an organist and church choir director, moved to Sarasota, Florida, where he soon became an associate conductor of the Florida West Coast Youth Orchestra and the Sarasota Concert Band. Unfortunately, an unexpected case of cancer took his life during his third year of retirement at about the age of seventy. He was survived by his wife, son, two daughters, and several grandchildren.

Bibl.: Haynie, John J. (with Anne Hardin). Inside John Haynie's Studio (University of North Texas Press); O'Connor, John. "Haskell Sexton: In Memoriam" (ITG Newsletter, Feb. 1978).

Sexton, Susan. American trumpeter. Sexton studied with Terry Sawchuk at the University of Colorado, where she earned bachelor and master of music degrees. In the middle of her masters degree program, she accepted a one-year appointment as trumpet instructor at the University of Mississippi. She then taught at Youngstown State University in Michigan for five years.

Sexton resigned her position in Youngstown in order to tour with the Chestnut Brass Company. However, a year later she returned to YSU as a student in massotherapy (the therapeutic use of massage), and was licensed as a massotherapist by the Ohio State Medical Board. She has taught trumpet at Westminster College in Wilmington, Pennsylvania, and has performed during three summers at the Colorado Music Festival in Boulder, and three summers at the Bay View (Michigan) Music Festival. She is a vegetarian and enjoys running. She and her husband take in numerous unwanted cats and dogs.

Bibl.: Hardin, Anne. "The Roads They've Taken: A Look at ITG's Student Contest Winners" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, May 1996).

Shaffer, Louise (fl. 1860-95). American cornetist. One of the few women cornet soloists during the nineteenth century, Louise Shaffer and Company presented musical shows across the United States and Canada. She was depicted as a "Musical Artiste" in billboards advertising her shows, and she was also able to play numerous instruments other than the cornet. A review published in the August 25,

1892 newspaper, The Acadian Recorder, described her performance on August 22, stating: The selection on the bells was the chief attraction, but the rendition of the programme showed that Louise Shaffer as a musical genius has but few equals and no peers in her line. Each and every number by this artiste was encored—cornet solo, musical glasses, xylophone, glockenspiel, and pianoforte. Her banjo songs were heartily encored by the gallery, who also fully appreciated her singing of "With a lad and a ladder," and "Over the garden wall."

Bibl.: Hazen, Margaret and Robert. The Music Men (Smithsonian Institution Press).

Shavers, Charles ("Charlie") James (b. New York, New York, Aug. 30, 1920; d. New York, New York, July 8, 1971). American trumpeter. Shavers was born into a musical family. His father played the trumpet and his uncle, Dope Andrews, the trombone. Shavers was a cousin of Carl Warwick and Fats Navarro. As a youth, Shavers learned to play the piano and banjo before taking up the trumpet. He took lessons with his father and at the Bordentown Prep School (1935). Shavers gave 1917 as a birth date for professional reasons, allowing him to perform in drinking establishments as a minor. He was strongly influenced by Roy Eldridge's playing. Alongside Carl Warwick, Shavers played in the Vernon Arab Big Band (1935) and with the Hardy Bros. In 1935, he became a member of Frankie Fairfax's band in Philadelphia and introduced Dizzy Gillespie to Eldridge's solos. Along with Carl Warwick, Shavers played with Tiny Bradshaw and Lucky Millinder (1937). In November 1937, he drew great attention as the nucleus of the John Kirby Sextet. He wrote many nice arrangements and compositions, including the hit tune Undecided. Shavers was also a fine singer.

With Kirby's group, Shavers often used a mute to achieve a good blend of sound. However, his incredible power and wide range were limited in such a small ensemble. In addition to recording with Kirby, he played with other groups as well, making recordings with Jimmie Noone (1937), Johnny Dodds (1938), and Sidney Bechet (1941). Finally, in 1944 he left Kirby and joined Raymond Scott's CBS Orchestra for a few months.

Between the years 1945 and 1956, Shavers played on and off with the Tommy Dorsey band. Dorsey often featured Shavers in powerful jazz improvisations, but the nostalgic swing music of Dorsey was not really Charlie's style. During these years, Shavers also recorded with the Esquire All-Stars and toured with Jazz at the Philharmonic where he and Roy Eldridge engaged in exciting trumpet "battles" (1954). With Louie Bellson, he co-led his own sextet in 1950 and played in Benny Goodman's band in 1953.

After Dorsey's death in 1956, Shavers led his own quartet, toured a bit with the Dorsey ghost band, and recorded for Everest Records. From 1957, Shavers was active in recording studios. He toured with Frank Sinatra Jr. in 1965, and in 1969 and '70 toured Europe where he made his final recordings (1970) with saxophonist Budd Johnson. Considering his amazing technical abilities, powerful high range, beautiful tone and exciting improvising skills, Shavers should have been as famous as Louis Armstrong or Roy Eldridge, but he seemed content to mostly play in other people's groups where he was occasionally featured. Even in death he was cheated of publicity, having died just two days after Louis Armstrong. Gunther Schuller described his style as a strong influence of high quality classical trumpet playing, exemplified by a fine tone, smooth legato, clean tonguing, and an even control of range.

Shavers appeared with the John Kirby Sextet in the film, Sepia Cinderella (1947), and can be seen in the video, Trumpet Kings (1958). Some of his best record albums are Like Charlie (Everest), Live at the London House (Hep), and Live in Chicago (Spotlite). Shavers's own favorite recording was Shavers, Gershwin and Strings on the Bethlehem label, arranged by Sy Oliver.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Tomkins, L. Charlie Shavers. About the Size of It (1970: http://www.jazzprofessional.com/interviews/Charlie_Shavers.htm); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extracts on mp3, video clip; Oct. 2008).

Shaw, Brian (b. Carmi, Illinois, May 13, 1977). American trumpeter. A highly versatile trumpeter, Shaw began his trumpet studies in public school under the instruction of Steven Bell. In 1995, he began undergraduate study at Eastern Illinois University with W. Parker Melvin, receiving a bachelor of music degree (with honors) in 2001. He studied with James Thompson (trumpet) and Paul O'Dette (early music) at the Eastman School of Music where he received dual master of music degrees in performance/literature and jazz/contemporary media (2005). He then earned a doctor of musical arts degree, studying with Ray Sasaki at the University of Texas at Austin (2008). Shaw also pursued postgraduate study of the Baroque trumpet in New York with John Thiessen.

While a student, Shaw won several competitions: 1998 National Trumpet Competition (jazz division), 2001 International Trumpet Guild Orchestral Excerpts Competition, and 2002 ITG Solo Performance Competition. He also received the 2002 Downbeat magazine award for Outstanding Extended Composition for jazz ensemble, and in 2004 was the Silver Medalist in the ITG Ellsworth Smith International Trumpet Solo Competition. He began his fulltime teaching career in 2007 at Louisiana State University where he teaches trumpet and jazz studies. His work with the (valveless) Baroque trumpet, and CD recording Virtuoso Concertos for Clarino (self-released), have built his reputation as one of the foremost performers of Baroque and Rococo music for trumpet. His performance of Richter's Trumpet Concerto in D during the 2009 ITG Conference in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, was stunning.

Shaw received the 2009 Tiger Athletic Foundation President's Award at LSU. He has published How to Play Lead Trumpet in a Big Band (Advance Music), as well as a book of transcribed jazz solos by trumpeter Kenny Wheeler (published by Universal Edition). He is coprincipal trumpet of the Dallas Wind Symphony, and is an active jazz soloist and Baroque trumpet performer.

Shaw is married to flutist Paula Clary Shaw. They own six dogs and Chloe, their cat. His hobbies include painting and drawing, amateur astronomy, cooking, and composing/arranging.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Brian Shaw's official website: www.bshawmusic.com; "Brian Shaw" (www.music.lsu.edu/faculty/faculty.asp?=430); personal interview, July 25, 2011.

Shaw, Clarence Eugene ("Gene") (b. Detroit, Michigan, June 16, 1926; d. Los Angeles, California, Aug. 17, 1973). American trumpeter. Shaw studied piano at age four, and added trombone at age six. He enrolled in the Detroit Institute of Music (under Barry Harris), but his studies were cut short by his military obligation. While serving in the Army, Shaw was wounded. While recovering in an Army hospital, Shaw heard Dizzy Gillespie's Hot House recording which changed his life. After recovering, but still in the Army, he studied trumpet under Al Bryant. After being discharged from the military, he began learning to play the trumpet in earnest. Within weeks, he was performing in a Detroit club. During the next few years, he played with many of Detroit's leading jazz musicians including Lester Young (two weeks), Yusef Lateef, Tommy Flanagan, Kenny Burrell, Wardell Gray, and Lucky Thompson.

Shaw moved to New York City in 1955. A short time later, he began working with Charles Mingus (1955-57). They recorded three albums together, but in 1957 a heated argument between Shaw and Mingus resulted in Shaw destroying his trumpet and quitting music. He moved to Chicago and didn't return to music until 1962. After forming his own ensemble (using the name Gene Shaw), he recorded three albums for the Argo label: Breakthrough, Debut in Blue, Carnival Sketches. He led a big band in 1965. Although his records sold fairly well, Shaw again left music in 1966. His final return to music occurred in 1968, but not much resulted.

During the 1950s, a time when interracial marriages were not readily accepted by American society, Clarence (Gene) Shaw was married to a white Kentucky woman named Marjorie Belle Wilson. They had three children—Keven Jean, Leah, and Lion.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Clarence Shaw" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shaw, John (fl. 1824-38). English maker. Shaw spent part of his life as a farmer, but is best known as an instrument maker in Glassop, Derbyshire, England. He invented a variation on the rotary valve and patented it in 1838 as the swivel or "disc" valve. The valve was built for him by John Augustus Köhler (1805-78), and the idea of it may have come from Antoine Halary (1788-1861) who three years earlier had devised but never patented similar valves he called plaque tournantes (turn plates). A cornet with such valves, inscribed KÖHLER SOLE MAKE and J. SHAW / INVENTOR, survives in the Bad Säckingen Trumpet Museum (inv. No. 34501).

Shaw also designed a long U-shaped trumpet that contained several double valve clusters that opened or closed various lengths of the instrument to alter its effective overall length. Although the design never caught on, the concepts of "ascending" valves (shortening the instrument when depressed) and "independent" valves (clusters used independently from each other) were important to later designs by other trumpet and cornet makers.

Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W.W. Norton); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Shaw, William (fl. 1775-1823). English maker. William Shaw was famous throughout England for the fine natural trumpets built in his London shop. In 1775, he married Amy Shaw. They had three sons—Thomas, Samuel, and William II—all of whom worked in the shop, eventually continuing the Shaw instrument-making legacy until around the mid nineteenth century.

Shaw is credited as being among the first makers to experiment with the addition of vent-holes to the trumpet, as evidenced by one of his existing instruments from 1787.

Bibl.: Halfpenny, Eric. "William Shaw's 'Harmonic Trumpet'" (The Galpin Society Journal, July 1960); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Shaw, Woody [Herman II] (b. Laurinburg, North Carolina, Dec. 24, 1944; d. New York, New York, May 10, 1989). American trumpeter. Woody's father, Woody Shaw Sr., was a member of the gospel group, the Diamond Jubilee Singers. Woody Jr. grew up in Newark, New Jersey, and began playing the trumpet at age eleven. From 1955 to 1957, he studied the trumpet under Jerome Zierling (at a public school and with private lessons).

Shaw's early experiences were with the Washington Carver Drum & Bugle Corps, junior high school orchestras, Ladozier Lamar Big Band, various rhythm and blues bands, and with Rufus Jones (1962), Willie Bobo (1963), Nathan Davis, Larry Young, Tyrone Washington, and Eric Dolphy (1963). At the age of nineteen, he made his recording debut on Dolphy's Iron Man album and later went to Europe to join Dolphy's band as a regular, but by the time he arrived there Dolphy had died. Nonetheless, he stayed in Paris from 1964 to 1965 and played with Kenny Clarke, Bud Powell, Johnny Griffin, Art Taylor, Nathan Davis, and the Jef Gilson Big Band. He made records with both Nathan Davis and Jef Gilson.

Shaw returned to the United States in 1965 as a seasoned professional. He played with Horace Silver's quintet (1965-66), Chick Corea (1966), Jackie McLean (1967, 1968), Larry Young, Andrew Hill (1967), McCoy Tyner (on and off, 1968 to 1970), Art Blakey (1969), and Max Roach (1968-69). He also filled in his schedule as a pit musician for various Broadway shows in New York from 1965 to 1970. He was a versatile player who could play free jazz and hard bop. In 1970, Shaw formed a quintet with Joe Henderson. He also worked with Gil Evans and Harold Land, and with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1971-72). He co-led a group with Bobby Hutcherson in San Francisco (1973-74) and recorded as a leader for the Contemporary and Muse labels.

During the 1970s, many groups began utilizing various electronic effects, but Shaw avoided this style of music. He was back in New York by 1975, joining the Junior Cook-Louis Hayes Quintet.

When Cook left the group, Shaw became the coleader. The following year, the group was renamed the Dexter Gordon Quintet. Between 1977 and 1981, he made some of his best records for Columbia. During the period from 1977 to 1988, he also recorded for Enja, Timeless, Muse, Red, and Musician.

Shaw's eyesight began to fail, eventually causing him to become half blind. His use of drugs and lack of rest caused a gradual decline in health. He moved to Bern, Switzerland, and then Amsterdam where he taught at several jazz schools. In 1983, he took part in the International Trumpet Guild Conference, and from 1984 to 1990 was associated with Freddie Hubbard on records and concerts, including an appearance at the Antibes Jazz Festival. During the summer of 1988, he toured with the Paris Reunion Band but returned to the U.S. in the fall of that year.

In February of 1989, Shaw went to a nightclub to listen to a jazz group. He left the club early, and was found later that night having had a near fatal accident in which he had mysteriously fallen (or been pushed) down a flight of stairs at a subway station (not the one he normally took to go home) and had been struck by a passing train. One arm was completely severed, and he was rushed to the hospital. He died three months later from kidney failure at the age of forty-four.

Shaw was on the verge of becoming one of the greatest jazz trumpeters of his day. He played with a sweet tone similar to that of Clifford Brown and recorded extensively as a sideman with Eric Dolphy, Horace Silver, Art Blakey, Dexter Gordon, Woody Herman, Lionel Hampton, Larry Young, Bobby Hutcherson, Hank Mobley, Joe Henderson, Jackie McLean, Roy Brooks, Nathan Davis, Kenny Garrett, Benny Golson, and Mal Waldron. A few of his recordings include The Moontrane (Muse), Time is Right (Red), Song of Songs (Original Jazz Classics), Little Red's Fantasy (32 Jazz), and Last of the Line (32 Jazz). Jazz producer George Wein said of Shaw, That's a blessing [Shaw's passing]. The poor man was blind, the poor man was a narcotics addict, the poor man lost an arm, he had more tough luck than any human being I've ever known.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Parker, Jeffrey. "Jazz Trumpeter, Composer Woody Shaw Dead at 44" (United Press International, May 11, 1989); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shear, Howard ("Howie") (b. Los Angeles, California, Aug. 5, 1953). American trumpeter. Shear received a bachelor of music education degree at Fredonia State University (now State University of New York-Fredonia) in 1975, a master's degree in jazz at the Eastman School of Music in 1977, and a doctorate in music at the University of Southern California in 2002. His teachers include James Burke and Raymond Crisara.

As a jazz musician, Shear toured with Woody Herman's band as lead trumpeter and soloist from 1980 to 1982. He then moved to Los Angeles where he worked as a studio player and trumpeter with The Chuck Mangione Orchestra, Tony Bennett, George Benson, Mel Tormé, Reno Jones, The Temptations, and The Spinners, among others. He worked as musical arranger and lead trumpet player for television's Joan Rivers Late Night Show, and performed at various shows at the Ahmanson Theater and at jazz festivals around the world. In 1992, he played with the Don Menza band in Florida, and currently has his own jazz quartet in Los Angeles. He is on the faculty at California State University-Northridge.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuvres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Howard 'Howie' Shear" (www.csun.edu/music/BioShear.html).

Sheetz, David ("Dave") H. (b. Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Aug. 22, 1934). American trumpeter. Sheetz grew up in Steelton, Pennsylvania. He began playing the trumpet at age thirteen under the direction of his father and high school band director, Russell Sheetz. He also studied for two years with George Rheam, a cornet player from the Sousa Band. In 1949, when Sheetz was fifteen, he and the famous embouchure specialist, Dr. Donald S. Reinhardt, began a forty-year relationship that continued until Reinhardt's death in 1989.

After graduating from Steelton High School in 1952, Sheetz attended Gettysburg College from 1952 to 1956 as a premed biology major, earning a bachelor of arts degree. He became a member of the US Army Field Band in Washington, D.C. from 1957 to 1959, playing first trumpet. After that, he became an active freelance performer with numerous casino and show bands in the Atlantic City, New Jersey, area. He has also performed with the Glenn Miller Orchestra, Si Zentner Orchestra, Artie Shaw's band, and several Broadway show productions.

After Reinhardt's death, many of Reinhardt's students turned to Sheetz for lessons. Considered to be one of the leading experts on Reinhardt's Pivot System, Sheetz has taught thousands of students and lectured at numerous schools and conventions. He is also vice president of the Reinhardt Foundation.

Sheetz and his wife Debra, a master chef, were married in 1976. His past hobbies include golf and fishing, but he now spends his free time playing piano and trombone. He and Debra are now living, working, and teaching in Keene, New Hampshire.

Bibl.: David Sheetz's official website: www.airstreamdynamics.com; personal interview, June 26, 2011.

Sheldon, Jack (b. Jacksonville, Florida, Nov. 30, 1931). American trumpeter, singer, and actor. It would seem that Jack Sheldon has had three careers, each equally successful. His mother was a well-known swim teacher in Hollywood who taught many children of the city's elite. Jack began playing the trumpet at age twelve, and was performing in public a year later. He attended Los Angeles City College, and took lessons from Uan Rasey. He played with Tiny Moore (1944) and then served in various military bands while in the Air Force.

Jack's trumpet career began in 1952 when he started performing in Los Angeles at the Lighthouse and with a long list of musicians including Jimmy Giuffre, Wardell Gray, Jack Montrose, Dexter Gordon, Chet Baker, Art Pepper, Dave Pell (1957), Herb Geller, Curtis Counce, Stan Kenton (1958), Benny Goodman (European tour in 1959), Dizzy Gillespie, Harold Land, Frank Sinatra, Mel Tormé, Peggy Lee, Zoot Sims, Rosemary Clooney, Henry Mancini (1966), Tony Bennett, Lena Horne, Ray Brown, Marty Paich, Johnny Mandel, Sammy Davis Jr., Al Porcino (1971), Bill Berry (1976), Diane Schuur, and Woody Herman (1983). His style has been rooted in bebop, although he possesses a unique tonal quality, especially in the upper register where at times it sounds like crying.

Sheldon is known for his beautiful vocal solos. They are featured on many of his albums, plus are heard in the soundtracks of films such as Speechless, Bogus, One from the Heart, and Stuart Saves His Family. His trumpet solos are featured in other films including The Sandpipers (starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton), Flags of Our Fathers (starring Clint Eastwood), and Object of Beauty.

As a wisecracking sidekick, Sheldon was for many years a member of the orchestra on The Merv Griffin Show on television. He and Griffin were close friends. At Griffin's funeral, Sheldon performed one of Griffin's favorite songs, The Shadow of Your Smile from The Sandpipers, the solo that made Sheldon famous.

Equal to his fame as a musician, Jack Sheldon has appeared as an actor in numerous Hollywood movies and television productions. He appeared in Bette Midler's film For the Boys (1990), and in other films including Radioland Murders, Cher bon Dieu, Freaky Friday (1976), and Teacher's Pet. Television acting credits include the 1964-65 comedy series The Cara Williams Show, Dragnet, The Girl with Something Extra (1974), and Run Buddy Run (1964-65). He also made a voice-over for the 1970 cartoon series Schoolhouse Rock!.

Sheldon participated in the Benny Goodman 40th anniversary concert at Carnegie Hall in 1978. He has led several combos during his career, and since the early 1990s fronts the Jack Sheldon Orchestra that provides an excellent vehicle for his trumpet solos and sometimes crude, but always hilarious, humor. He has too many recordings to list, but a representative sampling includes Hollywood Heroes, On My Own, Stand By for Jack Sheldon, Class Act, Jack Sheldon Sings, Jack Is Back, It's What I Do, Listen UP, Freaky Friday: The Jazz Opera, and California Cool. Most of his recordings appear on the Concord Jazz and Butterfly labels. Sheldon is the subject of an award-winning documentary called Trying to Get Good: The Odyssey of Jack Sheldon (2008). He also appears in a video titled Jack Sheldon in New Orleans (1989, Leisure Video).

Playboy magazine named Jack Sheldon "Instrumental Artist of the Year" five times. Despite earlier struggles with drug addiction and alcoholism, Sheldon has maintained a strong career as a musician and entertainer. He currently resides in Hollywood Hills, California, and is an active performer. His children include sons Kevin and John, and daughters Julie and Jesse.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Jack Sheldon's official website (www.jacksheldon.com); "Jack Sheldon" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shepherd, Leo ("The Whistler") (b. Charleston, South Carolina, Aug. 19, 1926; d. Millsboro, Delaware, Aug. 17, 2000). American trumpeter. Shepherd, who received the nickname, "The Whistler," for his uncommonly high upper register on the trumpet, joined Lionel Hampton's band in September of 1946. He was an influence on many lead trumpeters including Maynard Ferguson, who often mentioned him in interviews.

Shepherd made approximately forty recordings between 1946 and 1951. He recorded with Hampton, Jimmy Scott, and Bing Crosby. He died just two days before his seventy-fourth birthday.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Leo Shepherd" (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Leo_Shepherd).

Shepley, Joe (b. 1935). American trumpeter. Shepley studied with Charles Rice, Joe Alessi Sr., and Carmine Caruso in New York, and developed into a top freelance lead trumpeter. During the 1970s, he toured with the Brazilian composer, Deodato, and also played lead for Harry Connick Jr., Don Sebesky, The Manhattan Jazz Orchestra, and many others. He fronted the group, the Collins-Shepley Galaxy (1970s), and continues to be an active player in New York City. He has recorded with Paul Desmond (1968) and Ron Carter.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Joe Shepley's official website blog: http://joeshepleytrumpet.wordpress.com.

Sherman, Roger (b. Lima, New York, June 5, 1938; d. Rochester, New York, Nov. 9, 2008). American trumpeter. Sherman attended the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Edwin Betts (1955-59), and earned the degrees bachelor of music and master of music (1959). After graduation, he joined the National Ballet Orchestra of (Toronto) Canada where he met ballerina Susan Abbey; they were married in 1961. In that same year, he left the orchestra.

In 1964, Sherman became a faculty member at West Virginia University where in addition to teaching trumpet, also served as assistant chairman of the School of Music, and performed in the West Virginia Symphonette. When he auditioned and won a position as fourth trumpet of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra in 1979, he resigned his teaching position. He played in the PSO until his retirement in 2007.

Beginning in his thirties, Sherman suffered from liver problems, but had a successful liver transplant in 1993, and continued performing and teaching at Duquesne University where he was an adjunct professor and head of the brass department.

Sherman's text, Trumpeter's Handbook, is widely used. He served as a board member of the International Trumpet Guild and was an active clinician. His students remember him as a wise and caring teacher. Eventually, Sherman's health declined due to his liver, and he died at the Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, New York, on November 9, 2008 at the age of seventy. He was a gentleman who enjoyed boats, restored old Porsche automobiles, and possessed a hearty sense of humor. He had two sons, Jeffrey and Stuart.

Bibl.: Druckanbrod, Andrew. "Obituary: Roger Sherman / 'Gentleman trumpeter' with Pittsburgh Symphony" (Post-Gazette, Nov. 14, 2008); Berntsen, Neal. "In Memoriam: Roger Sherman" (International Trumpet Guild website: www.trumpetguild.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sherock, Shorty [Cherock, Clarence Francis] (b. Minneapolis, Minnesota, Nov. 17, 1915; d. Northridge, California, Feb. 19, 1980). American trumpeter. Sherock grew up in Gary, Indiana, and played the cornet as a child. He attended the Indiana School System Music School (Gary) and the Illinois Military Academy. He later began his career by playing with Charlie Pierce, Dell Coon, Ben Pollack (1936), Frankie Masters, Jacques Renard, Jack Pettis, Seger Ellis, and Santo Pecora. His inspiration came from Roy Eldridge. Sherock was a highly trained trumpet player, having studied under Jerry Cimera, Eldon Benge, and Forrest Nicola, among others.

During the late 1930s and early '40s, Sherock played with several well-known bands including those of Jimmy Dorsey (1936-39), Bob Crosby (1939-40), Gene Krupa (1940-41), Tommy Dorsey (1941), Raymond Scott, Bud Freeman, Bob Strong, Alvino Rey, and Horace Heidt (1942-45). His solos during the 1944 Jazz at the Philharmonic concerts brought him a great deal of attention.

Sherock led his own band from 1945 to 1948, leading a recording session (four tunes) in 1946, and another one (six tunes) in 1947. He then returned to Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra (1949-50) before deciding to become a studio player in Los Angeles during the 1950s and '60s. In 1955, incorrectly credited as Shorty Sherlock, he recorded three tracks, arranged by Benny Carter, for Freddie Slack's Boogie Woogie on the 88. He played in Nelson Riddle's orchestra which backed many celebrity artists such as Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra, and Ella Fitzgerald. Sherock occasionally played and recorded Dixieland music with Matty Matlock (1958) and played swing music with Benny Carter (1962). Mostly, he played in the studios until retiring in 1979, a year before his death.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Shorty Sherock" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Sherwood, Bobby (b. Indianapolis, Indiana, May 30, 1914; d. Auburn, Mississippi, Jan. 23, 1981). American trumpeter. Sherwood played the banjo at the age of seven and began his music career as a child by playing in vaudeville shows with his parents. He later learned the guitar and trumpet, and was self-taught.

By the age of nineteen, Sherwood replaced Eddie Lang, who died unexpectedly, as Bing Crosby's guitar accompanist (1933-36). He then worked (mostly as a trumpeter) in the studios of Los Angeles (mainly MGM) and participated on several jazz recordings. He also appeared in a few movies as an actor, including Garden of the Moon (1938, uncredited), Naughty But Nice (1939), Buried Alive (1939, uncredited), and Twelfth Street Rag (1942).

Sherwood was approached by Capitol records in 1942 and asked to form a recording band. It turned out that one of his compositions, The Elk's Parade, was a hit recording. This prompted Capitol to send the band on the road. However, the self-taught musician was not well equipped to lead a band. The group was often under-rehearsed and undisciplined. Critic George T. Simon reported that the band was one of the most slovenly-looking crews he ever saw on a bandstand.

Nonetheless, Sherwood's band toured for seven years. They produced a second hit recording, another one of Sherwood's compositions, Sherwood's Forest, in 1946 that kept the band going until 1949. Sherwood returned to the studios in Los Angeles and began working as an actor on the side. He became close friends with comedian Milton Berle (who was also godfather to Sherwood's son) and appeared as an actor on several television shows including Danger (1951), The Red Buttons Show (1952), The Milton Berle Show (1953), Stars on Parade (1953), and Pal Joey (1957).

In 1954, Bobby Sherwood recorded four tunes for the Coral label in which he overdubbed himself on trumpet, mellophone, trombone, vibes, piano, guitar, bass, drums, and as a vocal quartet, forming a one-man band. During the 1950s, he also led a band that performed at several casinos in Las Vegas in addition to recording a big band album in 1957. Much of his last twenty years was spent in recording studios.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); The Internet Movie Database (www.imdb.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shew, Bobby [Joratz, Robert] (b. Albuquerque, New Mexico, Mar. 4, 1941). American trumpeter and flugelhornist. Shew has become a star in the jazz trumpet world. He began playing guitar at the age of eight, but switched to trumpet at age ten when his stepfather gave him an old Montgomery Ward trumpet. Shew was a self-taught player, and by age thirteen was playing professionally with local dance bands in Albuquerque. During the summers after graduating from Valley High School in Albuquerque (1959), he attended the first and second years of the Stan Kenton Clinic at Indiana University. He received his draft notice at about the same time. A friend told him about a trumpet opening in the NORAD Band, a solid military jazz big band, so Shew auditioned and won the position. This gave Shew his first high-level big band experience and set him on his career path.

After nearly three years in the military, Shew joined the Tommy Dorsey ghost band under Sam Donahue (1964-65). A call from Bill Chase inviting him to join Woody Herman's Thundering Herd prompted Shew to tour with Herman in 1965. In 1966, Shew joined Buddy Rich's band. During a rehearsal, Rich moved him to the lead chair, something for which he was not prepared at the time. Unable to find a suitable mouthpiece for the lead book, Shew split his lip and suffered a double hernia. He had surgery that required eleven weeks off the horn after which he continued playing with the Buddy Rich band (1966-67).

Just after leaving the NORAD band, and during his first engagement with the Tommy Dorsey orchestra, Bobby met a dancer in Las Vegas named Lisa, and they were soon married. Shew eventually moved to Las Vegas in 1967 and began performing with several show bands. He spent nine years there, also performing stints in nearby Reno and Lake Tahoe. During this time, he backed numerous celebrities including Elvis Presley, Ray Charles, Tom Jones, Robert Goulet, and Paul Anka.

In September of 1972, Bobby and Lisa Shew moved to Los Angeles where Bobby began performing as a studio and jazz player.

During this time, he did numerous sessions for movies, television, and pop recordings. His television credits include Hawaii Five-O, The Streets of San Francisco, The Bob Newhart Show, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Midnight Specials, Happy Days, Laverne and Shirley, and Eight is Enough. Movie credits include Grease I & II, Rocky I & II, Six-Pack, The Muppet Movie, The Driver, and Taxi Driver, among others.

During the late 1970s and through the 1980s, Bobby Shew became a highly sought-after lead player and jazz soloist. He performed with dozens of big bands, including those of Benny Goodman, Bill Holman, Johnny Richards, Dave Pell, Toshiko Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin, Don Menza, Frank Capp, Nat Pierce, Louie Bellson, Horace Silver (quintet), Terry Gibbs, Art Pepper, Bud Shank, Frank Strazzeri and Sam Most, Oliver Nelson, Bill Berry, Ed Shaughnessy, Bob Florence, Maynard Ferguson, Terry Edwards, Neal Hefti, Steve Allen, and Germany's Peter Herbolzheimer. Beginning in 1980, Shew also led his own quintet that recorded several albums.

Bobby Shew is one of the world's finest jazz soloists on trumpet and flugelhorn. He has recorded a large stack of albums, including Telepathy, Outstanding in His Field (which was nominated for a Grammy Award in 1980), Class Reunion, Parallel 37, Play Song, Trumpets No End (with Chuck Findley), The Tasting Room, One in a Million, Bobby Shew with the Metropole Orchestra, Easy to Love, Breakfast Wine, Bobby Shew Quintet, Aim for the Heart, I Can't Say No, Playing with Fire, Heavyweights, Salsa Caliente, Heavy Company (which won an award from RIANZ in New Zealand in 1983 for "Jazz Album of the Year"), Shewhorn, Cancãos do Amor, and You and the Night and the Music.

As one of the leading trumpet and jazz educators of the world, Bobby Shew served as Trumpet Chairman of the International Association of Jazz Educators for sixteen years. He has also served on the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild. In addition to publishing dozens of articles on trumpet playing, Shew hosted a weekly television show in New Zealand called Just Jazz for two years. He has also helped develop a line of trumpets for Yamaha, including the Bobby Shew-model trumpet and flugelhorn.

In recent years, Shew has semiretired and moved to New Mexico for a healthier lifestyle and more relaxed environment, yet he is still extremely active as a performer and clinician. He directs the Albuquerque Jazz Orchestra and plays at several jazz clubs in Albuquerque, Santa Fe, and a few other cities in New Mexico. Students fly in from around the world for private study with him. He and Lisa currently live in Corrales, New Mexico, near Albuquerque. They have a daughter, Kelly Serena Shew, born in 1975.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Bobby Shew" (www.jazztrumpetbios.com); Bobby Shew's official website (www.bobbyshew.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, June 9, 2010.

Shoffner, Robert ("Bob") Lee (b. Bessie, Tennessee, Apr. 30, 1900; d. Chicago, Illinois, Mar. 5, 1983). American trumpeter. Shoffner grew up in St. Louis and began playing the bugle and drums at age nine. He took up the piano and trumpet at age eleven. He learned to play ragtime piano before serving in the Army during World War I (1917-18). He learned trumpet under Mr. Blue and served in the 10th Cavalry Band (1917-19).

After military service, Shoffner played trumpet in Charlie Creath's band (1919) as well as with several Midwest territory bands including Everett Robbins's Jazz Screamers (1921). He moved to Chicago in 1921 and played with Freddie Keppard and Honore Dutrey. He replaced Louis Armstrong as second trumpet in King Oliver's Creole Band in 1924, and briefly played with Dave Peyton (1925) and Lottie Hightower's Nighthawks. He returned to Oliver's band from 1925-27 and also replaced Tommy Ladnier with Lovie Austin's Blue Serenaders (recording for Paramount in 1925-26). He was used as a backup soloist on recordings with Ida Cox, Hattie McDaniels, Jimmy O'Bryant (1925-26), and Luis Russell (1926).

Serious lip problems hurt Shoffner in 1927. He left Oliver's band in order to return to St. Louis and undergo a lip operation, but returned to playing in late 1927. He performed with Charlie Elgar (1928), Erskine Tate (late 1927), Jerome Carrington, Jelly Roll Morton, McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1931), Half Pint Jaxon (in Chicago, 1932-33), Jesse Stone (1937), Earl Hines, Fess Williams, Fletcher Henderson (in New York), and Hot Lips Page (1938). He formed his own band in 1940, but it was not successful.

After the demise of his own big band, Shoffner took a government job and became a part-time musician. He recorded four tunes with Richard M. Jones in 1944, but eventually retired from music. He was persuaded to come out of retirement in 1957 in order to join Frank Jackson's Original Jass All-Stars that recorded three albums for Pinnacle, one for Phillips, and one for Riverside. Illness in 1966 forced his musical retirement for good. He died at the age of eighty-two.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shook, Brian [Andrew] (b. Mansfield, Ohio, Dec. 18, 1978). American trumpeter. Shook began playing the trumpet at the age of eleven. From age fourteen to eighteen, he took lessons from Ettore Chiudioni. He attended Mansfield Christian School, and graduated from high school in 1997. He studied with Charles Pagnard at Cedarville University, and earned a bachelor of music degree in 2001. He was a T.A. at Arizona State University where he studied with David Hickman while earning a master of music degree in 2003, and doctor of musical arts degree in 2006. Additionally, he studied with Andrew Balio of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra (2007-09).

Shook's performance career includes playing and recording with The King's Brass (2004-09), Bay Street Brassworks (2006-07), and occasionally playing with the Dayton Philharmonic, The Phoenix Symphony, New Mexico Symphony, Phoenix Bach Choir, Salt River Brass, Sun City Symphony Orchestra, Lake Charles Symphony, and the Rapides Symphony Orchestra. He is currently principal trumpet of the Symphony of Southeast Texas. He has performed and lectured at several national and international conventions including the 2003, 2004, and 2006 International Trumpet Guild conferences, as well as The Juilliard School of Music, Manhattan School of Music, University of North Texas, the United States Attorney's Office (Beaumont), and the College Music Society National Conference. His biography of William Vacchiano, titled Last Stop, Carnegie Hall, is published by the University of North Texas Press.

Since 2013, Shook has been the Recording Reviews Editor of the International Trumpet Guild Journal. He has taught as an adjunct faculty member at Towson University (2007-08) and American University (2008), and is currently a fulltime professor of trumpet at Lamar University in Beaumont, Texas (since 2009).

Brian is married to Kristin (Fevig) Shook. Their daughter is Penelope Dawn (b. 2013). His hobbies include English literature and collecting pocketknives. He is also a soccer enthusiast.

Bibl.: Shook, Brian Andrew. William Vacchiano: His Career as a Trumpet Player and Pedagogue (unpublished DMA diss., Arizona State University, 2006); personal interview, Jan. 4, 2010; Brian Shook's official website: www.brianshook.com.

Shore, John (b. London, England, 1662; d. London, England, Nov. 20, 1752). English trumpeter. Son of Matthias Shore, John first trained as a lutenist and musical instrument maker, and entered the King's Music as a trumpeter in 1688. From January 13, 1708 to 1752, he was the Sergeant Trumpeter to the royal court in England (succeeding his grandfather and father); on March 7 of the same year he was appointed lutenist in royal service. He is credited with inventing the tuning fork in 1711.

Like his father, John was a proponent of the "flat(t)" (slide) trumpet invented by John Hyde that could play notes outside the natural harmonics. He earned the highest praise from his contemporaries. Music historian Sir John Hawkins (1719-89) reported that Shore, by his great ingenuity and application had extended the power of the noble instrument...beyond the reach of imagination, for he produced from it a tone as sweet as that of the hautboy [oboe]. The German composer Gottfried (Godfrey) Keller (?—1704) told Princess Anne of Denmark, later Queen Anne, that Shore's trumpet had "reached perfection in her court."

Shore retired in 1695 due to lip paralysis, but he may have been able to play again in 1697. Henry Purcell composed two sonatas for him, and other composers including Jeremiah Clarke wrote solo works for him as well. His instrument, made by William Bull c1680, survives today in the London Museum.

Bibl.: "John Shore" (Oxford Music Online); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Shore, Matthias (b. c1640; d. London, England, on or before May 14, 1700). English trumpeter. Matthias was the father of William and the more famous John Shore. On January 5, 1682 he was appointed trumpeter-in-ordinary to Charles II, and later to James II. On October 5, 1687 he was promoted to Sergeant Trumpeter to the royal household, and was leader of the sixteen trumpeters there. He was a close personal friend of Henry Purcell and introduced the trumpet into English art music in 1687 when he performed Purcell's Sound the Trumpet, Beat the Drum as a birthday ode to James II. He was also a proponent of John Hyde's flat(t) (slide) trumpet that was capable of playing notes outside of the harmonic series.

Bibl.: "Matthias Shore" (Oxford Music Online); Tarr, Edward. H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Shore, William (b. date unknown; d. London, Dec. 1707). English trumpeter. Son of Matthias Shore and older brother to John, William became a trumpeter-in-ordinary to Charles II on June 27, 1679, and became Sergeant Trumpeter to the royal household on June 27, 1700. Like his father and brother, William was a proponent of the flat(t) (slide) trumpet invented by John Hyde. He was buried at St. Martin-in-the-Fields on December 11, 1707.

Bibl.: "William Shore" (Oxford Music Online); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Short, Thomas Vowler (b. Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 24, 1856; d. St. Petersburg, Florida, Oct. 4, 1931.) Australian cornetist. Short grew up in Australia, and was considered a musical prodigy by the age of fifteen. He was a popular cornet soloist and bandleader of the Talbot Band in Victoria. At age eighteen, he led the Hamilton Band of Australia, where he was in demand as a soloist, and played with both the Melbourne Band and the Cooper & Bailey Show.

Short came to America in 1878 at age twenty-two, and took up residence in New York City. He soon became director of the 69th, 71st and 13th Regiment bands, served as cornet soloist with each, and at the same time took cornet lessons from W. Paris Chambers.

During the 1880s, Short was leader of the prominent Clapp's Band, and in 1888 became cornet soloist and assistant conductor of Innes's band, which performed at Coney Island, Saratoga, Glen Island, and the 1890 Dallas Exposition. Young Herbert Clarke was Short's assistant during the Dallas concerts. At various times, Short also played solos with the Gilmore Band and Cappa's 7th Regimental Band of New York.

Short moved to Springfield, Massachusetts, in the early 1890s to become the permanent leader of the 2nd Regiment Band of Springfield. Although he toured widely for the rest of his life, he considered Springfield to be his home. For many years, he organized and taught numerous bands throughout New England.

Short was a prolific composer. His cornet works include Our Maud, Glen Island Waltz, Soldier Boys Patrol, U & I Polka (duet), Aquarelle Polka, Emmet's Lullaby, Fantasie on Irish Airs, Fantasie on Scottish Airs, Maryland Variations, Wonder Cornet Waltz, Short and Sweet (duet for Short and Albert Sweet), and Al & Pal (duet for Short and his son Albert). He also composed several marches including Brooklyn Eagle, Our Band, and My Florida March.

Short recorded for the Edison Phonograph Company. In 1907, he was soloist with the Ringling Brothers Circus. His last known performance was a radio broadcast from the Municipal Tower in Springfield on New Year's Eve, 1921, after which he retired to St. Petersburg, Florida, about five years before his death in 1931 at the age of seventy-four; he was buried in the family plot at Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn, New York. He had a brother, Alexander, who was a prominent band organizer and teacher in Australia; a son, Albert, who was an excellent cornetist and orchestra leader in Hollywood and Chicago; and two daughters—a violinist, and a pianist.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Schwartz, Richard I. The Cornet Compendium (self-published); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shuebruk, Richard (b. Bristol, England, Aug. 23, 1853; d. 1933). British trumpeter. Shuebruk immigrated to the United States in 1873, and joined the Boston Germania Orchestra (1873) and the Handel & Haydn Society (1873-76).

Shuebruk played with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra (1878) and Frederick Innes Band, and appeared at the New York Music Festival (1882) and the Promenade Concerts in Boston (1886). He joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1885, and of the two seasons he played with the orchestra, was principal during the second season in 1886-87. In 1886, Shuebruk performed the Septuor by Saint-Saens.

During the 1910s to the 1930s, Shuebruk was a music teacher in New York City, and is best known today for his series of books, Graded Lip Trainers for Trumpet and Tongue Trainers for Trumpet. His advice was, "Don't blow harder for high notes. Pinch tighter."

Bibl.: "Principal Musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra" (www.stokowski.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Shulman, Matthew ("Matt") Benjamin [Matt Von Roderick] (b. Vermont, Oct. 7, 1974). American trumpeter. Shulman comes from a musical family; his father, Alvin Shulman played violin, and his mother, Elizabeth Steckelberg, played piano. At age three, Matt began studying the violin and piano, but switched to trumpet at age twelve. He earned a bachelor of music degree at the Oberlin Conservatory in Ohio, a master of music degree from The Juilliard School (studying with Mark Gould), and studied for a doctoral degree at New York University with Laurie Frink.

Shulman made his New York solo debut at Carnegie Hall with the New York Pops Orchestra conducted by Skitch Henderson (2002). He developed his jazz playing by performing with Kenny Reed, Joe Lovano, Kenny Werner, and others. His activities also go beyond the jazz area: in New York he has given the world premieres of Edward Green's Trumpet Concerto, Marcello Toldeo's Solitude of the World, and Timothy Newman's Intervention. He was runner-up at the Thelonius Monk International Jazz Trumpet Competition in 1997, and won the 1997 competitions for the International Trumpet Guild and the National Trumpet Competition, as well as the Vilar Global Fellowship scholarship.

Shulman has a rather unique style of playing that includes the frequent use of multiphonics incorporating vocal sounds to create an avant-garde and mystical atmosphere during concerts. He is also a singer, and can be heard on CDs such as While You Sleep and So It Goes (Jaggo Records). He was named the "Jazz Artist of the Year" by the Independent Music Awards in 2003. In 2009, Shulman changed his professional name to Matt Von Roderick and moved to Los Angeles.

Shulman is the inventor and manufacturer of the ShulmanSystem, a wooden frame that rests the trumpet on the trumpeter's breastplate, held up by a neck strap while playing. He describes it as a "resonating-balance-stabilization device" that aids in posture, breathing, and sensitivity to the instrument.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Matt Shulman" (http://steinhardt.edu/profiles/doctoral/matt_shulman).

Sibaja, José (b. Alajuela, Costa Rica, May 18, 1973). Costa Rican trumpeter. As a boy, Sibaja learned to play the glockenspiel, but switched to trumpet at age thirteen; his early trumpet teachers were Ricardo Vargas and Jorge Duarte. He attended the Colegio Redentorista San Alfonso and the Instituto de Alajuela (graduating in 1990), and studied for three months at the Conservatorio de Castella. Sibaja then joined the Miami Symphony Orchestra (1991-93) and studied with Gilbert Johnson at the University of Miami in Florida (1992-94). He played in the Orquesta Sinfonica de Venezuela (1994-97) and the Sinfonietta de Caracas (1995-97), and also taught at the Carabobo Conservatory in Valencia, Venezuela (1996-97). He returned to UM, and again studied with Johnson (1998-99).

Sibaja became a member of the band of pop star Ricky Martin in 1999, and toured and recorded with Martin until 2006. Concurrently, he was a member of the Dallas Brass (2004-05). Since 2006, he has been first trumpet with the Boston Brass, a quintet that has become world famous for its versatile and exciting shows and many recordings. Sibaja has performed on television for the Grammy Awards, American Music Awards, MTV Music Awards, Total Request Live, The Rosie O'Donnell Show, Late Night with David Letterman, The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Saturday Night Live, and other shows. In addition, he has played on more than three hundred professional recordings, including with artists Celia Cruz, Elvis Crespo, Franco de Vita, and Gloria Estefan.

Sibaja is married to Patricia Cerezo, an aesthetician. He claims that his hobbies are soccer, soccer, and more soccer!

Bibl.: José Sibaja's official website: www.josesibaja.com; personal interview, Sept. 6, 2011.

Sickler, Don[ald] (b. Spokane, Washington, Jan. 6, 1944). American trumpeter and arranger. Sickler began his music career at the age of four by studying piano with his mother. He took up the trumpet at age ten, and two years later formed a Dixieland group that soon performed at local dances. Sickler received his music degree from Gonzaga University in 1967, and then studied at the Manhattan School of Music in New York with Donald Byrd (1970). He freelanced and played in various Broadway pit orchestras while working for a music publishing company.

Sickler's early playing career includes working with Philly Joe Jones during the 1970s, and as a trumpeter and arranger for the Tadd Dameron tribute band called Dameronia (1982-85). He performed with the Monk Reunion Orchestra (1985-87), and worked as a trumpeter and arranger for Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1989), Superblue, Clifford Jordan Big Band, James Williams, Jaki Byard, Panama Francis, Joe Henderson, and his own Special Septet (1989, with Jackie McLean and Johnny Griffin). His greatest work was with T.S. Monk's Sextet, serving as trumpeter and arranger from 1991 to 1998.

Blue Note Records hired Sickler as a record producer and arranger. He has produced five Grammy Award-winning CDs, and has published over three hundred music arrangements. Downbeat magazine has given him numerous awards as a producer, arranger, and trumpeter. He has worked with hundreds of well-known jazz artists, including trumpeters Arturo Sandoval, Clark Terry, Snooky Young, Wallace Roney, Roy Hargrove, Wynton Marsalis, Art Farmer, Tom Harrell, Woody Shaw, Lew Soloff, Jimmy Owens, Jon Faddis, Jack Sheldon, Claudio Roditi, Johnny Coles, and Freddie Hubbard.

As a trumpeter, Don Sickler has recorded for labels such as Blue Note, Delos, Fantasy, Muse, N2K, Uptown, HighNote, Soul Note, Somethin' Else, Verve, Sunnyside, and Reservoir. His albums as leader include Night Watch (Uptown), Reflections (HighNote), Superblue (Blue Note), Superblue II (Blue Note), and The Music of Kenny Dorham (Reservoir). Sickler is an associate faculty member and director of jazz studies at Columbia University.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Don Sickler" (www.origins-records.com); Don Sickler's official website (http://donsickler.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Siders, Thomas ("Tom") (b. c1985). Siders grew up in Champaign, Illinois. He began taking piano lessons at the age of six, but switched to the trumpet at age ten, and for the next few years took lessons from Michael Allen, Sal Percoco, Michael Ewald, and Ray Sasaki. His main interest in music was jazz.

Siders studied with Sasaki at the University of Texas from 2003 to 2007, earning a bachelor of music degree. He played in the Austin City Brass and other groups before attending Rice University in Houston where he studied with Marie Speziale. After graduating with a master's degree in 2009, Siders participated in the Tanglewood Institute's fellowship program (summer 2009) where he received the Voisin Trumpet Award. He then received his final training as a member of the New World Symphony in Florida.

Siders won a position as assistant principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and commenced duties in January of 2010. He has played with the Houston Symphony Orchestra, Houston Grand Opera, and the Santa Fe Symphony.

Bibl.: "Thomas Siders" (www.bso.org); Speziale, Marie. "Tom Siders to Boston Symphony Orchestra" (News Item, International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2010).

Siebert, Alan H[arold] (b. Brooklyn, New York, July 8, 1955). American trumpeter. Siebert grew up in East Meadow, New York, the son of Harold (a salesman) and Marilyn Siebert (a homemaker). He has a sister named Linda (b. 1958). Alan began playing the trumpet at age nine, and his first teachers were Kenneth Sepe and David Osika.

Upon graduating from Port Jefferson High School in 1973, Siebert attended the State University of New York at Fredonia, where he studied with Dr. William Dederer, and earned a bachelor of music education degree in 1977. He also attended the University of Michigan (1977-78), where he studied with Clifford Lillya, and received a master of music degree. He taught in the public schools of Connecticut for two years (1978-80), and was trumpet professor at the University of Wisconsin-Superior (1980-82). Siebert worked towards a doctor of musical arts degree at Arizona State University, where he served as a graduate teaching assistant to professor David Hickman (1982-84).

After one year of doctoral residency at ASU, Siebert won a position as assistant principal of the San Diego Symphony Orchestra (1983-84). He was soon awarded the position of principal trumpet, and played several seasons in that capacity (1984-90). In addition, he won and held the positions of principal trumpet of the San Diego Opera Orchestra and San Diego Chamber Orchestra, and served as an adjunct faculty member at San Diego State University. During his last year with the San Diego Symphony, Siebert took a one-year leave of absence to teach at Michigan State University (1989-90). In the fall of 1990, Siebert was named professor of trumpet at the College-Conservatory of Music, University of Cincinnati, a position he continues to hold.

Siebert has performed with the Summit Brass, Carillon Brass, Dayton Philharmonic, Mid-America Trumpet Ensemble, San Diego Brass Consort, and Westwind Brass. He has recorded three solo CDs: Hornpipes (Integra), Wood Wind Metal and Brass (Rodgers), and Stargazer (Equilibrium). He is also a coauthor of the text, Teaching Brass: A Resource Manual (McGraw-Hill). Among Siebert's best-known students are Joseph Bowman, James Ackley, Chris Kiradjieff, Valentin Lukashuk, Michael Walk, Christian Pagnard, Günnar Bruning, Scott Belck, and Jason Sanders.

Due to overplaying, a muscle tear in the obicularis oris (upper lip) in 1997 caused Siebert to suffer serious playing difficulties for several years. He underwent successful surgery in 2002, and returned to normal performing capacity in 2003.

Seibert and his wife Cathy have been married since 1977, and have two sons, Christopher (b. 1984) and Alexander (b. 1990). He enjoys wine collecting and gardening.

Bibl.: "Alan Siebert" (2010 International Trumpet Guild Conference program book biography); "Alan Siebert" (www.alansiebert.com); "Alan Siebert" (www.ccm.uc.edu); personal interview, July 5, 2010.

Sielert, Vern (b. Santa Monica, California, Aug. 17, 1966). American trumpeter. Sielert grew up in Westport, Connecticut, and graduated from Staples High School in 1984. He received his bachelor and master of music degrees in jazz and music education at the University of North Texas under Keith Johnson, and a DMA in trumpet performance at the University of Illinois under Michael Ewald and Ray Sasaki. His other teachers include Jack Adams and Don Jacoby. Sielert then taught at Normal Community West High School in Normal, Illinois, Illinois State University, and Millikin University before joining the Baylor University faculty as jazz director. Along the way, he performed with Rosemary Clooney, Freddie Hubbard, The Spinners, Bobby Shew, Don Lanphere, Natalie Cole, Michael Feinstein, Gerald Wilson, and Ralph Carmichael. He has also performed with the Illinois Symphony Orchestra, Illinois Chamber Orchestra, Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, Norwegian Cruise Lines, UNT One O'Clock Lab Band, and Walt Disney World.

Sielert moved to Seattle, Washington, in 2001 and assumed duties as jazz and studio jazz ensemble director at the University of Washington. He also performed and recorded with the Jim Knapp Orchestra, Emerald City Jazz Orchestra, Marc Seales Quintet, Seattle Repertory Jazz Orchestra, Phil Kelly's NW Prevailing Winds, and the Jay Thomas Big Band. In 2005, he hosted the Carmine Caruso International Jazz Trumpet Competition. Sielert remained in his position at the University of Washington until 2006 when he assumed duties as trumpet teacher and director of jazz studies at the Lionel Hampton School of Music at the University of Idaho in Moscow. He released a CD, From There to Here, in 2007 on the Ponyboy label. He is an active clinician and adjudicator. He is married to Vanessa Sielert and has a son, Beck Sielert (b. 2010).

Bibl.: Frink, Laurie. "ITG Profile: Vern Sielert" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2006); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); personal interview, Mar. 16, 2010.

Sievers, Karl (b. Boston, Massachusetts, Feb. 23, 1955). American trumpeter. Sievers grew up in Louisville, Kentucky. He studied with Delbert Hoon and Leon Rapier, both of the Louisville Orchestra. After graduating from Ballard High School in 1973, he attended Indiana University until 1980, where he earned a bachelor of music degree studying with Louis Davidson and William Adam, and a master of music degree (DMA not completed) studying with William Adam. He also learned a great deal from Dominic Spera, director of jazz studies at IU. Sievers completed his DMA degree at the University of Missouri-Kansas City's Conservatory of Music (1990-91) studying with Keith Benjamin.

A highly versatile musician, Sievers has performed as lead trumpet on live television (seven years as lead trumpet with the PTL Television Show in Charlotte, North Carolina), toured with numerous show bands, participated in many commercial recording sessions, and has performed with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra, Dayton Philharmonic, Indianapolis Symphony, the Cincinnati Ballet Orchestra (seven years as coprincipal trumpet), and is the current principal trumpet of the Oklahoma City Philharmonic.

Sievers taught at Northwest Missouri State University (1989-92), Wright State University in Dayton (1992-99), and is currently professor of trumpet at the University of Oklahoma (since 1999). He is the general manager of the annual National Trumpet Competition at George Mason University, and is a past board member and present editorial committee member of the International Trumpet Guild.

Sievers and his wife, violinist Beth Sievers, have three children: Lauren (b. 1982), Emily (b. 1987), and Tom (b. 1995). His hobbies include fishing, motorcycles, golf, woodworking, and raising champion Rhodesian Ridgeback dogs.

Bibl.: Greig, Murray. "The Oklahoma City Symphony Trumpet Section" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Mar. 2005); Trumpet Celebrity Interviews (www.r-o-d-d-y-t-r-u-m-p-e-t.cc/sievers.html); personal interview Apr. 1, 2010.

Silberschlag, Jeffrey (b. Pikesville, Maryland, c1950). American trumpeter and conductor. Silberschlag's father was a businessman by day, and a jazz drummer by night. At age five or six, Jeffrey began his life in music when his grandmother gave him an old bugle once owned by his grandfather, a European circus musician. His father arranged for him to study with Donald Tison, principal of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. Silberschlag soon became a member of the Maryland Youth Orchestra, and played with the Peabody Conservatory Brass Ensemble. He attended the Hartt School of Music while at the University of Hartford as a premed major, but decided to devote himself exclusively to the study of music. He transferred to the Manhattan School of Music where he studied with William Vacchiano. Additional study was with Robert Nagel, Gerard Schwarz, and at the Institute for Advanced Music Study in Montreux, Switzerland, under Pierre Thibaud.

Silberschlag's early career was spent as a trumpeter in various orchestras including the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra (coprincipal), Italian National Symphony RAI-Torino (principal), and the New York City Opera-National Company Orchestra. He developed a distinguished solo career, appearing with numerous orchestras, and recording with the London Symphony Orchestra, Royal Liverpool Philharmonic, Seattle Symphony, Czech Radio Orchestra, Warsaw Philharmonic, Maryland Bach Aria Group, and the Toronto Chamber Orchestra. His albums include The American Trumpet with the Seattle Symphony Orchestra conducted by Gerard Schwarz. In 1991, he was cowinner of the Newton T. Dodge Prize for Creative and Scholarly Achievement. He has recorded for the Naxos and Crystal labels.

Silberschlag joined the faculty at St. Mary's College of Maryland in 1988. He taught trumpet and conducted the school orchestra, as well as serving as chair of the music department from 1997 to 2004. He has guest conducted all over the world with such orchestras as Orchestra dei Filharmonici di Torino, Symphony Orchestra of Romania, Orchestra de Tre Mondi, London Philharmonic, Orchestra of St. Luke's, and the Italian National Opera Orchestra.

Since 2000, Jeffrey Silberschlag has been the music director and conductor of the Chesapeake Orchestra and River Concert Series and is codirector of the USA-Italy Music Festival held in Alba, Italy. He is also Artist-in-Residence with the Maryland Youth Orchestra.

Silberschlag is married to Deborah Greitzer, a bassoonist. Their sons are Nathaniel and Zachary.

Bibl.: Wixon, Ross. "The Many Influences on Jeff Silberschlag" (www.smcm.edu/rivergazzette/Fall2010/maestro.html); "Jeffrey Silberschlag" (www.artistsinternational.com); "Jeffrey Silberschlag" (www.smcm.edu).

Simanovich, Alexander (b. Bobruysk, Belarus, Oct. 4, 1955). Belarussian trumpeter. Simanovich studied at music schools in his home city (1967-70), Novopolozk (1970-75), and with Vitaly Volkov at the Minsk Conservatory. His career began as a principal of the opera and ballet orchestra in Novopolozk, and as a teacher at the music school there (1980-84). From 1984 to 1989, he was principal of the Military Orchestra in East Berlin, and from 1989 to 2002 was in the Central Military Orchestra in St. Petersburg that toured Germany, Spain, and Sweden. In 1990, he took over the trumpet class of Veniamin Margolin at the St. Petersburg Conservatory for two years.

Since 1994, Simanovich has been a member of The Russian Five brass quintet with tours thorough Finland, Sweden, Germany, and Austria. This group won a competition in Kiev in 2003. He also teaches (since 2004) at the Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka Music School in St. Petersburg.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Šimek, Stanislav (b. Prague, Czech Republic, Aug. 18, 1925; d. Prague, Czech Republic, Sept. 28, 1999). Czech trumpeter. Šimek studied with Adolf Scherbaum in Bratislava, and with Jaroslav Kolář. He was principal trumpet of the National Theater Orchestra of Prague from 1952 to 1974, and performed on many duet recitals with the famous Adolf Scherbaum. He can be heard on two of Scherbaum's albums for the DGG label: Fanfare Royals and Virtuoso Trumpet Concertos, Vol. 3 (1967), as well as Trumpet Music from Bohemia (1969, with the Paris Chamber Orchestra conducted by Paul Kuentz).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace. Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Simmonds, Ronald ("Ron") Alan (b. Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, Oct. 16, 1928; d. Vania, Spain, Oct. 24, 2005). Canadian trumpeter. Simmonds grew up in England. He began playing trumpet at age seventeen, and by age nineteen, was a member of Tommy Sampson's orchestra, which made several international tours (lead trumpet in 1949). After leaving the Simpson organization in 1949, he worked with the big bands of Oscar Rabin (1949-50), Leon Ray, Vic Lewis (1950-51), and the Squadronaires (1951-53). In 1953, he replaced trumpeter Albert Hall in Jack Parnell's big band, a group he played with on and off throughout the 1950s. He also worked in a London pit orchestra during a three-year production of Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story.

Simmonds replaced Bobby Pratt in Ted Heath's band in 1960, but about this time, his hearing deteriorated to perhaps fifty percent. In 1962, he joined John Dankworth's band, and in 1963-64 moved to Munich, Germany, where he played for the German Radio. In 1965, he moved to West Berlin, where he composed, arranged, and performed as a freelance musician (including several performances of music by George Gershwin with German symphony orchestras), and with several visiting American big bands led by Stan Kenton, Henry Mancini, Lionel Hampton, Quincy Jones, and others. He worked with the Hessischer Rundfunk (1977), recorded with Acker Bilk, and hosted his own weekly showcase on the American State Department's RIAS radio network. In addition, he composed music for films, and authored several plays.

During a dental operation in 1980, Simmonds's lower lip became paralyzed, so he began working as a pianist with the Saarbrücken Radio Symphony Orchestra. In 1993, he and his wife Conny retired to Costa Blanca, Spain. He died of cancer in 2005, just one week after his seventy-seventh birthday.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Ron Simmonds Dies" (www.fuzzers.co.uk/?Page=Ron+Simmonds); "Ron Simmonds" (www.allmusic.com/artist/ron-simmonds-p600038/biography).

Simões, Nailson (b. Quipapá, Pernambuco, Brazil, 1956). Brazilian trumpeter. Simões earned a bachelor of music degree in Brazil before studying with Charles Schlueter at the New England Conservatory in Boston (master of music, 1986) and at the Catholic University of America (PhD in music, 1991). Other teachers include Gérard Hostein and Maviael Celestino. Before studying in the U.S., he founded the BRASSIL Quintet (1980), which recorded three CDs, performed as a member of the Recife Symphony Orchestra and São Paulo Symphony Orchestra, and taught trumpet at the Federal University of Paraiba. He won prizes at the 6th Contest of Young Instrumentalists Piracicaba (São Paulo, 1997) and the 2nd National Brazilian Contest in Rio de Janeiro (1994).

Currently, Simões is professor of trumpet at the University of Rio de Janeiro and a member of the Symphony Orchestra of Campinas in São Paulo (since 2000). He is also a member of the Art Metal Quintet, Anacleto de Medeiros, and the Trumpets of UniRio Group. He released the first Brazilian solo CD for trumpet and piano through the Brazilian Academy of Music (2001); his other CDs include When Anacieto, Always Chiquinha, and Trumpet Solo Brazil. He was a member of the board of directors of the International Trumpet Guild (1999-2001), founded the Association of Trumpet Players of Brazil (1990), and has been instrumental in bringing Charles Schlueter to Brazil for several workshops.

Bibl.: "Trumpeters of Ceará: Nailson Simões" (http://trompetistasceara.blogspot.com/2009/07/nailson-simoes.html); (www.trumpetguild.org/news/brazil.htm); "Nailson Simões" (http://brassil.vilabol.uol.com.br/nailing.htm).

Simon, Frank (b. Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1889; d. Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 28, 1967). American cornetist. Simon's parents lived in Middletown, Ohio, where they owned a bakery; as a boy, Frank delivered bread to customers on his bike. At age nine, he started to play the flute, but at age eleven switched to cornet. At age thirteen, his parents arranged for him to study with the great Herman Bellstedt Jr. in Cincinnati. Simon always claimed that his three years with Bellstedt were invaluable throughout his career.

Simon's first solo appearance was with William Kopp's band in 1909. The following year, he became a member of the band, which toured the Midwest and performed at important venues in Ohio. In 1910, Simon became a trumpet player in the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and also played cornet in Weber's Band from 1910 through 1914.

In August of 1914, John Philip Sousa engaged Simon to serve as assistant to Herbert L. Clarke, and the two of them became great friends. Simon often credited Clarke for teaching him much about cornet playing and the band business. Simon often performed solos with the band, and his former teacher Bellstedt composed several solos for him. Simon later published these when he established his own publishing company in Cincinnati during the last years of his life.

When Clarke left the Sousa Band in 1917, Simon was named as his replacement. Following the great Herbert Clarke as soloist must have been a daunting task, and being a perfectionist, Simon often experienced a great deal of stress, which resulted in somewhat inconsistent performances. Adding to the pressure was the presence of two great assistant cornet players and soloists, Bert Brown and the nineteen-year-old Del Staigers.

Simon played with the Sousa band through the 1919-20 season. He opened a teaching studio in downtown Chicago and gave cornet lessons for a few months before returning to Middletown, Ohio, where he established the Armco Band for the Armco Steel Corporation. The band started its first season with only nineteen performers, but quickly grew to fifty-two within a year. The band played many live radio concerts that were broadcasted throughout the Ohio area by WLW in Cincinnati. The band toured a great deal in 1927 and 1928, and performed at the Toronto Exhibition in 1928. In 1929 and 1930, the band was heard nationally through radio broadcasts on NBC. It was disbanded just before World War II due to a poor economy.

Simon was a charter member of the American Bandmasters Association, and served as its president from 1935 to 1937. He joined the faculty at the Cincinnati Conservatory in 1949. He toured a great deal as a cornet soloist and conductor, and conducted the National Band of the Air in that same year. In 1950, he became a faculty member at the University of Arizona, but in 1966 he rejoined the music faculty at the Cincinnati Conservatory, where he taught cornet until his death in 1967. Two of his best-known students were Billy Butterfield and Al Hirt.

Some of Frank Simon's compositions for band include Cincinnati Post, Four Square, and Crusaders. His best-known cornet solo is Willow Echoes.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Simon, Wilhelm (b. Teichhausen, Germany, Aug. 30, 1898; d. Dresden, Germany, July 21, 1969). German trumpeter. Simon began his career in the Berlin State Opera Orchestra, and then in 1925 joined the Dresden Staatskapelle as principal trumpet until 1962. During the summers from 1935 to 1960, he was a member of the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra. He was the teacher of Rudolf Haase and Hans-Joachim Krumpfer. Simon played everything from Bach to Wagner on his Heckel B-flat trumpet. (In 1950, he performed the 2nd Brandenburg Concerto by Bach an octave lower than written.)

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (Third English Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Siqueira, Gilberto (b. Brazil, c1954). Brazilian trumpeter. Siqueira started his musical training on piano, but began playing the trumpet at age thirteen. He studied with Wilfredo Cardoso in Buenos Aires, and graduated from the St. Paul Conservatory of Music and Drama in Montevideo, Uruguay. He debuted as a soloist in 1969, performing with the Symphonic Orchestra of Porto Alegre. His professional orchestral career began at age nineteen c1973 in the São Paulo Philharmonic Orchestra. In 1973, he became the principal trumpet of the Orquestra Sinfônica do Estado de São Paulo, a position he still holds; he has also played in the orchestra's brass quintet. He has founded several brass ensembles including the Paulistano Brass Quintet.

Siqueira is one of the leading trumpet teachers in Brazil. He has presented courses at numerous music festivals, and is a professor at the Tatura Conservatory. He is involved with designing trumpets in partnership with Weril Instruments.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Master of the Trumpet" (www.projetomusical.combr/destaques/index.php?pg=des23); "Gilberto Siqueira" (www.festivalcamposdojordao.org.br/boisistas_professores_interno.php?id=203).

Sirinek, Robert (b. c1945) American trumpeter. Sirinek was a leading trumpeter in New York City during the 1970s. He played in the New York Trumpet Ensemble led at the time by Gerard Schwarz, and recorded the NYTE album The Sound of Trumpets for the Delos label. He joined the trumpet section of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in 1977, was appointed assistant manager in 1979, became personnel manager in 1986, and was promoted to orchestra manager in 1990. His wife, Elaine Douvas, is principal oboe of the Met orchestra.

Bibl.: "Robert Sirinek New Manager" (www.nytimes.com/1990/10/25/arts/met-opera-appoints-director.html).

Skomorovsky, Yakov Borisovich (b. Kherson, Ukraine, Aug. 6, 1889; d. Leningrad, Russia, July 4, 1955). Russian trumpeter and bandleader. Skomorovsky studied with Alexander Gordon at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, receiving a special solo prize upon graduation in 1912. While a student, he was principal trumpet of the St. Petersburg Symphony Orchestra of the Russian Musical Society from 1908 to 1912. He was principal of the St. Petersburg-Petrograd Theatre Orchestra from 1912 to 1918 and principal of the Petrograd-Leningrad Maliy Opera House Orchestra from 1918 to 1932, as well as principal of the Petrograd-Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra from 1921 to 1933.

Skomorovsky is best remembered as an excellent jazz player who from 1927 to 1946 established and led a concert jazz band, one of the first of its type in Russia. According to Anatoly Selianin, he was a fantastic jazz player who made many records. He had a strong and beautiful tone with perfect technique. His band performed at numerous navy bases during World War II. From 1951 until his death at the age of sixty-five, he taught at the Rimsky-Korsakov Navy Music School in Leningrad.

Bibl.: Tarr, Edward H. East Meets West (Pendragon Press); Laplace, Michel. *Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Si*ècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Skoniczin, Robert (b. Coatesville, Pennsylvania, Sept. 11, 1970). American trumpeter. Skoniczin's father Richard was a former band director and musical entertainer, and his mother Judith a homemaker. While growing up in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, Robert taught himself to play the trumpet. After graduating from Coatesville Area High School in 1988 as valedictorian, he entered Gettysburg College, where he studied with Chris Tranchitella, a former principal trumpet with the Kennedy Center Opera Orchestra. Skoniczin completed his bachelor of science in music education degree in 1992, and then earned a master of music degree in performance, studying with Vince Penzarella at the Manhattan School of Music in 2002. In 2002, he was selected for the Manhattan School's Cecil Collins Award for Outstanding Brass Performance.

A versatile performer, Skoniczin has performed with OperaDelaware, The Chamber Orchestra of Philadelphia, The Bach Choir of Bethlehem (PA) orchestra, New Jersey Opera, Opera Company of Philadelphia, Reading Symphony, Ocean City Pops, Wilmington String Ensemble, Gramercy Brass Orchestra, Sammy Kaye Orchestra, Brian Pastor Big Band, NFL Films recordings, plus numerous Broadway shows in Philadelphia and Wilmington. He has also backed artists such as Martina McBride, Anne Murray, Pete Fountain, Collin Raye, Marvin Hamlisch, and the Mannheim Steamroller. Skoniczin performed for Mother Teresa and former Chinese President Jiang Zemin during his visit to the United States. In 2007, Skoniczin was named associate conductor of Bravo Brass, the Philadelphia Youth Orchestra's brass ensemble. He is an active freelance performer in the Philadelphia area.

Skoniczin and his wife Cheryl have two children, a son named Patrick (b. 2006) and a daughter named Cecilia (b. 2008). His hobbies include woodworking.

Bibl.: "Robert Skoniczin" (http://www.pyos.org/pages/about/brass.php#skoniczin); personal interview, February 12, 2010.

Slaughter, Susan (b. McCordsville, Indiana, July 5, 1945). American trumpeter. While growing up on a farm near Indianapolis, Slaughter chose to play the cornet at age ten after hearing Rafael Méndez on television. Her first lessons were with her band director, Robert Miller, and during high school she studied with Daniel Minter at the Jordan College of Music in Indianapolis. She earned a bachelor of music degree at Indiana University in 1967, studying with Herbert Mueller, and was awarded IU's Performer's Certificate. During the summers of 1966 and 1968, she studied with Robert Nagel at the Aspen Music Festival, and in 1969 received a fellowship to the Tanglewood Music Festival where she had lessons with Armando Ghitalla.

Slaughter became principal trumpet of the Toledo Symphony Orchestra in Ohio in 1967, but left this position in 1969 to become fourth trumpet of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Three weeks before the start of the 1972-73 season, principal trumpeter Roger Blackburn resigned, so Slaughter was named acting principal for that season. She won the permanent principal job in March of 1973, becoming one of the first female principal trumpeters of a major symphony orchestra. (The first was Wanda Pittman Yates, principal of the Houston Symphony Orchestra.) Knowing how difficult it was for women to attain any type of brass position in a fulltime symphony orchestra (she had been previously denied invitations to audition for several leading orchestras because she is female), she devoted much of her life to championing women's rights, especially in the arts.

Slaughter established the International Women's Brass Conference in 1991, with full conventions taking place thus far in 1993, 1997, 2000, 2003, 2006, 2010, and 2012. She also established the all-female large ensemble, Monarch Brass, and has received the Pioneer Award from the IWBC. She has served on the boards of the International Trumpet Guild, St. Louis Volunteer Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts, and the St. Louis Women's Chorale. She has performed and lectured at numerous national conferences and universities, and was one of the leading ten women invited to perform at the 1995 International Brassfest at Indiana University hosted by David Hickman, Daniel Perantoni, and Leonard Candelaria. (Unfortunately, scheduling conflicts prevented her and seven other women artists from attending.)

During her forty years as a member of the St. Louis Symphony, Slaughter was featured as a soloist or duet partner with artists such as Wynton Marsalis, Kathleen Battle, Doc Severinsen, Christine Brewer, and Al Hirt. She established the St. Louis Holiday Brass Concerts that have raised over $300,000 during fourteen years. She retired from the orchestra in 2010.

Slaughter, a very religious person, received YWCA's Special Leadership Award in the Arts, the American Federation of Musicians Owen Miller Award for Loyalty, Dedication and Fairness in Actions and Deeds, the 2007 Excellence in the Arts award from the St. Louis Arts and Education Council, and was nominated for the Ladies Home Journal "Woman of the Year" award. She has performed with the Summit Brass and has taught at the St. Louis Conservatory (now defunct).

Since college, Slaughter had embouchure difficulties because of inwardly slanting lower left teeth that prevented her lips from sealing firmly against the mouthpiece; she studied with Arnold Jacobs, Claude Gordon, and Laurie Frink to help overcome this difficulty. She eventually had small plastic dental "crowns" made that are placed over her teeth whenever she plays. As she became older, other teeth began to slant in as well, causing her to add several more dental appliances. She gave an informative lecture about this subject during the 2006 International Trumpet Guild Conference at Rowan University.

Slaughter has been an avid St. Louis Cardinals baseball fan since moving to St. Louis in 1969, and has performed the National Anthem at numerous Cardinals games; she was invited to perform during game three of the Baseball World Series in 1991 (Atlanta).

Bibl.: Card, Robyn. "Susan Slaughter: Consummate Musician and Inspired Pioneer" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Oct. 2010); Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Photo credit: Vera H. Olcott. Used by permission of the International Trumpet Guild.

Smedvig, Rolf [Thurston] (b. Seattle, Washington, Apr. 2, 1952).

American trumpeter. Smedvig grew up in Seattle, Washington, and made his debut as a soloist at age thirteen with the Seattle Symphony Orchestra. He attended Boston University where he studied with Armando Ghitalla. He also briefly studied with Rafael Méndez, Don Jacoby, and Maurice André. While he was attending the Tanglewood Institute during the summer of 1971, Maestro Leonard Bernstein invited Smedvig to perform as solo trumpeter in the world premiere of Mass, which was played at the opening the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

At age nineteen, Smedvig won a position as third and assistant first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He remained in this position until becoming the acting principal trumpet from 1979-81 following Ghitalla's retirement from the orchestra. Smedvig left the BSO in 1981 in order to pursue a career as a soloist, and to play with the Empire Brass Quintet which he had cofounded in 1974.

The Empire Brass Quintet remains one of the world's most active brass ensembles, and has toured in over thirty-five countries. It has released over a dozen CDs on Telarc, Sony/CBS, and Angel/EMI and has appeared on several television programs including the Today Show, Good Morning America, and Mr. Roger's Neighborhood. The group has also been heard nationally on such radio broadcasts as St. Paul Sunday Morning and Traditions.

As a soloist, Smedvig has played recitals worldwide, as well as at conferences and festivals including the International Trumpet Guild, Wolf Trap, Chautauqua Music Festival, Bach Festival at Marlboro, and the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico. His solo CDs on Telarc have earned him an international reputation and a Grammy Award nomination. American Record Guide wrote, Absolutely gorgeous playing with phrasing that sounds squeezed out of a tube. This release should help establish Rolf Smedvig as one of the finest trumpet players now before the public...

Smedvig is a noted composer and member of ASCAP. In 1996, the Boston Ballet premiered his Passage (music recorded on Telarc label). He has published several compositions and arrangements through G. Schirmer, KRS Publishing, and International Music Company. He is also an active conductor, and has served as music director of the Williamsport Symphony and the Cambridge Chamber Orchestra. He has also been guest conductor of the Honolulu Symphony, Northwest Chamber Orchestra, Zurich Tohnhalle Orchestra, and the Simon Bolivar Orchestra of Caracas, Venezuela.

Smedvig and the Empire Brass Quintet have been represented by Columbia Artists Management, Inc. in New York for decades. He holds an international chair at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He is an active soloist and has performed with the National Symphony, NHK Philharmonic in Japan, New World Symphony, Chicago Symphony Orchestra of Rivenia, and the Scottish Chamber Orchestra. He has taught at Boston University and the Tanglewood Institute.

Bibl.: Yeo, Douglas. "Trumpet Players of the Boston Symphony" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1990); Empire Brass Quintet website (www.empirebrass.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Smith, Carl ("Tatti") (b. Marshall, Texas, 1908; d. date unknown). American trumpeter. Smith grew up in Marshall, Texas. He performed with several territorial bands including those of Terence Holder (1931) and Gene Coy (1931-34), but moved to Kansas City to join Count Basie's band in 1936. He played with the Basie organization for a year, but was let go along with several others when the band reached New York City. He co-led a sextet known as Jones-Smith, Inc. that provided him with his first big break on October 9, 1936 when the solo trumpeter, Hot Lips Page, suffered a cracked lip and was unable to make a recording session. Smith took the solos on Lady Be Good, Shoe Shine Boy, Evenin', and Boogie Woogie, firmly establishing his place in jazz history.

Smith played and recorded with Skeets Tolbert's Gentlemen of Swing (1938-42), and played on and off with Hot Lips Page's big band, Leon Abbey, Benny Carter (1942), and Chris Columbus (1944). After World War II, Smith moved to South America, performing in Argentina and Brazil. Unfortunately, no information about him after 1950 is available. The few recordings he made are valuable additions to any jazz library. His wife, Vivian Smith, was a piano player.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Carl "Tatti" Smith" (www.tshaonline.org).

Photo: Carl 'Tatti' Smith with Skeets Tolbert and Harold Austin, Dec. 1940.

Smith, Cladys ("Jabbo") (b. Pembroke, Pennsylvania, Dec. 24, 1908; d. New York, Jan. 16, 1991). American trumpeter and singer. Smith's father, a barber, died when he was four years old. His mother was a church organist and cleaner of Pullman cars. She had difficulty providing for Cladys, and decided to send him to the Jenkins Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, when he was six. The orphanage housed nearly three thousand street kids, of whom many were considered incorrigible. The kids received very strict discipline and were often whipped for bad behavior. The only redeeming aspect of the orphanage for Smith was that they formed a kid's band that played on the streets and at various places where money could be raised. He studied under Alonzo Mills at the orphanage and got advice from fellow orphan Gus Aiken.

Smith tried to run away from the orphanage whenever possible, but he would always be caught. At his mother's request, Smith was invited to play in the band when he was ten. He learned the trombone but was soon switched to trumpet because of the band's instrumentation needs. He received a good musical education and at age thirteen managed to run away for three months, playing in Eagle Eye Shield's band in Jacksonville, Florida. However, he was caught and returned to the home until he was sixteen. I snuck myself out. I went to Philadelphia where my sister lived, and joined Harry Marsh's band. Later I went to Atlantic City and joined the band led by my classmate Gus Aiken, and soon afterward I bumped into Charlie Johnson, told Smith. He became the featured soloist in Johnson's Paradise Ten from 1925 to 1928, recording three high-powered solos on the six tunes that they recorded.

While with Johnson, Smith also played with Eva Taylor (1927), Perry Bradford's Georgia Strutters, and subbed for Bubber Miley in Duke Ellington's band (November 1927). Ellington was so impressed with Smith that he offered him a regular position in the trumpet section, but Smith turned it down because he didn't think that the money was good enough. This was unfortunate because soon after, Johnson fired Smith because of constant tardiness and excessive drinking.

Jabbo Smith, nicknamed by friend James Reddick after the character Jabbo in the western movie Tumbleweeds (produced by William S. Hart in 1925 and remade with sound in 1939), then played in a pit orchestra for the show, Keep Shufflin', and also played with James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, and Garvin Bushell. He recorded four titles with the Louisiana Sugar Babies in 1928 and also played with the bands of Carroll Dickerson, Sammy Stewart, Earl Hines, Erskine Tate, Charles Elgar, Jelly Roll Morton, and Tiny Parham. He engaged in several cutting contests with Louis Armstrong, but never won. However, many people were impressed with his bravado style and innovative improvisations. He soon became the only trumpet soloist capable of keeping up with the famed Armstrong.

Brunswick records became aware of Smith's abilities when he recorded as a guest with banjoist Ikey Robinson's quintet. In Brunswick's effort to compete against Armstrong's record sales for other labels, Smith was engaged to record nineteen tunes. His group, the Rhythm Aces, featured Smith on trumpet, trombone, and in vocal solos. Some of his finest recordings are on the titles Till Times Get Better, Jazz Battle, Band Box Stomp, Sweet and Low Blues, and Decatur Street Tutti. However, the economy was heading into the Depression, and record sales were poor. Also, the fact that Smith lived in the Midwest did little for his visibility with the public.

During the 1930s, Jabbo Smith lived mostly in Milwaukee. He married Wille Mae Smith in 1932, and they had two children. He tried to start an organization to help black people create their own jobs, but ended up working as a manager of the Sepia Music-Theatrical Talent Agency. He performed less and less, except for some work with Claude Hopkins's big band (1936-38), which made some fine recordings. He appeared with Sidney Bechet at the 1939 New York World's Fair, and accepted some steady work in Newark, New Jersey. In 1944, he settled in Milwaukee permanently, working only on an occasional basis. For the next thirteen years, his day job was with Avis Rent-a-Car.

In 1961, Marty Grosz persuaded Smith to record with him. The sessions were not released until 1984 when they came out as two LP albums titled Hidden Treasure, Vols. 1 & 2 (Jazz Art Productions). Other recent albums made from earlier recordings include Sweet and Lowdown (Affinity), Jazz Heritage: Ace of Rhythm (MCA), and Jabbo Smith 1929-38 (Challenge). Smith appeared at a few jazz festivals in the U.S. and was a regular member of the New Orleans Joymakers (1978-80). He played trumpet in the musical One Mo' Time in 1980 at the Village Gate and performed lengthy residencies in several major cities such as New York, Philadelphia, Houston, San Francisco, and others. Backed by the Hot Antic Jazz Band, he made a great European tour and recording (1982). Smith took part in the Grande Parade in Nice in 1983 and then gave up the trumpet for good.

Jabbo Smith specialized in vocals from 1983 until a stroke stopped his music-making altogether around 1990. He was inducted into the 1975 Newport Jazz Festival Hall of Fame, and in 1990 the Coastal Jazz Hall of Fame. He composed over two hundred songs.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); "Cladys "Jabbo" Smith 1908-1991" (www.encyclopedia.com); Laplace, Michel. Jabbo Smith, the Misunderstood and the Modernistic (incl. transcriptions of solos; Menden, 1988); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Smith, Dalton (b. 1936; d. San Fernando, California, Apr. 26, 1989). American trumpeter. Smith grew up in Forest, Mississippi. He attended Southern Mississippi College (now the University of Southern Mississippi) where he met and married Violet Tarrer. They moved to

Los Angeles where Smith began playing with many of the big bands in southern California. He joined the Stan Kenton Orchestra in 1959, and also played with the bands of Maynard Ferguson, Doc Severinsen, Frank Sinatra, Sarah Vaughan, Ray Charles, Nelson Riddle, David Rose, Barbra Streisand, Kenny Rogers, and others. Smith and Tarrer had a son, Kenton, but later divorced. Smith eventually married Marilyn King, a vocalist with the King Sisters. He died from cancer while in her arms on the way to the hospital in late April of 1989.

Bibl.: Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Dalton Smith" (www.trumpetmaster.com/vb/f131/dalton-smith-33773.html); "Dalton Smith, 53, Featured Trumpeter for Many Big Bands" (Los Angeles Times, Apr. 30, 1989).

Photo: Dalton Smith (on left) with Don Jacoby, James Burke, and Ray Crisara, 1964.

Smith, Ishmael Wadada Leo (b. Leland, Mississippi, Dec. 18, 1941). American trumpeter and composer. As a child, Smith played drums, mellophone, French horn, and trumpet, and after settling on trumpet, began playing in local blues and R&B bands at age thirteen. After graduating from Lincoln High School (studying music under Henderson Howard), he enlisted in the military and studied at the Army Music School in 1963. After discharge in 1967, he moved to Chicago and attended the Sherwood School of Music (1967-69). He became a member of the Association of Creative Musicians (AACM) and performed with Roscoe Mitchell and the Creative Construction Company trio. In 1970, Smith made a documentary film titled See the Music, and toured Europe with Henry Threadgill.

After moving to New Haven, Connecticut, in 1971, Smith started his own record label, Kabell Records. His first release (Creative Music) featured him playing trumpet, flugelhorn, wooden flute, harmonica, bells, and zither. He formed a band called New Delta Ahki, which has been transformed several times, but always with the same name. He became a leading avant-garde musician during the 1970s, and has worked with Anthony Braxton (1976), Anthony Davis, Oliver Lake, Derek Bailey (1977, in England), Bobby Naughton, Dwight Andrews, Wes Brown, Vinny Golia, Bill Smith Trio (1983), Don Cherry, Cecil Taylor, Ed Blackwell, Carla Bley, Tom Bruckner, Jeanne Lee, and many others.

Smith studied ethnomusicology at Wesleyan University from 1975 to 1976. He has also studied several languages and is familiar with numerous cultural philosophies. He authored a book on his own creative philosophies titled Notes (Kiom Press), which has been translated into several languages.

As a composer, Smith has received grants and commissions from many sources, including the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, Jurassic Foundation, Meet the Composer, National Endowment for the Arts, and many others. He has received dozens of awards from organizations such as the Jazz Journalists Association and the Festival of New Trumpet. His works have been performed and recorded by the Kronos Quartet, AACM Orchestra, Da Capo Chamber Players, New Century Players, S.E.M. Ensemble, New York New Music Ensemble, Del Sol String Quartet, and many others.

A prolific recording and performing artist, Smith has played on over fifty albums, including Rastafari (Sackville), Devine Love (ECM), Creative Music (Kabell), Spirit Catcher (Nessa), Go in Numbers (Black Saint), A Tree Frog Tonality (Between the Lions, with John Lindberg), Yo Miles! (Shanachie, with Henry Kaiser), Prataksis (9 Winds), Three Compositions of New Music (Delmark, with Anthony Braxton), The Mass on the World (Moers), Kulture Jazz (ECM), America (Tzadik), Snakish (Leo), Dreams and Secrets (aNonym), and Organic Resonance (PI).

Smith has taught at the University of New Haven (1975-76), Creative Music Studio in Woodstock, New York (1975-78), Bard College (1987-93), and since 1993 has been on the faculty of the Herb Alpert School of Music at the California School of the Arts in Los Angeles. He currently leads three ensembles: Golden Quartet, Silver Orchestra, and Organic. He is also director of the African-American Improvisational Music program at CalArts. He is an expert at producing contrasting silence and sound in a dramatic fashion, and plays trumpet in a dry, introverted style.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Wadada Leo Smith's official website: http://wadadaleosmith.com.

Smith, Joseph C. ("Joe" "Fox") (b. Ripley, Ohio, June 28, 1902; d. New York, New York, Dec. 2, 1937). American trumpeter. Smith's father led a brass band in Cincinnati and gave Joe and his six brothers trumpet lessons. Joe played in local groups and then worked in Pittsburgh in the early 1920s. In 1922, he joined the Black Swan Jazz Masters led by Fletcher Henderson in Chicago, and after a few months playing with Henderson, toured with Mamie Smith (August-September 1922). Smith's style of playing was very smooth and melodic, and formed the basis of "cool" jazz that was later made famous by Miles Davis, Arthur Whetsol, Shorty Baker, Bobby Hackett, Chet Baker, and Rick Braun.

Smith's mellow tone blended well with vocal solos, so he became the leading backup soloist for singers such as Andrew Copland, Ida Cox, Ethel Finnie, Rosa Henderson, Alberta Hunter, Maggie Jones, Ozie McPherson, Hazel Meyers, Josie Miles, Mary Straine, and Evelyn Thompson. He recorded twenty-one songs with Ethel Waters, and nineteen with Bessie Smith. His playing was often heard on the radio, making him the only true rival in popularity to Louis Armstrong in New York during the 1920s.

In 1924, Smith worked with the Noble Sissle/Eubie Blake show, The Chocolate Dandies. He played in the pit orchestra of the Lafayette Theatre, played cornet duets with Louis Metcalf at the Cotton Club, and then replaced Howard Scott in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra in 1925. He stayed with Henderson until 1928, but returned from 1930 to 1931. He also performed with violinist Allie Ross and McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1929-30 and 1931-32). In 1932, he moved to Kansas City and played with Bennie Moten and Clarence Love. He attempted to rejoin Henderson's band in 1933, but became seriously ill and stop playing the trumpet. He spent his last few years in a sanatorium in New York, where he died on December 2, 1937 from paresis, a disease of the brain. He was thirty-five years old.

Smith's early influence was Johnny Dunn. Shorty Baker said, Joe was…terrific playing waltzes with a plunger. He played almost like a voice. Garvin Bushell described him as [he] actually played more like some of the white trumpet players…He was a trained trumpet player and had the right embouchure.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yannow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Smith, Keith [John] (b. Isleworth, Middlesex, England, Mar. 19, 1940; d. London, England, Jan. 4, 2008). English trumpeter, bandleader, and impresario. Smith did not begin playing an instrument until 1957 at the age of seventeen. He selected the trumpet because It was the cheapest instrument at the second-hand store. His idols were Louis Armstrong and Red Allen. Smith was educated as an engineering draftsman, but his love for early jazz proved too strong for him to pursue a career in architecture.

Smith formed the Powder Mill Lane Stompers, one of the first traditional jazz bands in England. He also played with the San Jacinto Jazz Band (1958), Mickey Ashman (1960), Bobby Micklebrugh's Confederates (1961), New Teao Brass Band, and the Fron-Zi-Me Jazz Band. He made his first recording in 1963 with his Climax Jazz Band. He also made his first trip to New Orleans in 1962. He toured with Alton Purnell (1964, 1966) and Champion Jack Dupree (1965). He revisited the United States in 1965, stopping first in Los Angeles (playing with Ray Bauduc and Barney Bigard), then in New Orleans where he managed to perform with several of the city's finest classic jazz players including George Lewis. He then played in Chicago with Lil Hardin Armstrong, and in New York City with Zutty Singleton, Eddie Condon, Tony Parenti, Kenny Davern, and Dick Wellstood. He also toured in Canada and recorded with Capt. John Handy (1900-71).

Smith returned to England intent on bringing classic New Orleans jazz to Europe. Having made contacts with many top performers in America, he helped set up concert tours (with himself playing trumpet) for Americans such as Alvin Alcorn, Jimmy Archey, Darnell Howard, Pops Foster, and others. He toured Europe in 1966 with the New Orleans All-Stars.

In 1965, Smith moved to New Orleans and opened a fish and chips restaurant. He became close friends with many of the black musicians in town, and even managed to join the black musicians' union in order to work in various marching bands for weddings, funerals, and other occasions. He often had live music in his restaurant, but being white, his actions were frowned upon by the local mafia, and he was soon forced to leave the city. He lived in Denmark from 1970 to 1975 where he worked with Papa Bue's Viking Jazz Band. In 1975, he played in Japan with the New Orleans Rascals, after which he returned to London where he formed a band called Hefty Jazz (1975-78) and started his own record label, also called Hefty Jazz. Being a rather large and overweight man, he quickly received the nickname, Mr. Hefty Jazz. He again spent some time in New Orleans during the early 1980s.

Smith's insatiable desire to bring New Orleans jazz to Europe reached its zenith during the 1980s when he led the Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong with former members of Louis's All-Stars including Arvell Shaw and Barrett Deems (1983-87). He also assembled full productions such as A Hundred Years of Dixieland Jazz, Stardust Road (celebrating the music of Hoagy Carmichael), Keith Smith Presents Let's Do It (a tribute to Cole Porter), Tribute to George Gershwin, and other shows of his creation. He led his Hefty Jazz Band at the St. Louis Jazz & Ragtime Festival in 1985, and in Ascona in 2005.

Although quite successful, Smith's always feisty and sometimes combative personality made him difficult to work with. His love of alcohol only contributed to his personal problems.

Smith recorded numerous albums of classic New Orleans jazz, including Keith Smith/Jimmy Archey (GHB), Minstrel Man ("77"), Toronto '66 ("77"), Ball of Fire (Hefty Jazz), Keith Smith's Hefty Jazz 9 (Jazzology), and Some Hefty Cats (Hefty Jazz, with Dick Wellstood).

Smith was married and divorced three times. (His third wife was Russian.) He was working on a colorful autobiography (unpublished) during the last part of his life. He died from a heart attack at the age of sixty-seven.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry. The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Voce, Steve. "Keith Smith: Hard-headed Trumpeter" (obituary, The Independent, Feb. 9, 2008); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Laplace. Michel. "Mister Hefty Jazz," Jazz Hot, no. 553, Sept. 1998.

Photo: With George Lewis's Jazz Band.

Smith, Leona May (b. Bridgeport, Connecticut, Sept. 23, 1914; d. Providence, Rhode Island, Dec. 1, 1999). American cornetist and trumpeter. Smith had her first appearance at nine years of age at a Boston radio station, after having been coached for a year previously by her father who was an amateur trombonist. She studied cornet with the great Walter M. Smith between 1924 and 1928, and later studied with Georges Mager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and William Vacchiano of the New York Philharmonic. She had a prodigious talent for the cornet, and at age eleven was invited by Edwin Franko Goldman to solo with his band.

Smith played trumpet in the Boston Women's Symphony Orchestra, Fred Waring's dance orchestra, and Phil Spitalney's All-Girl Orchestra. She played at Radio City Music Hall in New York City, and was a featured soloist with the National Orchestra Society and the Chautauqua Music Festival. She embarked on a lengthy solo tour of the United States and Canada, and gave private lessons at a music school in Schenectady, New York. Leona married the composer and bandleader George F. Seuffert Jr., with whom she had four children. She founded and conducted the Seuffert Band in New York City, was principal trumpet of the Brooklyn Symphony Orchestra, and after 1953 was a substitute trumpeter with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra for twenty years.

Smith was given the Pioneers Award by the International Women's Brass Conference in St. Louis in 1993. She died a few years later at the age of eighty-five.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Vol. 2 (Schott).

Smith, Leonard B[ingley] (b. Poughkeepsie, New York, Sept. 15, 1915; d. Scottsdale, Arizona, July 26, 2002). American cornetist and trumpeter. Leonard's father was a banker, but loved music; his hobby was playing the piano and trombone. Leonard's mother sang in the church choir. At age eight, Leonard began playing the cornet, and at age fourteen won a scholarship to the New York Military Academy. After graduation, he attended the Ernest Williams School of Music in New York, where he studied with the great cornetist Ernest S. Williams. He subsequently studied at New York University and the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. His other teachers were Mayhew L. Lake, Erik W. G. Leidzen, Pierre Henrotte, and Rosario Scalero.

Smith's first steady employment as a musician was with the Georges Barrere Little Symphony in New York City. He played three seasons in the Marlborough Symphony Orchestra working with stars such as Heifetz, Rachmaninov, Enesco, and Barbirolli. In 1935, at the age of nineteen, he was hired as cornet soloist in Edwin Franko Goldman's band, with which he played for six years. In 1937, he became principal trumpet of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, a position he held for six years. He also played with the Goldman Band whenever tours were scheduled.

Smith enlisted in the US Navy in 1942, and became cornet soloist with the US Navy Band in Washington, D.C. Following his discharge, he played with the Long Beach Municipal Band under Herbert L. Clarke (1943), returned to the Detroit Symphony (1945-46), and founded his own concert band in Detroit. He sought and received funding for the band from the City of Detroit, and renamed it the Detroit Concert Band. He conducted and soloed with the band from its inception in 1946 until it was discontinued (due to loss of funding) in 1991. During his years with the band, it released many live concert recordings, including the complete Sousa marches, plus a series of recordings in thirty-six volumes called Gems of the Concert Band.

Many of Smith's live radio broadcasts with the Goldman Band have recently been issued on compact disc through Walking Frog Records. Solo works include My Heaven of Love, Ecstasy, The Harp of Tara, Napoli, O Don Fatale, Spanish Caprice, Sounds from the Hudson, Stars in a Velvety Sky, Carnival of Venice (Staigers), Willow Echoes, La Mandolinata, Tally Ho, Zelda, Venture, Concert Etude, The Bugler, and Post Horn Gallop. He also recorded an LP album of contest solos for cornet with piano accompaniment titled Leonard Smith Plays the Cornet that included, among others, Carnival of Venice (Clarke), Willow Echoes, and My Regards.

Smith was conductor of the Blossom Festival Concert Band in Cleveland, Ohio from 1972 through 1997. He also taught trumpet at Wayne State University in Detroit, and was Director of Bands at the University of Detroit. He was president of the Association of Concert Bands, and a member of the American Bandmasters Association and Kappa Kappa Psi. He was an ASCAP composer, and produced over 450 original band works and solos. His Treasury of Scales for band has been widely used throughout the United States.

Smith lectured and performed at over one thousand colleges and universities. He credited Herbert Clarke, Rafael Méndez, and James Burke as being strong influences on his style of playing. For most of his career, he performed on a Leonard Smith-Model Cornet manufactured by the Reynolds Company. His many cornet solos and trios include Ecstasy, Spanish Caprice, Venture, and The Three Bluejackets.

Smith was considered to be one of the foremost experts on John Philip Sousa, and produced a documentary of him for the BBC. During Smith's career he amassed a huge library of band music and memorabilia that now reside in the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. He was an affable man who loved to talk about the "old days" with the Goldman Band and the Detroit Concert Band. He died of a heart attack on July 26, 2002.

Bibl.: Bowman, Joseph. "Leonard Smith: America's Premier Cornet Virtuoso" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2002); International Trumpet Guild website (www.trumpetguild.org/news); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

Photo: Herbert L. Clarke and Leonard Smith.

Smith, Louis [Edward Lewis] (b. Memphis, Tennessee, May 20, 1931). American trumpeter. Smith grew up in Tennessee. After graduating from high school, he attended Tennessee State University (1948-52) on scholarship where he received a bachelor of music education degree and toured with the Tennessee State Collegians jazz ensemble. He continued schooling at the University of Michigan where he studied with Clifford Lillya, but was drafted into the Army (1954-55) before finishing his master's degree. Upon release from his military obligations, Smith taught band at Booker T. Washington High School in Atlanta, Georgia, and gigged at night in various jazz clubs.

Smith, a cousin of trumpeter Booker Little, made his recording debut with Kenny Burrell in 1956. In 1958, he recorded two albums as leader (one with alto sax player Cannonball Adderley) and toured with the Horace Silver Quintet for three months. During the next fifteen years, he played with numerous star jazz artists, including Kenny Dorham, Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis, Donald Byrd, Lou Donaldson, Zoot Sims, Philly Joe Jones, and Art Blakey. He returned to the University of Michigan during the mid 1970s where he taught jazz, and in 1978 became a band director in the Ann Arbor, Michigan, public schools.

Smith's recording career took off during the late 1970s when he signed with Steeplechase Records, but he recorded little during the 1980s; he again released several albums for Steeplechase in the 1990s. Among his many albums are Here Comes Louis Smith (Blue Note), Blue Lights, Vols. 1-2 (Blue Note, with Kenny Burrell), Just Friends (Steeplechase), Ballads for Lulu (Steeplechase), and The Bopsmith (Steeplechase).

Smith suffered a severe stroke in 2005 that left him unable to speak or walk. After years of music and physical therapies, he has regained his ability to walk and speak. He credits his wife, Lulu, for assisting him in his recovery. They continue to reside in Ann Arbor.

Bibl.: Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. excerpt on mp3; Oct. 2008); "Louis Smith" (www.allaboutjazz.com).

Smith, Norman ("Norm") E. (b. Cape Girardeau, Missouri, 1921; d. Lake Charles, Louisiana, Nov. 23, 1998). American trumpeter. When Smith was six years old, his family fled the flooded Mississippi River city of Cape Girardeau and moved to a wheat and dairy farm near Fairview, Oklahoma. Smith began to play the trumpet, and played in the Tri-State Festival Band in Enid, Oklahoma, under Herbert Clarke, Frank Simon, Edwin Franko Goldman, and Henry Fillmore. However, the Oklahoma dust bowl during the late 1930s forced the family to move to DeRidder, Louisiana, in 1938.

Smith attended the University of Southwestern Louisiana, graduating in 1943. After serving as a pilot and flight instructor during World War II, he taught high school band, orchestra, jazz ensemble, and theory at DeRidder High School for three years. He taught the next six years at Terrebonne High School before joining the faculty at McNeese State University, where he taught brass, concert band, marching band, and jazz ensemble from 1954 to 1970. He had earned his master of music degree from Louisiana State University in 1950, and his PhD in music from Florida State University in 1968. He played trumpet in local community bands, and violin in local community orchestras. He also performed and recorded with Gerard Schwarz's New York Trumpet Ensemble, and can be heard on the Delos album, Sound the Trumpets.

A prolific writer, Smith became known for his well-researched books published by Program Notes Press, including Band Music Notes (1977), March Music Notes (1984), and Program Notes for Band (1998). He also compiled March Music Melodies (1993), a publication that contains first-cornet sheet music for more than six hundred well-known marches.

Smith and Aline Jackson were married for fifty-six years. He retired from teaching and performing in 1978. He received the American Bandmasters Association's Edwin Franko Goldman Award in 1997, just one year prior to his death in 1998.

Bibl.: "Norman E. Smith" (www.giamusic.com/bios/smith_norman.cfm); "Norman Smith (1921-98)" (www.trumpetguild.org/news/norsmi.htm).

Smith, Philip A. (b. London, England, Apr. 1, 1952). British-born American trumpeter. Smith moved to New York when he was a young child. He began playing the cornet under the direction of his father, Derek Smith, the former well-known cornetist and conductor with the Salvation Army Band. After high school, Philip attended The Juilliard School where he earned bachelor and master of music degrees studying with Edward Treutel (1970-75) and William Vacchiano (1975). During his last year at Juilliard, Smith won the position of fourth trumpet in the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. He also released his first solo album with pianist/composer Joseph Turrin on the Salvation Army's label Triumphonic. Because of Smith's lack of orchestral experience at the time, CSO principal trumpet Adolph Herseth offered to allow him to sit next to him during rehearsals when Smith was not playing fourth parts, in order to give him tips on the music and choices of equipment. Three years later, Smith won an audition for the New York Philharmonic, and was appointed coprincipal (replacing Gerard Schwarz) with John Ware. Smith was promoted to principal in 1985, a position he holds today.

As a soloist, Smith has performed with dozens of leading brass bands in Europe and the United States, as well as orchestras including the New York Philharmonic and the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra conducted by Maestro Kurt Masur. He has been featured in recitals for the International Trumpet Guild, Bremen (Germany) Trumpet Days, Swiss Brass Week, Oslo Trumpet Week, Grand Teton Festival, Caramoor International Music Festival, and many other seminars and festivals. His solo albums include Contest Solos for young trumpeters (ITG), Fandango (Summit), Soloists from the Orchestra Vol. III*, New York Legends* (CALA), Orchestral Excerpts for Trumpet (Summit), Principals, Music of Zwilich (New World), and Ambassadors and Bravo, as well as religious recordings such as World's Greatest Hymns, We Live to Worship You, Heavenly Gates, What Can I Give Him?, Repeat the Sounding Day, The Trumpet Shall Resound (Heritage), He Restores My Soul, and My Song of Songs.

Smith has premiered numerous works, many of which were composed for him. They include Joseph Turrin's Trumpet Concerto, Caprice, Intrada, Four Miniatures, Elegy, Two Portraits, and Escapade, and concertos by Jacques Hétu, Lowell Liebermann, and Siegfried Matthus. Smith has also published Concert Studies for Trumpet (Curnow Music). In addition, he is a member of the Principal Brass quintet consisting of first chair players of the New York Philharmonic. He is also the founder of Resounding Praise, a Gospel ensemble. He has taught at The Juilliard School.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Philip Smith" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Philip Smith's official website: www.principaltrumpet.com.

Photo credits: Chris Lee (B/W); Vera H. Olcott, courtesy of the International Trumpet Guild (color).

Smith, Richard (b. May 17, 1930; d. June 22, 2003). American trumpeter. Little is known about this active musician other than what can be traced through personnel records of various orchestras. He studied with William Vacchiano and began playing with the Kansas City Philharmonic at age fifteen (1945-51). He then served in the Army (1951-53) and upon discharge, became principal trumpet of the Denver Symphony Orchestra (1953-55). He then moved through a sequence of various orchestral trumpet positions as follows: second in the Cleveland Orchestra (1956-57), principal (1958-59), third (1960-63), and fourth (1964-67); then principal of the Buffalo Philharmonic (1967-69), principal of the Kansas City Philharmonic (1969-72), and coprincipal of the Kansas City Philharmonic (1972-75).

Bibl.: Thornton, Mary. "Trumpet Players of the Cleveland Orchestra, 1918-1993" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Feb. 1994); Thornton, Mary. "Trumpet Players of the Cleveland Orchestra, An Addendum" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Dec. 1994); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Smith, Richard A. (b. Bedford, England, Nov. 6, 1944). British instrument designer. Smith is a bassoonist and contrabassoonist who studied with Archie Camden, and performed semiprofessionally for twenty years in London, often with the Salomon Orchestra. He attended Southampton University as a physics major (masters degree in 1972, and PhD in 1974) where he researched brass physics in association with Boosey & Hawkes. He was the chief brass instrument designer for Boosey & Hawkes from 1974 to 1985, and worked closely with trumpeters John Wallace and Derek Watkins. He continued his academic work as a research fellow at the universities of Surrey, Southampton, Edinburgh, and the Open University.

In 1985, Smith formed Richard Smith Ltd., a company that developed the first Smith-Watkins trumpet designs. The company workshop moved to York (UK) in 2004, and since 2005 the firm has been a contractor to the Ministry of Defense in England, providing instruments to British-style military bands worldwide. He is an Honorary Fellow of the College of Science and Engineering at the University of Edinburgh.

Smith and his wife Deborah Smith, a professor of molecular parasitology and head of the biology department at the University of York, have a daughter, Katharine, who holds a doctorate from London's University College, and is a research fellow at the Feinberg School of Medicine, Northwestern University in Chicago, Illinois. She is also a professional singer.

Richard's hobbies include singing in York Minster with a small choir specializing in twentieth-century music, playing the bassoon, and hill climbing.

Bibl.: Richard Smith's official website: www.smithwatkins.com; personal interview, Sept. 30, 2011.

Smith, Robert ("Rob") (b. c1959). Smith began playing the trumpet at age nine, and attended Northwestern University, studying with Vincent Cichowicz. He was a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, received lessons from Adolph Herseth, and attended the Tanglewood Institute. At age twenty-five, he became principal trumpet of The Florida Orchestra in Tampa, a position he still holds. During the summers of 1995 and 1996, he was principal trumpet of the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra.

Smith's hobbies include photography, fishing, kayaking, reading, and spirituality.

Bibl.: "Robert Smith: His Story" (www.tampabay.com).

Smith, Walter F. (b. Montavello, Missouri, June 5, 1859; d. Arlington, Virginia, May 21, 1937). American cornetist. Smith grew up in Southern Michigan and learned to play the alto horn at an early age, but changed to cornet at about age twelve; he was mainly self-taught. By the age of sixteen, he was playing in several local bands, and at age twenty-two played in Charles E. Rogers's band in Goshen, Indiana.

Most of Smith's career was spent as cornet soloist and first chair of the US Marine Band in Washington, D.C. He began under John Philip Sousa in November 1885, but was invited to join Sousa's newly formed civilian band in 1893. After two years in Sousa's band, Smith re-enlisted in his former position in the Marine Band in 1895, and a short time later was made Second Leader of the band. He played for sixteen acting presidents, and retired from concert performances in 1921 at the age of sixty-one. He recorded Song from Bocaccio with the US Marine Band on September 19, 1899. His style was influenced by the singers of his time, mainly Adelina Patti.

Smith became a cornet tester for the Holton Company. He had a longtime interest in instrument mechanics and acoustics and envisioned the screw-rim mouthpiece long before it was commercialized. He composed one cornet solo, Facilata: Variations. His hobby was swimming, at which he became quite expert. He demonstrated that he could float in the water on his back while playing bugle calls on his cornet. He could also swim one hundred feet wrapped in fifty feet of rope. Smith died at the age of seventy-six.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications); "Walter F. Smith" (International Trumpet Guild website: www.trumpetguild.org/2003conference); "Walter F. Smith" (Marine Band website: www.marineband.usmc.mil); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Smith, Walter M. (b. East Hampton, Massachusetts, Dec. 16, 1891; d. Boston, Massachusetts, May 1, 1937). American cornetist. Walter's father John was a cornetist from Scotland who taught Walter the piano at age seven, the violin soon after, and the cornet at age eleven. Walter's first cornet solo performance was at the age of fourteen, when he played for the Knights of Pythias in Brockton, Massachusetts, where he grew up.

At the age of eighteen, Smith was soloist with the Lyndonville Vermont Band. At this time he studied with Mace Gay and Milo Burke, and later, with Ernest Williams and Louis Kloepfel, each of whom gave him many opportunities to perform. In 1912, he was invited to perform Handel's Messiah with the Boston Handel and Haydn Society for a Christmas concert. He continued these annual performances until his death in 1937. He also played first trumpet in the Boston Opera House Orchestra under Pierre Monteux. In 1915, he and Emil Mollenhauser (1855-1927) conducted a sixty-five-piece band at the San Francisco World's Fair.

Smith developed an unusually strong high register and extraordinary breath control, and based his playing on lip flexibility. He became known as an excellent teacher, and his book, Top Tones, is widely used even today. Along with Edwin Franko Goldman, he edited a version of Arban's famous method for the Carl Fischer Company. He also composed several cornet trios, including The Three Kings and Bolero.

In 1925, Smith was leader of the Aleppo Shrine Band, which traveled to Toronto in that year, and to San Francisco in 1927. He also conducted the North Easton Ames Band in Massachusetts and the Taleb Grotto Band, and was Director of Bands at Boston University. In the early 1930s, he had his own radio show called the Jenny Gasoline Program that featured his band with him as soloist. His last known performance was as a guest soloist at the 2nd annual Mid-Western Band Festival at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, May 7-9, 1936. He died in the following year.

Bibl.: Bridges, Glenn. Pioneers in Brass (Sherwood Publications).

Smith, W[lliam] Bram[well] Jr. (b. Ottawa, Canada, Mar. 3, 1929; d. Toronto, Canada, Aug. 4, 1993). Canadian trumpeter. Smith's father, Bram Smith Sr., was a cornet player in brass bands in Canada. Bram Jr. learned to play cornet from his father and uncles when he was ten. At age fourteen, he was principal of the Royal Regiment Band of Canada, and at age fifteen won a national solo contest for brass. He trained at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto under Ellis McLintock Sr. (1945-49). While in college, he freelanced with numerous dance bands and other groups.

In 1949, at the age of twenty, Smith was the first non-U.S. citizen to become a member of the United States Marine Band. Being a very flashy player with brilliant technique and range, Smith was a featured soloist until 1957 when he transferred to the US Army Band. He quickly became associate principal cornet (on trumpet) to principal cornetist Gilbert Mitchell. Mitchell had recently established the Army Herald Trumpets ensemble, and Smith was recruited to be its principal trumpeter under Mitchell's baton. Smith performed with the group for ten years, contributing several compositions and arrangements. His work, Fanfare, Processional and Recessional, was premiered by the Herald Trumpets during the inaugural ceremonies for John F. Kennedy. From 1962 to 1967, Smith was chair of the brass and winds department at the American University in Washington, D.C., and was a clinician for Leblanc-Holton instruments.

After his service years, Smith returned to Canada to work for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He recorded an album titled Bram Smith and His Trumpet for the Golden Crest label, and produced and directed an award-winning film called Artistry in Brass. In 1967, he became director of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Band (until 1975) and later became director of music at Humber College and a clinician for Yamaha Canada. He left Canada for a while to assume duties as music coordinator for King Hassan of Morocco, and the Royal Moroccan Air Force. After returning to Canada once again, he became the conductor of the University of Toronto Concert Band and the Canadian Concert Band. Later, he was director of the York University Wind Ensemble. He was also an active clinician for the Peel Board of Education, guiding young instrumentalists.

Bram Smith died of cancer at the age of sixty-three. His son, Bram Smith III (b. 1952), was principal of the US Army Band and Herald Trumpets. Smith was a highly respected and admired musician and friend to all who knew him.

Bibl.: Mitchell, Gilbert. "The United States Army Herald Trumpets and the Memory of W. Bramwell Smith" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Sept. 1996); "W. Bramwell Smith Jr." The Canadian Encyclopedia (www.thecanadianencyclopedia.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Smithers, Don L[eRoy] (b. New York, New York, Feb. 17, 1933). American trumpeter. Smithers was trained as an oboe player and then studied music history at the University of Long Island in 1957,

Columbia University from 1957 to 1958, and at Oxford University in 1963 in London where he earned his Ph.D. in 1967. His dissertation concerns the trumpet and its repertoire, Music and History of the Baroque Trumpet Before 1721 (1973, Syracuse University Press; revised in 1988), and has become an important text.

Smithers began playing the trumpet late in his studies and took lessons on a private basis from his brother-in-law, trombonist Roger M. Smith (of the Juilliard faculty). He progressed quickly and became a member of the Robert Shaw Orchestra, New York Pro Musica, Musica Reservata, and Studio der frühn Musik. He began recording Renaissance and Baroque music for trumpet, and was hired as an associate professor of music history at Syracuse University (1973-76) where he met a doctoral organ student named William Neal with whom he formed a duo called the Clarion Consort, which recorded for the Philips label. Smithers began touring as a soloist, and performed on B-flat/A piccolo trumpets made by Victor Mahillon. His warm tone and lyric style brought him much attention as a trumpeter, and he soon became one of the leading exponents of early music for trumpet.

After publishing several enlightening articles on early trumpet repertoire, and publishing or recording editions of unearthed trumpet works by Baroque composers (especially those of Biber, Schmelzer, Vejvanovsky, and Stoelzel), Smithers reached the peak of his fame during the mid 1970s. He appeared as a lecturer at the first International Brass Congress (1976) in Switzerland, and performed a lecture-recital at the 1977 International Trumpet Guild Conference at the University of Illinois. He continued making solo recordings for Argo, BASF, and Philips.

Around 1975, Smithers made the decision to give up playing the valve trumpet, calling it a "modern contraption." He began performing exclusively on replicas of Baroque trumpets (primarily those made by Finke) and cornettos, although he did utilize an authentic Baroque trumpet mouthpiece. He refused to employ the modern vent holes supplied on replica instruments, claiming that they were modern crutches. Unfortunately, many of his live concerts were not as impressive as they had previously been on the piccolo trumpet, and his management firm soon received reports of poor performances. Smithers, a rather combative person, took these criticisms poorly and voiced strong opinions to concert presenters, music critics, or others who expressed them.

The final recording made for the Philips label ended in a stormy fight with the producers. Smithers wanted to open and close the album with the fanfare (abblasen) by Reiche. He insisted that each performance be free of edits, and that both renditions of the fanfare be from different takes. However, the difficult fanfare proved to be a daunting task; he recorded over sixty takes before landing a perfect rendition, and his strength was drained. The orchestra sat for hours before his unaccompanied fanfare could be completed (even then having to reuse the one perfect take for the second fanfare). Much time and money was wasted and a heated argument between Smithers and the record producers terminated the possibility of their future projects together.

Smithers, who had been teaching music history at the Royal Conservatory of Music at The Hague in the Netherlands since 1976, suffered a mental breakdown in the late 1970s, resulting in his being involuntarily hospitalized for years. He lost all his scheduled concert performances, artist management, and teaching contract, and no longer made solo recordings. Years later (early 1980s), however, he did play on many of the historic recordings issued by Telefunken that comprise all of J.S. Bach's cantatas on original (replica) instruments in celebration of Bach's three hundredth birthday. In the mid 1980s, Smithers moved to California and lived with his daughter, rarely appearing in public, and retired from lecturing and performing. He continues to do research, however, and is near the completion of a comprehensive work of the history of the trumpets and related instruments of antiquity up to the time of Beethoven. It is ironic that his most infamous recording, the Reiche fanfare, was his most popular. It was used as the opening music for the CBS television show, Sunday Morning, for years before being rerecorded by Wynton Marsalis and Doc Severinsen on modern piccolo trumpets.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Tarr, Edward H. "Don L. Smithers," The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (St. Martin's Press); "Don Leroy [sic] Smithers" (http://en.wikipedia.org); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom incl. extract on mp3; Oct. 2008).

Smoker, Paul Alva (b. Muncie, Indiana, May 8, 1941). American trumpeter. Smoker grew up in Davenport, Iowa. He began playing the piano at age six, but switched to trumpet at age ten, being inspired by Harry James. He studied with Dodo Marmarosa during the early 1960s, and had a few lessons with Doc Severinsen in 1964. He attended the University of Iowa, earning bachelor, master, and doctorate degrees in music by 1974.

Smoker became interested in avant-garde jazz in the late 1970s. He taught jazz and trumpet at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh (1968-71), University of Northern Iowa (1975-76), and Coe College (1976-90). He also worked with jazz artists such as Anthony Braxton, Lee Konitz, Phil Haynes's 4 Horns & What?, Art Pepper, Joint Venture, Evan Parker, Frank Rosolino, Dave Liebman, Vinny Golia, Drew Gress, Bobby Christian, and Damon Short. While in Iowa, Smoker was music director of the Miss Iowa Pageant for fifteen years, was a charter member of the University of Iowa Center for New Music, Iowa Brass Quintet, SOMA, and the Cedar Rapids Symphony.

Smoker left university teaching to become a fulltime jazz musician in 1990. He moved to Rochester, New York, and developed his jazz composition skills. He is currently a composer-in-residence at the Rochester School of the Arts and Cornell University, and since 2001 has been on the jazz faculty at Nazareth College.

Smoker's playing style is very distinctive, marked by numerous effects such as growls and the use of mutes. He has released many albums, among them Genuine Fables (Hat Art), Halloween '96 (CIMP), Standard Deviation (CIMP), QB (Alvar), Mississippi River Rat (Sound Aspects), Alone (Sound Aspects), Come Rain or Come Shine (Sound Aspects), Large Music, Vols. 1-2 (CIMP), Mirabile Dietu (CIMP), Brass Reality (Nine Winds), and Duocity in Brass & Wood (Cadence Jazz).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Paul Smoker" (www.gerryhemingway.com/smokerbio.html); "Paul Smoker" (www.naz.edu/music/faculty/paul-smoker).

Snedecor, Phil (b. Poughkeepsie, New York, June 12, 1963). American trumpeter. Snedecor earned bachelor and master of music degrees, as well as a Performance Certificate from Barbara Butler and Charles Geyer at the Eastman School of Music (1981-86). He also studied with Adolph Herseth while a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago from 1987 to 1988, as well as studying arranging with Rayburn Wright. He served as principal trumpet of the Heidelberg Festival Orchestra in Germany (summer 1984), and was acting principal of the Rochester Philharmonic during the 1983-86 seasons. He was principal in the Eastman Wind Ensemble which recorded with Wynton Marsalis (Carnival). He also attended the Tanglewood Music Festival (1985-86). In addition, he was a member of the Ft. Wayne Philharmonic in Indiana in 1989, Elgin Symphony Orchestra (near Chicago) in 1986-89, and the Annapolis Symphony Orchestra from 1989 to 1993. In 1990, he became a member of the Kennedy Center Opera Orchestra and joined the National Symphony Orchestra in 1991. Snedecor's extensive orchestral career also includes the Alexandria Symphony Orchestra (assistant principal, 1990), Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra (principal, 1996), Moody Blues Touring Orchestra as lead trumpet (1997-99), The Who (1997), and numerous pit orchestras for musicals such as Cabaret, Guys & Dolls, Beauty and the Beast, West Side Story (on tour), Evita, Phantom of the Opera, and Peter Pan. He became a regular member of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra in 2007.

Snedecor cofounded the seventeen-piece Washington Symphonic Brass with trombonist Milton Stevens in 1995. Much of the group's repertoire consists of his arrangements and orchestral transcriptions. He taught at Towson University in Baltimore (adjunct, starting in 1991), and is currently teaching as an adjunct faculty member at George Mason University. His solo CD is titled The Lyric Trumpet (Summit).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Phil Snedecor" (www.wsbrass.com/personnel-snedecor.html).

Photo credit: Vera H. Olcott, courtesy of the International Trumpet Guild.

Snell, Howard (b. Wollaston, Northamptonshire, England, Sept. 21, 1936). British trumpeter, conductor, and composer. Snell first began playing cornet, and at age seventeen attended the Royal Academy of Music in London where he studied with George Eskdale. He played at the Sadlers Well Opera (1957-60), and was principal trumpet of the London Symphony Orchestra (1960-69 second principal, 1969-76 first principal). He served on the LSO board of directors, five years as chairman. He has also performed on trumpet with the London Sinfonietta and the English Chamber Orchestra. In 1976, he left the LSO to become a conductor.

During many years of his career, Snell worked as a studio musician for BBC Television and Films. He played in the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble for many years, and was conductor of the group during much of its life. He arranged and composed a great deal of music for the PJBE, and has published a large catalog of works through his own publishing company, Howard Snell Arts. He has been conductor of numerous award-winning brass bands in the UK and throughout Europe. Snell founded and conducted the Wren Orchestra for ten years, an orchestra developed for Capital Radio.

Snell taught at the Royal Northern College of Music in Manchester (1980-99). Since then, he has been on the faculty at the Royal College of Music in London. In 1997, he published the text, The Trumpet: Its Practice and Performance.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Howard Snell Interview" (www.4barsrest.com/articles/2001/art027.asp).

Snow, Valaida (b. Chattanooga, Tennessee, June 2, 1904; d. New York, New York, May 30, 1956). American trumpeter. Snow and her talented sisters learned music from their mother, a university trained music teacher. Valaida learned to play the cello, bass, violin, banjo, mandolin, harp, accordion, clarinet, saxophone, and trumpet. In 1915, Valaida started performing on the trumpet in public, and by her early twenties was playing in shows, often as the star performer. She was a gifted entertainer with great beauty and poise.

In 1924, Snow was featured in the Noble Sissle/Eubie Blake Broadway musical In Bamville (which later became known as The Chocolate Dandies). She performed in Shanghai in 1926 with the Jack Carter Band, and in Chicago in 1928 as a headliner at the Sunset Café. In 1929, she toured the Soviet Union and Middle East in the Blackbirds show, and in June 1930 was featured in the Louisiana revue at the Théâtre Saint-Martin in Paris. In 1933, she worked in the Grand Terrace Room in Chicago with Earl Hines and performed at various times with Count Basie, Teddy Weatherford, Willie Lewis, and Fletcher Henderson.

Snow toured England with the Blackbirds of 1934 and recorded with Billy Mason in 1935. She spent the rest of the 1930s overseas, making several records in London from 1935 to 1937. Her playing is particularly appealing in the song, I Got Rhythm (1937, Parl #F1048) and in a later recording of My Heart Belongs To Daddy (1939, Sonora #3557). She gave a Command Performance in the Netherlands in 1936 and was awarded a gold plated trumpet by Queen Wilhelmina. In 1939 in Paris, she took part in a film by Robert Siedmak, Pièges, starring actor Erich von Strohein. She was popular throughout Europe and seemed to live a charmed life until she was arrested in 1941 while performing in Denmark where she was charged with theft and misuse of drugs, although her arrest was more likely the result of Nazi discrimination during World War II. She was a prisoner in the Wester-Faengle Nazi concentration camp from December 1940 until May 28, 1942 when she was returned to the U.S. as part of a prisoner exchange. While in the camp, she was stripped of all of her possessions and money and was beaten and even bayoneted.

After returning home, physically weak and emotionally depressed for a year, she resumed her career in 1943, recording fourteen songs with a newly formed group. She worked until the mid 1950s, making more recordings in 1950 and 1953, but unfortunately, she never regained the popularity she once had. She died from a massive cerebral hemorrhage after the final curtain call during a New York performance at the Palace Theatre in 1956, just two days prior to her fifty-second birthday.

Snow was married three times, first to King Knappy Brown (a.k.a. Sam Lanier), but that marriage only lasted about a year. Her second marriage was to dancer Ananias Berry in 1929, but when it was discovered that she had not legally divorced Brown, she was incarcerated for bigamy. The story caused a sensation, but the legal situation was eventually resolved and she remarried Berry in 1933. Her third marriage was to performer and producer Earle Edwards, the man who took care of her after her return from the concentration camp in Europe.

A multitalented performer and entertainer, Snow appeared in two Hollywood films, Take It from Me (1937) and Irresistible You (1936). Other films include Liza and Pièges (1939). A compact disc, Queen of Trumpet and Song (DRG #8455), contains some of her recordings. Louis Armstrong once said of Snow, Boy, I never saw anything that great! Earl Hines was quoted as saying, I thought she was the greatest girl I'd ever seen. In Europe she was called "The Queen of the Trumpet" and "Little Louis." During her prime, she led a glamorous lifestyle, complete with furs, jewelry, expensive gowns, and even an orchid colored Mercedes limousine. She was one of the most gifted musicians and entertainers the world has ever known.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Pollard, Cara. "Valaida Snow: A Life of Heartache and Triumph" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Jan. 2010); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Miller, M. High Hat, Trumpet and Rhythm: The Life and Music of Valaida Snow (Toronto, 2007); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Snow, Valentine (b. London, England, 1685; d. London, England, 1770). English trumpeter. Snow was a gifted trumpeter who performed in George Frideric Handel's orchestra during the 1730s. In 1753, he succeeded John Shore as Sergeant-Trumpeter to the King. Handel described Snow as "the finest trumpeter of the day." Many of Handel's oratorio trumpet parts were written for him.

Snow was also a composer who wrote several duets for trumpet. A portrait of him hangs in the Fenton House in northwest London. (See color pages.)

Bibl.: "Valentine Snow" (Editions BIM & The Brass Press Online Store); "Valentine Snow" (Oxford Music Online); Sorensen, S.

"Valentine Snow, Handel's Trumpeter" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, Vol. iv, 1979).

See photo of Snow in the color pages.

Sokabe, Kiyonori (b. Ehime Prefecture, Japan, 1952). Japanese trumpeter. Sokabe is a graduate of the Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music where he studied with Fujio Nakayama and Genzo Kitamura. After graduation, he joined the Ueno no Mori Brass quintet, serving as its leader for more than twenty-five years. He is also a member of Brass Extreme Tokyo.

Highly acclaimed as Japan's foremost contemporary trumpet soloist, Sokabe was a key member of composer Jo Kondo's Musica Practica Ensemble until its dissolution over ten years ago. He was the first Japanese trumpeter to give full recitals of contemporary pieces to great acclaim, and has commissioned and premiered numerous new works for trumpet. He created several types of trumpets and mutes including the "Zephyros," a piston-valve C trumpet with a trombone-like slide. In June of 1999, he released a CD on Kojima Recordings titled *Till Now and From Now On...*made up entirely of works by Japanese composers. His second CD, Limpid Solitude, was released on Kojima in 2000. He has also released two other CDs.

Sokabe has toured internationally two times, performing traditional concertos by composers such as Haydn, Leopold Mozart, Hummel, and Jolivet, as well as more contemporary works for trumpet. He has been a guest soloist with the Tokyo Philharmonic Orchestra, and has performed at the Hokutopia International Music Festival in 1995 and 1998. He currently averages fifty solo appearances each year.

Bibl.: Kiyonori Sokabe's official website: www.jade.dti.ne.jp/~ebakos/pageE/profile.html.

Sollenberger, Jay (b. c1950). American trumpeter. Sollenberger grew up in McPherson, Kansas, and graduated from high school in 1968. He studied with Walter Myers at Wichita State University, but transferred to North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas). He played in the famed One O'Clock Lab Band for two years, but left school in 1971 to join a group called The Flippers.

Sollenberger joined Bill Chase's well-known group, Chase, and recorded the Pure Music album for Epic Records. When Chase died in 1974, he moved to the Stan Kenton Orchestra, starting out on second trumpet before assuming duties as lead. He made three recordings with Kenton before playing with the bands of Woody Herman (1978) and Buddy Rich.

In 1980, Sollenberger moved permanently to Kansas City where he has been an active freelance musician for over thirty years. He has performed or recorded with The Spirit of Kansas City Orchestra, The Trilogy Big Band, The River City Jazz Band, the Kansas City Jazz Orchestra, The New Vintage Big Band, The Kansas City Boulevard Big Band, The Brass Knights, Missouri Brass Quintet, Brookside Brass, and The Rhythm Club Orchestra.

Bibl.: "Jay Sollenberger" (www.kcjazzorchestra.net/jaysollenberger.html); "Jay Sollenberger" (www.jazzpolice.com/content/view/7155/115).

Soloff, Lewis ("Lew") Michael (b. Brooklyn, New York, Feb. 20, 1944). American trumpeter. Soloff grew up in Lakewood, New Jersey. He began playing the piano and ukulele at age five, and when he joined his school's band at age ten, he was inspired to play the trumpet by a recording he heard of Roy Eldridge playing After You've Gone. He also loved listening to recordings of Louis Armstrong. His first lessons were with his band director, Frank Unger, and he soon studied with Willie Epstein, Ronny Austin, and Ruby Melnick. While in high school, he was accepted into the Juilliard Preparatory School, studying with Edward Treutel.

After graduating from high school in 1961, Soloff attended the Eastman School of Music where he studied with Sidney Mear. He became involved in the jazz program and went on to perform in various clubs in New York City with such artists as Tito Puente and Frank "Machito" Grillo. In order to increase his upper register, he took lessons from Roy Stevens, Carmine Caruso, and John Ware. At age twenty-five, he also studied in Chicago with Arnold Jacobs, Adolph Herseth, and Vincent Cichowicz.

By the mid 1960s, Soloff was touring with the big bands of Gil Evans (1966), Duke Pearson (1967), Don Heckman's Electronic Music Machine (Steinway Hall), Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Big Band (Village Vanguard, 1968), Maynard Ferguson, Joe Henderson-Kenny Dorham, Dizzy Gillespie, and Gil Evans (Whitney Museum of American Art, 1968). In 1968, he replaced Randy Brecker in the pop group Blood, Sweat and Tears, which released a string of hit recordings for the Columbia label, winning a Grammy Award in 1969 for "Record of the Year" (Spinning Wheel). Between 1968 and 1973, Soloff participated on all of the group's albums, which received nine gold albums during that time.

After BS&T, Soloff performed with a myriad of famous artists including Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, Paul Simon, Aretha Franklin, and Philip Glass. He toured as a lead trumpeter with the big bands of Carla City Big Band, Barbra Streisand, The Manhattan Transfer, Gil Evans again (1974, 1981-88), Earle Warren's Basie Band, Helen Merrill (1987), Ornette Coleman, Dizzy Gillespie again, his own Manhattan Jazz Quintet, Ray Anderson's Alegatory Brass Band, Pocket Brass Band, Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, various Trumpet Summits, Carnegie Hall Jazz Orchestra, and Manhattan Brass (from 2004). He also worked as a studio musician in New York, recording soundtracks for films such as Carlito's Way, The Mambo Kings, Meet Joe Black, Coming to America, Billy Bathgate, The Color of Money, Lethal Weapon III, The Untouchables, The Big Lobowski, National Lampoon's Vacation, Tender Mercies, and Maid in Manhattan, to name a few.

Soloff has released nine solo albums: Hanalei Bay (ProArte), Yesterdays (ProArte), But Beautiful (Evidence), Speak Low (ProArte), My Romance (Paddlewheel), Little Wing (Triloka), With a Song in My Heart (Milestone), Rainbow Mountain (32 Jazz), and Air on a G String (Crown). He performs with a nineteen-piece chamber group called The Absolute Ensemble, and another group called The Food Group. He is a charter member (since 1983) of The Manhattan Jazz Quintet, which has released twenty-eight albums. In addition, he has taught at the Manhattan School of Music for over twenty years, and is an adjunct faculty member at The Juilliard School.

Bibl.: Erdmann, Tom. "Jack of All Trades, Master of All" (International Trumpet Guild Journal, June 2001); Lew Soloff website (www.lewsoloff.com); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Solomon, John Jacob (b. London, England, Aug. 2, 1856; d. London, England, Feb. 1, 1953). English trumpeter. Solomon was one of London's finest trumpeters during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Beginning in 1873 at the Royal Academy of Music (RAM), he was trained by Thomas Harper Jr. on the compulsory slide trumpet; he also performed using the cornet. Three years later, he made his London debut as first trumpeter. He played third trumpet in the famous 1885 London performance of Bach's B-Minor Mass, in which Julius Kosleck played the first part on his so-called "Bach trumpet" in A, and Walter Morrow played second. In 1895, he played principal trumpet at the first of the Queen's Hall Promenade Concerts, and in 1904 became a founding member of the London Symphony Orchestra.

Solomon followed Morrow's lead in attempting to improve valve trumpets for use in performing Bach's music, and was involved with several important innovations, including the use of the long A trumpet for oratorio performances, and the adoption around 1900 of Mahillon's F valve trumpet. But Solomon was quicker than Morrow to perceive and demonstrate the advantages of the modern B-flat trumpet; from about 1905, he urged its adoption in place of the F, thereby helping to bring about that which Morrow had failed fully to achieve through the use of the F trumpet, namely suppression of the cornet as a substitute for the trumpet in symphony orchestras.

With Morrow's gradual retirement around 1910, Solomon became the leading London trumpeter; his last performance was in St. Paul's Cathedral at age eighty. He was professor at the RAM from 1894 to 1938 and wrote Twelve Etudes for the cornet.

Bibl.: Baines, Anthony and Edward H. Tarr. "John Solomon" (The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians: www.oxfordmusiconline.com); Bate, Philip. The Trumpet and Trombone (W. W. Norton & Co.); Tarr, Edward H. The Trumpet (English Third Edition) (Hickman Music Editions).

Sommerhalder, Giuliano (Julian) (b. Zurich, Switzerland, July 16, 1985). Swiss trumpeter. While growing up in Italy, Sommerhalder studied with Pierluigi Salvi at the Giuseppe Verdi Conservatory in Como from which he graduated in 2004. Subsequently, he studied with Reinhold Friedrich in Karlsruhe, Germany, Edward Tarr (Baroque trumpet), and with his father, Max Sommerhalder, at the Hochschule für Musik in Detmold, Germany, graduating from this school in 2009. He also participated in master classes with Maurice André, Eric Aubier, Pierre Thibaud, Stephen Burns, Bo Nilsson, Hans Gansch, Edward Carroll, Markus Stockhausen, James Thompson, and others.

A prodigious talent, Sommerhalder embarked on a series of successful competitions, winning first prizes at the Tchaikovsky Conservatory Competition in Moscow (1997), the Concertino Prague (2001), Timofei Dokshitser Competition in Vilnius (2002), Prague Spring Festival (2003), ARD Competition in Munich (second prize, 2003), Maurice André International Trumpet Competition in Paris (cowinner, 2003), and others. He was awarded the European Culture Prize in Munich (1999) and in Berlin (2002), and was appointed BBC New Generation Artist in 2008. He has been a guest soloist throughout the world, performing with all symphony orchestras of the BBC, with the NDR Symphony Orchestra in Hamburg, Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Deutsches Symphonie-Orchester Berlin, Zurich Chamber Orchestra, Moscow Soloists, Melbourne Symphony, Zurich Tonhalle, Basel Chamber Orchestra, and many others.

Sommerhalder has released two solo CDs with orchestral accompaniment, Romantic Virtuosity and Amilcare Ponchielli Concertos. He recorded Bach's 2nd Brandenburg Concerto for Decca with the Leipzig Gewandhaus under Riccardo Chailly while serving as principal trumpet of this orchestra from 2006 to 2010. He has been filling the same position with the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam under Mariss Jansons since 2011.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Giuliano Sommerhalder's official website: www.giulianosommerhalder.com.

Sommerhalder, Max (b. Solothurn, Switzerland, Sept. 27, 1947). Swiss trumpeter. Sommerhalder studied with Jean Venos and Henri Adelbrecht in Switzerland, and Pierre Thibaud in France. He played in jazz groups and filled the position of principal trumpet with the Musikkollegium Winterthur from 1973 to 1977, the Radio Symphony Orchestra in Berlin from 1977 to 1979, and the Zurich Tonhalle and Theatre Orchestra from 1980 to 1985. He has been active as a soloist his entire life, touring Japan, Australia, Latin America, Russia, Scandinavia, and most of Europe. He has performed as guest principal trumpeter with the Südwestrundfunk Radio Symphony Orchestra, Dresden Staatskapelle, Deutsches Symphonie-Orchester of Berlin, the RAI of Turin, Lucerne Festival Orchestra, Orchestra de la Suisse Romande, Deutsche Bachsolisten and many others. He has released two solo albums, titled Musique Romantique Russe (1979) and L'Age d'or du Cornet à Pistons (1981) that include the world premiere recordings of Oskar Böhme's Concerto, Vasily Brandt's Second Concert Piece, Gustav Cords's Concert Fantasy, Alexander Glasunov's Album Page, and other romantic compositions that are standard repertoire today.

From 1985 to 2013, Sommerhalder was professor of trumpet at the Hochschule für Musik in Detmold, Germany, giving master classes throughout Europe, Japan, Australia, and Latin America. His former students include a large number of prizewinners in international competitions, such as the Paris "Maurice André", Munich ARD, Ellsworth-Smith, Prague Spring, and many others, as well as members of many world-renowned orchestras in Europe, Latin America, Asia, and Australia. Sommerhalder has been a guest professor at the Fundación Musical "Simón Bolívar" in Caracas, Venezuela, since 2009.

Sommerhalder's son Giuliano (b. 1985) is a brilliant trumpeter of his generation.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Max Sommerhalder's official website: www.sommerhalder.info; personal information given to Edward Tarr on Mar. 20, 2013.

Photo credit: Randy Welsh/Thomas Crown Mutes .

Sondermann, Johannes (b. Sieger, Germany, Feb. 18, 1967). German trumpeter. From 1987 to 1992, Sondermann studied with Max Sommerhalder at the Detmold Music Academy. Upon graduation, he became principal trumpet of the Hanover State Opera Orchestra, and in 1993 began his current position as principal of the Southwest German Radio Symphony Orchestra. He has performed with the German Bach Soloists, Kurpfälziches Chamber Orchestra, and is a member of the Premier Brass Quintet. He can be heard as soloist on several recordings, and at times gives international master classes.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott).

Söndlin, Heinz (b. Untersiggenthal, Switzerland, Jan. 23, 1917; d. Zurich, Switzerland, May 8, 1984). Swiss trumpeter. Söndlin was principal trumpet of the Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra beginning in 1935, and was professor of trumpet at the Zurich Conservatory. Among his many students were Fridolin Frei, Marcel Frei, Paul Spörri, Ernst Wasser, Walter Häfeli, and Paolo Baratto.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle CD-Rom; Oct. 2008).

Soomary, Aneel (b. London, England, Mar. 8, 1967). British trumpeter. Soomary first played guitar, piano, and recorder, and switched to playing trumpet at age twelve after being inspired by a recording of trumpeter Louis Prima. His (German) mother was a violinist, and his father (from Mauritius) supported his efforts. He attended the Colchester Institute from 1983 to 1988 where he earned a bachelor of arts degree with honors. He then earned a diploma, studying with David Mason at the Royal College of Music in London in 1989. Other teachers include John Pinnel (his first teacher), Geoffrey Harniess, George Reynolds (his most influential teacher), Michael Laird, John Fletcher, John Wallace, Maurice Murphy, Paul Cosh, Eric Crees, and Denis Wick. He was a member of the 2nd Essex Youth Orchestra, Essex Youth Orchestra, Essex Youth Jazz Orchestra, Essex Youth Brass Ensemble, and the Young Musicians Symphony Orchestra.

Soomary has spent a great deal of his career as a freelance performer. He has played in pit orchestras the world over for shows such as Cats, West Side Story, Golden Musicals of Broadway, Five Guys Named Moe, A Chorus Line, Catherine, and has played with the Royal Philharmonic Pops Orchestra, Grand Union Orchestra, Jazz Warriors, Sounds Positive, Vienna Art Orchestra, Bruckner Orchestra Linz, Bob Brookmeyer's New Art Orchestra, Pro Brass, Art of Brass Vienna, Gansch & Roses, Vienna Concert Jazz Orchestra, Janus Ensemble, and as an onstage musician with the Zurich opera. In addition, he has shared the stage with artists including Bobby McFerrin, José Feliciano, Ray Charles, Jens Lindemann, James Morrison, Markus Stockhausen, and Till Brönner.

Soomary has taught at the Gustav Mahler Conservatory in Vienna since 2006, and at Vöcklabrücker Trompetentage in 2003, and the big band seminar Schloss Zeilern in 2009. He received a nomination for the Hans Koller Prize for best sideman of the year in 2007, and can be heard on hundreds of CDs. His hobbies include swimming, cinema, and collecting vintage mutes, mouthpieces, and trumpets.

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete, Bk. 2 (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); Aneel Soomary's official website: www.aneelsoomary.com; personal interview, Nov. 12, 2012.

Soustrot, Bernard (b. Lyons, France, Sept. 3, 1954). French trumpeter. Soustrot began playing the cornet at age nine, learning the basics from his father, an amateur musician. He continued his studies with René Sapin and Maurice Benterfa at the Lyons Conservatory (1965-69) before entering the Paris Conservatory and studying with Maurice André (1971-75). He won first prize in the Prague Competition (1974), Geneva Competition (1975), and the first Maurice André Competition (April 1975).

Soustrot played in the symphony orchestra of the South German radio conducted by Sergiu Celibidache (Stuttgart, fall of 1975 to 1976), and became principal trumpet of the New Philharmonic Orchestra for the French Radio in Paris (1976 to January 1982). He embarked on a career as a soloist in 1983, touring mostly as a recitalist with organ accompaniment. In addition to recording duets with Maurice André, he has released numerous solo albums, including Concertos pour Trompette (Nippon Columbia), Concertos pour Trompette (EMI), Concert Europeen (Forlane), Concertos pour Trompette (Accord), Trompette et Orgue (Verany PV), Concertos pour Trompette (Verany PV), Concerti Italiens (Forlane), and Grand Recital Trompette et Orgue (Forlane). He also took part in many television shows during 1985-91.

Soustrot is the artistic director of the Guebwiller World Trumpet Competition, as well as the Narbonne International Brass Quintet Competition (since 1986), and has taught at the National School of Music in Boulogne-Billancourt (since 1989). He was an adviser to Couesnon (piccolo trumpet model).

Bibl.: Keim, Friedel. Das große Buch der Trompete (Schott); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom; Oct. 2008); "Bernard Soustrot" (www.answers.com/topic/bernard-soustrot).

Spanier, Francis Joseph ("Muggsy") (b. Chicago, Illinois, Nov. 9, 1901; d. Sausalito, California, Feb. 12, 1967). American cornetist. Spanier began playing drums, but switched to the cornet at age thirteen. He took lessons from Noah Tarantino, Edward Llewellyn, and later, Max Schlossberg. He began playing professionally at age twenty when he joined Elmer Schoebel's band (1921). His first recordings were made with the Bucktown Five in 1924. He also played with other Chicago bands before joining the Ted Lewis orchestra from 1929 to 1936.

By 1936, Spanier was playing with Ben Pollack's group, but the effects of alcoholism forced him to leave the band in 1938. After recovering, he organized Muggsy Spanier's Ragtime Band, which made sixteen recordings in 1939; these contributed substantially to the revival of early New Orleans Dixie-style jazz music during the 1940s, but none of the recordings were commercially viable and the group disbanded within a year.

Spanier led a recording group called the Big Four in 1940 and played in Bob Crosby's Dixieland Band from 1940 to 1941. Throughout the 1950s, Spanier played and recorded with several Dixieland groups. He toured Europe in 1960, but retired in 1964 due to health problems. He broadcasted a jazz casual television show in 1963. In his early years, he played a Harry B. Jay cornet.

Spanier's style of cornet playing was similar to that of King Oliver; he played with a lot of energy and excitement, yet stuck mainly to the middle range of the cornet. His best solo recordings include songs such as Big Butter and Egg Man, I Wish I Could Shimmy Like Sister Kate, and Mandy, Make Up Your Mind. He died at the age of sixty-one.

Bibl.: Kernfeld, Barry (Edit.). The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (St. Martin's Press); Yanow, Scott. Trumpet Kings (Backbeat Books); Whyatt, Bert. Muggsy Spanier: The Lonesome Road (with CD, Jazzology Press); Laplace, Michel. Trompette, Cuivres & XXe Siècle (CD-Rom, Oct. 2008).

